Reigned two years, to wit before the following war broke forth, compare 1 Sam xvi 1, for that he reigned longer, may appear both from the following verse and from chapter 11, and from the following history, though some think he reigned only two years, and that the rest of David's seven years the Israelites by Abner's instigation stuck to the house of Saul, but were in suspense whether they should confer the crown upon Mephibosheth the right heir but a child, or upon Ish-bosheth, a grown man, whom with some difficulty and after long debates amongst themselves they preferred.

11 And the time that David was king in Hebron over the house of Judah was seven years and six months.

12 ¶ And Abner the son of Ner, and the servants of Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, went out from Mahanaim to Gibeon.

The servants of Ish-bosheth, i. e. his officers and commanders, and their army. To Gibeon, in the country of Benjamin, Josh xviii 25, near Judah, to fight with David's army, and to bring back the rest of the kingdom to Saul's house.

13 And Joab the son of Zeruiah, and the servants of David, went out, and met together by the pool of Gibeon, and they sat down, the one on the one side of the pool, and the other on the other side of the pool.

If out, to battle. Query. How could or durst his one tribe oppose all the rest? Answer. First, This tribe was very numerous and valiant of themselves, and they had a king of extraordinary courage, and conduct and success. Secondly, There were great numbers of the other tribes which favoured them, as appears from 1 Chron xii. Thirdly, They had the encouragement of special promises of God made both to their tribe and to David. Met together, i. e. met the opposite army, and put themselves into a posture for battle.

14 And Abner said to Joab, Let the young men now arise, and play before us. And Joab said, Let them arise.

Abner trusting to his greater numbers, offers battle. Play before us i. e. show their prowess and dexterity in managing their weapons, and fighting together. He speaks like a vain glorious and cruel man, and a soldier of fortune that esteemed it a sport to see men wounding and killing one another. So this he designed, partly for their mutual recreation, and trial of skill and valour, and partly that by this occasion they might be engaged in a battle.

15 Then there arose and went over by number twelve of Benjamin, which pertained to Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, and twelve of the servants of David.

Abner selected all his combatants out of Benjamin, both because that was a warlike and valiant tribe, and that he might give the more honour to his own tribe.

16 And they caught every one his fellow by the head, and thrust his sword in his fellow's side, so they fell down together wherefore that place was called Helkath-hazzurim, which is in Gibeon.

By the head, by the hair of the head, which after their manner was of a considerable length, and therefore gave them enemy advantage which every one of them endeavoured to get and to improve against the other. Helkath hazzurim, in the field of rocks, i. e. of men who stood like rock, unmovable, each one dying up in the spot where he fought.

17 And there was a very sore battle that day, and Abner was beaten, and the men of Israel, before the servants of David.

18 ¶ And there were three sons of Zeruiah there, Joab, and Abishai, and Asahel, and Asahel was as light of foot as a wild roe.

19 And Asahel pursued after Abner, and in going he turned not to the right hand nor to the left from following Abner.

20 Then Abner looked behind him, and said, Art thou Asahel? And he answered, I am.

21 And Abner said to him, Turn thee aside to thy right hand or to thy left, and lay thee hold on one of the young men, and take thee his armour. But Asahel would not turn aside from following of him.

Take thee his armour. If thou art ambitious to get a trophy or mark of thy valour, dearest from me, who am an old and experienced captain, and go to some young and raw soldier, try thy skill upon him, and take away his arms from him.

22 And Abner said again to Asahel, Turn thee aside from following me wherefore should I smite thee to the ground? how then should I hold up my face to Joab thy brother?

He was loth to engage Joab too much against him, because his policy and experience told him that his cause was bad, and therefore he prosaged ill success, and that he might need such a friend as Joab to make his peace with David

23 Howbeit he refused to turn aside - wherefore Abner with the hinder end of the spear smote him under the fifth rib, that the spear came out behind him; and he fell down there, and died in the same place - and it came to pass, that as many as came to the place where Asahel fell down and died stood still

The hinder end of the spear was sharp-pointed, after the manner under the fifth rib, the seat of the liver and bowels where wounds are mortal. In the same place, upon the spot not being able to go one step further

21 Joab also and Abishai pursued after Abner and the sun went down when they were come to the hill of Ammah, that heth before Giah by the way of the wilderness of Gibbon

25 ¶ And the children of Benjamin gathered themselves together after Abner, and became one troop, and stood on the top of an hill

When, being upon the upper ground, they might better defend themselves

26 Then Abner called to Joab, and said, Shall the sword devour for ever? knowest thou not that it will be bitterness in the latter end? how long shall it be then, ere thou bid the people return from following their brethren?

It will be bitterness in the latter end, it will produce dreadful effects, and many bloody slaughters if by a further prosecution thou makest them desperate, which is against all the rules of policy. Then brethren by nation and religion, whom therefore they should not pursue with so fierce a rage, as if they were pursuing the Philistines

27 And Joab said, As God liveth, unless thou hadst spoken surely thou in the morning the people had gone up every one from following his brother

Unless thou hadst spoken, unless thou hadst made the motion that they might fight, ver. 14. It was thou, not I that gave the first occasion of this fight. Withal, he intimates that Abner was the sole cause of this war - and that if he had not given commission and command, the war had never been undertaken, but all things had been ended by an amicable agreement, which might have been made that very morning, if he had so pleased

28 So Joab blew a trumpet, and all the people stood still, and pursued after Israel no more, neither sought they any more

First, first, at that time - or rather, secondly, in my pitched battle

29 And Abner and his men walked all that night through the plain, and passed over Jordan, and went through all Bithron, and they came to Mahanaim

Bithron, otherwise called the mountains of Bethel, Cant. ii. 17 which were beyond Jordan, or some other country now not known by that name, which is the case of hundreds of places

30 And Joab returned from following Abner and when he had gathered all the people together, there lacked of David's servants nineteen men and a camel

31 And the servants of David had smitten of Benjamin, and of Abner's men so that three hundred and threescore men did 32 ¶ And they took up Asahel, and buried him in the sepulchre of his father, which was in Beth-lehem. And Joab and his men went all night, and they came to Hebron at break of day.

CHAP. III.

The war between the house of David and the house of Saul. Six sons born to David in Hebron, 1-6. Abner, disappointed with Ish-bosheth, 6-11, reviveth to David, who requir-eth of him that he bring with him Michal, which he does and commences with the elders of Israel; is flattered by David and dismissed, 12-21. Joab returns from battle is displeased with the king, and treacherously murder-eth Abner, 22-27. David reviveth Michal, 28-30. Michal-eth over Abner, 31-39.

NOW there was long war between the house of Saul and the house of David - but David waxed stronger and stronger, and the house of Saul waxed weaker and weaker

Long war, for five years longer, for it is probable that Ish-bosheth was made king presently upon Saul's death, to give them countenance for their rebellion against David; and the other tribes did not submit to David before seven years were expired.

2 ¶ And unto David were sons born in Hebron and his firstborn was Amnon, <sup>1 Chron. 3. 1-4</sup> of Ahinoam the Jezreelitess;

3 And his second, ¶ Chileab, of Abigail the wife of Nabal the Carmelite, and the third, Absalom the son of Maacah the daughter of Talmai king of Geshur, <sup>1 Chron. 3. 1-4</sup>

Chileab, called also Daniel 1 Chron. iii. 1. Geshur, a part of Syria, northward from the land of Israel, Deut. iii. 14, Josh. xii. 5. See 2 Sam. xiii. 37, xiv. 23, xi. 8. Here he married as it may seem, in policy, that he might have a powerful friend and ally to assist him against Ish-bosheth's party in the north, whilst himself opposed him in the southern parts. But he paid dear for making policy give place to policy here, as the history of Absalom sheweth. Thus were other Geshurites southward from Canaan whom David invaded 1 Sam. xxviii. 8, and it is not impossible but they were a colony of those in the north

4 And the fourth, Adonijah the son of Haggith, and the fifth, Shephatiah the son of Abital, <sup>1 Kin. 1</sup>

5 And the sixth, Ithream, by Eglah David's wife. These were born to David in Hebron

David's wife this is added, either because she was of obscure parentage, and was known by no other title but her relation to David, or to distinguish her from some other person of that name, who possibly might be of no good fame, or because this was his first and most proper wife, best known by her other name of Michal, who though she had no child by David after she scorned at him for dancing before the ark, chap. vi. 23, yet might have one before that time. And she might be named the first of these here, because she was given away from David, and married to another man, when David took the other wives, and therefore though she had been first, yet now she was become the last of them. On this title, being put in the last place, may belong to all the rest of the women above mentioned, by a figure called zeugma, to distinguish them from his concubines, 2 Sam. v. 13; 1 Chron. iii. 8.

6 ¶ And it came to pass, while there was war between the house of Saul and the house of David, that Abner made himself strong for the house of Saul

He used all his endeavours to support Saul's house which is mentioned, to show the reason of his strengthening of the following aspersions. Or, he strengthened himself in the house of Saul, i. e. he so managed all affairs, as to get all the riches and power into his own hands; which made Ish-bosheth suspect that he aimed at the kingdom and sought to marry the king's concubine in order to it as the manner was. See 2 Sam. xiii. 8, xvi. 21. 1 Kin. i. 17

7 And Saul had a concubine, whose name was Rizpah, the daughter of Aiah and Ish-bosheth said to Abner, Wherefore hast thou gone in unto my father's concubines?

Either, first, To satisfy thy own lust. Or rather, secondly, By that pretence to take away my crown first, for this was that which stirred up his jealousy and rage, and caused him to speak that to Abner which otherwise he neither would nor durst. But whether Abner were guilty or no, it is not evident from the following words, for if it were true, great men cannot be told of their faults, though they be true and great.

8 Then was Abner very wroth for the words of Ish-bosheth, and said, Am I a dog's head, which against Judah do shew kindness this day unto the house of Saul thy father, to his brethren, and to his friends, and have not delivered thee into the hand of David, that thou chargest me to day with a fault concerning this woman?

A dog's head, i. e. a vile and contemptible creature, as a dog was. See Deut xxiii 18, 1 Sam xxiv 11 2 Sam ix 9 xxi 9, Job xxx 1, Eccles ix 4. And a dog's head is put for a dog by a synecdoche, usual both in the Hebrew and in other languages, as the head is put for the whole man in the Latin tongue. Which against Judah, so the participle lamed is well rendered, as el which among the Hebrews is confessedly of the same nature and use, is used Eccles ix 14, Jer xxiv 7 Ezek xiii 9, 20, Amos vii 15. Have not delivered thee into the hand of David, which I could and easily have done. That thou chargest me to day with a fault concerning this woman, either, that thou accusest me falsely concerning this matter, or that thou dost not wink at so small a fault (for so he esteemed it) in conversation with this woman, who, whatsoever she formerly was, is now so impotent and inconsiderable, that she can do thee no service, as I have done.

9 So do God to Abner, and more also, except, as the Lord hath sworn to David, even so I do to him.

Whence it appears that this wicked wretch did all this while fight against his own knowledge and conscience, and against God himself.

10 To translate the kingdom from the house of Saul, and to set up the throne of David over Israel and over Judah, from Dan even to Beer-sheba.

11 And he could not answer Abner a word again, because he feared him.

He could not answer Abner because he durst not provoke Abner further, lest he should really execute what he supposed as yet he only threatened. Because he feared him is having a greater interest in, and power with both the arms and the rest of the people, than himself had.

12 ¶ And Abner sent messengers to David on his behalf, saying, Whose is the land? saying also, Make thy league with me, and, behold, my hand shall be with thee, to bring about all Israel unto thee.

Messengers on his behalf, who in his name and stead might treat with David concerning his reconciliation with him. Thus God overrules the lusts and passions of wicked men, to accomplish his own wise and holy purposes. And who then dare contend with that God who makes even his enemies to do his work, and destroy themselves? Whose is the land? to whom doth this whole land belong, but to thee? Is it not thine by Divine right? Saul's son is but a usurper, thou only art the rightful owner. Make thy league with me, that thou wilt pardon all past offences to me, and to all Israel, and thou wilt receive me into thy grace and favour.

13 ¶ And he said, Well, I will make a league with thee. But one thing I require of thee, that is, Thou shalt not see my face, except thou first bring Michal Saul's daughter, when thou comest to see my face.

I will make a league with thee, to wit, upon thy terms, which, all circumstances considered, seems to be lawful to prevent the great effusion of Israelish blood, which otherwise would certainly have been spilt. And although the principle of this action of Abner's was base and wicked, yet the action itself was lawful and commendable, and no more than his duty to God and David obliged him to, and therefore David might well persuade and induce him to it.

14 And David sent messengers to Ish-bosheth Saul's son, saying, Deliver me my wife Michal, which I espoused to me for an hundred foreskins of the Philistines.

Ish-bosheth's consent was necessary, both to take her away from her present husband, and to persuade her to return to David. Hereby David opened to him also a door of hope for his reconciliation, lest being desperate he should hinder Abner in his present design. My wife Michal, who, though she was taken from me by force, and constrained to marry another, 1 Sam xxi 11, yet is indeed my rightful wife. Her David demands partly, for the affection he formerly had and still retained to her, partly, to deliver her from the sin and reproach of adultery with another man, who was not in truth and justice his husband though he was so called and accounted, and partly, upon a politic consideration, that she might strengthen his right and title to the kingdom.

15 And Ish-bosheth sent, and took her from her husband, even from Phaltiel the son of Laish.

For being forsaken by Abner, he durst not deny David unto whose power he saw he must unavoidably come, and besides he supposed that she might be an effectual instrument to make his peace with David.

16 And her husband went with her along weeping behind her to Bahurim. Then said Abner unto him, Go, return. And he returned.

Bahurim, a city of Benjamin, on the borders of Judah. See 2 Sam vi 16, 1 Kings ii 8.

17 ¶ And Abner had communication with the elders of Israel, saying, Ye sought for David in times past to be king over you.

In Saul's time you highly honoured him, and prized him as a son, and wished that the power were in his hands, and put a number of you went to him when he was in the field, 1 Chron xii. And after Saul's death you would gladly have advanced him to the crown, if your respect to Saul's family, together with my authority and influence, had not diverted you.

18 Now then do it for the Lord which spoken of David, saying, By the hand of my servant David I will save my people Israel out of the hand of the Philistines, and out of the hand of all their enemies.

Now then do it, you shall have my free consent and utmost assistance in procuring it. The Lord hath spoken of David, he wickedly pretends religion, when he intended nothing but the satisfaction of his own pride, and jealousy, and fury against Ish-bosheth. It is very probable God spake these words, but undoubtedly he spake the same sense by Saul, though it be not expressed before.

19 And Abner also spake in the ears of Benjamin, and Abner went also to speak in the ears of David in Hebron all that seemed good to him, and that seemed good to the whole house of Benjamin.

In the case of Benjamin, to these he particularly applies himself, because they might be thought most kind to Saul and his house, and most loth to let the kingdom go out of their own tribe; and therefore it was necessary that he should use all his art and power with them, to persuade them to a compliance with his design, and besides, they were a valiant tribe and holding upon Judah, and situate between them and the other tribes, and therefore the winning of them would be of mighty concernment to bring in all the rest.

20 So Abner came to David to Hebron, and twenty men with him. And David made Abner and the men that were with him a feast.

Which in those times was customary when persons entered into covenant. See Gen xxvi 30, xxxi 41, 46.

21 And Abner said unto David, I will arise and go, and will gather all Israel unto my lord the king, that they may make a league with thee, and that thou mayest reign over all that thine heart desireth. And David sent Abner away, and he went in peace.

In Israel, i. e. the elders and chieftains of all Israel, representing and ruling all the rest.

22 ¶ And, behold, the servants of David and Joab came from pursuing a troop, and brought in a great spoil with them: but Abner was not with David in Hebron, for he had sent him away, and he was gone in peace.

A troop of robbers, either Philistines, or Idumeans, or some others who taking advantage of the discord between the house of Saul and David made incursions into Judah, at they had occasion.

23 When Joab and all the host that was with him were come, they told Joab, saying, Abner the son of Ner came to the king, and he hath sent him away, and he is gone in peace.

24 Then Joab came to the king and said, What hast thou done? behold, Abner came unto thee, why is it that thou hast sent him away, and he is quite gone?

What hast thou done? thou hast committed a great oversight, to dismiss so dangerous and mischievous a person when he was in thy hands.

25 Thou knowest Abner the son of Ner, that he came to deceive thee and to know thy going out and thy coming in, and to know all that thou doest.

To search out thy counsels and secret designs, and to make use of them against thee.

26 And when Joab was come out from David, he sent messengers after Abner, which brought him again from the well of Snah: but David knew it not.

He sent messengers after Abner, in the king's name and upon pretence of some further communication with him.

27 And when Abner was returned to Hebron, Joab took him aside in the gate to speak with him quietly, and smote him there under the fifth rib, that he died for the blood of Asahel his brother.

In the gate, in the entrance into the city before he came to the king; and in the place where conferences used to be. Under the fifth rib, i. e. in a private and secret manner, and in a place of great privacy and security, where he could not be seen or heard. Smote him there, i. e. he struck him there with his hand, as he did Asahel in 23. For the blood of Asahel his brother, i. e. to avenge the death of Asahel, and to clear (though that he was here intended) to secure his own standing, and to show his great and powerful competitor. And this was both a design; but David had other designs in it, both to punish Abner's manifold wickedness, and particularly his rebellion against David, and against God and his own conscience therein, and that David might not owe his kingdom to Abner, and to his revenge and treachery, but wholly to God's wise and powerful providence.

28 ¶ And afterward when David heard it, he said, I and my kingdom are guiltless before the Lord for ever from the blood of Abner the son of Ner.

David said publicly, before his courtiers and people, and seriously, as in God's presence, I call the Lord to witness, that this was not done by my instigation or authority, or by any public counsel, but only by Joab's malice, and therefore I trust that God will not punish me nor my kingdom, but Joab only.

29 Let it rest on the head of Joab, and on all his father's house, and let there not fail from the house of Joab one that hath an issue, or that is a leper, or that leaneth on a staff, or that falleth on the sword, or that lacketh bread.

Let it rest, i. e. this blood the guilt and punishment of it. And on all his father's house. But children were not to suffer for their parents sin. Deut. xxiv 16, and therefore either this was only a prediction, or, if it was an imprecation, David may seem to have transgressed his bounds and numbered his passion with his zeal, that so he might execute his utter detestation of this horrid murder, and how far he was from having any hand in it. An issue was not only a troublesome and shameful disease, but also infectious both to him that had it, and to all that touched him, so that whilst it was upon a man he was cut off in a great part from converse either with God or men. That leprosy on a ship through craziness, or febleness or lameness whereby he is rendered unfit for action and public service.

30 So Joab and Abishai his brother slew Abner, because he had slain their brother Asahel at Gibeon in the battle.

Joab and Abishai, for though Joab only committed the murder yet Abishai was guilty of it, because it was done with his consent, and counsel, and help, and approbation for by these and such-like actions men are involved in the guilt of other men's sins, at least in God's judgment. Abner slew Asahel in the fury of battle, and for his own necessary defence, and therefore it was no justification of this unnecessary and treacherous murder in a time of peace.

31 ¶ And David said to Joab, and to all the people that were with him, Rend your cloths, and gird you with sackcloth, and mourn before Abner. And king David himself followed the bier.

David said to Joab, him he especially obliged to it; partly to bring him to repentance for his sin, partly to expose him to public shame, and to the contempt and hatred of all the people with whom he had too great an interest which hereby David designed to diminish. Mourn before Abner, i. e. attending upon his corpse, and paying him that respect and honour which was due to his quality. King David himself followed the bier, which was against the usage of kings, and might seem below David's dignity, but it was now expedient, to vindicate himself from all suspicion and contrivance or concurrence in this action.

32 And they buried Abner in Hebron, and the king lifted up his voice, and wept at the grave of Abner, and all the people wept.

33 And the king lamented over Abner, and said, Died Abner as a fool dieth?

As a wicked man, for such are oft called fools in Scripture. Was he cut off by the hands of justice for his crimes? Nothing less, but by Joab's malice and treachery. Or did he die by his own folly, because he had not wisdom or courage to defend himself? Ah, no. He would never be thus repaid, shall or should Abner die like a fool?

of a man, who, in the midst of a great battle, stands still like a fool to be killed without making any resistance or defence; which, by this tragedy of Joab, happened to be his case.

34. The hands were not bound, nor thy feet put into fetters: as a man falleth before a wicked man, so fellest thou. And all the people wept again over him.

They hands were not bound, nor thy feet put into fetters, thou didst not tamely yield up thine life to Joab, as his principle, to be bound head and foot at his pleasure. Joab did not overcome thee generously and honourably in an equal combat; nor durst he attempt thee in that way as a general or soldier of any worth would have done. Before wicked men, before, i. e. in the presence or by the hands of friends, or perverses, or crooked men, by hypocrisy and perflousness, whereby the vilest coward may kill the most valiant person. Thus he reproached Joab to his very face, before all the people, which was a great evidence of his own innocency herein, because otherwise Joab, being so powerful and proud, and petulant to his sovereign, would have taken the shame and blame of it wholly to himself as he did.

35. And when all the people came to cause David to eat meat while it was yet day, David awoke, saying, "So do God to me, and more also, if I taste bread, or ought else, till the sun be down."

He eat meat, to refresh and cheer up his depressed spirits as they used to do at funerals. See Jer. xvi. 5, Ezek. xiv. 17. Till the sun be down, i. e. till evening, for then the day ended of course.

36. And all the people took notice of it, and it pleased them, as whatsoever the king did pleased all the people.

Joab notices of it, observed what the king said and did. It pleased them, they were satisfied concerning David's integrity, and the method he used here for his own just vindication. Whatsoever the king did, either in this matter, or rather, in all things following this action. The meaning is, by his carriage herein he gained so great an interest in the hearts of his people, that they judged most favourably of, and put the best construction upon, all his words and actions; as, on the contrary, when people have a prejudice against or an ill will towards their prince, they are apt to judge most harshly of all his counsels and doings.

37. For all the people and all Israel understood that day that it was not of the king to slay Abner the son of Ner.

Not done by his design or good will. 38. And the king said unto his servants, Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?

A great man, both for his illustrious quality and for his great courage and wise conduct, and especially now for his great usefulness and serviceableness to me in giving me the entire and peaceable possession of all Israel. But still observe David's prudence and piety, that he doth not commend him for his virtues and graces, as men of vendible consciences and tongues use to do upon funeral occasions, but only for that kind of worth which was really in him. Compare 2 Sam. i. 23.

39. And I am this day weak, though anointed king, and these men the sons of Zeruiah be too hard for me. The Lord shall reward the doer of evil according to his wickedness.

Weak and tender, in the infancy of my kingdom, not well rooted and settled in it. The metaphor is taken from a young and tender child or plant. The sons of Zeruiah, Joab and Abishai, the sons of my sister Zeruiah. Too hard for me, i. e. too powerful. They have so great a command over all the soldiers and so great favour with the people, that I cannot punish them without apparent hazard to my person and kingdom, especially now when all the tribes, except Judah, are yet in a state of opposition against me. But this, although it might give some colour to the delay of their punishment for a season, yet it may seem to have been one of David's infirmities, that he did not do it within some reasonable time, both because thus indulgence proceeded from a distrust of God's power and faithfulness; as if God would not, he would not make good his promise of the kingdom to him, without and against Joab and all his confederates; and because it was contrary to God's law, which severely requires the punishment of wilful murderers, Gen. ix. 6; Exod. xxi. 14, Numb. xxxv. 21, which David had no power to dispense with. And David might and should have remembered how dear Saul paid for this very thing, that he dispensed with God's command, and spared those whom God commanded him to slay, 1 Sam. xv. And it seems David's conscience oft smote him for this, which made him watch for a fit opportunity to remove, and then punish him, and having neglected it till death, he doleth his sorrow for that neglect, by giving Solomon a charge to execute it after his death, 1 Kings ii. 5, 6, 34.

CHAP. IV.

Ish-bosheth and his party are astonished at Abner's death, 1. Two captains murder Ish-bosheth, and bring his head to David 2. 8, who caused them to be put to death, and hanged up, and Ish-bosheth's head to be buried, 9-11.

AND when Saul's son heard that Abner was dead in Hebron, his hands were troubled, and all the Israelites were troubled.

His hands were feeble, his spirit, and courage, and strength failed him. This phrase is used in the same sense Psal. vi. 4. Neh. vi. 9, Isa. xlii. 7. xxxv. 3. The Israelites were troubled, because now they were unable to oppose David and doubtful of obtaining his favour, now Abner their peace maker was dead.

2. And Saul's son had two men that were captains of bands: the name of the one was Baanah, and the name of the other Rechab, the sons of Benjamin, Beerothites, of the children of Benjamin. (for Beeroth also was reckoned to Benjamin.)

Of the children of Benjamin, of Ish-bosheth's own tribe, whom therefore he trusted the more, and thus gave them opportunity to execute their wicked design. Beeroth also was reckoned to Benjamin: this is added as the reason why he called them Beerothites because though Beeroth was now in the hands and possession of the Philistines, 1 Sam. xxxi. 7 yet of right it belonged to the Benjaminites, Josh. xviii. 25.

3. And the Beerothites fled to Gittaim, and were sojourners there until this day.

And yet or but, for this comes in to anticipate an objection against what he had now said. It is true, saith he, the Beerothites fled as others did, upon the overthrow of Saul and his army, 1 Sam. xxxi. 7, to a place called Gittaim. 2 Sam. iv. 3, not that in Benjamin, Neh. xi. 34, but some other place of that name more remote from the Philistines, and so they were Gittaimites by their present habitation but Beerothites by their original, and place of their birth.

4. And Jonathan, Saul's son, had a son that was lame of his feet. He was five years old when the tidings came of Saul and Jonathan out of Jezreel, and his nurse took him up, and fled: and it came to pass, as she made haste to flee, that he fell, and became lame. And his name was Ish-bosheth.

This history is inserted as that which encouraged these men to this wicked murder, because Saul's family was now reduced to a low ebb, and if Ish-bosheth was despatched, there would be none left but a lame child who was altogether unfit to manage the kingdom, especially in so troublesome a time as this was, and therefore the crown must necessarily come to David by their act and deed, for which they promised themselves no small recompence. Secret, the place of that last and fatal fight, 1 Sam xxix 11. Mephobosheth, called also Merib-baal, 1 Chron viii 34. See the notes on chap. ii 8.

5 And the sons of Rimmon the Beerothite, Rechab and Baamah, went, and came about the heat of the day to the house of Ish-bosheth, who lay on a bed at noon.

Father from discontent of mind as Ahab did, 1 Kings xxi 4, or from sloth and sensuality, as David seems to have done chap. xi 2.

6 And they came thither into the midst of the house, as though they would have fetched wheat, and they smote him under the fifth rib, and Rechab and Baamah his brother escaped.

Into the midst of the house, or, into the house, for the midst is not always taken exactly and mathematically, but for any part within as Gen. xlviii 16, 1 Exod. viii 22, Josh. ii 17. As though they would have fetched wheat, which was laid up in public granaries in the king's house, and was fetched thence by the captains and commanders of the army for the pay of their soldiers, who in those ancient times were not paid in money, but in corn, is well known. Upon the pretence they were admitted into the house, and went from room to room, to the place where the king lay. Rechab and Baamah escaped, which was not difficult to do when the king was left alone, either because he desired to compose himself to rest or sleep, or because his guards, if he had any, were very small and negligent now, at least in his declining and feeble condition.

7 For when they came into the house, he lay on his bed in his bedchamber, and they smote him, and slew him, and beheaded him, and took his head, and gat them away through the plain all night.

Through the plain, i. e. in the way from Mahanaim to Hebron, which for the most part was a plain country.

8 And they brought the head of Ish-bosheth unto David to Hebron, and said to the king, Behold the head of Ish-bosheth the son of Saul thine enemy, which sought thy life, and the Lord hath avenged my lord the king this day of Saul, and of his seed.

Which sought thy life, i. e. to destroy it or take it away, as this phrase is used 1 Sam. xx 1, xxii 15, and elsewhere. They thought their action not only blameless, but meritorious, because they had but executed justice upon Saul's house and David's enemies, and made way for David's obtaining his rights. It may seem strange they were not discouraged by David's punishing of the Amalekites for killing Saul, 2 Sam. i, and by his sharp reproof of Joab for murdering Abner, but they thought the first case much different from the second, because Saul was anointed king by God, whereas Ish-bosheth was not, but was a mere usurper, and for the time they thought that David's sharp words proceeded in him from just and policy, than from any real dislike of the man, which they judged, because David contemned him of words, and Joab did not only go unpunished, but continued in his former place and power.

9 And David answered Rechab and Baamah his brother, the sons of Rimmon the Beerothite, and said unto them, As the Lord liveth, who hath redeemed my soul out of all adversity,

Who hath hitherto delivered me and will deliver me from all mine enemies, So that I needed not your wicked help in this way.

10 When one told me, saying, Behold, Saul is dead, I thinking to have brought good tidings, I took hold of him, and slew him in Ziklag, who thought that I would have given him a reward for his tidings.

11 How much more, when wicked men have slain a righteous person in his own house upon his bed? shall I not therefore now require his blood of your hand, and take you away from the earth?

A righteous person, for so he was comparatively, and in respect of those men, having not deserved death at their hands.

12 And David commanded his young men, and they slew them, and cut off their hands and their feet, and hanged them up over the pool in Hebron. But they took the head of Ish-bosheth, and buried it in the sepulchre of Abner in Hebron. The young men, those of his guard, who used to execute justice upon malefactors at the king's command. Their hands and their feet, which had been most instrumental in this villany, their hands to cut off his head, and their feet to carry them away, and his head with them. Hanged them up over the pool in Hebron, as monuments of their villany, and of David's abhorrence of it.

CHAP. V.

The tribes come to Hebron to anoint David king over all Israel the year of his reign at Hebron and Jerusalem his age 1—3. He taketh the strong hold of Zion from the Jebusites, and dwelleth there, 6—10. He maketh a league with David and sendeth wood and workmen to build a house 11, 12. He taketh more wives, and Abner's sons are born to him at Jerusalem 13—16. David directed by God, smother the Philistines at Baal-paranon 17—21, and again at the mulberry trees, 22—25.

TIFN 'came all the tribes of Israel to David unto Hebron, and spake, saying, Behold, we are thy bone and thy flesh.

To wit, by their ambassadors, Ish-bosheth and Abner, being now dead, and that without David's concurrence. Thy bone and thy flesh, i. e. thy brethren, or kinsmen of the same nation and parentage, though not of the same tribe, and therefore, as God's law, Deut. xxi 15, permits us so our own relation and affection incline us, to choose thee for our king, and we doubt not thou wilt be merciful to thy subjects and people, and pardon our offences against thee.

2 Also in time past, when Saul was king over us, thou wast he that leddest us out and broughtest in Israel, and the Lord said to thee, Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be a captain over Israel.

Thou wast our chief commander in our expeditions against the Philistines, and therefore art most fit to be king over us. The Lord said to thee, to wit, by Samuel 1 Sam. xvi 11—13, for though the words vary yet the sense is the same. Thou shalt feed my people Israel, i. e. rule them, and take care of them, as a shepherd doth of his sheep, Psal. lxxviii 70, 71. This expression he useth to admonish David, that he was not made a king to advance his own glory and interest, but for the good and benefit of his people, and that he ought to rule them with all tenderness, and to watch over them with all diligence.

3 So all the elders of Israel came to the king to Hebron, and king David

made a league with them in Hebron before the Lord, and they anointed David king over Israel

King David made a league with them, whereby he obliged himself to rule them according to God's laws, and the people promised fidelity and obedience to him. Before the Lord, either 1. Before the ark, which might be here, though that be not mentioned in this place. Or, 2. Before the priest clothed with the ephod, whereby he was in a manner put into God's presence. Or rather, 3. In the congregation of the mighty, or magistrates, where God used to be present, Psal lxxxi 1, in the public assembly now met together in God's name and fear and as in his presence, to call upon him to appeal to him as the witness and judge of their transactions. Compare Judg xi 11, 1 Sam xxiii 18. They anointed David, either by a prophet or the priest, to whom this office belonged. See 2 Sam ii 1.

1 ¶ David was thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years. And some odd months, as it follows.

5 In Hebron he reigned over Judah seven years and six months and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty and three years over all Israel and Judah.

6 ¶ And the king and his men went to Jerusalem unto the Jebusites, the inhabitants of the land which spake unto David, saying, Except thou take away the blind and the lame thou shalt not come in hither. ¶ thinking, David cannot come in hither.

Having the advantage of so great a concurrence of his people to make him king, he thought fit to begin his reign with some eminent action and to lead them forth in this expedition, where doubtless he asked advice from God and the consent of the elders now present. To Jerusalem, the place which God had designed for his worship and the centre and heart of his kingdom and therefore fittest for his royal city. The Jebusites continued to dwell there a spite of the Benjamites to whom lot it fell. See Josh vi 1, Judg i 21, xii 10, 11. I except thou take away the blind and the lame thou shalt not come in hither, or thou shalt not come in hither but the blind and the lame shall remove or hinder thee. By the blind and the lame they understood, either 1. Their own people, and so they imply that the place was so impracticable that a few blind and lame men were able to defend it against all David's assaults. And these may be called and were the hated of David's soul, ver 9 not because they were blind and lame but because they were Jebusites, a people hated and cursed of God and the Jebusites of this place were more hateful to him than the rest of that nation partly because they possessed this place, which David knew was designed for the one and only place of God's solemn worship, and partly because they did so wickedly and insolently defy the armies of Israel, and consequently, the God of Israel. Or, 2. Their gods or images, which, after the manner of the heathens they worshipped as their tutelary gods and placed in their gates or walls. These they call blind and lame sarcastically, and with respect to David's opinion, as it they said, These gods of ours whom you Israelites so proudly, as blind and lame, Psal cxv 5, 6, and so unable to direct and protect us, they will defend us against you, and you will find they are neither blind nor lame but have eyes to watch for us, and hands to fight against you and you must conquer them before you can take our city. And these may well be called the hated of David's soul. But I prefer the former sense as being most easy, and natural, and proper; whereas the latter is metaphorical, and seems doubtful and forced. David cannot come in hither, concluding their fort to be impregnable.

7 Nevertheless David took the strong hold of Zion the same is the city of David.

The strong hold of Zion, either, 1. A very strong fort which they had built upon Mount Zion, which being taken, the city quickly yielded. Or, 2. The city of Zion, which was very strongly fortified.

8 And David said on that day, Who-soever getteth up to the gutter, and smiteth the Jebusites, and the lame and the blind, that are hated of David's soul, he shall be chief and captain. ¶ Wherefore they said, The blind and the lame shall not come into the house.

Who-soever getteth up to the gutter, i. e. whosoever reacheth the fort, or getteth up to the top of it, where the gutter was. And the lame and the blind, or even or especially (for the Hebrew participle can signifies both ways) the lame and the blind, i. e. those of them who are set to defend that place, who, as they pretend, should be only the lame and the blind. Others understand it of their idols or images. But they could not properly be said to be smitten, i. e. killed, as that word is used here, and elsewhere. That are hated of David's soul this belongs to the Jebusites, and the lame and the blind, and it is explained in ver. 6. He shall be chief and captain these words are fully supplied out of 1 Chron xi 6, where they are expressed, and they must needs be understood to make the sense complete. And such ellipses or defects of a part of the sentence are usual in prophecies, and oaths and conditional offers such as this was. Wherefore they said The blind and the lame shall not come into the house i. e. whence it became a proverb, or a common saying, used by David and others upon this occasion. Or otherwise. The blind and the lame Jebusites were set to keep the house, i. e. the fort of Zion, and to keep others from coming into it, but now they are shut out of it, and none of them, to wit, either 1. Of the Jebusites or 2. Of blind and lame persons, shall be admitted to come into it again, which David might resolve, and ordain to keep up the memory of this great exploit, and of the insolent carriage of the Jebusites, and their unhappy success. Or, The blind and the lame shall not come into my house to wit into the king's palace. And although this might be a general rule and decree of David's yet he might dispense with it in some special cases as in that of Mephibosheth. But it is not necessary that this should be a proverb for the words may be thus rendered, as it is in the margin of our Bible because the he said even the blind and the lame. He (i. e. David) shall come into the house, or because they (i. e. the Jebusites) said, The blind and the lame shall hinder him, (which words are easily supplied out of ver. 6 where having spoken of this more largely it was sufficient here to mention the most emphatical words as is usual in such cases.) he shall not come into the house or hither as they say, ver. 6 i. into the fort, for the word house is used very largely and generally in the Hebrew language for any place, as Judg xvi 21.

9 So David dwelt in the fort, and called it the city of David. And David built round about from Millo and inward.

Millo seems to have been some large and well fortified building Judg ix 6, 2 Chron xxxii 5 adjoining or near to the wall of the city of Zion.

10 And David went on, and grew great, and the Lord God of hosts was with him.

Grew great in reputation and power.

11 ¶ And Hiram king of Tyre sent messengers to David, and cedar trees, and carpenters, and masons and they built David an house.

For Lebanon, which was famous for its cedars, was a great part of it in his dominion. For the Tyrians were excellent artists and workmen, as both sacred and profane writers agree.

12 And David perceived that the Lord had established him king over Israel, and that he had exalted his kingdom for his people Israel's sake.

By reflecting upon the promises which God had made him, and the constant course of God's providence favouring him.

13 ¶ And David took him more concubines and wives out of Jerusalem, after he was come from Hebron: and there were yet sons and daughters born to David.

This may well be reckoned amongst David's miscarriages, the multiplication of wives being expressly forbidden to the king Deut. xvii. 17. The use of it seems to have been his policy, that hereby he might enlarge his family, and strengthen his interest by alliances with so many considerable families. And the number of wives being not limited, Deut. xvii. he might conceive this was no transgression of that law.

Whilst the civil war lasted between the houses of Saul and David, they wisely forbore all hostilities, and left them to eat out one another's bowels, that afterward they might make a more easy conquest of both; but that being ended, and all united under David, they bestir themselves to seek David, to find him out, and fight against him, and cut him off now in the infancy of his kingdom, whereby they gave David a just occasion to fight against them for his own sake, say defence, and requit him from any note of ingratitude, in opposing them who had formerly exercised kindness and hospitality to him, though indeed David's obligation were in manner wholly to Achish, who seems to be dead at this time, there being no mention of him. To the hold, to some fortified place, to which his people might conveniently resort from all places, and where he might intrench his army, and when he would the Philistines.

22 ¶ And the Philistines came up yet again, and spread themselves in the valley of Rephaim.

The Philistines came up again, doubtless with greater force, as those that saw their all lay at stake.

23 And when David enquired of the Lord, he said, Thou shalt not go up; but fetch a compass behind them, and come upon them over against the mulberry trees.

Thou shalt not go up, to wit, directly against them, as the following words explain. Over against the mulberry trees, where they least expect thee. God's purposes and promises do not exclude men's just endeavours, but require them.

24 And let it be, when thou hearest the sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees, that then thou shalt bestir thyself: for then shall the Lord go out before thee, to smite the host of the Philistines.

The sound of a going, a noise as it were of persons walking upon the tops of them, which I shall cause; and by this sign both thou shalt be assured that I am coming to help thee, and the Philistines shall be affrighted and terrified, and not perceive the noise of thy army until thou art upon them. Then thou shalt bestir thyself, do thou fall upon them.

25 And David did so, as the Lord had commanded him, and smote the Philistines from Geba until thou come to Gazer.

They followed their victory and pursued them to their own borders, in which Gazer was, as Josephus relates.

CHAP. VI.

David fetcheth the ark with much people and great joy out of the house of Abinadab: and the ark leaving hold of the ark is slain of God. David is grieved, carries the ark into the house of Obed-edom, whom God blesseth for its sake. 6-11. David bringeth the ark into Zion with seven days, dance before it, for which Michal despiseth him. 12-16. They place it in a tabernacle, he offereth to God, blesseth the people, giveth them presents, 17-19. Michal reproving David he answereth her: she is childless to her death. 20-23.

The stoutest and valiantest men in his army and land, that the Philistines should attempt to disturb them in this work.

2 And David arose, and went with all the people that were with him from Baale of Judah, to bring up from thence the ark of God, whose name is called by the name of the Lord of hosts, that dwelleth between the cherubims.

With all the people that were with him, with the whole body of the people, for these seem to be a differing party from the thirty thousand now mentioned. See 1 Chron. xiii. 1, 2. From Baale of Judah. Quest. How came it when they went to it, as is evident, both from 1 Chron. xiii. 6, and because the ark was there, and to be fetched thence? Answer. Some affirm that the Hebrew preposition sometimes signifies to, as Gen. xiii. 11. But there is no need of that, for 1 Chron. xiii. 6 mentions their going to Baalath, and this place mentions their going from it: and the one of these doth manifestly suppose the other, for they went thither, that they might return thence. So the sense is plain, They went from Baale of Judah, to bring (or rather to carry, for the word signifies either up from thence the ark, whereby it is supposed that they first went thither, which is related 1 Chron. xiii. 6. Moreover this place is commonly called Kirjath-jearim, 1 Sam. vi. 1, 1 Chron. xiii. 6, and formerly Kirjath-baal, Josh. xv. 60, nd Baalah, Josh. xv. 9, and here Baale of Judah, so called because it was in the tribe of Judah, as is evident from Josh. xv. 1, &c. To bring up from thence the ark of God into Jerusalem, which in many respects, is a sifter for it than Baalah, because this was a more public place, where it would be more observed and regarded, and in the centre of the kingdom, to which they might more easily come from all parts, and the royal city, where it might be always at hand for David to inquire at, as occasion required, and the place which God had allotted for it. Whose name is called by the name of the Lord of hosts, thus whose belongs not to the ark, but to God, for what follows is not the name of the ark, but of God. The place may well be, and is by some, rendered thus, Upon (or at, or beside, or before) which (ark) the name, over the name of the Lord of hosts, that dwelleth between the cherubims, is called upon, &c. by or before which they were to present their prayers to God for counsel and succour upon all occasions. And this is mentioned here as the reason why David put himself and his people to so great trouble and charge, because it was to fetch up the choicest treasure which they had, and so the benefit would abundantly recompense the labour and vexation.

3 And they † set the ark of God upon a new cart, and brought it out of the house of Abinadab that was in † Gibeah and Uzzah and Ahio, the sons of Abinadab, drove the new cart

They set the ark upon a new cart, being taught and encouraged to do so by the example of the Philistines, who did so without any token of God's displeasure upon them for so doing. But they did not sufficiently consider that God might wink at the Philistines, because they were ignorant of God's laws, and yet be angry with them for the same thing because they knew, or might and should have known, the law of God, which commanded the priests to carry it upon their shoulders, Numb. iv. 15. vii. 9. But then present transports of joy at the happy change of their laws, and then greedy desire of having the ark removed, made them hasty and inconsiderate. In Gibeah, or, in the hill as I Sam. vii. 1. Uzzah and Ahio, the sons of Abinadab, for Abinadab himself seems now to have been dead, & it is not mentioned at home through infirmity or indiscreet occasions.

4 And they brought it out of the house of Abinadab which was at Gibeah, † accompanying the ark of God and Ahio went before the ark

To lead the oxen that drew it

5 And David and all the house of Israel played before the Lord on all manner of instruments made of fir wood, even on harps, and on psalteries, and on timbrels, and on cornets, and on cymbals

6 ¶ And when they came to † Nachon's threshingfloor, Uzzah † put forth his hand to the ark of God, and took hold of it, for the oxen † shook it

Nachon, otherwise called Chidon, 1 Chron. xiii. 9. The oxen shook it, for they stumbled, 1 Chron. xiii. 9.

7 And the anger of the Lord was kindled against Uzzah, and † God smote him there for his error, and there he died by the ark of God

God smote him with some deadly disease or stroke, as it follows. For his error, either, 1. For his touching the ark, when he was no Levite, as Josephus reports; nor indeed was Kirjath-jearim a Levitical city, or that being but a Levite, he touched the bare ark which only the priests might do, Numb. iv. 15; xxiii. 3. And though the ark was ordinarily covered, yet it is not impossible but the covering might be either loose, and so blown aside by the wind, or worn off, and so he might touch the ark itself. Or 2. Because he put the ark into a cart, and thereby exposed it to the danger of falling, which would have been a great dishonourment to the Levites, and a reproach to the ark.

And though Ahio also might have a hand in putting it into the cart, yet Uzzah only is smitten, either because he was the elder brother, and the person to whose care the ark was more especially committed; or because he was the chief author of this counsel of putting it into a cart, or because he added a new fault of touching the ark, and that out of distrust of God's care over it. That he died (this may seem very severe, considering that his intention was pious, and his transgression not great. But, besides that men are very improper judges of the actions of God, and that God's judgments are always just though sometimes obscure, there are many things to be said of this and such-like cases. 1. That it is fit and reasonable that God should make some persons examples of his just and high displeasure against sin seemingly small; partly for the demonstration of his own exact and impartial holiness, partly for the establishment of discipline, (for which very reason even earthly princes have oftentimes inflicted great punishments for small offences,) and for the greater terror and caution of mankind who are very prone to have slight thoughts of sin, and to give way to small sins, and thereby to be led on to greater, all which is or may be prevented by such instances of severity, and consequently, there is more of God's mercy than of his justice in such actions, because the justice is confined to one particular person, but the mercy and benefit of it public and common to mankind of that and all future ages. 2. That God is justly most severe in those things which immediately concern his worship and service, and against those persons who have the nearest relation to him, and the greatest opportunities of knowing, and the highest obligation of careful practising, those duties which they neglect. See Lev. x. 3. 3. That this punishment possibly was not so great as it may seem to be, for as for his body, the disease, though dangerous, might not be exceedingly painful and for his soul the stroke probably was not so sudden as not to give him space of repentance.

8 And David was displeased, because the Lord had † made a breach upon Uzzah, and he called the name of the place † Perez-uzzah to this day.

David was displeased or grieved both for the sin, which he acknowledged 1 Chron. xv. 2. 13. and for God's heavy judgment, whereby their hopes were dashed, and their joys interrupted, and a good soul struck dead for the criminal error of a pious mind, which he might possibly think harsh and very severe, and therefore be displeased or offended at this sharp providence.

9 And † David was afraid of the Lord that day, and said, How shall the ark of the Lord come to me?

1. Of the Lord, either that God was displeased with him for removing the ark, and bringing it to his city, or that God should proceed further in the way of his judgments upon him and his people, or lest the ark being brought to his house might be the occasion of inconveniences and great calamities, for some neglects or errors which they might easily and frequently commit. How shall the ark of the Lord come unto me? how may I presume, or how shall I dare do it, when God hath showed his displeasure for my attempting it? I will therefore wait further upon God for his direction in the case, and at present forbear. But why did not David consult God privately by the Urim, as he used to do? This therefore seems to have been his infirmity and neglect.

10 So David would not remove the ark of the Lord unto him into the city of David but David carried it aside unto the house of Obed-edom the Gittite

Which doubtless was done by the consent and desire of the owner of it, who for the enjoyment of so great a privilege, was willing to expose himself to some hazard, and wisely considered that the late judgment was not to be imputed to the ark, but to Uzzah's carelessness in managing it. The Gittite he was certainly a Levite, 1 Chron. xv. 18, 21, 24, xvi. 5, xxvi. 4, and here called a Gittite, either, first, from Gath of the Philistines where he or his father might be born, or have sojourned, which might be upon divers occasions, or, secondly, from Gath-rimmon, which was a Levitical city, Josh xxi 25

11 And the ark of the Lord continued in the house of Obed-edom the Gittite three months and the Lord blessed Obed-edom, and all his household

Walk happy success in all their affairs and actions

12 And it was told king David, saying, The Lord hath blessed the house of Obed-edom, and all that pertaineth unto him, because of the ark of God So David went and brought up the ark of God from the house of Obed-edom into the city of David with gladness

David brought up the ark of God, understanding that the ark was not moved without danger or inconvenience and with great advantage, he apprehended his former mistake and brought it to himself From the house of Obed-edom, which is thought to have been either in Jerusalem or very near it

13 And it was so, that when they that bare the ark of the Lord had gone six paces, he sacrificed oxen and fatlings

Had gone six paces with safety and comfort His sacrifice oxen and fatlings, upon an altar suddenly erected as was usual in such cases See Exod xx 24 Thus he did either to appease God for the former carriage or to praise him for his present mercy that he had not made another breach upon them or to implore his favour and gracious presence with them in this great affair

David danced before the Lord to express his joy and thankfulness to God by his outward carriage according to the manner of those times See Exod xv 20 Jud xxi 34, xxi 21 1 Sam xviii 6 Psal cxlviii 4 1 Tim i 8 the usual habit of the priests and Levites in their sacred ministrations yet sometimes worn by others, as it was by the young child Samuel 1 Sam iii 18 before he was come to those years in which the Levites were allowed to minister, and so hereby David who had by his royal robes and put on this robe to signify and declare that although he was king of Israel yet he willingly owned himself to be the Lord's minister and servant

15 So David and all the house of Israel brought up the ark of the Lord with shouting, and with the sound of the trumpet

16 And as the ark of the Lord came into the city of David Michal Saul's daughter looked through a window, and saw king David leaping and dancing before the Lord and she despised him in her heart

As one of a base and mean spirit that knew not how to carry himself with that modesty which became his place but behated himself like one of the fools or vain persons in Israel

17 And they brought in the ark of the Lord and set it in his place, in the midst of the tabernacle that David had pitched for it and David offered burnt offerings and peace offerings before the Lord

In the tabernacle that David had pitched for it, for Moses's tabernacle was still at Gibeon, 1 Chron xvi 39, xxi 29, 2 Chron i 3, which David left there because he designed to build a temple at Jerusalem with all speed, though he was countermanded thereunto by God himself

18 And as soon as David had made an end of offering burnt offerings and peace offerings, he blessed the people in the name of the Lord of hosts

He blessed the people i e he heartily and solemnly prayed to God for his blessing upon them which he did both as prophet and as their king, to whom by office it belongs, by all means, to seek his people's welfare

19 And he dealt among all the people, even among the whole multitude of Israel, as well to the women as men, to every one a cake of bread, and a good piece of flesh, and a flagon of wine So all the people departed every one to his house

20 Then David returned to bless his household And Michal the daughter of Saul came out to meet David, and said, How glorious was the king of Israel to day, who uncovered himself to day in the eyes of the handmaids of his servants, as one of the vain fellows shamelessly uncovereth himself

Who uncovered himself, either, first, by stripping himself of his royal robes that he might put on a Levitical ephod, or by discovering some part of his thighs or legs as might possibly happen whilst he danced with all his might as is said above ver 14, considering that the men did then wear loose garments, or she speaks thus not that he did so but only by way of aggravation of his fault, and to vivify him the more as is usual with persons in such cases The handmaids of his servants, who either bore a part in the solemnity as women sometimes did Exod xv 20, or at least were spectators of it, and of David's carriage in it is one of the same j lous, as idle and light persons use to do

21 And David said unto Michal, It was before the Lord, which chose me before thy father, and before all his house, to appoint me ruler over the people of the Lord, over Israel therefore will I play before the Lord

It was before the Lord, in his presence and service, which though contemptible to thee is, and ever shall be honourable in mine eyes Which chose me before thy father and before all his house, which took away the honour from him and his and transferred it upon me, whereby he hath obliged me to love and serve him with all my might

22 And I will yet be more vile than thus, and will be base in mine own sight and of the maid-servants which thou hast spoken of, of them shall I be had in honour

Will be base in mine own sight, I will always be ready to humble and abase myself before God Of them shall I be had in honour, I shall rather choose to get honour from the meanest of my people, in serving and praising God than to gain esteem from thee by my lukewarmness in God's service

23 Therefore Michal the daughter of Saul had no child unto the day of her death

Therefore, not because of David's words to her, which have nothing in them to this purpose; but because of her proud, and petulant, and ungodly speech and carriage to David, which God justly punished with sterility Michal had no child to wit, by David, and after this time, which these words evidently respect, which was true, although those five children ascribed to Michal, 2 Sam xxi 8, were hers by birth, and not by adoption only Unto the day of her death, i e never, for if she ever had any, it must be before her death Compare 1 Sam xv 35; Matt i 25

CHAP. VII.

David being at rest desires to build God a house, which Nathan at first approves of, afterwards, in obedience to the word of God, forbiddeth him, 1—11 He promiseth him benefits and blessings in his seed, Solomon and the Messiah, who should build the house of God, 12—17 David's prayer and thanksgiving, 18—29

AND it came to pass, "when the king sat in his house, and the LORD had given him rest round about from all his enemies,

When the king sat in his house, i. e. was settled and warm in the house which Hiram's men built for him chap. vi 11, then he reflected upon the unhand-some and unsettled state of the ark. From all his enemies, Philistines, Moabites, and others, so that they durst not invade his land, as they had formerly done, for though you read of David's wars with them, chap. viii, yet in them David was the aggressor, and entered their lands.

2 That the king said unto Nathan the prophet, See now, I dwell in an house of cedar, but the ark of God dwelleth within curtains

In a tent or tabernacle, ver. 6, composed of several curtains Exod. xxxvi 1, &c.

3 And Nathan said to the king, Go, do all that is in thine heart, for the LORD is with thee

Pursue thy intentions, and build a house for the ark. The design being pious and the thing not forbidden by God Nathan hastily approves it, before he had either seriously considered it in his own mind, or consulted God about it as both he and David certainly ought to have done in a matter of so great moment. And therefore Nathan meets with this rebuke, that he is forced to acknowledge his error, and recant it. For the holy prophets did not say all things by prophetic inspiration but some things by human spirit, and prudent conjecture, and therefore they were ignorant and mistaken in some matters, as 1 Sam. x 10, 2 Kings ii 27.

4 And it came to pass that night, that the word of the LORD came unto Nathan saying,

It came to pass that night because David's mistake was great, and from his first mind God would not suffer him to be long in his mistake, nor to disquiet his mind or run head into inconveniences, in order to the work before him. The word of the Lord came unto Nathan that the same person who had confirmed David in his mistake, might now rectify it.

5 Go and tell my servant David. Thus saith the LORD, 'Shalt thou build me an house for me to dwell in?

Thou shalt not. Or, Wilt thou build, &c. Dost thou purpose it?

6 Whereas I have not dwelt in any house since the time that I brought up the children of Israel out of Egypt even to this day, but have walked in a tent and in a tabernacle.

These two seem thus to be distinguished, the one may note the curtains and hangings within, the other the frame of boards, and coverings upon it.

7 In all the places where I have walked with all the children of Israel spake I a word with any of the tribes of Israel, whom I commanded to feed my people Israel, saying, Why build ye not me an house of cedar?

Spake I a word? did I ever give any command about it? without which neither they did, nor thou shouldst attempt it. With any of the tribes in 1 Chron. xxi 6, it is of the judges, and to them not to the tribes, the following words agree, whom I commanded to feed my people Israel. Lather therefore the tribes are here put synecdochically for the rulers of the tribes, as the word chiefs is sometimes used for the governors of it, or the word here rendered tribes may be rendered scaptres, as it is used Gen. xlix 10, and scaptres put for scaptre-bearers or rulers, as is very frequent.

8 Now therefore so shalt thou say unto my servant David, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, 'I took thee from the sheepcote, from following the sheep, to be ruler over my people, over Israel.

So shalt thou say unto my servant David lest David should be too much discouraged, or judge himself neglected and forsaken of God, as one thought unworthy of so great an honour, God here gives him the honourable title of his servant thereby signifying that he accepted of his service, and of his good intentions, which also was expressed at this time, as it may seem from 1 Kings viii 18, though not in this place. I took thee from the sheepcote, to be ruler over my people, I advanced thee and I do not repent of it.

9 And 'I was with thee whithersoever thou wentest, and have cut off all thine enemies out of thy sight, and have made thee a great name, like unto the name of the great men that are in the earth.

10 Moreover I will appoint a place for my people Israel, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more, neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more, as beforetime.

I will appoint a place, i. e. I will make room for them, where as hitherto they have been much constrained and distressed by their enemies. Or, I will establish (for so that verb sometimes signifies) a place for them i. e. I will establish them in their place or land. Some Hebrew men render the verse thus and the Hebrew words will be it.

And I have appointed (or assigned or given) a place for my people Israel (to wit the Land of Canaan) and have planted them in it that they may dwell in their own place and be no more driven to and fro, or other, and they shall dwell in their own place &c. I did long ago appoint it to them and afterward planned it out or put them into a fixed possession. Now they shall continue or dwell in it in spite of all their enemies. For my people Israel. Among the favours which God had vouchsafed, and would vouchsafe to David he reckons his blessings to the people of Israel because they were great blessings to David, partly because the strength and happiness of a king consists in great part in the multitude and happiness of his people, and partly because David was a man of a pious and public spirit, and therefore no less affected with Israel's felicity than with his own. In a place of their own, i. e. in their own land, not in strange lands, nor mixed with other people. As beforetime, either, first, As in the land of Egypt, and so he goes downward to the judges. Or, secondly As in Saul's time, and so he ascends to the judges.

11 And as 'since the time that I commanded judges to be over my people Israel, and have caused thee to rest from all thine enemies. Also the LORD telleth thee that he will make thee an house.

Nor is they did under the judges, neither so oft nor so long. But all this is to be understood with a condition except they should notoriously forsake God or rebel against him, which being so oft declared by God in other places it was needless to mention it here. Or thus may relate to the latter ages of the world, when the people of Israel shall be converted to Christ, and recalled out of captivity, and planted in their own place when they shall enjoy a far greater degree of tranquillity than ever they did before. And thus agrees best with the future tense I will appoint — and I will plant them &c. otherwise the work was already done, God had already appointed the land for them, and actually planted them in it. And have caused thee to rest from all thine enemies, i. e. and until this time in which I have given thee rest. But these words, though according to our translation they be enclosed in the same parenthesis with the foregoing clauses, may seem to be better put with-out it, and to be taken by themselves. For the foregoing words in this verse, and in ver 10, do all concern the people of Israel, but these words seem to concern David alone, to whom the speech returns after a short digression concerning the people of Israel. And they may be rendered either thus, and I have caused thee to rest, &c. or, and I shall cause thee to rest, &c. to wit, more fully and perfectly than yet thou dost. He will make thee an house, for thy good intentions to make him an house, he will make thee an house, to wit a sure house, as is expressed, 1 Kings xi 38, &c. he will increase and uphold thy posterity, and continue thy kingdom in thy family.

12 ¶ And "when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom.

When thy days be fulfilled, when the time of thy life shall expire. This phrase implies that his days shall be completed and prolonged to the usual course and stint of nature and not cut off in the midst, by any violent or untimely death. I will set up thy seed after thee I will set up in thy stead and thence thy posterity, first Solomon and the others successively and at last the Messiah. So the following words may be understood diversely, part of his posterity in general or indefinitely taken part of Solomon and part of Christ only, according to the differing nature of the several passages. Out of thy bowels, out of thy inward parts, or from thy loins, who shall be begotten by thee.

13 ¶ He shall build an house for my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom for ever.

He shall build an house. This is meant literally and immediately of Solomon, who alone did build the material house or temple, but mystically and ultimately of Christ, who is the builder of God's spiritual house or temple. Heb iii 6. 1 Pet ii 5. For my name's sake for my service and worship and glory. I will establish the throne of his kingdom this is not meant of Solomon for his kingdom was not for ever. And though the phrase for ever is sometimes used of the time of a man's life, yet it cannot be so understood here because the mercy here promised to David's son is of another nature, and of far longer continuance than that which was given to Saul ver 15, who yet enjoyed the kingdom as long as he lived. But it is to be understood of David's posterity in general, but with special respect to Christ, in whose person the kingdom was to be lodged for ever, Isa ix 7. Dan ii 44, Luke i 32, 33.

14 ¶ I will be his father, and he shall be my son. If he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men.

I will carry myself towards him as he comes a father, with all affection and tenderness, and I will own him as my son. This is intended both of Solomon, as a type of Christ, and of Christ himself as is evident from Heb i 5. If he commit iniquity this relates only to Solomon and some others of David's posterity, but not to Christ, who never committed iniquity, as Solomon did, who therein was no type of Christ, and therefore this branch is terminated in Solomon, whereas in the other when in Solomon was a type of Christ, the sense passes through Solomon unto Christ. With the rod of men, either first With such rods as men use to correct their sons, or to beat other men, which are here opposed to the rods or strokes which an angry God inflicts. See Job xxiii 6. Psal cxxxix 11, Isa xlviii 3, Rom ix 22, Heb x 31, xi 29. Secondly, With such rods as are gentle and moderate and suited to man's weakness, as a tolerable and reasonable correction is called humane, as compared to men 1 Cor x 13.

15 But my mercy shall not depart away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee.

As I took it from Saul, in regard of his ungodly life, the kingdom was continued to his person during his life.

16 And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee, and thy throne shall be established for ever.

Before thee; thine eyes in some sort beholding thee, for as lived to see his wise and godly son Solomon actually placed in the throne, with great reputation and general applause. 1 Kings i 39, 40, which was in itself a good presage of the continuance of the kingdom in his family, and being considered, together with the infallible certainty of God's promise to him and his for ever, of the accomplishment whereof of this was an earnest, gave him good assurance thereof, especially considering that he had his eyes and thoughts upon the Messiah, Psal cx 1, &c., whose duty he did by faith as Abraham did, John viii 56, and whom he knew that God would raise out of the fruit of his loins to sit on his throne, as is affirmed, Acts ii 30, and that for ever and so the eternity of his kingdom is rightly said to be before him. The LXX and Syriac read before me, which is a usual phrase, which makes no great variation in the Hebrew text.

17 According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David.

Although it was contrary to his own opinion and an evidence of his rashness and folly. Thus therefore is here mentioned as in evidence of his humility and impartiality, in relating the whole mind of God herein, and of his modesty in taking shame to himself.

18 ¶ Then went king David in, and sat before the Lord, and he said, 'Who am I, O Lord God? and what is my house, that thou hast brought me hitherto?

But this word may note either, first, His bodily gesture, for there is no certain gesture to which prayer is limited, and we have examples of saints praying in that posture. Exod xxv 1. 1 Kings xix 1, or he might sit for a season whilst he was meditating upon these things, and then alter his posture, (though it be not here expressed,) and betake himself to prayer. Or rather, secondly, His continuance there, as this Hebrew word is oft used, as Gen xxvii 41. 1 Cor xiv 8, 1 Sam i 22, xx 19 that he did not barely present himself before God but abode there for some competent time, that he might with God's leave pour out his soul freely before him. For howsoever one may in some cases pray sitting yet it is most probable that David would in this holy place, and upon this occasion use a more humble and reverent gesture such as kneeling is, which therefore David prescribeth or adviseth Paul xcv 6, and Solomon accordingly practiseth 1 Kings viii 54, 2 Chron vi 13. Who am I, and what is my house, that thou hast brought me hitherto? how infinitely unworthy am I and my family, of this great honour and happiness.

19 And this was yet a small thing in thy sight, O Lord God, but thou hast spoken also of thy servant's house for a great while to come. And is this the manner of man, O Lord God?

This to wit, which thou hast already done for me, as he now said, that thou hast brought me hitherto, i. e. to that pitch of honour, and peace, and prosperity, in which I now stand. This was yet a small thing in thy sight, though it was more than I deserved, or could expect, yet thou didst not think it enough for thee to give to me. For a great while to come, for many future ages, and indeed to all eternity. Is this the manner of man, O Lord God? do men use to deal so freely and kindly with their inferiors, as thou hast done with me? No. this is the prerogative of Divine grace, to give such promises and largeness as this. So these are words of admiration, which very well suit with the foregoing and following words. Or, And is this the manner, or law or custom of man or creature? &c. as the Hebrew adam is confessed sometimes to signify, as Psal xlix 2; Isa ix 9; Isa ii 9; i. e. Is this the manner of man's dealing with man and obscure persons, such but I see the Father's hand in the present case as well obvious which is evident in the Father's last offer to grant it. And this seems very probable because naturally agrees with the parallel place, I Chron. xxi. 17, where the words are, Now he regarded me according to the words of a man of high degree; i. e. thou hast dealt with me as if I had been not a poor mean shepherd, but the son of some great monarch; to whom such honours best agree

What can I demand any more unto thee? either, first, in way of gratitude and praise to thee, words cannot express my obligations to thee, nor any sense of these obligations. Or rather, secondly, in way of prayer, as appears by the parallel place, 1 Chron xxv 18. What can I ask or desire of thee more, than thou hast freely done? Thou knowest thy wants; thou knowest, either, first, my deep sense of thy favour; and my obligations to thee, or rather secondly, my condition and necessities, what I do or may need hereafter; and as thou knowest this, so I doubt not thou wilt be ready to supply me accordingly. Compare Matt vi 9-13

For thy word's sake, that thou mightest fulfil thy promise made to me by Samuel and Nathan, and thereby demonstrate thy faithfulness. According to thine own heart, I e of thine own mere liberality and good pleasure, without any desert of mine. So far was David, though now a very gracious man, from thinking his actions meritorious. To make thy servant know them, I e that thy gracious and wonderful purposes of mercy towards me, which I hid in thine own heart, might be manifested unto me and others by thy most kind words and actions. So it agrees with 1 Chron xvii 19.

Thou art great, both in power and in goodness, as appears by the great and good things which thou hast done for mankind: we have heard with our ears, what we have heard of our parents, or out of thy word concerning the incomprehensible excellency of thy majesty, and of thy works, of that which this day eminent experience

CHAP VIII

Melech ammah i. e. Goth and her twins, as it is expressed in the parallel place, 1 Chron. xviii. 1, which are called Melech ammah, or the broils of Ammah, because Goth was situated in the mountain of Ammah, and because thus being the enemy of the Philistines, and having a king, which none of her rest had, was the broil which had hitherto kept the Israelites in subjection, but now was taken out of their mouths.

He smote Moab, for although the king of Moab, out of hatred to Saul, pretended some kindness to David, and gave protection to his parents, 1 Sam xxii 3, 4, yet the Moabites were perpetual and sworn enemies to the Israelites, who therefore were forbidden to admit them into the congregation of the Lord, and to seek their peace and prosperity, Deut xxiii 8. And though God commanded them in their march to Moab to spare the Moabites Deut ii 9, 19, yet afterwards they proved unthankful and insolent, and fierce enemies to God and his people Numb xvi 4, &c., xvi 17, xvi 17, 18, Judg. ii 11 &c. 1 Sam. xvi 17, &c., and thereby provoked God to alter his course of love and charity towards them. With a line, i. e. with line, the parable as being oft understood 1 Paul xi 1, x. u. 16, xiv 1. The sense is, having conquered the land, he made an estimate of it, and a. it follows, distributed the towns and people into three parts. Casting them down to the ground, i.e. overthrowing their towns and utterly destroying their people in, in order following. With two lines measuring be to put to death, which severity was necessary for his own and his people's security, because they were numerous and potent and bordering upon Canaan and very vexatious and mischievous to the Israelites. And now that prophecy, Numb. xiv. 17 was accomplished.

3 ¶ David smote also Hadadezer, the son of Rehob king of Zobah, as he went to recover his border at the river Euphrates.

Hadadezer called Hadadzer. 1 Chron. xviii. 3 the Hebrew letters daleth and resh being alike and so oft interchangeable. Zobah a part of Syria, lying north-east from Canaan towards Hamath. 1 Chron. xviii. 3. See 1 Sam. xiv. 17. He went Quot Who? Answer Either first, Hadadezer who being already very potent, and going to enlarge his dominion further, David thought fit to oppose him. Or secondly David who remembering the grant which God had made to his people of all the land as far as Euphrates and having subdued his neighbouring enemies went to recover his rights, and stablish his dominion as far as Euphrates.

4 And David took from him a thousand chariots, and seven hundred horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen: and David thoughted all the chariot horses, but reserved of them for an hundred chariots.

Chariots, which word is fully supplied out of 1 Chron. xviii. 4 such substantives being oft understood in the Hebrew language as Gen. xxi. 30. 2 Sam. xxi. 16. Seven hundred horsemen or seven hundred companies of horsemen, i.e. in all seven thousand, as it is 1 Chron. xviii. 4. there being ten in each company and each ten having a ruler or captain. Exod. xviii. 21. Deut. x. 15. Or these seven hundred were the chief and the rulers of the rest and the remaining six thousand three hundred were the common horsemen subject to their commanders. Thoughted i.e. cut the sinews of their legs that they might be useless for war. Compare Job xi. 6. All the chariot horses except the following reserve. Chariots are here put for chariot horses as they are 1 Sam. xiii. 5. 2 Sam. x. 18. P. d. lxxvi. 6. David did this because he could not keep them for his own use. Deut. xvi. 16.

5 And when the Syrians of Damascus came to succour Hadadezer king of Zobah, David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men.

The Syrians of Damascus i.e. who were subject to Damascus the chief city of Syria.

6 Then David put garrisons in Syria of Damascus: and the Syrians became servants to David, and brought gifts.

And the Lord preserved David whithersoever he went.

Brought gifts to purchase their peace and acknowledge their subjection to him.

7 And David took the shields of gold that were on the servants of Hadadezer, and brought them to Jerusalem.

That were on the servants i.e. rather who were with the servants, i.e. committed to their custody as being kept in the king's army: for it is not probable they carried them into the field.

8 And from Beth-el and from Berobai, cities of Hadadezer king David took exceeding much brass.

In 1 Chron. xviii. 5, it is from Beth-el and from Berobai therefore the same cities were called by several names as is usual, the one by the Hebrews the other by the Syrians, or those were two other cities and so the brass was taken out of these four cities.

9 ¶ When Toi king of Hamath heard that David had smitten all the host of Hadadezer, Hamath, another eminent city of Syria.

10 Then Toi sent Joram his son unto king David, to salute him, and to bless him, because he had fought against Hadadezer, and smitten him: for Hadadezer had wars with Toi. And Joram brought with him vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and vessels of brass.

Toi sent Joram here also the names differ from 1 Chron. xviii. 9, 10 where it is Toi and Hadadon. Had wars, Heb. was a man of wars, i.e. was exercised with continual wars. Compare Gen. ix. 20, &c.

11 Which also king David did dedicate unto the Lord, with the silver and gold that he had dedicated of all nations which he subdued.

Unto the Lord, to the building of God's temple. So L. showed his affection to God and his house in preparing for it when he was not permitted to build it.

12 Of Syria, and of Moab, and of the children of Ammon, and of the Philistines, and of Amalek, and of the spoil of Hadadezer, son of Rehob, king of Zobah.

13 And David gat him a name when he returned from smiting of the Syrians in the valley of salt, i.e. being eighteen thousand men.

Gat him a name i.e. much was used in reputation. The Syrians of Edomites as they are said to be, 1 Chron. xviii. 12. It is likely these two people were confederates and that divers of the Syrians whom David had defeated in Syria fled to Edom, and there joined with them against their common enemy and made up together a very great army. As the number of the men slain in it show the assistance of the veteran soldiers of both countries, although the story here following may seem not to have been of the Syrians, as the words at first reading seem to intimate but of the Edomites (it not being probable that the Syrians would come so far from their own country as to the valley of salt to fight) and this verse may be read thus and that very agreeably to the Hebrew. And David gat him a name when he returned from smiting of the Syrians in smiting (which is easily repeated out of the last clause according to the common usage of Scripture) in the valley of salt eighteen thousand men, who were Edomites as is sufficiently implied here in the next verse and expressed 1 Chron. xviii. 12. The valley of salt a place in Edom called either from its neighbourhood to the Salt Sea or from some other name now unknown. Being eighteen thousand men, as it is also 1 Chron. xviii. 12, where also they are said to be smitten by Abishai because he was then chief commander of the army under David, and, it may be, in the fight as for the like reason, they are said to be smitten by Joab. Psal. lxxviii. 1, which also there are only 12,000 mentioned which place, if it speak of this battle the date of it was this. Abishai begins the combat, and kills 6000, after him comes in Joab, and kills 12,000 more, which makes up this 18,000. But why may not that be another history and battle? So the Edomites and Syrians together did first fight with Abishai and lost 18,000 men, and afterwards retired their forces and fought with Joab and lost other 12,000 men. Nor is it strange if two battles were fought in one place, of which there are divers instances in histories.

14 And he put garrisons in Edom, throughout all Edom: put he garrisons, and all the chev of Edom became David's servants. And the Lord preserved David whithersoever he went.

15 And David reigned over all Israel, and David executed judgment and justice unto all his people

Judgment and justice is just judgment as Deut xii 18. A figure called hendentes, as in Gen iii 16. Matt iv 16. 16. And Joab the son of Zeruiah was over the host, and Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud was recorder.

Joab having doubtless declared his repentance for his former crimes, and having done eminent service for his country, and having received the chief command by virtue of David's promise and contract 2 Sam x 8 was still continued in his place. Recorder, either first The writer of chronicles. But it is not likely he would have been put among the great officers of state and church. Or secondly, The treasurer who examined all the accounts, and kept records of them. Or, thirdly, The king's counsellor is Ahiopeph 19 called, 2 Sam xv 12. 1 Chron xxv 13 who was to bring things of moment to the king's mind and remembrance and to admonish him from time to time of things fit to be done. See 1 Kings iv 3. 2 Kings xxii 18.

17 And Zadok the son of Ahitub, and Ahimelech the son of Abiathar were the priests, and Seraiah was the scribe.

The son of Ahitub, not of that Ahitub, 1 Sam xxii, for that was of Ithamar's line, but this of Eleazar. Ahimelech the son of Abiathar, so Abiathar called his son by the name of his father 1 Sam xxii 20. The priests is the chief priest next under Abiathar, who fled to David 1 Sam xxi 20, and now was high priest, as may be gathered from 2 Sam xxi 35, 1 Kings ii 27-35 under him these two were the next chief priests, or the second priests each one being chief of the house of his father, Zadok of Eleazar and Ahimelech of Ithamar. See Numb iii 32, 1 Chron xxi 34. Or these two are here mentioned, because they constantly attended upon the king, that he might consult with them in the matters of the Lord, as he needed.

18 And Benaiah the son of Jehonada was over both the Cherethites and the Pelethites, and David's sons were chief rulers.

Was over these words are supplied out of the parallel place 1 Chron xviii 17, and out of 2 Sam xx 2, where they are expressed.

The Cherethites and Pelethites were undoubtedly soldiers, and such as were eminent for their valour and fidelity to the king, as is evident from 2 Sam xv 18, xx 7. 1 Kings i 34, 41 and most probably they were the king's guards, which consisted of these two bands who might be distinguished either by their several weapons, or by the different time or manner of their service. They are supposed to be thus called, either, first, from their office, which was upon the king's command to cut off or punish offenders, and to preserve the king's person, as their names in the Hebrew tongue may seem to imply, or secondly from some country or place to which they had relation. As for the Cherethites, it is certain they were either a branch of the Philistines, or a people neighbouring to them, and confederate with them, as is manifest from 1 Sam xxxi 8, Jerk xxv 16, Zeph ii 4, 5. And so might the Pelethites be too, though that be not related in Scripture. And these I believe and soldiers of David might be so called, either because they went and lived with David when he dwelt in those parts; or from some notable exploit against or victory over these people, as among the Romans the names of Asiatics, Africans, &c. were given for the same reason. One of their exploits against the Cherethites is in part related 1 Sam xxx 11. And it is likely, they did in any case against them, and against other people amongst which the Pelethites might be one. Were chief rulers, had the places of greatest authority and dignity conferred upon them.

CHAP IX

David for Jonathan's sake, sendeth for his son Mephibosheth, 1-6, entertaineth him at his table, and restoreth him all that was Saul's, appointing Ziba to be his servant, 7-13

AND David said, Is there yet any that is left of the house of Saul, that I may shew him kindness for Jonathan's sake?

David's wars being ended, he set himself to the administration of justice to all his people chap viii 15, and, amongst others, he minds his just debt and obligation to Jonathan and his family. Of the house of Saul he saith not of the house of Jonathan, for he knew not of any son which he had left, and therefore thought his kindness and obligation was to pass to the next of his kindred. As for Mephibosheth, he was very young and obscure, and possibly concealed by his friends, lest David should cut him off from jealousy of state, as hath been usual among princes in like cases, and therefore was unknown to David, as well he might be, especially when David's head and hands were full of war with divers and potent enemies, as they had hitherto been.

2 And there was of the house of Saul a servant whose name was Ziba. And when they had called him unto David, the king said unto him, Art thou Ziba? And he said, Thy servant is he.

Thy servant, one who had been a servant and, as it may seem, a steward to Saul. See below ver. 10.

3 And the king said, Is there not yet any of the house of Saul, that I may shew the kindness of God unto him? And Ziba said unto the king, Jonathan hath yet a son, whose name is lame on his feet.

The kindness of God, either, first, The kindness which I owe him for God's sake, and by virtue of my oath given to him about it 1 Sam xx 14-15. But that oath seems only to oblige him to Jonathan's posterity, and not to any other of Saul's house. Or secondly, Great and eminent kindness.

4 And the king said unto him, Where is he? And Ziba said unto the king, Behold, he is in the house of Machir, the son of Ammiel in Gilead.

In a place beyond Jordan, chap vii 27 where his friends thought he might be kept or on David's sight.

5 ¶ Then king David sent, and fetched him out of the house of Machir, the son of Ammiel, from Gilead.

6 Now when Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan the son of Saul, was come unto David, he fell on his face, and did reverence. And David said, Mephibosheth. And he answered, Behold thy servant.

7 ¶ And David said unto him, Fear not: for I will surely shew thee kindness for Jonathan thy father's sake, and will restore thee all the land of Saul thy father, and thou shalt eat bread at my table continually.

All the land of Saul is now seized and possessed by David, as due to him, either in right of his wife to whom the inheritance was devolved, Saul's sons by his wives being all dead, see Numb xxv 8, or by Divine donation, as belonging to the crown which God had now given him, or by forfeiture, because of Ish-bosheth's rebellion against his lord and king.

8 And he bowed himself, and said, What is thy servant, that thou shouldst look upon such a dead dog as I am?

So contemptible is my person and condition.

9 ¶ Then the king called to Ziba, Saul's servant, and said unto him, I have given thee my master's son all that pertained to Saul and to all his house.

10 Thou therefore, and thy sons, and thy servants, shall till the land for him, and thou shalt bring in the fruits, that thy master's son may have food to eat; but Mephibosheth thy master's son shall eat bread always at my table. Now Ziba had fifteen sons and twenty servants.

That thy master's son may have food to eat, that he may have wherewith to buy food for all his family, and all manner of provisions (which oft come under the title of food and lucid) necessary for himself and the m.

It is probable he had been the chief steward to manage Saul's land, where by he had great opportunities to enrich himself; when also he was very intent and resolved upon, either directly or indirectly, as the following history of him shows, and therefore it is not strange that he was so rich.

11 Then said Ziba unto the king, According to all that my lord the king hath commanded his servant, so shall thy servant do. As for Mephibosheth, said the king, he shall eat at my table, as one of the king's sons.

These are the words either, first, Of David, the words said he on Saul's land being supplied out of the farm and following verses. Or secondly, Of Ziba himself, thus rendered and understood. Also Mephibosheth, if the king please, shall eat at my table, and shall be treated like one according to his quality, as one of thy sons, as thou dost me, for the estate will suffice for that also.

12 And Mephibosheth had a young son, whose name was Micha. And all that dwell in the house of Ziba were servants unto Mephibosheth.

Mephibosheth had a young son, either first before he was covered and brought to the king, and then David, guilty of a criminal error in forgetting his duty Jonathan so long, although his long and continued wars both civil and foreign, might afford him some excuse in this regard, and time with business of another nature. Or secondly, After that time, for there is nothing here which intimates when this son was born. Whose name was Micha, who also had other children and grandchildren to keep up the name and memory of worthy and famous Jonathan. See 1 Chron. viii. 34, 35, ix. 10, 11.

13 So Mephibosheth dwelt in Jerusalem, for he did eat continually at the king's table, and was lame on both his feet.

CHAP. X.

David sent messengers to comfort the king of the Ammonites, because he was in distress, and the Ammonites and Syrians prepared to fight against the Israelites, and were overcome by Joab and the king's army. They recovered their forces, and again conquered him. David 10-19.

AND it came to pass after this, that the king of the children of Ammon died, and Hanun his son reigned in his stead.

The king of the children of Ammon, Nohash, ver. 2, probably the same who reigned Saul defeated and despoiled, 1 Sam. vii, who out of civility to Saul showed kindness to David, as it follows. He put a bold front to the differences between Saul and David, and made way for his future conquests.

2 Then said David, I will shew kindness unto Hanun the son of Nohash, as his father shewed kindness unto me. And David sent to comfort him by the hand of his servants, for his father and David's servants came into the land of the children of Ammon.

Therefore there had been a warm peace and friendship between David and him, and therefore the spoils of the children of Ammon are mentioned in chap. x. 12, by way of anticipation, and with respect to the story here following. As his father shewed kindness unto me, which he might do either by offering him his help, if he needed it, or by supplying him with military or other provisions upon occasion, or many other ways.

3 And the princes of the children of Ammon said unto Hanun their lord, Thinkest thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? hath not David rather sent his servants unto thee, to search the city, and to spy it out, and to overthrow it?

To observe where the city is weakest, and may soon be taken. The ground of this suspicion was, partly, the conscience of their ill deserts and carriage towards the Israelites, whose quarrel David had espoused; partly, the opinion they had of David's policy, and partly the severity of God's law particularly against them, Deut. xxv. 6, which might easily come to their ears. And they knew David was a zealous assayer of God's laws.

4 Wherefore Hanun took David's servants, and shaved off the one half of their beards, and cut off their garments in the middle, even to their buttocks, and sent them away.

Shaved off the one half of their beards, partly that he might compel them to bear a part in their mourning, and that in such a way as was useful with them, but forbidden to the Israelites, Lev. xix. 27, Deut. xiv. 1, which probably was not unknown to them, and partly to fasten it as a reproach upon them, and to make them ridiculous and contemptible. Compare Isa. xx. 1, xxv. 2, 16. Then to their buttocks, this was worse than the former, because the Israelites wore no breeches, and so their nakedness was hereby increased. Compare Isa. xx. 4.

5 When they told it unto David, he sent to meet them, because the men were greatly ashamed; and the king said, Tarry at Jericho until your beards be grown, and then return.

He sent to meet them, he sent them clothes and other necessaries. Tarry at Jericho, both because this was one of the first places which they came to in Canaan, and because it was now a very obscure village, and therefore not so fit for them in their circumstances, for it was not till a day till after this time, 1 Kings. xvi. 34. Until your beards be grown, for the want or loss of beards was esteemed a reproach among the Israelites.

6 And when the children of Ammon saw that they stood before David, the children of Ammon sent and hired the Syrians of Beth-rehob, and the Syrians of Zoba, twenty thousand footmen, and of king Melech a thousand men, and of Ish-tob twelve thousand men.

Beth-rehob, near Hamath, Numb. xiii. 21, of which see 1 Sam. xiv. 17, 2 Sam. viii. 3. Of king Melech i. e. of that part of Syria which was under king Melech, for Syria was a large country, and there were divers kingdoms in the several parts of it. This part was near Beth-el. See Deut. iii. 14. Of Ish-tob, or, of the men of Tob the country where Feplathah dwelt, Judg. xi. 3. Besides these they hired others out of Aram-naharaim or Mesopotamia, as appears from 1 Chron. xiv. 6, Psal. lxx. title. And as these were forward enough to combine against David, both to revenge their former losses and reproaches, and to give check to his growing greatness.

7 And when David heard of it, he sent Joab, and all the host of the mighty men.

Choosing wisely to carry the war into their country rather than to expect it in his own.

8 And the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in array at the entering in of the gate, and the Syrians of the Zoba, and of Rehob, and Ish-tob, and Maschah, were by themselves in the field.

Of the site, or sit, of Medeba, as it is expressed, 1 Chron. xiv 7 which was a frontier city. See Numb xii 30. This place they chose for the fight, that they might both defend that city and their country, whereof that was the entrance, and, if need were, might retreat into it. The Syrians were by themselves in the field, that by their numerous forces they might fall upon the Israelites on the other side.

9 When Joab saw that the front of the battle was against him before and behind, he chose of all the choice men of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians.

Which were the most valiant and expert soldiers.

10 And the rest of the people he delivered into the hand of Abishai his brother that he might put them in array against the children of Ammon.

11 And he said, If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me: but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will come and help thee.

12 Be of good courage, and let us play the men for our people, and for the cities of our God: and the Lord do that which seemeth him good.

For our people, for the preservation of ourselves and all our brethren from that utter ruin which our enemies design for us. Our war is not vainly undertaken to enlarge our empire or glory, but for our own just and necessary defence: and therefore we may hope for God's blessing and assistance in it. For the cities of our God, which are devoted to his worship and service, and therefore he will plead their cause against his enemies. The Lord do that which seemeth him good, let us do our parts, and quietly trust ourselves and the event to God's good pleasure, which we have no reason to distrust.

13 And Joab drew nigh, and the people that were with him, unto the battle against the Syrians: and they fled before him.

He prudently falls upon them first, because they were mercenaries, and not concerned so much in the success as the Ammonites were, all whose interest lay at stake, and therefore not likely to venture too far in their defence.

14 And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, then fled they also before Abishai, and entered into the city. So Joab returned from the children of Ammon, and came to Jerusalem.

That the Syrians were fled, in whose numbers and prowess they had the most confidence. Joab returned from the children of Ammon, not judging it convenient or safe to pursue them, because the forces were not utterly routed, but only dispersed and put to flight, and so might easily rally together.

15 ¶ And when the Syrians saw that they were smitten before Israel, they gathered themselves together.

Partly, to wipe out the stain of cowardice which they had now contracted, partly, to prevent that vengeance which they supposed David would execute upon them for their last attempt, and partly, to shake off the yoke that David had lately put upon them.

16 And Hadarezer sent, and brought out the Syrians that were beyond the river, and they came to Helam, and Shobach the captain of the host of Hadarezer went before them.

Hadarezer, the same with Hadadizer, chap xiv 3. The Syrians that were beyond the river, who having engaged themselves in the former expedition, as was noted before, were now obliged to proceed in their own defence, being now persuaded and hired to this second expedition, ver 19. Shobach, or Shopbach, 1 Chron. xix, 16.

17 And when it was told David, he gathered all Israel together, and passed over Jordan, and came to Helam. And the Syrians set themselves in array against David, and fought with him.

All Israel, i. e. the chosen and valiant men picked out of all Israel.

18 And the Syrians fled before Israel, and David slew the men of seven hundred chariots of the Syrians, and forty thousand horsemen, and smote Shobach the captain of their host, who died there.

The men of seven hundred chariots, Heb seven hundred chariots, i. e. the men belonging to them, that fought in or with them, as plainly appears, 1. Because the men only and not the chariots, were capable of being killed, as these are said to have been. 2. Because it is thus explained in the Book of Chronicles, which was written after this book, for this end, to explain what was dark or doubtful, and to supply what was omitted here; where, instead of these words, are seven thousand men which fought in chariots, 1 Chron. xix 18. And this is, a very common metonymy, of which see above chap viii 4 and the notes on 1 Sam. xiii 5. Although there might be seven thousand chariots in all, whereof seven hundred were chosen ones, according to the distinction made Prov. xiv 7. Forty thousand horsemen, for which in 1 Chron. xix 18 is forty thousand footmen, which may be reconciled divers ways. 1. Both these may be true, that he slew forty thousand horsemen, which being the most considerable part and strength of the army, it might seem sufficient to name them, and every one could easily understand that the footmen in that case were certainly cut off, and that he slew also forty thousand footmen as is said 1 Chron., where he mentions them only because they were omitted in 2 Sam. and the horsemen being expressed here, it was needless to repeat them in 1 Chron. 2. The horsemen may be here called footmen in opposition to those that fought in chariots, because they sometimes fought on horseback, and sometimes came down from their horses, and fought on foot when the place of the battle was more commodious for footmen than for horsemen, which it is not improbable was then the case here: for David being a soldier of great valour and experience, and understanding the great numbers of the Syrian horsemen whereas the Israelites had but very few. But xvii 16, would doubtless endeavour to choose a place is inconvenient for their horsemen as he could. 3. Possibly the Syrians designed to bring the war into David's country, and therefore hastened their march, and for that end put their footmen on horseback, (which is frequently done in like cases) who when they came to the place of battle came down from their horses, and fought on foot. So there is no need of acknowledging an error of the scribe in the sacred text, which yet it were granted in such literal passages of no moment to the doctrine of faith and good life, it would not shake the foundation of our faith in matters of great importance, which it might reasonably be presumed the providence of God would more watchfully preserve from all depravation or corruption.

19 And when all the kings that were servants to Hadarezer saw that they were smitten before Israel, they made peace with Israel, and served them. So the Syrians feared to help the children of Ammon any more.

The kings that were servants to Hadarezer to wit, that time, or in that expedition to which he hired them.

CHAP XI

Whilst Joab besieged Rabbah David committed adultery with Bathsheba, 1-4. And hearing that she was with child, he sendeth for her husband out of the castle, to cover his shame. He will not go to his own house, neither sob nor drink, 5-13. David sendeth him again to the castle, with a letter to Joab to execute him to death,

14-17 The news of which Joab sendeth to David he married Bath-sheba, 18-27

AND it came to pass, after the year was expired, at the time when kings go forth to battle, that "David sent Joab, and his servants with him, and all Israel, and they destroyed the children of Ammon, and besieged Rabbah. But David tarried still at Jerusalem.

After the year was expired, when that year ended, and the next began which was in the spring time, Frod xii 2 When kings go forth, which is when the ground is fit for the march of soldiers, and brings forth provision for him and his host. In battle these words are to be understood here is Gen x 11, xiv 8 Rabbah, the chief and royal city of the Ammonites, Deut iii 11

2 ¶ And it came to pass in an eveningtide that David arose from off his bed, and walked upon the roof of the king's house: and from the roof he saw a woman washing herself, and the woman was very beautiful to look upon

From off his bed, where he had lain and slept for some time, being possibly disposed to sleep after dinner by reason of some excess committed in eating or drinking, and indulging himself in his lazy humour, which may seem very improper for so great a prince and captain who had so many and great burdens upon his shoulders especially in a time of war, and therefore such practices have been condemned by heathens, and Homer will not allow a general and great councillor to sleep all the night much less to take any part of the day for it. And therefore this is thought to be David's in error and the occasion of his following fall. Walk d upon the roof which was plain, after the manner, Deut xxxi 8 Washing herself to wit in chub which possibly was in her garden or in some room near to the king's place where she might wash her self divers ways and for different ends either for health or to cleanse herself from some kind of bodily impurity, when all the windows were open and she careless David might espie her

3 And David sent and enquired after the woman. And one said, Is not this Bath-sheba, the daughter of Eliam, the wife of Uriah the Hittite?

Instead of suppressing that lust which the sight of his eyes had kindled he seeks rather to feed it, and first inquires who he was that if she were unmarried he might make her either his wife or his concubine. Bath sheba, called also bath shub 1 Chron iii 5 where also Eliam is called Amiel. The Hittite, so called either 1 By his origin, being born either of that race, but became a zealous proselyte, or at least among that people. Or, 2 By his habitation among them. Or 3 For some notable exploit of his against that people. see 1 Sam xxxi 6, and the notes on 2 Sam vii 18

4 And David sent messengers, and took her, and she came in unto him, and he lay with her: for she was purified from her uncleaness, and she returned unto her house.

David sent and took her from her own house into his palace, not by force but by persuasion as desiring to speak with her. She came in unto him into his palace and chamber, as he desired. For she was purified to wit, from her menstruous pollution according to the law, Lev xvi 19, which is here noted as the reason either why David pursued his carnal desire or why she so easily yielded to it, because she was not under that pollution which might alienate her from it, or rather, why she so readily consented, that time being used by Aristotle and others to be the most likely time for concupiscence.

5 And the woman conceived and sent and told David, and said, I am with child

Consider therefore what to do for thy own honour, and for my safety, whom thou hast brought into a most shameful and dangerous condition

6 ¶ And David sent to Joab, saying, Send me Uriah the Hittite. And Joab sent Uriah to David

7 And when Uriah was come unto him, David demanded of him how Joab did, and how the people did, and how the war prospered

Frivolous questions, which any common messenger could have answered, which probably made Uriah suspect that there was some other secret cause why he was sent for. And he might understand something, either by David's messengers, ver 4, or by some of his own family, concerning her being sent for to the court, which, together with other circumstances might give him cause of further suspicion. Yet such might be the questions (though not here particularly mentioned) concerning those heads, as every private person might not be acquainted with, nor able to resolve, but such only as were acquainted with the counsel of war

8 And David said to Uriah, Go down to thy house, and wash thy feet. And Uriah departed out of the king's house, and there followed him a mess of meat from the king

Go down to thy house, not doubting but he would, there converse with his wife and so cover their sin and shame. Wash thy feet, as travellers there used to do. There followed him a mess of meat, seemingly as a testimony of David's respect and affection to him but really to cheer up his spirits, and dispose him to desire his wife's company

9 But Uriah slept at the door of the king's house with all the servants of his lord, and went not down to his house

With all the servants of his lord with the king's guard. This he did either upon some suspicion of the matter, see ver 7, or by the secret direction of God's wise and invincible providence, who would bring David's sin to light

10 And when they had told David, saying, Uriah went not down unto his house, David said unto Uriah, Camest thou not from thy journey? why then didst thou not go down unto thine house?

When they had told David, whether of their own accord or being first asked by David it doth not appear. Camest thou not from thy journey wearied with hard service and travel, and therefore didst need refreshment? nor did I expect or desire that thou shouldst now attend upon my person or keep the watch

11 And Uriah said unto David, The ark, and Israel, and Judah, abide in tents, and my lord Joab, and the servants of my lord, are encamped in the open fields, shall I then go into mine house, to eat and to drink, and to lie with my wife? as thou livest, and as thy soul liveth, I will not do this thing

The ark, it seems was now carried with them for the encouragement and direction as was usual. see Numb x 3. 1 Sam xvi 1 In the open fields to wit, in tents where they are in the fields. And to lie with my wife he might possibly add these words, to insinuate his apprehension of the king's design and to awaken his conscience to the consideration of his sin and of the injury which he had done him. His meaning is, Now when God's people are in a doubtful and dangerous condition it becomes me to sympathize with them, and to abstain even from lawful delights. Whereby he might possibly intimate how unworthy it was for David in such a season to indulge himself in sinful and injurious pleasures. But David's ear was now deaf to heart being hardened through the deceitfulness of sin day also, and to morrow I will let thee depart. So Uriah abode in Jerusalem that day, and the morrow.

13 And when David had called him, he did eat and drink before him; and he made him drunk and at even he went out to lie on his bed with the servants of his lord, but went not down to his house.

When David had called him, i. e. being invited by David. He made him drunk, or, he made him merry, as the word oft signifies. He caused him to drink more than was convenient. He went out to lie on his bed, which it doth not appear that he did the night before, but now his excess in eating and drinking might make it more necessary for him. With the servants of his lord, i. e. in some chamber in the king's court, where the king's servants used to take their repose.

14 ¶ And it came to pass in the morning, that David wrote a letter to Joab, and sent it by the hand of Uriah.

15 And he wrote in the letter saying, Set ye Uriah in the forefront of the hottest battle, and retire ye from him, that he may be smitten, and die.

So far is David from repenting upon these just and great reasons, that he seeks to cover one sin with another, and to hide his adultery with murder, even the murder of a most excellent person, and that in a most malicious and perfidious manner.

16 And it came to pass, when Joab observed the city, that he assigned Uriah unto a place where he knew that valiant men were.

Placed there to defend it, because that part of the city was supposed either the weakest, or the place designed for the assault. Joab having formerly committed a base murder upon Abner, was ready to execute this wicked command of the king, that so he being involved in the same guilt with him might the more willingly receive him into favour.

17 And the men of the city went out, and fought with Joab, and there fell some of the people of the servants of David, and Uriah the Hittite died also.

18 ¶ Then Joab sent and told David all the things concerning the war.

19 And charged the messenger, saying, When thou hast made an end of telling the matters of the war unto the king,

20 And if so be that the king's wrath arise, and he say unto thee, Wherefore approachedst ye so nigh unto the city when ye did fight? know ye not that they would shoot from the wall?

21 Who smote Abimelech the son of Jerubbaesheth? did not a woman cast a piece of a millstone upon him from the wall, that he died in Thebez? why went ye nigh the wall? then say thou, Thy servant Uriah the Hittite is dead also.

Jerubbaesheth, called also Jerubbaal, judge, ix. 1. See the note on 2 Sam. xi. 8. Thy servant Uriah the Hittite is dead also, which he knew would be acceptable news to the king, and therefore allay his wrath. This indeed might make the messenger suspect that David had a hand in Uriah's death, and possibly Joab might say so for that very reason, that these matters by degrees being known David might be hardened in sin, and so Joab might have the greater interest in him.

22 ¶ So the messenger went, and came and shewed David all that Joab had sent him for.

23 And the messenger said unto David, Surely the men prevailed against us, and came out unto us into the field, and we were upon them even unto the entering of the gate.

We beat them back, and pursued them even to the gate.

24 And the shooters shot from off the wall upon thy servants; and some of the king's servants be dead, and thy servant Uriah the Hittite is dead also.

25 Then David said unto the messenger, Thus shalt thou say unto Joab, Let not this thing displease thee, for the sword devoureth one as well as another; make thy battle more strong against the city, and overthrow it, and encourage thou him.

Let not this thing displease thee, be not dejected or discouraged by this sad occasion. Encourage thou him, i. e. Joab, to proceed in the siege.

26 ¶ And when the wife of Uriah heard that Uriah her husband was dead, she mourned for her husband.

27 And when the mourning was past, David sent and fetched her to his house, and she became his wife, and bare him a son. But the thing that David had done displeased the Lord.

When the mourning was past, which was seven days, Gen. l. 10. 1 Sam. xxx. 13. Nor could the nature of the thing admit of longer delay, lest the too early birth of the child might discover David's sin. David sent and fetched her to his house, and she became his wife, by which it appears that David continued in the state of impurity for divers months together, and this notwithstanding his frequent attendance upon God's ordinances, which is an eminent instance of the corruption of man's nature, which is even in the best, and without Divine assistance is too strong for them of the deceitfulness of man, and of the true judgment of God upon him. Sin by delivering a man up to another. The thing that David had done, i. e. his adultery and murder, as is evident in the next chapter.

CHAP. XII.

Nathan by a parable reproveth and threateneth David, l. 1-12.

He confesseth his sin, and is pardoned, but the child mu- rders, 13-14. David mourneth an l prayeth for it, 15. He is comforted, after he is satisfied and cheered, the reason, 16-24. He goeth in to Bathsheba. Solomon is born of her, and is called Jeduthun, 24-25. David taketh Bathsheba, and increaseth the people thereof, 26-31.

AND the Lord sent Nathan unto David. And he came unto him, and said unto him, There were two men in one city, the one rich, and the other poor.

Nathan the prophet, chap. vi. 2, 1 Kings i. 8. When the ordinary means did not awaken David to repentance, God used an extraordinary course. Thus the merciful God pities and prevents him who had so horribly forsaken and forgotten God.

Nathan prudently where he is in proof with a parable, lest the manner of the case in nations and ancient times that so he might surprise David, and cause him unawares to give sentence against himself. He manageth his relation as if it had been a real thing, and demands the king's justice in the case. Though the application of the parable to David be easy and obvious, yet it matters not if some circumstances be not so applicable, because it was fit to put in some such clauses, either for the decency of the parable, or that David might not too early discover his design.

2 The rich man had exceeding many flocks and herds.

Noting David's many wives and concubines.

3 But the poor man had nothing, save one little ewe lamb, which he had bought and nourished up, and it grew up together with him, and with his children; it did eat of his own meat, and drank of his own cup, and lay in his bosom, and was unto him as a daughter.

The poor man had nothing, save one little ewe lamb, denoting Uriah, with his own and only wife. Which he had bought, as men then used to buy their wives, or, had procured. Lay in his bosom, which David might take for hyperbolic expressions of his tender care of and affection to it, although there want not instances of some who have treated such brute creatures in this manner.

4 And there came a traveller unto the rich man, and he spared to take of his own flock and of his own herd, to dress for the wayfaring man that was come unto him, but took the poor man's lamb, and dressed it for the man that was come to him.

A traveller, this some make to be the devil, whom David gratified by his sin, but it rather seems added for the decency of the parable.

5 And David's anger was greatly kindled against the man, and he said to Nathan, As the Lord liveth, the man that hath done this thing shall surely die.

Or, in your day he shall die.

This seems to be more than the fate deserved, or than he had commission to inflict for it. And it is observable, that David now, when he was not indulgent to himself, and to his own sin, was most severe to others; as appears by this passage, and the following relation of what which was done in the time of David's impenitent continuance in his sin.

6 And he shall restore the lamb fourfold, because he did this thing, and because he had no pity.

7 ¶ And Nathan said to David, Thou art the man. Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, I anointed thee king over Israel, and I delivered thee out of the hand of Saul,

Thou art the man, thou hast committed this crime with great aggravations, and out of thine own mouth thy sentence hath proceeded, and thou art worthy of death.

8 And I gave thee thy master's house, and thy master's wife into thy bosom, and gave thee the house of Israel and of Judah, and if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee such and such things.

Thy master's wives or women, as that word is elsewhere used, as Num. xxxi. 18. And though we read not a word of God's giving, or of David's taking any of Saul's wives into his bosom, or which is all one, into his bed, yet (which I think to be intended at here) it might be according to the manner of that time, that the wives and concubines of the prince or king, belonged to the successor to be at his disposal. And I pretend to them, was interpreted little less than pretending to the crown, which made it fatal to Adonijah to ask Abishag, 1 Kings ii. 23, and to Abner to be suspected for Rizpah, 2 Sam. iii. 8. And Absalom, upon the crown usurped the concubines also, which is looked on as a crime unpardonable. 2 Sam. xvi. 21. Nor would this have been reckoned amongst the mercies and blessings which God here is said to give him, and which are opposed to that which he sinfully took. But he gave up of that which Saul's daughter was given to him for his wife by Saul's promise, and consequently by God's grant, though afterwards Saul maliciously gave her to another man, and that Michal the other daughter was actually given to him, 1 Sam. xviii. And it is very possible that some other of David's wives were nearly related to the house of Saul; wherefore David in this design to en- large and strengthen his interest in the kingdom, although there is no absolute necessity of retaining this in Saul, being the word in plural, wives, and with belonging to Saul, who sometimes were owned by David as his own, or lords, or superiors, such as Nabal was, and some others, not elsewhere named might be, whose houses and wives, and even women, God might give to David. Such and such things, such other things as thou hadst wanted, or as thou desiredst.

9 'Wherefore hast thou despised the commandment of the Lord, to do evil in his sight? thou hast killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword, and hast taken his wife to be thy wife, and hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon.

The commandment of the Lord, i. e. those laws of God which forbade thee to do this thing, by not giving him that respect and observance which they deserved. Uriah the Hittite, that valiant and generous and noble person, hast taken his wife to be thy wife, this he mentions amongst his other sins, partly because he had rewarded her, who by God's law should have been severely punished; partly because he compassed this marriage by wicked practices, even by Uriah's murder and for sinful ends, even for the gratification of his mortal and sensual lusts, and for the concealment of that sin which he was obliged to confess and lament. Hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon, those cursed enemies of God, and of his people, whom thou hast rewarded and hardened in their idolatry, by giving up him and others of God's people into their hands. And note here that although David did not kill Uriah himself, nor commanded any to do it, yet that he should be put upon his own sword (which as a soldier he was bound to do) to soldiers under him, on justifiable account without fear, therefore legally chargeable with murder, though the person employed died in the service, yet on God's account, who looked on David's design therein as in the sequel. And therefore though the Ammonites slew Uriah, yet David is said to have killed him with their sword.

10 Now therefore the sword shall never depart from thine house, because thou hast despised me, and hast taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be thy wife.

11 Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will raise up evil against thee out of thine own house, and I will take thy wives before thine eyes, and give them unto thy neighbour, and he shall lie with thy wives in the sight of this sun.

I will raise up evil to wit, the evil of punishment. Out of thine own house, from thy own children and family. Before thine eyes, i. e. openly, so as thou shalt know it, as certainly as if thou didst see it, and yet not be able to hinder it. Give them, i. e. I shall by my providence give him power over them, which I know he will abuse, and I shall not restrain him from so doing, either by my grace or providence. Unto thy neighbour, to one who is very near to thee, even thy beloved son Absalom. But God expressly thus here darkly and doubtfully, that the accomplishment of it might not be hindered. In the sight of the sun, in the open day, and in a public place. The accomplishment hereof see chap. xvi. 22.

12 For thou didst it secretly, but I will do this thing before all Israel, and before the sun.

I will do this thing, i. e. I will execute this judgment. This God did by inclining David's heart to leave his concubines to keep his house, and so to come into Absalom's power, by giving up Athaliah to his own carnal policy, which readily suggested to him that wicked and desperate counsel, and by exposing Absalom to these temptations, and leaving him to his own vicious inclinations which certainly he would in such circumstances produce the effect. So the sin was wholly from men, but the order of the world.

13 And David said unto Nathan, "I have sinned against the Lord. And Nathan said unto David, "The Lord also hath put away thy sin; thou shalt not die."

I have sinned against the Lord, I now freely confess that in which I have hitherto so wickedly smothered, and I have deserved all these and far heavier judgments for it, and I am more troubled for my sin against my sovereign Lord and gracious God, than for the shame and punishment that follow it. How serious and pathetic this confession was we may see, Psal. li. The Lord also hath put away thy sin, i. e. so far as concerns thy own life and eternal salvation, both which were forfeited by this sin. Thou shalt not die, as by thy own sentence, ver. 5, thou didst deserve, and as thou mightst expect to do by my immediate stroke, though surely thou mightst evade the law before a human jurisdiction, as there be no superior to execute the law upon thee.

14 Howbeit, because by this deed thou hast given great occasion to the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme, the child also that is born unto thee shall surely die.

To blaspheme, i. e. to reproach both God and his people, and the true religion. For though these were not concerned in David's sin, the blame and shame of which should have been appropriated to him, yet heathens and wicked men would, according to their own evil minds and malicious hearts, fasten the reproach of this upon God and religion, as if God were unholty, because the man after God's own image was so, and putative in committing a so great a crime, when Saul was cast off for a far less sin, and negligent in the government of the world, and of his church in suffering such wickedness as even heathens have abhorred to go unpunished, and as if all religion were but hypocrisy and unbelief, and a pretence for villainies. Besides the Ammonites upon their success against Uriah and his party, did exult in his misfortune and praise their idols, and blaspheme the Lord of Israel. The child shall surely die, which, considering his affection to it and the punishment threatened to a poor innocent infant for his sake, must needs be grievous to him.

15 ¶ And Nathan departed unto his house. And the Lord struck the child that Uriah's wife bore unto David, and it was very sick.

16 David therefore besought God for the child, and David fasted, and went in, and lay all night upon the earth.

David besought God for the child, supposing the threatening might be conditional, and so the execution of it prevented by prayer. Went in, to wit, into his closet, as Mat. vi. 6, to pray solitarily and earnestly, as he had done with the prophets. Or this word may only note his private and unobtruded prayers in the actions here expressed.

17 And the elders of his house arose, and went to him, to raise him up from the earth; but he would not, neither did he eat bread with them.

The elders of his house, the chief officers of his kingdom and household who were there present.

This excessive mourning did not proceed simply from the fear of the loss of the child, but from a deep sense of his sin, and from the Divine displeasure manifested therein, and particularly from a just apprehension of the injury which he had done to the child by his sin, which justice urged him to do his utmost to repair by prayer or other means.

18 And it came to pass on the seventh day, that the child died. And the servants of David besought to tell him that the child was dead, for they said, Behold, while the child was yet alive, we spoke unto him, and he would not hear: on which our voice: how will he then vex himself, if we tell him that the child is dead?

On the seventh day; either, 1. From the beginning of the disorder. Or rather, 2. From the day of his birth, which is the most usual way of computation of men's days or years, for it is apparent that this happened during the time of David's fasting and lying upon the earth, ver. 20, which it is not probable that it lasted for seven days. They said, whispering among themselves, ver. 19.

19 But when David saw that his servants whispered, David perceived that the child was dead: therefore David said unto his servants, Is the child dead? And they said, He is dead.

20 Then David arose from the earth, and washed, and anointed himself, and changed his apparel, and came into the house of the Lord, and worshipped. Then he came to his own house, and when he required, they set bread before him, and he did eat.

Into the house of the Lord, i. e. to the tabernacle, to confess his sin before the Lord, and to own his justice in this stroke and the other threatenings, and to deprecate his great and just displeasure, and to acknowledge God's righteousness in sparing his own life, and to offer such sacrifices as were proper and required in such cases. Nor did David imagine that his law Num. xix. 11 in going thither before the seven days were expired. For neither is there the same reason of a tent, and of a dwelling house, where the several rooms of the house are as distinct as several tents. Nor is it here said, that David was in the same room, or in the same house where the child died.

21 Then said his servants unto him, What thing is this that thou hast done? thou didst fast and weep for the child, while it was alive; but when the child was dead, thou hast risen and eaten bread.

22 And he said, While the child was yet alive, I fasted and wept: but I said, Who can tell whether God will be gracious to me, that the child may live?

For God's threatening of the child's death might be conditional, as that was of Jonah's destruction, Jonah in 4.

23 But now he is dead, wherefore should I fast? I have seen I bring him back again: I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me.

Wherefore should I fast, seeing fasting and prayer cannot now prevail with God for his life? I shall go to him, into the tomb of the dead, in which he is, and into heaven, where I doubt not I shall find him.

24 ¶ And David comforted Bath-sheba his wife, and went in unto her, and lay with her: and she bare a son, and he called his name Solomon: and the Lord loved him.

David comforted Bath-sheba, who was now much dejected both for her former sin which she truly repented of, as may be gathered from Prov. xxxi. 1-3, &c., and for the loss of that child which was very dear to her, and which might seem to be the only tie of David's affection to her. Such being now dead, she might think that David would utterly cast her off, and leave her to that shame and punishment which she had deserved. Went in unto her, to wit, into her chamber or bed. The Lord loved him, i. e. the Lord declared to David that he loved his son, notwithstanding the just cause which David had given to God to alienate his affections from him.

25 And he sent by the hand of Nathan the prophet; and he called his name Jeduthah, because of the Lord.

This is believed of the LORD

The same royal city so called, because it either stood beside the river or was encompassed with water, both for defence and delight. Although the words are by some learned men rendered thus, I have taken, or intercepted, or cut off water from the city, which well agrees, both with the words city being here put for meeth, which is frequent, as Gen. i. 1. city 1. city 2. city 29 &c., and with the relation of Josephus the Jew, who saith, The conduits of water were cut off and so the city was taken, and with a relation of Polybius concerning the same city, which was taken afterward by Antiochus in the same manner by cutting off water from the city.

<sup>1</sup> lest for having taken one part of the city, he concluded the remaining part of it could not long stand out. lest it be called after my name, lest I have the honour of taking it. Thus he seeks to ingratiate himself with the king, by pretending great care for his honour and interest.

David gathered all the people together, either because Joab needed more help for the storming of the city, or, at least, for the prosecution of the victory, and execution of justice upon the whole land; or because he would have them all to partake of the spoil of the city, which was there in great abundance. <sup>30</sup> The rather because they were all exposed to the hazard of utter ruin, in case the Ammonites had prevailed against them.

The weight whereof was a talent of gold, or rather the price whereof &c. For as the Hebrew shekel signifies both a weight and a piece of money of a certain price, so also may much it be proceeding from the same root. And, in general the same words both in Hebrew Greek and Latin are promiscuously used to signify either weight or price, as is well known to the learned. And the addition of precious stones which are never valued by the weight of gold makes this signification here most proper and probable. Moreover, the weight might seem too great either for the king of Ammon or for David, to wear it upon his head. Although it is well meant of the weight, it might be said that this was not a crown to be worn ordinarily, but merely to be put on upon the king's head at his coronation or upon solemn occasions as here where this was done, in token of the translation of this kingdom to David, and, it may be, it was held up or supported by two officers of state, that it might not be too burdensome to him, and after a little while taken off.

<sup>31</sup> And he brought forth the people that were therein, and put them under saws, and under harrows of iron and under axes of iron, and made them pass through the brick-kiln: and thus did he unto all the cities of the children of Ammon. So David and all the people returned unto Jerusalem.

The people that were therein: the words are indefinite and therefore not necessarily to be understood of all the people, for it had been barbarous to use women and children thus, but of the men of war, and especially of those who had been the chief actors or abettors of that villainous action against David's ambassadors, (which was contrary to the law of nature, and of nations, and of all humanity,) and of the dreadful war ensuing upon it, for which they might seem to deserve the severest punishments. Although indeed there seems to have been too much rigour used, especially, because these dreadful deaths were inflicted not only upon those great counsellors, who were the only authors of that vile usage of the ambassadors, but upon a great number of the people, who were innocent from that crime. And therefore it is probably conceived that David exercised this cruelty whilst his heart was hardened and impenitent, and when he was bereaved of that free and good Spirit of God which would have taught him more mercy and moderation. Put them under saws: he sawed them to death; of which punishment we have examples, both in Scripture, Heb. xi. 37, and in other authors. Under harrows of iron, and under axes of iron, he caused them to be hewn down upon the ground, and torn by sharp iron harrows drawn over them, and hewn in pieces by keen axes. Made them pass through the brick-kiln, i. e. to be burnt in brick kilns. Or, made them to pass through the furnace of Malcham, i. e. of Moloch called also Malchom, and here Malchen punishing them with their own sin, and with the same kind of punishment which they inflicted upon their own children. see 2 Kings xvi. 3, xxiii. 10, Lev. xxiv. 21, xx. 2, Deut. xxi. 10

CHAP. XIII.

Amnon loveth his sister Tamar, ravisheth her, then hateth and driveth her away, 1-19. Absalom entertameth and revengeth her with Amnon's death, 20-29. David is grieved. Absalom flieth to Geshur, 30-39.

AND it came to pass after this, that Absalom the son of David had a fair sister, whose name was Tamar, and Amnon the son of David loved her.

<sup>1</sup> He fell sick the passion of his mind disturbed his body as is usual. She was a virgin, and therefore diligently kept, so as he could not get private converse with her, and without modest, and abhorring any complaisance with his lustful desires, both from her inclination and interest.

Shimeah, called also Shammai, 1 Sam. xvi. 9.
<sup>4</sup> And he said unto him, Why art thou, being the king's son, lying <sup>1</sup> from day to day? wilt thou not tell me? And Amnon said unto him, I love Tamar, my brother Absalom's sister.

<sup>1</sup> From day to day, Heb. from morning to morning for whereas in the day he had many diversionary and trifling mirths, in the night he was pestered with tormenting thoughts and passions, the effects whereof appeared in his countenance in the morning. Wilt thou not tell me thy sure friend and faithful servant, who am ready to advise and assist thee?

<sup>5</sup> And Jonadab said unto him, Lay thee down on thy bed, and make thyself sick: and when father cometh to see thee, say unto him, I pray thee, let my sister Tamar come, and give meat, and dress the meat in my sight, that I may see it, and eat it at her hand

Let me see Tamar come, so he calls her, to prevent the suspicion of any dishonest design upon so near a relation whose neither nature nor respect and affection would permit him to violate. But at her hand, pretending that his stomach was so nice that he could eat nothing but what he saw dressed, and that by a person whom he much affected

So Amnon lay down, and made himself sick, and when the king was come to see him, Amnon said unto the king, I pray thee, let Tamar my sister come, and make me a couple of cakes in my sight, that I may eat at her hand

7 Then David sent home to Tamar, saying, Go now to thy brother Amnon's house, and dress him meat

It is strange that so wise and sagacious a person as David did not see through so vain a pretence but that must be ascribed partly to the instincts of nature, which generally preserve near relations from such monstrous actions, and partly to God's providence which blinded David's mind, that he might bring upon him the designed and threatened judgments

8 So Tamar went to her brother Amnon's house, and he was laid down. And she took flour, and kneaded it, and made cakes in his sight, and did bake the cakes

He was laid down upon his bed, or rather his couch

9 And she took a pan, and poured them out before him, but he refused to eat. And Amnon said, Have out all men from me. And they went out every man from him

Poured them out, out of the frying pan into the dish

10 And Amnon said unto Tamar, Bring the meat into the chamber, that I may eat of thine hand. And Tamar took the cakes which she had made, and brought them into the chamber to Amnon her brother

Inte the chamber, an inner chamber, either 1 That where he lay sick upon his bed where also Tamar made the cake in his sight, who then carried them out into the next room to bring them in again when he called for them. Or rather 2 Another chamber, Amnon lying upon his couch in one chamber where the company were with him, where also she made the cakes before him, first sending all out of that room, and then rising from his couch, and upon such pretence, goes into another secret chamber where he might have the better opportunity for his intended wickedness

11 And when she had brought them unto him to eat, he took hold of her, and said unto her, Come lie with me, my sister

12 And she answered him, Nay, my brother, do not force me, for no such thing ought to be done in Israel do not thou this folly

Yay, my brother, whom nature both teacheth to abhor such thoughts, and obligeth to defend me from such a mischief with thy utmost hazard if another should attempt it. Do not force me thou shouldst abhor it, if I were willing, but to add violence to thy filthiness is abominable. In Israel, among God's people, who are taught better things, who also will be infinitely reproached for such a base action

13 And I, whither shall I cause my shame to go? and as for thee, thou shalt be as one of the fools in Israel. Now therefore, I pray thee, speak unto the king; for he will not withhold me from thee

Whether shall I cause my shame to go? how can I either endure or avoid the shame and reproach of it? As one of the fools in Israel, i. e. loathsome and contemptible to all the people, whereas now thou art in great reputation, and here apparent of the crown. He will not withhold me from thee, this she spoke, either because she did not understand or not remember that the law of God prohibited such marriages between a brother and his half sister, or because she thought her royal father could or would dispense with it upon this extraordinary occasion, to save his first-born son a life, or that by this pretence she might free herself from her present and most urgent danger, knowing she should have opportunity enough to prevent other mischiefs

14 Howbeit he would not hearken unto her voice but, being stronger than she, forced her, and lay with her

15 ¶ Then Amnon hated her exceedingly, so that the hatred wherewith he hated her was greater than the love wherewith he had loved her. And Amnon said unto her, Arise, be gone

Then Amnon hated her exceedingly partly because, his lust being now satisfied his mind and conscience had a true and clear prospect and deep sense of the natural turpitude and baseness of the action, and of that shame and contempt and loss and mischief which was likely to follow it and consequently an utter aversion from her who had been the instrument and occasion of his sin, and principally by the just judgment of God both upon Amnon and David that so the sin might be made public and way made for the succeeding tragedies, for otherwise it would probably produce love and kindness to her as it did in another Gen xxxiv 2, 3, especially in him whom both nature and interest, and even lust itself, obliged to allay her grief and shame by all possible demonstrations of kindness

16 And she said unto him, There is no cause, this evil in sending me away is greater than the other that thou didst unto me. But he would not hearken unto her

There is no cause to wit, given thee by me. This evil is greater than the other this she might truly say, because though the other was in itself a greater sin, yet this was an act of greater inhumanity and barbarous cruelty, and a more wrong and damage to her (who she was by birth) because it exposed her to public infamy and contempt, as it she had been an independent subject, and had either enticed her to sin or at least consented to it, and besides, it turned private offence into a public scandal, to the great dishonour of God and of his people Israel and especially of all the royal family, and was likely to cause direful passions, and mischief among them

17 Then he called his servant that ministered unto him, and said, Put now this woman out from me, and bolt the door after her

18 And she had a garment of divers colours upon her for with such robes were the king's daughters that were virgins apparelled. Then his servant brought her out, and bolted the door after her

Of divers colours, of embroidered work. Compare Gen xxxvi 3

19 ¶ And Tamar put ashes on her head, and rent her garment of divers colours that was on her, and laid her hand on her head, and went on crying

Put ashes on her head, and rent her garment, to signify her grief for some calamity which had befallen her, and what that was concurring circumstances did easily discover. Laid her hand on her head, in token of grief and shame, as if she were unable and ashamed to show her face. See Jer. ii 37. Went on crying, to manifest her abhorrence of the fact, and that it was not done by her consent 20 And Absalom her brother said unto her, Hath Amnon thy brother been with thee? but hold now thy peace, my sister he is thy brother, regard not this thing. So Tamar remained desolate in her brother Absalom's house.

Seen with thee i. e. him with thee. Behold, and imitate the modesty of Scripture expressions. He is thy brother, therefore thou must forgive and forget the injury, therefore thy disgrace of him will be a blot to us all, therefore thou wilt not go right from David against him, because he is as near and dear to him as thou, therefore thy dishonour is the loss, because thou wast not abused by any mean person, but by thy kinsman, therefore this evil must be borne, because it cannot be revenged. And thus he covers his design of taking vengeance upon him at the first opportunity. Regard not this thing, so as to torment thyself. Desolate, neglected and forsaken by others, none now seeking her in marriage, and through shame and dejection of mind, giving herself up to solitude and retirement.

21 ¶ But when king David heard of all these things, he was very wroth.

To wit with Amnon, whom yet he did not punish at least so exactly as he should, either from the concealing of his own guilt in the like kind, or from that too indulgent which he oft showed to his children, or because the case was perplexed, for if he had been put to death for the fact, by virtue of that law, Deut. xxii. 23, 24, who was innocent must have died with him, because she did not cry out, although indeed the law did not reach the present case. Tamar not being betrothed to a husband, and for the following law concerning a virgin not betrothed that could have no place here, he could not force Amnon to marry Tamar, because that marriage had been incestuous.

Absalom saith unto his brother Amnon neither good nor bad, i. e. he said nothing, it all to him to wit about that business. It is a syncdochic expression used in his manner, Gen. xxi. 21. He neither debated it with him nor threatened him for it, but came willing to cover it and press it by with brotherly kindness. For if he had wholly forborne all discourse and converse with him it would have roused great jealousies in Amnon and David, and hindered him in his intended and desired revenge. For Absalom hated Amnon, or rather, but on though Absalom, i. e. the Hebrew participle commonly signifies, for the following clause is not added as a reason of the former, but by way of exception or opposition. Though he outwardly expressed no dislike of the fact, yet he inwardly hated him.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, after two full years, that Absalom had shepherders in the country of Gath, and in the country of Ephraim, and Absalom invited all the king's sons.

After two full years, this circumstance of time is noted partly as an aggravation of Absalom's malice, which was so inordinate and implacable, and partly as a sign of Absalom's policy, that both Amnon and David might more securely comply with his desires as being now free from all suspicion of him. Absalom had shepherders, according to the manner of those ancient times, when princes did not give themselves up to both and luxury, but spent the time and pains in the most honest employment. In the country, first, the country of Ephraim, or Ephraim, John vi. 9. the second, the tribe of Judah, towards, or perhaps which place was more.

24 And Absalom came to the king, and said, Behold now, thy servants have shepherders, let the king, I beseech thee, and his servants go with thy servant.

To the feast, which was usual upon these occasions, see Gen. xxxviii. 13, 1 Sam. xxi. 7, 11.

25 And the king said to Absalom, Nay, my son, let us not all now go, lest we be chargeable unto thee. And he pressed him, howbeit he would not go, but blessed him.

He pressed him, pretending great desire of his presence there, to prevent any jealousies, which otherwise he thought would arise in the breast of a king so wise and experienced, and under the expectation of God's dreadful judgments to be inflicted upon his family. Blessed him, dismissed him with thanks for his kindness, and with his fatherly blessing.

26 Then said Absalom, If not, I pray thee, let my brother Amnon go with us. And the king said unto him, Why should he go with thee?

Let my brother Amnon go with us, for the king designed (as the following words show) to keep him at home with him, as being his eldest son, and heir of his kingdom, otherwise Absalom would never have made particular mention of him, which now he was forced to do. Nor did this desire of Amnon's presence want specious pretences, as that seeing the king would not, he who was next to him might honour him with his company, and that this might be a manifest and public token of that love and friendship which was between him and his brother, notwithstanding the former occasion of difference.

27 But Absalom pressed him, that he let Amnon and all the king's sons go with him.

It is strange that his urgent desire of Amnon's company raised no suspicion in so wise a king, but God blinded his mind, that he might execute his judgments upon David and bring upon Amnon the just punishment of his lewdness.

28 ¶ Now Absalom had commanded his servants, saying, Mark ye now when Amnon's heart is merry with wine, and when I say unto you, Smite Amnon, then kill him, but not have not I commanded you? be courageous, and be valiant.

When Amnon's heart is merry with wine, when he least suspects and will be most unable to prevent the evil. Hath not I commanded you? I who am the king's son, and when Amnon is gone his heir, who therefore shall easily obtain pardon for you, and will liberally reward you.

29 And the servants of Absalom did unto Amnon as Absalom had commanded. Then all the king's sons arose, and every man gat him up upon his mule, and fled.

Mules were in use amongst the Israelites. See 1 Kings i. 33. For though they might not promote such a kind of prostitution, 1 Cor. xix. 19, yet they might use them to engender it.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, while they were in the way, that tidings came to David, saying, Absalom hath slain all the king's sons, and there is not one of them left.

Which was not improbable, when the sword was once drawn among them and one of them killed, which might prevail to the rest to draw their swords, both to defend themselves and to revenge their brother's death, and thereby occasion the death of all. And God suffered this fall to report to be spread for David's greater terror and humiliation, that he who had formerly rejoiced in the tidings of Uriah's death might now be tormented with the report of the death of all his sons.

31 Then the king arose, and tare his garments, and lay on the earth, and all his servants stood by with their clothes rent.

32 And Jonadab, the son of Shimeah David's brother, answered and said, Let not my lord suppose that they have slain all the young men the king's sons, for Amnon only is dead, for by the appointment of Absalom this hath been determined from the day that he forced his sister Tamar

Joab was a man of great craft and subtlety, and one that had exact knowledge of Amnon's fact, and of Absalom's. By the appointment, or, by the command; Heb put for command, Numb in 16 From the day, it was resolved from that time in his breast, but the word of command was not then given to others, for that would probably have hindered his design. But all this he seems to have spoken from a probable conjecture rather than of certain knowledge, as appears by the sequel.

ch 19 14. 33 Now therefore let not my lord the king take the thing to his heart, to think that all the king's sons are dead for Amnon only is dead.

ver 30. 34 But Absalom fled. And the young man that kept the watch lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came much people by the way of the hill side behind him.

Absalom fled, he who had undertaken to defend his servants' flies, or his own life. Behind him, behind the watchman, for it seems they did not come in the direct road where the watchman looked for them, but (for some reason or fancy they had) fetched a compass, and came that way which he least expected them.

35 And Jonadab said unto the king, Behold, the king's sons come, as thy servant said, so it is.

36 And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of speaking, that, behold, the king's sons came, and lifted up their voice and wept, and the king also and all his servants wept very sore.

37 ¶ But Absalom fled, and went to Talmai, the son of Ammihud, king of Geshur. And David mourned for his son every day.

Talmai, the son of Ammihud, his mother's father's son, that he might have pretence of protection and sentence to him, and that by his mediation he might obtain his father's pardon and favour.

38 So Absalom fled, and went to Geshur, and was there three years.

39 And the soul of king David longed to go forth unto Absalom: for he was comforted concerning Amnon, seeing he was dead.

To go forth unto Absalom, to wit, to visit him, or to send for him. And thus this word the soul is here understood partly from the Hebrew verb which being of the feminine gender agrees not with David but with David's soul, and partly by comparing this with other places, where the same verb is used, and the soul expressed, as Psal lxxxiv 2, cxxxviii 1.

But as this supposition may seem too bold, so this version seems not so well to agree with that phrase of going out to Absalom, for David neither desired nor intended to go out to Absalom, but that Absalom should come home to him. And these words may be and are otherwise rendered by the most ancient and remarkable interpreters to this purpose, And king David made an end of going out (to wit, in an hostile manner, as that verb is used Gen xvi 12, 2 Sam xi 1) against (for so the Hebrew particle el is used Jer xxxiv 7, Ezek xiii 9, 20, Amos vii 13) the soul, i. e. having used some, though it is probable but cold and remiss, endeavours to pursue after Absalom, and to keep him from his grandfather's, to receive condign punishment he now gave over thoughts of it. Thus the same verb, and that in the same conjugation is used in the same manner, 1 Kings iii 1, he made an end of building. It is to be objected, That the Hebrew verb is of the feminine gender, and therefore doth not agree with king David which is masculine. It may be answered that this usage of genders is a most frequent figure, and as the masculine gender is sometimes applied to women when they do some manly and valiant action, Exod i 23, so the feminine gender is sometimes used of men when they show an effeminate tenderness in their disposition, which is the case here, as some learned Hebraicists have noted.

CHAP XIV

Joab suborning a widow of Tekoah by a parable to incline the king's heart to fetch home Absalom, bringeth him to Jerusalem, but not into David's sight, 1—24 Absalom's beauty, hair, and children 25—27 After two years Joab bringeth him into the king's presence, 28—33

NOW Joab the son of Zeruiah perceived that the king's heart was toward Absalom.

He desired to see him but was ashamed to show kindness to one whom God's law and his own conscience obliged him to punish, and wanted a fair pretence, which therefore Joab gave him.

2 And Joab sent to Tekoah, and fetched thence a wise woman, and said unto her, I pray thee, feign thyself to be a mourner, and put on now mourning apparel, and anoint not thyself with oil, but be as a woman that had a long time mourned for the dead.

Tekoah a city of Judah, 2 Chron xi 5, 6. One of Jerusalem was not convenient, lest the king might know the person on such an occasion. And besides, this woman seems to be of great eminency for her wisdom as the following discourse manifests. A wise woman rather than a man, because women can more easily express their passion, and do sooner procure pity in the hearers, and an answer to their requests. Anoint not thyself with oil, as they used to do when they were out of a mourning state. See Ruth iii 3 Matt vi 17.

3 And come to the king, and speak on this manner unto him. So Joab put the words in her mouth.

4 ¶ And when the woman of Tekoah spake to the king, she fell on her face to the ground, and did obeisance, and said, Help, O king.

5 And the king said unto her, What aileth thee? And she answered, I am indeed a widow woman, and mine husband I have lost.

For id a widow woman, one of them in who most needed thy compassion and assistance, and whom thou art by God's law obliged in a singular manner to protect and relieve.

6 And thy handmaid had two sons, and they two strove together in the field, and there was none to part them, but the one smote the other, and slew him.

There was none to part them and therefore there is no witness, either that he killed him, or how he killed him, whether from some sudden passion and great provocation, or in his own necessary defence, or otherwise. Slew him, as the avengers of blood report.

7 And, behold, the whole family is risen against thine handmaid, and they said, Deliver him that smote his brother, that we may kill him, for the life of his brother whom he slew, and we will destroy the heir also, and so they shall quench my coal which is left, and shall not leave to my husband neither name nor remainder upon the earth.

I have may kill him, according to the law, Numb xxxv, 19 Deut xxi 12. We will destroy the heir also, so they plainly discover that their prosecution of him was not so much from love of justice, as from a covetous desire to deprive him of the inheritance, and to transfer it to themselves, which self-interest might justly render their testimony suspected. Or perhaps these words are not spoken as the express words of the prosecutors, (who can hardly be thought so directly to express a sinister design,) but as the woman's inference or comment upon what they were doing, (for this would be indeed the result of it though they did not say so in express words,) thereby to represent her case as the more deserving pity. My coal which is left, the poor remainder of my light and comfort, by whom alone my hopes may be revived and repaired. To my husband, she names him rather than herself, because children bear the names of their fathers, not of their mothers.

8 And the king said unto the woman, Go to thine house, and I will give charge concerning thee.

That thy case may be justly and truly examined, and thy son preserved from their unjust and malicious proceedings.

9 And the woman of Tekoah said unto the king, My lord, O king, 'the iniquity be on me, and on my father's house' and the king and his throne be guiltless.

The sense is either first, that if I do not inform thee, aught and thou thereby be drawn to give an unrighteous sentence on my behalf, I am willing to bear the whole blame of it before God and men. I acknowledge thou art wholly innocent in the case. Compare Gen xxvii 13. Or secondly this, If through thy forgetfulness or neglect of this my just cause my adversaries prevail and destroy my son, my desire is, that God would not lay it to the king's charge, but rather to me and mine. So the king may be exempted thereby. Whereby she both insinuates her great esteem of and affection for the king, thereby winning upon him to compass her design, and without implies that such an omission of the king's will bring guilt upon him, and yet most prudently and decently orders her phrase so as not to seem to blame or threaten the king. Compare 1 Cor v. 16. 2 Sam xx 16. This case seems best to agree with David's answer, which shows that she desired some further assurance of the king's care and justice in her concern.

10 And the king said, Whosoever saith ought unto thee bring him to me, and he shall not touch thee any more.

So as to hunt or molest thee by pursuing thy son.

11 Then said she, I pray thee let the king remember the Lord thy God: the king said, Let the king remember the Lord thy God: that thou wouldest not suffer 'the revengers of blood to destroy any more. Lest they destroy my son. And he said, 'As the Lord liveth, there shall not one hair of thy son fall to the earth.'

If the king remember the Lord thy God, the sense is, either first, Make mention (as this Hebrew verb is often rendered) of the name of the Lord thy God, to wit in an oath. I do swear to me by God that thou wilt protect me and my son against all revenger of blood, for so David did in compliance with this desire of hers. Only she was forced to express her mind in more general and ambiguous terms, because it had been presumption and rudeness for her in plain terms to demand the king's oath as if he durst not trust his word. Yet without she insinuates her meaning so plainly that the king understood it, and yet so handsomely and elegantly that the king was much pleased with her wisdom, and thereby inclined to grant her request. Or secondly, this Remember the Lord thy God, the sense is, who is not so severe and ready to smite at all that is unwise, nor doth cut off every man's slave, as appears from Numb xxxv, and from the example of Cain and from thyself, O king; though this she expressed not but only with such words which she knew would give so wise and good a king occasion to reflect upon himself and upon the goodness of God in sparing him, though a villain in order that thereby he might be obliged to maintain and in sparing the person whom she desired. Or thirdly this, Remember the Lord, whose presence thou hast made me thus promisc, and who will be a witness against thee, if thou breakest it. That thou wouldest not suffer the revengers of blood to destroy any more, Heb lest the avenger of blood multiply to destroy 1. Lest they cause one destruction to another, and add my surviving son to him who is slain already. Or lest thou dost multiply avengers of blood to destroy 1. Lest by thy connivance at their cruel and malicious proceedings against my son, thou dost encourage avengers of blood to the like furious practices, and thereby increase the number of that sort of men, and upon that pitiable occasion multitudes of murders. Lest they destroy my son, or, and let them not destroy my son; the future tense being put for the imperative mood, as is frequent. There shall not one hair of thy son fall to the earth, 1. he shall not suffer the least damage. We have the same phrase used 1 Sam xiv 45, 1 Kings 1 52, Acts xxvii 34 compare Matt x 30.

12 Then the woman said, Let thine handmaid, I pray thee, speak one word unto my lord the king. And he said, Say on.

Having obliged the king by his oath in her supposed case, she now throws off the veil, and begins to apply this parable to the king's and kingdom's present case.

13 And the woman said, Wherefore then hast thou thought such a thing against 'the people of God' for the king doth speak this thing as one which is faulty, in that the king doth not fetch home again 'his banished'.

If thou wouldest not permit the avengers of blood to molest me or to destroy my son who are but two persons, how unreasonable is it that thou shouldst proceed in thy endeavours to revenge Amnon's blood upon Absalom, whose death would be highly injurious and grievous to the whole commonwealth of Israel all whose eyes are upon him as the heir of the crown and a wise, and valiant, and amiable person unhappy only in this one act of killing Amnon, which was done upon a high and heinous provocation and whereof thou thyself didst give the occasion, by permitting Amnon to go unpunished. The king doth speak this thing as one which is faulty by thy word, and promise, and oath given to me for thy son thou condemnest thyself for not allowing the same equity towards thy own son. Thy banished to wit, Absalom, from that heathenish country, where he is in evident danger of being infected with their idleness and other vices, which is likely to be a great and public mischief to all thy people, if he come to reign in the stead which he is very likely to do. It is true there was a considerable disparity between her son's and Absalom's case, the one being rash and sudden action the other a deliberate and premeditated murder, but that may seem to be balanced in some measure partly by Amnon's great and lasting provocation, and principally by the vast difference between a private injury, which was her case, and a public calamity and grievance which she affirmed and the king easily believed, was Absalom's case: and what David said in the case of Joab's murder of Abner, that he could not revenge it, because the sons of Zeruiah were too hard for him, 2 Sam iii 39, the like peradventure might have been said in this case, where the people's hearts may seem to have been universally and vehemently set upon Absalom, and the rather, because his long banishment moved them pity, and his absence made him more desirable as it frequently happens among people, and therefore it might really be out of the king's power to punish him, and so he might seem to be obliged to spare him for the common safety of his whole kingdom.

14 For we must needs die, and are as water spilt on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again, yet neither doth God respect any person, yet doth he devise means, that his banished be not expelled from him.

We must needs die. Heb in dying we shall die, 1. we shall certainly and suddenly die all of us, both thou O king who therefore art obliged to take due care of thy successor, who is Absalom, and Absalom, who, if he do not die by the hand of justice, must shortly die by the necessity of nature, and Amnon too must have died in the common way of all flesh, if Absalom had not cut him off. Therefore, O king, be not implacable towards Absalom for snipping a flower a little before its time of fading, and restore him to us all before he die in a strange land. Split in the ground, which cannot be gathered up again, which is quickly drunk up and buried in the earth, and cannot be recovered. Neither doth God respect any person, to wit, so far as to exempt him from this common law of dying. But this version seems not to agree with the Scripture phrase, for the accepting of a person is never to my knowledge expressed in Hebrew by nasa nephesh, which is the phrase here, but by nasa panim, every where. The words therefore may be rendered either thus, yet God will not take away, or doth not use to take away, (the future tense of noting a continued act, as Hebricians observe,) the soul, or wile, or lives of men, to wit, by violence. God doth not merely and instantly cut off offenders, but suffers them to live till they die by the course of nature: and therefore so shouldst thou do too. Or rather thus, yet God hath not taken away his soul or life, the pronoun his being understood here as it is in many other places, and as being easily supplied out of the context. So the sense is, God hath hitherto spared him, and did not suffer his brethren to kill him, as in reason might have been expected, nor hath God him self yet cut him off for his murder, as he oft doth with persons who are out of the magistrate's reach: but hath hitherto preserved him even in a heathenish land, all which are intimations that God would have him spared. Yet doth he devise means that his banished be not expelled from him, or, but hath devised means that he hath given laws to this purpose, that the man slayer who is banished should not always continue in banishment, but upon the high priest's death return to his own city: whereby he hath showed his pleasure that the avenger of blood should not imperially persist in seeking revenge, and that the man slayer should be spared. Or rather thus, but thinketh thoughts, or, but hath designed, or, therefore he intendeth that he who is banished (to wit, Absalom) be not (always) expelled or banished from him: i. e. from God and from his people, and from the place of his worship, but that he should return home to him. So the sense is that God by sparing Absalom's life in the midst of dangers did sufficiently intimate that he would in due time bring him back to his land and people.

15 Now therefore that I am come to speak of this thing unto my lord the king, it is because the people have made me afraid: and thy handmaid said, I will now speak unto the king, it may be that the king will perform the request of his handmaid.

It is because the people have made me afraid, the truth is I was even forced to this bold address to thee by the disposition and condition of thy people: who are discontented at Absalom's perpetual banishment and full of fears: either lest, upon thy death which none knoweth how soon it may happen, they should be involved in a civil war about thy successor, or lest, in the mean time if Absalom by his father-in-law's assistance invade the land, and endeavour by force to regain and secure his right to the succession: the people, who have a great opinion of him, and kindness for him, and think he is very hardly used, should take up arms for him, or lest he who is thy heir and successor should by continual and familiar conversation with his kinsmen be insinuated in their errors, or alienated from the true religion, and from God's worship from which he is now utterly excluded. And thy handmaid said, or, therefore thy handmaid said, either within myself: i. e. I intended, or to the people, to quiet them.

16 For the king will hear, to deliver his handmaid out of the hand of the man that would destroy me and my son together out of the inheritance of God.

For I know the king is so wise and just that I assure myself of audience and acceptance, which expectation of his is eminently insinuated here: that the king might receive himself obliged to answer it, and not to disappoint her hope, nor to forfeit that good opinion which his subjects now had of him. To deliver his handmaid out of the hand of the man, to grant my request concerning my son, and consequently the people's petition concerning Absalom. Me and my son, implying that her life was bound up in the life of her son, and that she could not outlive his death, (and supposing, it is like, that it might be David's case also, and would therefore touch him in a tender part though it were not proper to say it expressly,) and thereby suggesting that the tranquillity, safety, and comfort of the people of Israel depended upon Absalom's restitution and the settlement of the succession in him. Out of the inheritance of God, i. e. out of that inheritance which God hath given to me and mine, or out of that land which God gave to his people to be their inheritance and possession, and in which alone God hath settled the place of his presence and worship, whereby she intimates the danger of Absalom's living in a state of separation from God and his house, and amongst idolaters.

17 Then thine handmaid said, The word of my lord the king shall now be comfortable for as an angel of God, so is my lord the king to discern good and bad: therefore the Lord thy God will be with thee.

The word of my lord the king shall now be comfortable, I doubt not the king will give a gracious and satisfactory answer to my petition. As an angel of God, to wit, in wisdom, and justice and goodness. To discern good and bad, to hear and judge of causes and requests whether they be just and good and fit to be granted as mine is, or unjust and unreasonable, and fit to be rejected. So she intimates her confidence in the justice of her cause, and thereby confirms the king in his purpose and promise to grant her request and withhold arms the king against the suggestions of them who should advise him to a rigorous execution of God's law against Absalom, and be ready to continue him for restoring Absalom and this for want of that angelical wisdom which the king had who wisely considered many things far above the reach. Therefore, because thou art so wise and just and pitiful, and gracious to those who in true justice deserve punishment: The Lord thy God will be with thee. God will own and stand by thee in this thy act of grace: or, God will prosper thee in thy enterprise, or, it shall not be offended with thee.

18 Then the king answered and said unto the woman, Hide not from me, I pray thee, the thing that I shall ask thee. And the woman said, Let my lord the king now speak.

19 And the king said, Is not the hand of Joab with thee in all this? And the woman answered and said, As thy soul liveth, my lord the king, none can turn to the right hand or to the left from ought that my lord the king hath spoken for thy servant Joab, he bade me, and he put all these words in the mouth of thine handmaid.

Is not the hand of Joab with thee in all this? hast thou not read and done thus by Joab's direction and contrivance? None can turn to the right hand or to the left from ought that my lord the king hath spoken, as the king is so wise that no man can deceive him by any turnings or windings to the right or left hand: but he quickly searcheth out the truth in every thing, so, (it is a folly to dissemble or go about to conceal it,) it is even so thou hast now discovered the truth of this business. He put all these words in the mouth of thine handmaid, to wit, for the scope and substance of them, but not as to all the expressions which she used, for these were to be varied in the king's answer gave occasion, which also she did with singular prudence.

20 To fetch about this form of speech hath thy servant Joab done this thing: and my lord is wise, according to the wisdom of an angel of God, to know all things that are in the earth

To fetch about this form of speech, i. e. to propose mine, and his, and the people's desire of Absalom's restitution in this parabolical manner, in mine and my son's person. In the earth, or, in this land in all thy kingdom, all the counsels and devices of thy subjects which have any relation to thee or thy affairs

21 ¶ And the king said unto Joab, Behold now, I have done this thing go therefore, bring the young man Absalom again

I have done this thing, in compliance with thy desire, although in truth it was according to his own desire. He overlooks the woman in this grant because she was but Joab's instrument in it. The young man, by which expression he hints at his crime, as being an act of youthful heat, and folly, and rashness

22 And Joab fell to the ground on his face, and bowed himself, and thanked the king and Joab said, To day thy servant knoweth that I have found grace in thy sight, my lord, O king, in that the king hath fulfilled the request of thy servant

I restored Absalom at my request, whereby Joab thought to establish himself for ever, and that he should be both the father's and the son's favourite. Quest. Whether David did well in granting this request? Isaac Aillon, there be some circumtances which in part extenuate David's fault herein, as Ammon's high provocation of Absalom, Absalom's being out of the reach of David's anger, which also he could and would have kept himself if David had not promised him impunity, the extreme danger of Absalom's infection by his rash principles and practices, the safety of David's kingdom which seemed to depend on the establishment of the succession, and that upon Absalom to whom the hearts of the people were universally and vehemently inclined if the matter was really so, and not pretended or magnified by the art of this subtle woman. yet it seems most probable that David was faulty herein because this action was directly contrary to the express laws of God, which strictly command the supreme magistrate to execute justice upon all wilful murderers without any revocation, Gen. ix. 6, Numb. xxxv. 30-31. And David had no power to dispense with God's laws, nor to spare any whom God commanded him to destroy, for the laws of God did bind the kings and rulers, as well as the people of Israel to observe and obey them as is most evident from Deut. xvii. 18-19 and from Josh. i. 8, and many other places. And indeed we may read that he was in the place of those tremendous judgments of God which befall him, by means of his indulgence to Absalom. For although God's providence be in themselves no rule to judge of the good or evil of men's actions, yet where they comply with God's word and accomplish his threatenings, as here they did, they are to be taken for the tokens of God's displeasure

23 So Joab arose and went to Geshur, and brought Absalom to Jerusalem

24 And the king said, Let him turn to his own house, and let him not see my face. So Absalom returned to his own house and saw not the king's face

Let him not see my face, lest whilst he showed some mercy to Absalom he should seem to approve of his sin, and thereby wound his own conscience, and lose his honour, and encourage him and others to such like attempts, and that by this means Absalom might be drawn to a more thorough conversion and true repentance

25 ¶ But all Israel there was none to be so much prized as Absalom for his beauty from the sole of his foot even to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him

moderacy, and of the people's affections to him, and consequently of the following rebellion

26 And when he polled his head, (for it was at every year's end that he polled it) because the hair was heavy on him, therefore he polled it: he weighed the hair of his head at two hundred shekels after the king's weight

Whereas ordinarily the hair of a man's head which grows in a year's space comes not to half so much. But some men's hair grows much faster, and is much heavier, than others. But others understand this not of the weight, but of the price of his hair, which was sold by him that polled it at that rate

27 And unto Absalom there were born three sons, and one daughter, whose name was Tamar: she was a woman of a fair countenance

Three sons, all which died not long after they were born as may be gathered from chap. xviii. 18, where it is said that Absalom had no son. Tamar, so called from her aunt chap. xiii. 1

28 ¶ So Absalom dwelt two full years in Jerusalem, and saw not the king's face

29 Therefore Absalom sent for Joab, to have sent him to the king, but he would not come to him: and when he sent again the second time, he would not come

To have sent him to the king, that by his mediation he might be admitted into the king's favour and pardon. He would not come, partly because perceiving David's affections to be cold to Absalom, he would not venture his own interest for him especially in desiring that which he feared he should be denied partly lest by interceding for Absalom he should give the remembrance of his former murder and meet with the reproach of one murderer's interceding for another, and partly, because by converse with Absalom he observed his temper to be such that if once he were fully returned to the king's favour, he would not only eclipse and oppose Joab's interest and power with the king, but also attempt high things not without danger to the king and kingdom as it happened

30 Therefore he said unto his servants, See, Joab's field is near mine, and he hath barley there go and set it on fire. And Absalom's servants set the field on fire

Go and set it on fire, that Joab may be forced to come to me to complain of, and demand satisfaction for, this injury

31 Then Joab arose, and came to Absalom unto his house, and said unto him, Wherefore have thy servants set my field on fire?

32 And Absalom answered Joab, Behold, I sent unto thee, saying, Come hither, that I may send thee to the king, to say, Wherefore am I come from Geshur? it had been good for me to have been there still, now therefore let me see the king's face, and if there be any iniquity in me, let him kill me

It had been good for me to have been there still, rather than here, because my estrangement from him now when I am so near to him is both more grievous and more shameful to me. But the truth of the business was this, Absalom saw that his father had accomplished his design in bringing him thither, having satisfied both his own natural affection, and his people's desire of Absalom's return from banishment, but that he could not without restitution into the king's presence and favour compass his design, i. e. confirm and improve that interest which he saw he had in the people's hearts. Let him kill me, for it is better for me to die, than to want the sight and favour of my dear father. Thus he insinuates himself into his father's affections, by pretending such respect and love to him. It seems that by this time Absalom having so far recovered his father's fa- your as to be recalled. It began to grow upon him, and take so much confidence as to stand upon his own justification, as if what he had done had been no iniquity, at least such as to deserve death, for so much this speech insinuates.

33 So Joab came to the king, and told him, and when he had called for Absalom, he came to the king, and bowed himself on his face to the ground before the king: and the king kissed Absalom, in testimony of his thorough reconciliation to him, which Absalom did very ill requite, as the next chapter manifesteth.

CHAP. XV.

Abalom stealeth the hearts of Israel, 1—6 Under pretence of a row obtaineth leave to go to Hebron there with Ahithophel's aid he conspires to be king 7—12 David fleeth from Jerusalem with all his men, leaveth ten of his concubines, 13—17.

AND it came to pass after this, that Absalom prepared him chariots and horses, and fifty men to run before him.

As being the king's eldest son, now Amnon was dead, for Chisleah, who was his eldest brother, 2 Sam. iii. 3 was either dead or manifestly incapable of the government. And thus Amnon he knew would draw the eyes and minds of people to him, and make them conclude that David intended him to be his successor.

2 And Absalom rose up early, and stood beside the way of the gate: and it was so, that when any man that had a controversy came to the king for judgment, then Absalom called unto him, and said, Of what city art thou? And he said, Thy servant is of one of the tribes of Israel.

Rose up early, then by making a show of solicitude and diligence and solicitude for the good of the public, and of every private person, as he had opportunity. Beside the way of the gate, either first, Of the king's palace. Or rather, secondly, Of the city: for that was the place of judgment or judgment, for which these men came. Absalom called unto him, preventing him with the offers of his assistance. Of what city art thou? as if he were ready to make particular inquiry into the state of his cause. Of one of the tribes of Israel, or rather, of one city (which word is easily understood out of the foregoing question) of the tribes of Israel, i. e. of an Israelitish city, either this or that of such or such a city.

3 And Absalom said unto him, See, thy matters are good and right, but there is no man deputed of the king to hear thee.

Thy matters are good and right upon some very slight hearing of their case he approved it that he might oblige all. No man deputed of the king to hear thee, to wit, no such as will do thee justice. The other sons and relations of the king, and the rest of the judges and rulers under him and them, are wholly corrupted, and swayed by favour or bribes; or, at least not careful and diligent, as they should be, and my father being grown in years, is negligent of public affairs, leaving them wholly to their conduct.

4 Absalom said moreover, Oh that I were made judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause might come unto me, and I would do him justice!

Oh that I were made judge in the land! for the king had only restored Absalom to favour but it ought not fit to put him into any place of power and trust. I would do him justice, I should refuse no man, and decline no pains to do it in good, so he proceeds to a very public spirit.

5 And it was so, that when any man came nigh to him to do him obeisance, he put forth his hand, and took him, and kissed him.

Putting on the garb of singular humanity and good will to all men; for that seems to have been a ceremony in frequent use in those times of showing respect, as pulling off the hat, and bowing, or embracing, as at this day with us.

6 And on this manner did Absalom to all Israel that came to the king for judgment: so Absalom stole the hearts of the men of Israel.

He secretly and subtly undermined his father, and robbed his father of the good opinions and affections of his people, that he might turn them to himself, by such insinuations into their affections, by his plausible and over-civil curings.

7 ¶ And it came to pass after forty years, that Absalom said unto the king, I pray thee, let me go and pay my vow, which I have vowed unto the Lord, in Hebron.

After forty years. Quest. Whence are these to be computed? Not from Absalom's birth, for he was born in Hebron some considerable time after David had begun his reign. 2 Sam. iii. 3, much less from the time of his vow made on of his return from banishment, but either, first, from the time of David's election or designation to the kingdom 1 Sam. xvi. 1. Or secondly from the beginning of Saul's reign, which being a doubtful and observable fact, the time of the government in Israel, but very fitly be made an epocha from which the computation or account of times begin. As the Greeks and Romans begin their accounts in the same manner, and upon the same ground. Or rather thirdly from the beginning of David's reign, who reigned forty years, and so the words may be rendered, about or towards the end of forty years, i. e. in the beginning of the fortieth year. And so this very phrase is used Dent. xi. 1, At the end of every seven years, i. e. in the seventh year even from the beginning of it as is manifest and confessed. So in a like expression, After three days and three nights Matt. viii. 31, i. e. on the beginning of the third day when Christ did rise, the number of three days being then completed when the third day began. And the forty years are here expressed as a motive or inducement to Absalom to rebel, because now his father's end grew near, and one of the Hebrew doctors affirms that there was a tradition, or rumour, or prediction that David should reign but forty years. And Absalom might easily understand that David intended to abdicate him, and to make Absalom his successor as well by the conscience of his own wickedness and unfitness for so great a trust, as by that counsel of wisdom and piety which appeared in Solomon in his ten years and that great respect and affection which his father must needs have and manifest to him upon this account and by that promise and oath given to Bathsheba concerning his succession mentioned 1 Kings i. 30 but made before that time, which also might come to Absalom's ear. Against this opinion two things are objected first, That David was in the time of this rebellion a strong man: for he marched on foot, ver. 30, where as in his last year he was very weak and infirm. Secondly That after this rebellion was ended days or other things happened, as the three years' famine, 2 Sam. xxi. 1, and other things following in the history. But it may be answered to the first, that David might in the beginning of his last year have so much strength and vigour left as to march on foot especially when he did so humbly and afflict himself, as it is apparent he did ver. 30, and yet through his tedious marches and the tormenting cares, fears, and griefs of his son's rebellion, might be so strangely and suddenly impeded, as in the end of the same year to be very feeble and infirm, it being a very common accident, especially in old men, to drop upon extraordinary occasions, to languish and decay exceedingly, and to fall from some competent degree of strength and vigour to be very infirm and bedrid, and thus the space of a few months. And to the second objection. Though the history related chap. xxi. &c. though the rebel placed after this rebellion, yet indeed were done before it, the proof of which see on chap. xxi. 1. For it is so confessed and evident, that things are not always placed in the same order in which they were done, that it is a rule of the Hebrews, and approved by other learned in Nam datur prius et posterius in Sacris literis that is, There is no first and last in the order of Scripture relations. And here is a plain reason for this transposition of this history, which is allowed in other like case, that when once the history of Tamar's rape had been mentioned, it was very fit to subjoin the relation of all the mischiefs which followed upon that occasion. If my reader will yet cavil with this text and number of year, let him know, that instead of forty, the Syriac and Arabic and Josephus the Jew read four years and that it is much more rational to acknowledge an error of the scribe who copied out the sacred text than upon so frivolous a ground to question the Divine authority of the Holy Scriptures. And that some men choose the latter way rather than the former, is an evidence that they are misled by the choice of their wills, more than by the strength of the reasons. Let me go and pray my vow he pretends piety which he knew would please his father and easily procure his consent. Hebron is mentioned as the place not where the vow was made, for that was at Geshur, ver. 8 but where he intended to perform it. The pretence for which was, that he was born in this place 2 Sam. iii. 3, and that here was a famous high place and till the temple was built it was permitted to sacrifice upon the high places.

8 ¶ Or thy servant vowed a vow while I abode at Geshur in Syria, saying, If the Lord shall bring me again indeed to Jerusalem, then I will serve the Lord.

¶ Worship him by the offering of sacrifice of thanks giving to God for restoring me to the place of his presence and service and to my father's house. But why should not this service have been performed at Zidon or at Gebon? Here was some ground of suspicion, but God blinded David's eye that he might bring upon David and upon Absalom the judgments which they deserved and he designed.

9 And the king said unto him Go in peace. So he arose, and went to Hebron.

This place he chose, as being an eminent city and next to Jerusalem the chief of the tribe of Judah and the place of his birth and the place where his father began his kingdom which he took for a good omen and where it is probable that he had secured many friends and which was at some convenient distance from Jerusalem, that his father could not suddenly reach him.

10 ¶ But Absalom sent spies throughout all the tribes of Israel, saying, As soon as ye hear the sound of the trumpet, then ye shall say, Absalom reigneth in Hebron.

Absalom sent spies from Hebron, or had sent from Jerusalem that when he went to Hebron they should go into the several tribes call the people and dispose them to Absalom's party and acquaint them with his success. As soon as ye hear the sound of the trumpet which I shall take care to have sounded in several parts by other persons and when that is done you shall inform them of the reason of it. Or as soon as you understand that the trumpet was sounded at Hebron partly to call the people together for my assistance and partly to celebrate my inauguration to the kingdom, which you shall speedily know by messengers whom I shall send to you to that end.

11 And with Absalom went two hundred men out of Jerusalem, that were called, and they went in their simplicity, and they knew not any thing.

¶ That were called such as Absalom had picked out as fit for his purpose, such as were of some quality and reputation with the king and people which would give a great countenance to his undertaking and a great occasion to people at first to think that this was done by his father's consent or connivance, as being now grown up to manhood and willing to resign the kingdom to him, as his eldest son, and the noblest too, as being descended from a king by both parents, and such as by their wisdom and interest in the people might have done David much service in this needful time, yet such as were not very martial men, nor likely with violence to oppose his proceedings. They knew not any thing concerning Absalom's design.

12 And Absalom sent for Ahithophel the Gilonite, David's counsellor, from his city, even from Giloh, while he offered sacrifices. And the conspiracy was strong, for the people increased continually with Absalom.

Ahithophel is thought to have been the author, or, at least the fomentor of this rebellion, either because he was discontented with David, for which there might be many reasons, or because he saw the father was old and might fail, and he thought it best policy to worship the rising sun and to follow the young prince, whom he observed to have so great an interest in the hearts of the people, and whom he supposed he could easily manage as he pleased which he could not do with David. While he offered sacrifices, which he did not in devotion to God, for he neither feared God, nor revered him, nor to implore God's favour and assistance against his father, which he knew was a vain thing to expect, but merely that upon this pretence he might call great numbers of the people together, who would come to join with him in the worship of God and most to partake of the feasts which were made of the remainders of the sacrifices, according to the manner.

13 ¶ And there came a messenger to David, saying, The hearts of the men of Israel are after Absalom.

The generality of the people are for him, which is not strange considering either first David, whose many misdeeds had greatly to him in the hearts of his people. Or secondly The people whose temper is generally unstable weary of old things and desirous of changes and apt to expect great benefits thereby. Or thirdly Absalom who by his noble birth and singular beauty and most obliging carriage and in plain promises had won the people's hearts, considering too that he was David's first born, to whom the kingdom of right belonged and yet that David intended to give away his right to Solomon which the people thought might prove the occasion of a civil and dreadful war, which he thought they designed to prevent. Or fourthly, The just and holy God who ordered and overruled all these things for David's chastisement, and the instruction and terror of sinners in all future ages.

14 And David said unto all his servants that were with him at Jerusalem Arise, and let us flee, for we shall not escape from Absalom: make speed to depart lest he overtake us suddenly, and bring evil upon us, and smite the city with the edge of the sword.

Arise, and let us flee, for though the fort of Zion was strong and impregnable, and he might have defended himself there yet he had not laid in provisions for a long siege and if he had been once besieged there, Absalom would have got speedy and quiet possession of his whole kingdom whereas if he marched abroad, he might raise a considerable army for his defence and the suppression of the rebels. Besides the greatest part of Jerusalem could not be well defended against him. And he suspected that a great number of the citizens might take part with Absalom, and possibly deliver him up into Absalom's hands. Besides if he had made that the seat of the war he feared the destruction of that city, which he vehemently desired to preserve because it was the chief and royal city, and the place in which God had appointed to put his name and worship. Moreover when David considered that God's hand was now against him and that he was now bringing evil upon him out of his own house as he had threatened chap. xii. 11, it is no wonder if he was intimidated and disposed to flee.

16 And the king went forth, and all his household after him. And the king left ten women, which were concubines, to keep the house.

After him, or on foot by comparing ver 30, which the king chose to do rather than to ride, partly, to humble himself under the hand of God partly to encourage his companions in this hard and comfortless march, and partly, to move compassion in his people towards him. The king left ten women, for he supposed that their sex would protect them even among barbarians, and their relation to David would gain them some respect, and at least safety from his son. But it seems he did not now actually consider that clause of the third thing concerning his wives, (God diverting his mind to other things) or he thought that would be accomplished some other way concerning that Absalom would abhor the thoughts of such incestuous converse, especially with persons which were now grown in years.

17 And the king went forth, and all the people after him, and tarried in a place that was far off.

Either to rest and refresh themselves a little, or rather, in expectation of others who should or would come after him, that they might march away in a considerable body which might both defend the king, and invite others to come in to their assistance. A place that was far off, at some convenient distance, but not very far.

18 And all his servants passed on beside him, and all the Cherethites, and all the Pelethites, and all the Gittites six hundred men which came after him from Gath, passed on before the king.

Of the Cherethites and the Pelethites see the notes on chap viii 18. The Gittites were either, first Israelites by birth called Gittites because they went with him to Gath and thence with him in that country. Or rather secondly strangers, as Ittai their head is called ver 19, and they are called his brethren, ver 20, and probably they were Philistines by birth born in the city or territory of Gath, at the following words imply who by David's counsel and example, and the success of his arms were won to embrace and profess the true religion, and had given good proof of his military skill, and valour and fidelity to the king.

19 ¶ Then said the king to Ittai the Gittite, Wherefore goest thou also with us? return to thy place, and abide with the king for thou art a stranger and also an exile.

Return to thy place, either, first To thy native country of Gath where thou wilt be remote from our troubles. Or secondly To Jerusalem, where thou settled abode now is. And abide, or to abide, for he could not both go to Gath and tarry in Jerusalem with Absalom. Although this part of the verse lies otherwise in the Hebrew text, and may be rendered thus, Return (to wit, to Jerusalem) and abide with the king (there), for thou art a stranger as I am from thy own place, or, in respect of thy own place, or as concerning thy place, i.e. in regard of the place of thy birth and former habitation. With the king, with Absalom, who is now made king by the choice of the people and therefore is able to give thee that protection and encouragement which thou deservest, whereas I am in a manner distressed, and unable to do for thee what I desired and intended. A stranger, and also an exile, not much concerned in our affairs, and therefore not fit to be involved in our troubles.

20 Whereas thou camest but yesterday, should I this day make thee go up and down with us? seeing I go whither I may, return thou, and take back thy brethren - mercy and truth be with thee.

Thou camest but yesterday, by which it may be gathered that these were not the Israelitish soldiers which went with David to Gath, and came up with him from thence to Hebron, which was above thirty years before this time, but some proselytes which came from thence more lately. For though this word yesterday be sometimes used of a time long before past, as 2 Kings ix 26, Job viii 9, Isa xxx 33, yet it seems to be here restrained to a shorter compass by the following words, and by the argument here used. Go whither I may, I know not whither, having now no certain dwelling-place. Thy brethren, thy countrymen and soldiers the Gittites, ver 18. Mercy and truth be with thee, since I am now unable to recompense thy kindness and fidelity to me, my hearty prayer to God is, that he would show to thee his mercy in blessing thee with all sorts of blessings and his faithfulness, in making good all those promises which he hath made, not to Israelites only, but in and with them to all true-hearted proselytes, such as thou art.

21 And Ittai answered the king, and said, As the Lord liveth, and as my lord the king liveth, surely in what place my lord the king shall be, whether in death or life, even there also will thy servant be.

22 And David said to Ittai, Go and pass over. And Ittai the Gittite passed over, and all his men, and all the little ones that were with him. For being so deeply engaged for David, he durst not leave his little one to Absalom's mercy.

23 And all the country wept with a loud voice, and all the people passed over the king also himself passed over the brook Kidron, and all the people passed over, toward the way of the wilderness.

All the country, i.e. the generality of the people by whom they passed. For it must be considered that Absalom's friends and partisans were gone to him to Hebron, and the rest of the people thereabouts were either well-wishers to David, or at least moved with compassion at the sad and sudden change of so great and good a king, who was able to affect a heart of stone. The brook Kidron was near Jerusalem. See Matt xvi 36, John viii 1. Toward the way of the wilderness, which was between Jerusalem and Jericho.

24 ¶ And lo Zadok also, and all the Levites were with him, bearing the ark of the covenant of God, and they set down the ark of God, and Abiathar went up, until all the people had done passing out of the city.

Bearing the ark of the covenant of God, as a pledge of God's presence and assistance, and that David might acquire it at upon occasion. They set down the ark of God, either in expectation of drawing forth more people to David's duty, it not from their loyalty to their lawful king, yet from their piety and reverence to the ark, or that all the people might pass along and the ark might come in the rear of them for their safeguard and encouragement. Abiathar went up, either 1 From the ark, which now was in the low ground being near the brook Cedron, to the top of the Mount of Olives, whence he had the prospect of the city and temple as appears from Mark xiii 3, where he could discern when the people ceased to come out of the city after David, which when they did he gave notice to David that he should wait no longer but march away and carry the ark with him. Or 2 From the ark to the city, which was in a higher ground, that so he being high priest, might use his authority and interest with the people to persuade them to do their duty, in going forth to defend and help their king against his rebellious son, and there he stood until all those whom he could persuade were gone forth.

25 And the king said unto Zadok, Carry back the ark of God into the city. If I shall find favour in the eyes of the Lord, he will bring me again, and shew me both it, and his habitation.

Carry back the ark of God into the city, partly, out of care and reverence to the ark which though sometimes it was and might be carried out to a certain place, yet he might justly think unfit to carry it from place to place by know not whether, and to expose it to all the hazards and inconveniences to which he himself was likely to be exposed, partly, out of respect to the priests whom, by this means, he thought he should expose to the rage of Absalom, as he had before exposed them to Saul's fury on another occasion, 1 Sam xxii, and partly, that by this means he might have the better opportunity to search out and to counterwork Absalom's plots, which was so necessary, not only for himself but for the defence and maintenance of the ark, and all God's ordinances and of the true religion. His habitation is the tabernacle which David had lately built for it chap vi 17 in which the ark and God by means thereof, ordinarily dwelt. And here by he intimates another reason of his returning the ark to Jerusalem because there was the tabernacle made for the receipt of it.

26 But if he thus say, I have no delight in thee, behold, here am I, let him do to me as seemeth good unto him. I have no delight in thee, I will not receive thee into my favour, nor restore thee to thy throne and city and to the enjoyment of my ark and ordinances. Here am I ready to obey him and to submit to his will and pleasure continually.

27 The king said also unto Zadok the priest, Abiathar the son of Ahimelech, return into the city in peace, and your two sons with you, Ahimaaz thy son, and Jonathan the son of Abiathar.

The king said also unto Zadok, either because Abiathar was gone from him, ver 21 and not yet returned, or because David put more confidence in Zadok. I see, either, 1. A prophet for such were called 1 Sam ix 9, 2 Sam xxiv 11 Amos vi 12. And such he may be called either because he really had the gift of prophecy, or because as the name of prophet is one thing, even to those who had not prophetic gift, but were called so by others and minister devoted to and employed in God's worship and service 1 Sam x 5 & 1 Sam xxviii 13 compare 1 Chron xvi 13, so it is reasonable that the name I see be extended to the same latitude and therefore he may properly and fully be called a prophet as he was with and under Abiathar the chief governor of the house and worship of God who by his office was to instruct and direct the people in those matters wherein he had many opportunities both of setting out Absalom's counsels and of minding the people of their duty to David as he saw opportunity, which sense suit well with David's scope and design. Or, 2. I seeing or discerning, or considering him for so the Hebrew verb ra'ah is used. And the suits well with David's mind. Thou art a wise man and therefore fit to manage this great business which requires prudence and secrecy. To put the men of peace giving over all thoughts of war and devoted themselves wholly to God's service.

28 See, I will turn in the plain of the wilderness until there come word from you to certify me.

29 Zadok therefore and Abiathar carried the ark of God again to Jerusalem, and they tarried there.

30 And David went up by the ascent of mount Olivet, and wept as he went up, and had his head covered and he went barefoot, and all the people that were with him covered every man his head, and they went up, weeping as they went up.

He went barefoot in testimony of his deep sorrow, and humiliation and shame for his sin whereby he had procured this evil to himself. These were the habits of mourning, 2 Sam xvi 4 1 Sol vi 12 1a xx 3 4 Jer xiv 3, 1, and to take a holy revenge upon himself for his former delicacy and luxury.

31 And one told David, saying, Ahithophel is among the conspirators with Absalom. And David said, O Lord, I pray thee, turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness.

One told David, or, David told, i. e. David being heretofore informed, acquaints his friends and followers with it, to turn them up to join with him in the following prayer against him. Turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness, either intimate him, that he may give foolish counsel, or let his counsel be rejected as foolish, or spoiled by the foolish execution of it.

32 And it came to pass, that when David was come to the top of the mount, where he worshipped God, behold, Hushai the Archite came to meet him with his coat rent, and earth upon his head.

He worshipped God, looking towards Jerusalem, where the ark and tabernacle was. Compare 1 Kings iiii 41, 45 Dan vi 10.

33 Unto whom David said, If thou passest on with me, then thou shalt be a burden unto me.

Increasing my charge, and care, and sorrow for what may befall thee and being but of little use to me, for it may seem he was an old man, and fitter for counsel than for war.

34 But if thou return to the city, and say unto Absalom, I will be thy servant, O king, as I have been thy father's servant hitherto, so will I now also be thy servant, then mayest thou for me defeat the counsel of Ahithophel.

I will be as faithful to thee as I have been to thy father, which he neither was nor ought to be, and therefore the profession of this was great dissimulation. And David's suggesting this crafty counsel may be reckoned amongst his errors, which, proceeding from a violent temptation and his present pressing straits, God was pleased mercifully to pardon, and to direct this evil advice to a good end.

35 And hast thou not there with thee Zadok and Abiathar the priests? therefore it shall be, that what thing soever thou shalt hear out of the king's house, thou shalt tell it to Zadok and Abiathar the priests.

36 Behold, they have there with them their two sons, Ahimaaz Zadok's son, and Jonathan Abiathar's son, and by them ye shall send unto me every thing that ye can hear.

There with them, not in Jerusalem, but in a place near to it to which they could easily send upon occasion. See chap xvii 17.

37 So Hushai David's friend came into the city, and Absalom came into Jerusalem.

CHAP XVI

Ziba, by presents and false suggestions, obtains of David his master's inheritance, 1-4. Shimei revileth and curseth David, who restraineth Abiathar from revenging it 5-14. Absalom cometh with Ahithophel to Jerusalem, let's with his father's concubines in the sight of all Israel, according to the counsel of Ahithophel, who was esteemed as an oracle 15-23.

AND when David was a little past the top of the hill, behold, Ziba the servant of Mephibosheth met him, with a couple of asses saddled, and upon them two hundred loaves of bread, and an hundred bunches of raisins, and an hundred of summer fruits, and a bottle of wine.

Ziba, a crafty man, who, being persuaded that God would in due time appear for the righteous cause of so good a king, and scatter the cloud which was now upon him, takes this occasion to make way for his future advancement. A bottle; a large bottle or vessel proportionable to the other provisions.

2 And the king said unto Ziba, What meanest thou by these? And Ziba said, The asses be for the king's household to ride on, and the bread and summer fruit for the young men to eat, and the wine, that such as be faint in the wilderness may drink.

For the king's household to ride on, for the king and his wives and children were all on foot, not that he had not or could not procure asses for them at Jerusalem, but because he chose it as best becoming that state of penitence and humiliation in which they were.

3 And the king said, And where is thy master's son? And Ziba said unto the king, Behold, he abideth at Jerusalem for he said, To day shall the house of Israel restore me the kingdom of my father.

Which though it might seem a very unlikely thing, yet such vain expectations do often get into the minds of men, or was it impossible, that when David's family was thus divided, and one part engaged against another they might destroy themselves by mutual wounds: and the people being tired out with civil wars might restore the kingdom to the family of Saul their old master, whereof this was the proper branch. And this was a time of general defection of many whom the king had greatly obliged, witness Abishai and Mephibosheth's absence made the column probable.

4 Then said the king to Ziba, Behold, thine are all that pertained unto Mephibosheth. And Ziba said, I humbly beseech thee that I may find grace in thy sight, my lord, O king.

Thine are all that pertained unto Mephibosheth a rich utterance and unrighteous, to condemn a man unheard upon the single testimony of his accuser and servant. But David's mind was both clouded by the deep sense of his guilt and blinded by Ziba's art and sly subtilty. And he might think that Ziba would not dare to accuse his master of so great a crime which if true might easily be disproved. I humbly beseech thee that I may find grace in thy sight thy favour is more to me than this gift which, as a token of thy favour, I accept with all thankfulness.

5 And when king David came to Bahurim, behold, thence came out a man of the family of the house of Saul, whose name was Shimei, the son of Gai. He came forth, and cursed still as he came.

Bahurim, a city in Benjamin, chap. vi. 16. The territory of it, for to the city he came not till vi. 11.

6 And he cast stones at David, and at all the servants of king David and all the people and all the mighty men were on his right hand and on his left.

He cast stones; not so much to hurt them, as to show his contempt of them. All the people were on his right hand and on his left, which is noted to show the prodigious madness of the man, though rage (which is truly said to be a short madness) and the height of malice hath oft transported men to the most hazardous and desperate speeches and actions.

7 And thus said Shimei when he cursed, Come out, come out, thou bloody man, and thou man of Belial!

Or rather, go out, as the word properly signifies. He goes out of thy kingdom as thou deservest.

8 The Lord hath returned upon thee all the blood of the house of Saul, in whose stead thou hast reigned, and the Lord hath delivered the kingdom into the hand of Absalom thy son and, behold, thou art taken in thy mischief, because thou art a bloody man.

All the blood of the house of Saul, either, 1. The blood of Abner and Ish-bosheth, which he maliciously imputes to David as if they had been killed by David's contrivance, especially the former because David did only give Joab his word, as in policy he was obliged to do, but instead of punishing him did reward and prefer him. Or, 2. The death of Saul's seven sons, chap. xxi. 8, which, though related after this, seems to have been done before; of which see the notes on chap. xxi. 7. In thy mischief the same mischief thou didst bring upon others, is now returned upon thy own head. Or, thy sin hath found thee out, and thou art now receiving the just punishment of it.

9 Then said Abishai the son of Neri, rush unto the king, Why should this dead dog curse my lord the king? let me go over, I pray thee, and take off his head.

10 And the king said, What have I to do with you, ye sons of Zeruih? so let him curse, because the Lord hath said unto him, Curse David. Who shall then say, Wherefore hast thou done so?

What have I to do with you? to wit in this matter I ask not your advice, nor will I follow it: nor do I desire you should at all concern you, let it be what it will, but wholly leave it to me to do what I think fit. Because the Lord hath said unto him, not that God commanded it by his word, for that severely forbids it, Exod. xxii. 28. (as moved him to it by his Spirit. For neither was it as any man possible, because God taught no man lying.) But that the secret providence of God did order it, to punish him in that God did not put any wickedness into Shimei's heart, for he had of himself a heart full of indignity and venom against David, but only left him to his own wickedness, took away that common prudence which would have kept him from so foolish and dangerous an action, directed his malice that it should be exercised against David, rather than another. As when God gave up one traveller into the hand of a robber rather than another, inclined him to be at home, and then to come out of his doors at that time when David passed by him, and brought David up so distressed a condition, that he might seem a proper object of his scorn and contempt. And this is ground enough for this expression, the Lord said, not by the word of his precept, but by the word of his providence in respect whereof he is said to command the revengers, 1 Kings xxv. 1. and to send forth his word and commandment to punish the wicked. Ps. lxxviii. 15, 16. Who shall then say? not unto Shimei for it was justly said so to him afterwards, 1 Kings i. 9. but unto the Lord who shall reproach God's providence for permitting this. Or who shall by words or actions restrain him from executing God's just judgment against me?

11 And David said to Abishai, and to all his servants, Behold, my son, which came forth of my bowels, seeketh my life: how much more may this Benjaminite do it? let him alone, and let him curse, for the Lord hath bidden him.

My son seeketh my life, which is a greater mischief than to reproach me with words. This Benjaminite of that tribe and family from which God hath taken away the wicked, and given it to me which was likely to stir up his rage and hatred against me. Let him alone do not now hinder him violently from it, nor punish him for it: it is meet & should bear the indignation of the Lord manifested herein, and submit to his pleasure, and possess my soul with patience, and by bearing the so lesser evils, prepare myself for greater, which are coming towards me

12 It may be that the Lord will look on mine affliction, and that the Lord will requite me good for his cursing this day

It may be, he speaks doubtfully because he was conscious that by his sin he had forfeited all his claim to God's promises. The Lord will look on mine affliction with an eye of commiseration

13 And as David and his men went by the way, Shimei went along on the hill's side over against him, and cursed as he went, and threw stones at him, and cast dust

Not that he could reach or hurt him with it, but only as an expression of contempt. And the like is to be thought concerning the stones where with he could not think to reach David when he was surrounded with his men on every side

14 And the king, and all the people that were with him, came weary, and refreshed themselves there

Came to the city of Bahurim, ver 5

15 ¶ And Absalom, and all the people the men of Israel came to Jerusalem, and Ahithophel with him

16 And it came to pass, when Hushai the Archite, David's friend, was come unto Absalom, that Hushai said unto Absalom, ¶ God save the king, God save the king

To wit Absalom whom he pretend to own for his king and legal lord

17 And Absalom said to Hushai Is this thy kindness to thy friend? why wentest thou not with thy friend?

Is this thy kindness to thy friend? doth the action answer that probation of greatest friendship which thou hast hitherto made to him? Dost thou thus requite his favour and true friendship to thee? He speaks thus only to try him And he saith thy friend by way of reflection upon David, as one who was a friend to Hushai and to strangers, but not to his own son whom, by his secret and design to give away his right to Solomon he provoked to this course and therefore he doth not vouchsafe to call him his father

18 And Hushai said unto Absalom Nay, but whom the Lord, and this people, and all the men of Israel, choose, his will I be, and with him will I abide

Thou art a private person I loved and paid friendship to David whilst he was king yet I must make all my obligations give place to the authority of God who putteth down and setteth up kings at his pleasure and to the common sense and decree of the whole body of the nation But Hushai expresseth him self very cautiously for though he would be thought to understand Absalom yet in truth this character did not agree to him, whom neither God nor all the people had chosen but only a part, and that the worst part of them

19 And again whom should I serve? should I not serve in the presence of his son? as I have served in thy father's presence so will I be in thy presence

Thou art his son and heir and successor and now in his place and stead, whereby any friendship which was due to him is devolved upon thee by right of inheritance, and I reckon that my friend him I do wholly alienated from him, when it is transferred upon one that came out of his bowels

20 ¶ Then said Absalom to Ahithophel, Give counsel among you what we shall do,

21 And Ahithophel said unto Absalom, Go in unto thy father's concubines, which he hath left to keep the house, and all Israel shall hear that thou art abhorred of thy father. then shall the hands of all that are with thee be strong

This counsel he gave, partly to revenge the injury done to Bath-sheba, who was the daughter of Eliam, 2 Sam xi 3 who was the son of Ahithophel, chap xxiii 34, and principally for his own and the people's safety, that the breach between David and Absalom might be made wide and irreparable by so vile an action, which must needs provoke David in the highest degree, both for the sin and shame of it, as the like action had done Jacob, Gen. xlix 3, 4, and cut off all hopes of reconciliation, which otherwise might have been expected by some treaty between Absalom and his tender-hearted father, in which case his followers, and especially Ahithophel himself, had been left to David's mercy. Israel shall hear that thou art abhorred of thy father, and therefore obliged by thy own interest to prosecute the war with all possible vigour, and to abandon all thoughts of peace, as knowing that his father, though he might desist yet would never forgive so foul and scandalous a crime. Then shall the hands of all that are with thee be strong, they will fight with greater courage and resolution when they are freed from the fear of thy reconciliation which otherwise would make their hearts faint and hands slack in thy cause. But by this we may see the character of Absalom's party, and how abominably wicked they were whom such a loathsome and scandalous action did the faster to him, whom for that very reason they should have deserted and abhorred. And we may further learn how corrupt and filthy the body of the people was, and how open for that severe judgment which is now hastening to it

22 So they spread Absalom a tent upon the top of the house and Absalom went in unto his father's concubines in the sight of all Israel

Upon the top of the house to wit of the king's palace the very place from whence David had spied and gazed upon Bath-sheba chap xi 2. So that his sin was legible in the very place of his punishment. Into his father's concubines, i. e. to one or some of them and by so doing did further make claim to the kingdom as his own and as it were, take possession of it as being usual in the eastern countries to account the wives and concubines of the late king to belong of right to the successor see the note on chap xii 8. In the sight of all Israel, who saw him go into the tent, and thence concluded that he lay with them, as he had designed to do

23 And the counsel of Ahithophel, which he counselled in those days, was as if a man had enquired at the oracle of God so was all the counsel of Ahithophel both with David and with Absalom

Was as if a man had enquired at the oracle of God, it was received by the people with equal authority and veneration and was usually attended with as certain success which is mentioned as the reason why a counsel which had so ill a face should meet with such general approbation. With David, to whose pious disposition he accommodated himself as policy obliged him, but being weary of it he takes this first occasion to discover himself, and excite that wickedness which before lay in his heart

CHAP XVII

Hushai, David's friend, being, by David's order, gone over to Absalom, by God's appointment overthroweth Ahithophel's counsel, 1—21. Hushai certifieth David thereof, and adviseth him forthwith to march on, 22—24. Hushai passeth over Jordan, 22. Ahithophel hangeth himself, 23. David cometh to Mahanaim. Absalom passeth over the

Jan, making Amasai the captain of his host, 24-26. David is there furnished with provisions, by his friends, 27-29.

MOREOVER Ahithophel said unto Absalom, Let me now choose out twelve thousand men, and I will arise and pursue after David this night:

I am so well assured of the goodness of this counsel, that I will venture my own person and life in the execution of it.

And I will come upon him while he is weary and weak handed, and will make him afraid and all the people that are with him shall flee, and I will smite the king only.

Heavy and weak-handed, tired with a tedious march on foot and destitute of men and military provisions and disheartened by his own small numbers, and by the general defection of his subjects.

3. And I will bring back all the people unto thee the man whom thou seekest, as if all returned so all the people shall be in peace.

The man whom thou seekest is as if all returned, i. e. the death of that man whom thou seekest to destroy is no less considerable to thee, than if all the people that follow him should desert him and return unto thee.

4. And the saying pleased Absalom well, and all the elders of Israel.

5. Then said Absalom, Call now Hushai the Archite also, and let us hear likewise what he saith.

A wonderful effect of Divine Providence, blinding his mind and influencing his heart, that he could not rest in Ahithophel's counsel, though it was so evidently wise, and good, and approved by the general consent of his whole party. And that he should desire Hushai's advice, though not his reputation for wisdom was equal to Ahithophel's nor had he yet given any one proof of his fidelity to Absalom as Ahithophel had done, nor was he so taxed by his interest to him as Ahithophel was, and though there wanted not just cause to suspect him and his counsel too. But there is no contending with that God who can arm a man against himself, and destroy him by his own mistakes and passions, without any other help.

6. And when Hushai was come to Absalom, Absalom spake unto him, saying, Ahithophel hath spoken after this manner: shall we do after his saying? if not, speak thou.

7. And Hushai said unto Absalom, The counsel that Ahithophel hath given is not good at this time.

Though at other times he generally gives most wise and admirable counsel, yet, as he is a man, he sometimes now to be under a mistake, and not sufficiently to consider all the present circumstances of this business.

8. For, said Hushai, thou knowest thy father and his men, that they be mighty men, and they be chafed in their minds as a bear robbed of her whelps in the field, and thy father is a man of war, and will not lodge with the people.

Mighty men, of approved courage and strength therefore not so soon vanquished as Ahithophel supposed. Chafed in their minds, Heb. bitter of soul, inflamed with rage, desperate, and therefore resolved to sell their lives at a dear rate. A man of war, a wise prince and general, who knowing of what importance it is to secure his own person, and that your great design is against his life, will doubtless use extraordinary care to keep out of your reach, which he may easily do.

9. Behold, he is hid now in some pit, or in some other place, and it will come to pass, when some of them be overcome, that whosoever hear-eth it will say, There is a slaughter among the people that follow Absalom.

He is hid now in some pit, or in some other place, having been oft accustomed to that course, and well acquainted with all hiding-places from Saul's time. In one of them, unknown to us, he will lurk with some of his chosen men, and lie in ambush for us, and when they see a fit opportunity, they will suddenly come forth and surprise some of our men when they least expect it, and fall upon them with great fury, and probably will at first put them to flight. Some of them, to wit of Absalom's men sent against David Overthrown at the first, implying that their good success at first would mightily animate David's men to proceed vigorously in the fight, and intimidate Absalom's army, and consequently would be both a prejudice and an occasion of their total defeat. If however hearth it will say, they who first hear these ill tidings will propagate it, and strike terror with it into the rest of the army.

10. And he also that is valiant, whose heart is as the heart of a lion, shall utterly melt: for all Israel knoweth that thy father is a mighty man, and they which be with him are valiant men.

The known fame of the prodigious valour of David and his followers will easily gain credit to that report, and shake the confidence of our men with dread, even Ahithophel himself if he should go with them.

11. Therefore I counsel that all Israel be generally gathered unto thee, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, is the sand that is by the sea for multitude, and that thou go to battle with thine own person.

His pretence was that they might have a far greater army, and make one though few work. His design was to gain David more time that he might increase his army, and make better provision for the battle, and that the present heat of the people might be cooled, and they might at last be think themselves of their duty to David and return to their former allegiance. That thou go to battle in thine own person, for thy presence will put more life and courage into all thy soldiers who will be ambitious to show their utmost skill and courage in defence by person and cause, when they know that all their actions are observed by him, who hath the habit of reward and punishment in his hands. So may it then also give occasion for others and encourage them to all David which otherwise they may possibly be afraid to do. Besides the glory of the victory will be wholly thine which now Ahithophel seeks to get to himself.

12. So shall we come upon him in some place where he shall be found, and we will light upon him as he dew falleth on the ground, and of him and of all the men that are with him there shall not be left so much as one.

As the dew falleth on the ground, i. e. plentifully suddenly irresistible, and on all sides, for so the dew falls.

13. Moreover, if he be gotten into a city, then shall all Israel bring ropes to that city, and we will draw it into the river, until there be not one small stone found there.

Then shall all Israel bring ropes to that city, not that they should do so, or that it was the custom to do so, but it is an hyperbolical and thrausomical expression, suited to the young glorious temper of this insolent young man, and therefore most likely to prevail with him, implying that they would do so if they could not discover and destroy him in other way, or that they should be enough to do so, if there were occasion. We will draw it into the river, adjoining to the city, it being usual to build cities near some river, both for defence, and for other accommodation.

14. And Absalom and all the men of Israel said, The counsel of Hushai the Archite is better than the counsel of Ahithophel. For the Lord had appointed to defeat the good counsel of Ahithophel.

to the intent that the Lord might bring evil upon Absalom.

Absalom and all the men of Israel were inflated by a Divine power, and given up to believe lies and mistakes. The Lord had appointed to defeat the good counsel, so it was, politically considered, being the wisest and most effectual counsel to accomplish Absalom's end.

15 ¶ Then said Hushai unto Zadok and to Abiathar the priests, Thus and thus did Abithophel counsel Absalom and the elders of Israel, and thus and thus have I counselled.

16 Now therefore send quickly, and tell David saying, Lodge not this night in the plains of the wilderness, but speedily pass over, lest the king be swallowed up, and all the people that are with him.

Lodge not this night in the plains of the wilderness, lest the king's and people's minds change, and Abithophel by his deep wit and great interest, persuade the king to follow his former adviser, and to pursue you speedily.

17 Now Jonathan and Ahimaiz stayed by En-gedi, for they might not be seen to come into the city: and a wench went and told them, and they went and told king David.

In-ragel, or, the fuller's well. A place near Jerusalem. Josh. xv. 7. xviii. 16. A wench went and told them, pretending to go thither to wash some clothes.

18 Nevertheless a lad saw them, and told Ahimelech, but they went both of them away quickly, and came to a man's house in Bethur, which had a well in his court: whether they went down.

He saw them who knew them to be favourers of David, and observed them to wait there upon David, and to gain intelligence, and possibly saw the wench pretending to go thither. They went both of them away quickly, by this lad's observation, and came to that they were discovered. Whether they went down either to one hole in the side of the pit, or to the bottom of the pit, it being then day as pits often were in those hot countries. And thus being in so open a place, they concluded none would imagine them to be hid there. And besides they relied upon God's good providence, which they knew watched over David and them for his sake.

19 And the woman took and spread a covering over the well's mouth, and spread ground corn thereon, and the thing was not known.

Spread ground corn thereon, under pretence of drying it by the sun, which shows it was summer time.

20 And when Absalom's servants came to the woman to the house, they said, Where is Ahimelech and Jonathan? And the woman said unto them, They be gone over the brook of water. And when they had sought and could not find them, they returned to Jerusalem.

Over the brook of water, over Jordan. This was a manifest lie, but because it was spoken for no hurt but good only, many persons in the times conceived such lies to be lawful. Compare Exodus 24, Joshua 2 & 5. But although God was pleased to overlook and pardon the sin, and graciously to reward the good intention which accompanied them, yet it is certain that all kinds of lie are moral evils, and condemned by many scriptures, and that we must not do evil that good may come, nor kill a lie for God's glory. Rom. iii. 7, 8.

21 And it came to pass, after they were departed, that they came up out of the well, and went and told king David, and said unto David, Arise, and pass quickly over the water, for thus hath Abithophel counselled against you.

22 Then David arose, and all the people that were with him, and they passed over Jordan: by the morning light there lacked none of them that was not gone over Jordan.

23 ¶ And when Abithophel saw that his counsel was not followed, he saddled his ass, and arose, and gat him home to his house, to his city, and put his household in order, and hanged himself, and died, and was buried in the sepulchre of his father.

Put his household in order, disposed of his estate by will. Compare Isa. xxxviii. 1. Hanged himself, partly because he could not endure to outlive his disgrace, and the rejection of his counsel, and partly because he foresaw by this means David would gain time and strength, and in all probability be victorious, and then the storm would fall most heavily upon his head, as the main author and pillar of the rebellion, and the contriver of the two pernicious counsels above mentioned.

24 Then David came to Mahanaim, and Absalom passed over Jordan, he and all the men of Israel with him.

Mahanaim, a place in the country of Gilead, bordering upon the land of the Ammonites, Jer. 27. See Gen. xxxii. 2. Sam. ii. 8. Absalom passed over Jordan, not speedily, but when all the men of Israel were gathered together to fight against David, and who were said to be with him.

25 ¶ And Amasa captain of the host instead of Joab, which was an Ishmaelite, whose name was Ishmael, the daughter of Nahash, sister to Zeruiah Joab's mother.

He was an Ishmaelite, 1 Chron. ii. 17. Not Amasa, but Ithra or Jether, Amasa's father is there so called, because he was such either by birth from such parents, or by his long habitation among them, or for some other reason now unknown. Compare 2 Sam. xv. 18. And Amasa is here called an Ishmaelite, either because he was a proselyte, or in opposition to Joab, who was of the tribe of Judah, as Amasa was of one of the ten tribes, or rather, to intimate, that although he or his parents were called Ishmaelites for some reason, yet as to their extraction they were indeed Israelites, which if Amasa had not been it is not probable that he could have had so powerful an influence upon the tribe of Judah as he had. Chap. xix. 11. That went in to Abigail, she lay with her, whether being first married to her, or not, is uncertain. The daughter of Nahash, Nahash is either another name of Jesse, or rather the name of Jesse's wife, by whom he had this Abigail, as he had Zeruiah by another wife, so they were sisters to the father, but not by the mother, and Nahash is here named to signify so much.

26 So Israel and Absalom pitched in the land of Gilead.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, when David was come to Mahanaim, that Shobi the son of Nahash of Rabbah of the children of Ammon, and Machir the son of Ammiel of Lo-debar, and Barzillai the Gileadite of Rogelim,

Shobi as it may seem, disliked and disowned that barbarous action to the ambassadors, and therefore, when the king was destroyed, was left king or governor of the residue of the Ammonites. Machir the son of Ammiel of Lo-debar, see above, chap. ix. 4.

28 Brought beds, and basins, and earthen vessels, and wheat, and barley and flour, and parched corn, and beans, and lentiles, and parched pulse.

Beds and basins i. e. all sorts of household stuff, as well as other provisions, all which David now wanted

29 And honey, and butter, and sheep, and cheese of kine, for David, and for the people that were with him, to eat for they said, The people is hungry and weary, and thirsty, in the wilderness.

Having been in the wilderness, which is an easy and common ellipsis. Or because of the Hebrew participle both is oft used the wilderness which they have passed through, in which provisions are very scarce

CHAP. XVIII

1 And viewing the armies in their march he saw the chariot of Absalom, 1-5, whose men are smitten he hanging he has him on an oak, is slain by Joab and cast into a pit his pillar and monument 6-18. David leaving his coat 19-32, mourneth for Absalom 33

AND David numbered the people that were with him, and set captains of thousands and captains of hundreds over them.

The people that were with him when fled to him the first time made up a small army

2 And David sent forth a third part of the people under the hand of Joab and a third part under the hand of Abishai the son of Zeruiah Joab's brother, and a third part under the hand of Ittai the Gittite. And the king said unto the people I will surely go forth with you myself also.

Under the hand of Joab to wit for his expert conduct and management in the battle. Others say that was the counsel of all the forces. Joab David's faithful adviser. Joab's brother for was this time to do it. But such distribution of forces is usual in battles. I will go forth with you myself also that is my presence I will put life and courage into my soldiers and become it that I should run the same hazards with you which you run for my sake

3 But the people answered I should not go forth for if we flee away they will not care for us neither if half of us die, will they care for us but now thou art worth ten thousand of us therefore now it is better that thou shouldst come out of the city.

Thou shalt not go forth for this was Absalom's counsel into which he was drawn by a Divine influence. And by his craft, to go to battle in the evening. And now the utter ruin of him and of his cause. Thou art worth ten thousand of us not only for the sake of thy person but also for the importance of our common cause. And which, if thou art slain is irrecoverably lost. And thou art worth us out of the city by the counsel of Joab and provisions of all sorts as we have occurred. And securing our retreat, if we be defeated. Oh the counsel of Joab to the battle with us, but only point with the king out of the city, (to encourage the company) to retire for thy own safety. And so it is a counsel of Joab.

4 And the king said unto them, What seemeth best I will do. And the king stood by the side, and all the people came out by hundreds and by thousands.

5 And the king commanded Joab and Abishai and Ittai, saying, Deal gently for my sake with the young man, even with Absalom. And all the people heard. And when the king gave all the captains charge concerning Absalom.

Deal gently with Absalom if you conquer (which he prevailed they would by God's gracious answer to his prayer for the turning of Ahithophel's counsel into foolishness) take him prisoner but do not kill him. Which desire proceeded partly from his great indulgence towards his children partly from David's consciousness that he himself was the meritorious and procuring cause of this rebellion, Absalom being given up to it for the punishment of David's sins and therefore did indeed deserve some pity from him; partly from the consideration of his youth which commonly makes men foolish and heady and violent, and subject to all counsels and partly from his pity, being loth that he should be cut off in the act of his sin without any space or means for a penance, whereby both his soul and body would be condemned to perish for ever. All the people, to wit the citizens and others who stood with the king in the case when the army marched forth.

6 So the people went out into the field against Israel and the battle was in the wood of Ephraim.

So called not from its situation in the tribe of Ephraim, which was on the other side Jordan as is evident, but from some remarkable action or event of the Ephraimites in the battle. Whether it was the killing of Oreb and Zeeb there Judg. vii. 25, or of their ruler by Jephthah Judg. xii. 6 or some other not mentioned in sacred Scripture.

7 Where the people of Israel were slain before the servants of David, and there was there a great slaughter that day of twenty thousand men.

The people of Israel i. e. the soldiers of Absalom, so called partly to note that all Israel (some few excepted) were engaged in the rebellion which made David's defence more glorious and renowned and partly in opposition to David's men who were to the main body, or more considerable part, both of the army of Judah or had followed him from Judah.

8 For the battle was there scattered over the face of all the country and the wood favoured more people that day than the sword devoured.

The battle was there scattered i. e. the various things being but the fight itself, and very dispersed, the abstract being. For the wood as providence was put for poor men, 2 Kings vii. 14 and devoured for the deceit and deceit for deceit Prov. xii. 24. The wood devoured more people i. e. more people died in the wood either through hunger and thirst and weariness, or by the wild beasts, whereof great numbers were there which though they were driven away by noise and clamour from the place of the main battle, yet might easily meet with them when they fled several ways, which also might be directed and sent to them by God's providence and just judgment to punish them for their rebellion, or by falling into ditches and pits which were in that place ver. 17, and probably were covered with grass or wood, so as they could not see them till they fell into them, or by being hanged in trees as Absalom was ver. 9, and especially by David's men, who pursued them and killed them in the wood and the wood favoured i. e. it had to have devoured them, because it gave the occasion to their destruction, inasmuch as the trees and ditches and pits entangled them, and stopped their flight and made them in easy prey to David's men who followed them and slew them in the pursuit being then directed and assisted by the people of that country who after the manner, fell in with the victorious side. Them that sword devoured, to wit, in the main battle the wood was put for the battle, by a common metonymy.

9 And Absalom met the servants of David and Absalom rode upon a mule, and the mule

To Cushi, or to an Ethiopian, so he might be by birth, and yet by profession an Israelite.

22 Then said Ahimaaz the son of Zadok yet again to Joab, But howsoever, let me, I pray thee, also run after Cushi. And Joab said Wherefore wilt thou run, my son, seeing that thou hast no tidings ready?

My son, so he calls him with respect both to his younger years, and to that true and tender affection which he had for him.

23 But howsoever, said he, let me run. And he said unto him, Run. Then Ahimaaz ran by the way of the plain, and overran Cushi.

The way of the plain was the smoother and easier, though the longer way.

24 And David sat between the two gates, and the watchmen went up to the roof over the gate unto the wall and lifted up his eyes, and looked and behold a man running alone.

Between the two gates, for the gates of the cities then were as now they are, large and thick, and for the greater security had two gates, one made outward the other inward. Here he sat, that he might have a tidings when any came into the city. Unto the wall, unto the top of the wall or tower upon the gate, where watchmen used to watch. Compare 2 Kings ix 17, Jerk xxiii 2.

25 And the watchman cried, and told the king. And the king said, If he be alone, there is tidings in his mouth. And he came apace, and drew near.

In his tidings in his mouth, he is sent with some special message, which was a very probable conjecture. For if he had run or fled from the enemy, in any other way he would have followed him.

26 And the watchman saw another man running, and the watchman called unto the porter, and said, Behold another man running alone. And the king said, He also bringeth tidings.

27 And the watchman said, I thinketh the running of the foremost like the running of Ahimaaz the son of Zadok. And the king said, He is a good man, and cometh with good tidings.

He loves me well, and therefore would not afflict me with evil tidings.

28 And Ahimaaz called, and said unto the king, All is well. And he fell down to the earth upon his face before the king, and said, Blessed be the Lord thy God, which hath delivered up the men that lifted up their hand against my lord the king.

Let us have fund and power, or to dejection. 1 Sam xiv 18 xxvi 8.

29 And the king said, Is the young man Absalom safe? And Ahimaaz answered, When Joab sent thy king's servant, and me thy servant, I saw great tumult, but I knew not what it was.

The king's servant Cushi. I knew not what it was, he seems to tell an untruth, as is evident from ver 20, because he now plainly perceived what Joab foretold him that such things would be very unwelcome to David. But he made choice, to offend God with a lie rather than to disappoint the king with a truth. Yet thus far it might be true, that though he had reason to think Absalom was dead yet was not able to give account of the particulars which concerned it, where with Cushi was intrusted.

30 And the king said unto him, Turn aside, and stand here. And he turned aside, and stood still.

31 And, behold, Cushi came, and Cushi said, Tidings, my lord the king, for the Lord hath avenged thee this day of all them that rose up against thee.

32 And the king said unto Cushi, Is the young man Absalom safe? And Cushi answered, The enemies of my lord the king, and all that rise against thee to do thee hurt, be as that young man.

May they perish and be cut off, as he is.

33 And the king was much moved, and went up to the chamber over the gate, and wept. And as he went, thus he said, O my son Absalom, my son, my son Absalom! would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!

He went up to the chamber over the gate, retiring himself from company and business that he might wholly give up himself to lamentation.

David might speak thus from a deep sense of his eternal state because he died in his sins without the least testimony of repentance, and because David himself had by his own death been the unhappy instrument and occasion of his son's death.

CHAP. XIX.

Joab by hard words moved the king to cease his mourning, and show himself to the people. 1 s. The king is brought back by the men of Judah and Amasa put in his place, 9-15. Shimei smite for David and ob touch at 16-23. Mephibosheth meeting the king, receives half his estate, 24-30. Barzilai is dismissed, 31-40. Absalom is deposited with Judah for burying, 41-43.

AND it was told Joab, Behold the king weepeth, and mourneth for Absalom.

He weepeth for his mourning, or upon their return.

2 And the victory that day was turned into mourning unto all the people: for the people heard say that day how the king was grieved for his son.

3 And the people gat them by stealth that night into the city as people being ashamed, and stole away when they were in haste.

Not openly and orderly, and triumphantly, as conquerors do, but secretly, and disorderly, and ashamed, as they were afraid and ashamed lest David should see them, and look upon them with an evil eye, as those that had shared in the killing of his dearly beloved son.

4 But the king covered his face, and the king cried with a loud voice, O my son Absalom, O Absalom, my son, my son!

He covered his face, as a deep mourner, as one that desired neither to see, nor to be seen by any others.

5 And Joab came into the house to the king, and said, Thou hast shamed this day the faces of all thy servants, which this day have saved thy life, and the lives of thy sons and of thy daughters, and the lives of thy wives, and the lives of thy concubines.

Joab came into the house, either the gate house or his now dwelling house in the city, to which he was retired, that he might more freely indulge himself in the expressions of his grief. Thou hast shamed the faces of all thy servants, by disappointing their just hopes of prizes and rewards, and by requiting them with contempt and cruel rebukes.

Amasa, Absalom's late general, who judging his case, move all others, desperate, might be ready to use all his influence with that tribe to delay or hinder the king's return. (If my bone and of my flesh,) i. e. my near kinsman, my nephew. See 1 Chron ii 16-17. Before me i. e. in my presence, or now whilst I live, lest he should think he promised him only the reversion of it. In the room of Joab, who, besides his other crimes had lately exasperated the king by his wilful murder of Absalom contrary to David's express command, and by his insolent carriage towards him. And therefore the king having now the opportunity of another person, who had a greater interest both to Judah and Israel than Joab, he gladly complied with it, but so he might both chastise Joab for his faults and resign himself from the bondage in which he had hitherto held him. Yet it is not necessary from these words in the room of Joab, to conclude that Joab was to be displaced to make room for Amasa, but that he might be as like a lion with Joab, but what follows in the next chapter makes it very probable that he was indeed displaced and Amasa put in his place.

14 And he bowed the heart of all the men of Judah, <sup>1</sup> even as the heart of one man, so that they sent this word unto the king, Return thou, and all thy servants.

He either first Amasa by his great influence upon him. Or rather secondly, David by his pious and kind message and his free offer of pardon and favour to them, as if they had never offended.

15 So the king returned, and came to Jordan. And Judah came to Gilgal, to go to meet the king, to conduct the king over Jordan.

To attend upon the king in his passage over Jordan and to furnish him with conveniences for his passage and journey. See below ver 11-12.

16 ¶ And Shimei the son of Gera, a Benjamite, which was of Bahurim, <sup>1</sup> hosted and came down with the men of Judah to meet king David.

17 And there were a thousand men of Benjamin with him, and Ziba the servant of the house of Saul and his fifteen sons and his twenty servants with him, and they went over Jordan before the king.

A thousand men of Benjamin with him, whom he partly to show his power and interest in the people where he was able to do David either great service or great disservice, and partly as intercessors on his behalf, and as witnesses of David's clemency or severity, that it might be seen what the rest of them might expect. But being conscious of his former abuse of David and of his master Mephibosheth which he knew the king would understand, designed to sweeten David's spirit towards him by his great officiousness and his cordial greeting him, and congratulating his return. They went out to meet him before the king, they did not revile or the same for they were all the king came over as the most of the men of Judah did, but went over Jordan to pay their respects and duty to the king there, to express their eager and impatient desire to see the king.

18 And there went over a ferry boat to carry over the king's household, and to do what he thought good. And Shimei the son of Gera fell down before the king, as he was come over Jordan,

A ferry boat, made by the men of Judah for the king's proper use, besides which there were doubtless many boats made for the use of others. As he was come over Jordan, or rather, as he was passing, or about to pass, over Jordan, but this was beyond Jordan, for as he went over Jordan to the king ver 17, so doubtless he fell down before him at his first coming into his presence there.

19 And said unto the king, Let not my lord impute iniquity unto me, neither do thou remember that which thy servant did perversely the day that my lord the king went out of Jerusalem: that the king should take it to his heart.

20 I or thy servant doth know that I have sinned: therefore, behold, I am come the first this day of all the house of Joseph to go down to meet my lord the king.

Thy servant doth know that I have sinned, I do not excuse my sin but with a sad and shame confess it, in which case the Lord thy God is ready to pardon offenders, and so I trust wilt thou be. I am come the first the sense of my former sin now hath and whilst I live will make me the first and next forward in all that I do duty and service to thy master. Of all the house of Joseph. He was a Benjamite chap xvi 5. How then doth he make himself one of the house of Joseph? For the house of Joseph as here put rather, I for the ten tribe which it did distinguish had from Judah and then they are called the house of Joseph chap xvi 5. But this distinction was not made before the division of the people into kingdoms, and even after that division Benjamin was constantly reckoned with Judah and not with Ephraim or Manasse. Of 2 I or all the tribes of Israel who are called the children of Joseph Psal lxxviii 15 compare Psal lxxx lxxxv as well they might not only because of Joseph's eminency the most eminent persons and thus being oft put for the rest of the kind, and because the right of primogeniture were in great part devolved upon him 1 Chron v 1. But also because Joseph had been as a father to them and had nourished them all like children it is expressed in the Hebrew text Gen xlviii 12. But in this sense the way is not true for the house of Judah came before him ver 13. Or rather, I for all the tribes, even Judah which are conveniently called the house of Joseph, for the reasons now mentioned and are fully distinguished from Judah because the rights of the first born were divided between Judah and Joseph 1 Chron v 2. And though Benjamin, after the division of the kingdoms was fully joined with Judah, because then they adhered to that tribe yet before that time it more conveniently joined with Joseph because then it was under the standard of the house of Joseph, as of Ephraim, Manasse x 22-24, whence it is that Ephraim Benjamin and Manasse are put together, Psal lxxxv 2.

21 But Abishai the son of Zeruiah answered and said, Shall not Shimei be put to death for this, because he cursed the Lord's anointed?

The king. By this expression he mind David of his zeal against those who offered any injury to Saul because he was the Lord's anointed. 1 Sam xxiv 6, xxv 9, and therefore demands the same justice against Shimei for his cursing of the king, which was so expressly forbidden 1 Rod xxii 28, and by the analogy of that law, 1 Rod xvi 17 might seem punishable with death.

22 And David said, What have I to do with you, ye sons of Zeruiah, that ye should this day be adversaries unto me? shall there any man be put to death this day in Israel? for do not I know that I am this day king over Israel?

What have I to do with you? I do not intend neither will I take your advice in this matter. Ye sons of Zeruiah, implying that Joab's hand was in this contrivance or that he suspected it. That ye should this day be adversaries unto me, I c that you put me upon things unfit for me to do, and contrary to my present interest, for it was David's interest at this time to appease the people and reconcile them to him, and not now to give them any new distaste by acts of severity, for this would make others jealous that David will not forgive them neither but would watch an opportunity to be revenged on them. You pretend friendship herein, and would have me take it for an effect of your zeal for my service but in truth you give me such counsel as my enemies would wish me to follow that the cry I might awake the fear and jealousies of my people which are now asleep and cast them into a second rebellion which either Job and Abishai really designed by this advice that so Job might recover his place again, and be made necessary for the king's service, or David suspected that they did so. Do not I know that I am this day King over Israel? is not my Kingdom which for reasons was in a manner wholly lost but now restored and is used to me? And when God hath been so merciful to me in forgiving my sin shall I now show myself revenged on Shimei? Shall I sally the public joy and glory of this day with upbraid of such severity? or shall I diminish the hearts of my people from me now when they are returning to me?

23 Therefore the king said unto Shimei, Thou shalt not die. And the king swore unto him.

Thou shalt not die, to wit this day. Abishai do not kill him whilst I live, nor by my hands as it is repeated and explained, 1 Kings 1:8 nor for this cause done. For though David gave order to Solomon for his punishment after his death, nor was it fit for the public good that such a horrid crime should go unpunished yet he would not have him punished for the fault alone but for some other capital crime which he presumed. Shimei's temper would easily betray him to, and Solomon in deep wisdom would easily find out 1 Kings 2:9. The king saw another that he would not put him to death with the sword and is expressed, 1 Kings 2:8.

24 ¶ And Mephibosheth the son of Saul came down to meet the king, and had neither dressed his feet nor trimmed his beard nor washed his clothes, from the day the king departed until the day he came again in peace.

The son of Saul i.e. the grandson 2 Sam 1:3-6. Had neither dressed his feet, by cutting his nail and by washing his feet which was usual in those hot climates and very refreshment and that foot now neglected is becoming a monument. Not trimmed his beard but allowed it to grow very long and disorderly as was usual with many persons in a torrid or mountainous state. Not washed his clothes his linen clothes. This and the former were signs that he was a true and obstinate mourner that had such his usual bashfulness and they are here mentioned as evidences of the richness of Ziba's former relation concerning him chap xvi.

25 And it came to pass, when he was come to Jerusalem to meet the king, that the king said unto him, Wherefore wentest not thou with me Mephibosheth?

When he was come to Jerusalem, so it is supposed that Mephibosheth then he went to meet the king, wanted either courtesy or an opportunity to speak to the king till he came to Jerusalem because of the great multitudes that attended themselves to be seen by the king. Though it might more reasonably be thought that he could not go down Jerusalem to meet the king as others did because he wanted convenient notes for his journey for Ziba had gotten all his lands and goods chap xv. 1 and it is not likely that he, who would not provide him an ass to ride on or to accompany the king in his journey would now be hasty to furnish him with one so useful. He to whom he knew he would complain of his loss. But the words may seem to be better rendered thus, And thou wast so the Hebrew verb signifies, both in 7, I have come from (which preposition is oft understood of) Jerusalem for there he was, chap xvi. 2 and having contented there is probably he had, (because he wanted an ass to convey him elsewhere, and know not where to be with more safety,) he could not properly nor truly be said to have come thither to meet the king. Wherefore wentest not thou with me, as justice and gratitude obliged thee to do?

26 And he answered, My lord, O king, my servant deceived me for thy servant said, I will saddle me an ass, that I may ride thereon, and go to the king, because thy servant is lame.

My servant deceived me, by carrying away the ass which I had him saddle for me.

27 And he hath slandered thy servant unto my lord the king, but my lord the king is as an angel of God do therefore what is good in thine eyes.

As an angel of God, to distinguish between true reports and chummes. See on chap xiv 20.

28 I or all of my father's house were but dead men before my lord the king yet didst thou set thy servant among them that did sit at thine own table. What right therefore have I yet to cry any more unto the king?

Before my lord the king, i.e. before thy tribunal we were all at thy mercy, not my estate only (which thou hast now granted to Ziba) but my life also was in thy power if thou hadst dealt with rigour and earthly kings use to do with their predecessors' and enemies children. For otherwise by the law of God Saul himself had deserved to die by David's hands as David himself confessed, much less his children who were not to die for their father's sin. But xvi 16. But Mephibosheth speaks like a courtier and like an orator aggravating matters against himself that he might seem to justify the king's sentence, and to submit to it and so insinuate himself into the king's favour. To cry any more unto the king, to wit for the vindication of my honour and the restitution of my estate.

29 And the king said unto him, Why spakest thou my more of thy matters? I have said, Thou and Ziba divide the land.

Why speakest thou any more of thy matters? For as Ziba was present so doth he, he was not silent, but said and did what he could to make good his former charge which must needs occasion many words before the king. And the king was not now at leisure for long debates and therefore makes an end of the matter. I have said, to wit within my self I have considered the matter and it is now I can bring upon the whole am come to this resolution, wherein I expect that thou and he do both acquiesce. Or I have said, I pronounce this sentence in the name of the Lord. Thou and Ziba divide the land the meaning is either 1. The land shall be divided between thee and him, as it was by my steward chap ix 10, he and his sons managing it and supporting themselves out of it as they did before and giving the rest of the profits thereof to thee. And to this the following words may well enough be accommodated. Yea let him take all, to wit to his own sole use. Or 2. The right and profits of the land shall be equally divided between you. It seems a very rash and harsh sentence and very unbecoming David's wisdom, and justice, and gratitude to Jonathan and Ziba seems to have deserved death for falsely accusing his master of treason rather than the impotence. But the whole transaction of the matter is not here set down. Possibly Ziba might bring plausible pretences to justify his accusation, and it might be pretended that Mephibosheth neglected the tithing and dressing himself only in policy, and that for a season till David and his family had destroyed one another by their civil wars and given him a fit opportunity to take the crown. So that David might really be at a loss what to determine. And Ziba had given proof of his affection to David by an act of kindness which could not be without his aid to himself chap xvi 1, 2 which Mephibosheth had not done. And possibly this was only a present sentence and David resolved to examine things more thoroughly when he had more leisure, and then to make a more full and final determination of the business, which also he might do, though it be not here recorded, for we must not think that nothing was done and said about such things but what is mentioned in Scripture. Besides, Ziba being a powerful man and the crown not yet firmly fixed upon the king's head, David might think fit to suspend his final sentence till a more convenient season, and not now to provoke him too much by taking away all his estate from him at once but to proceed against him by degrees. However this is certain, we cannot pass a right judgment upon the action of David's, unless we understood all the circumstances of it, which we cannot pretend to do.

30 And Mephibosheth said unto the king, Yes, let him take all, forasmuch as my lord the king is come again in peace unto his own house.

I am contented to lose all, being fully satisfied with the recovery of being my dear and dread sovereign restored to his crown, and truth and peace returned to his kingdom.

31 ¶ And Barzillai the Gileadite came down from Rogelim, and went over Jordan with the king, to conduct him over Jordan.

And then to cross Jordan again, and so return to his native land.

32 Now Barzillai was a very aged man, even fourscore years old, and he had provided the king of sustenance while he lay at Mahanaim, for he was a very great man.

33 And the king said unto Barzillai, Come thou over with me, and I will feed thee with me in Jerusalem.

34 And Barzillai said unto the king, How long have I to live, that I should go up with the king unto Jerusalem?

Seeing my time of continuance in the world is but short, it is not advisable to change my habitation or to give thee any further trouble.

35 I am this day fourscore years old, and can I discern between good and evil? can thy servant taste what I eat or what I drink? can I hear any more the voice of singing men and singing women? wherefore then should thy servant be yet a burden unto my lord the king?

My senses are grown dull, and unworthy of the delights of the court. I am just taking pleasure in the olden tastes of sweet music and other such delights of the court. I am through and both useless and burden to thee, and therefore most improper for a courtier.

36 Thy servant will go a little way over Jordan with the king, and why should thou recompense it me with such a reward?

A little way over Jordan, a little onward in this way to Jerusalem, and then return. Recompense it me on that point me to wit, for my small kindness to thee, that thou shalt be wiser, which was but a part of my duty to thee.

37 Let thy servant, I pray thee, turn back again, that I may die in mine own city, and be buried by the grave of my father and of my mother. But behold thy servant Chimham, let him go over with my lord the king, and do to him what shall seem good unto thee.

(Chimham, Barzillai's son.)

38 And the king answered, Chimham shall go over with me, and I will do to him that which shall seem good unto thee, and whatsoever thou shalt require of me, that will I do for thee.

39 And all the people went over Jordan. And when the king was come over, the king kissed Barzillai, and blessed him; and he returned unto his own place.

40 Then the king went on to Gilgal, and Chimham went off with him, and all the people of Judah conducted the king, and also half the people of Israel.

Conducted the king, attended upon him on his journey towards Jerusalem, and also half the people of Israel, whereas the men of Judah came entirely and unanimously to the king, as is noted here, and above, ver. 14, the Israelites of the other tribes came in but slowly, and by halves, as being no less guilty of the rebellion than the tribe of Judah, but not encouraged and invited to come in by such a particular and gracious message as they were. And this is here mentioned as the occasion both of the contention here following, and of the sedition, chap. xx.

41 ¶ And, behold, all the men of Israel came to the king, and said unto the king, Why have our brethren the men of Judah stolen thee away, and have brought the king, and his household, and all David's men with him, over Jordan?

All the men of Israel, to wit, such as were present, stolen thee away, conveyed thee over Jordan hastily and privately, not expecting nor desiring our consent and concurrence in the business, which we were no less ready to afford than this. It is also a strict reflection upon the king, for permitting this precipitation. All David's men, i. e., all the men, such changes of persons being most frequent in the Hebrew language, thy officers, and guards, and soldiers. This is mentioned as an aggravation of their fault, that they did not only carry the king over Jordan, but all his men too, without asking their advice.

42 And all the men of Judah answered the men of Israel, Because the king is near of kin to us, wherefore then be ye angry for this matter? have we eaten at all of the king's cost? or hath he given us any gift?

Near of kin to us, of the same tribe with us, and therefore both with the more respect to him, and might expect more respect from him. Hath he given us any gift? we have neither sought nor gained any advantage to ourselves hereby, but only discharged our duty to the king, and used all expedition in bringing him back, which you also should have done, and not have come in by halves, and so roll us as you have done. See ver. 40.

43 And the men of Israel answered the men of Judah, and said, We have ten parts in the king, and we have also more right in David than ye, why then did ye despise us, that our advice should not be first had in bringing back our king? And the words of the men of Judah were fiercer than the words of the men of Israel.

We have ten parts, they say but ten, though strictly there were eleven, either because they accounted Joseph (which comprehends both Ephraim and Manasse) as one tribe, as it is sometimes reckoned, or because Simeon, whose lot lay within the tribe of Judah, were joined with them in this action. In the king's case in the kingdom, and the management of the affairs of it, the word king being put for kingdom, as it is 2 Chron. xxii. 29. 1st xxiii. 15. Dan. vii. 17. Hos. x. 15. Or, in the king's person, and the disposal thereof. We have also more right in David than ye, as in the general we have more right in the king and kingdom, so particularly we have more right in David, than you, because you were the first beginners and the most zealous promoters of this rebellion, and as David is more to him to you, so he hath been more injured by you, howsoever as he is king, we justly have a more interest in him than you, inasmuch as we are the farriest part of his subjects. That our advice should not be first had in bringing back our king, that we bring the far greater number, should not have the first and chiefest vote in this action. But the words are by some and may well be, rendered interrogatively. And was not my word first about bringing the king back? Did not we make the first mention of it, before you could be drawn to it? For so indeed they did, ver 11, and therefore the neglect of their advice herein might seem more excusable. The words of the men of Judah were fierce instead of mollifying them with gentle words they answered them with greater fierceness and insolency, so that David durst not interpose himself in the matter.

CHAP XX.

By occasion of this quarrel Sheba sturth up Israel to sedition, 1, 2. David's ten concubines are shut up in prison 3. Amasa is slain by Joab 4-10. He and Abishai pursue Sheba unto Abel, 11-15. The citizens, by the advice of a wise woman, cut off his head and cast it over the wall to Joab, 16-22. David's officers 23-26.

1022 AND there happened to be there a man of Belial, whose name was Sheba the son of Bichri, a Benjamite: and he blew a trumpet, and said, "We have no part in David, neither have we will in him: for the son of Jesse: every man to his tents, O Israel!"

There happened to be there, his presence was caused in itself through custom and ordered by God's providence. Man of Belial, a lawless person one that attempted to shake off the yoke of civil authority. See Deut xiii 13. Benjamite: ascribed at the foundation of the kingdom to him Saul and that tribute to David. We have no part in David the title of Judah have monopolized the king to themselves, and will not allow us any share in him, let them therefore cry him down, and let us seek out a new king. The son of Jesse, an expression of contempt, implying their rejection of him that he was no more to be owned as their king. But a private person, as the son of Jesse. Every man to his tents, let us all desist from this unthankful office of bringing the king back, and go each to our homes that we may consider and then meet together to choose a new king.

2 So every man of Israel went up from after David, and followed Sheba the son of Bichri: but the men of Judah cleve unto their king from Jordan even to Jerusalem.

Every man of Israel &c. the generality of those Israelites who were present.

3 ¶ And David came to his house at Jerusalem, and the king took the ten women his concubines whom he had left to keep the house, and put them in ward, and fed them, but went not in unto them. So they were shut up unto the day of their death, living in widowhood.

Put them in ward, partly because they had not vigorously opposed Absalom's foolish design, as they should have done, even with the hazard of their lives, and partly lest the sight of them should renew the memory of Absalom's situation, and of their own and David's reproach which it was fit to bury in perpetual oblivion, and partly because it brought upon them occasion to have to do with those who had been debilitated by his own sin, and partly, because it would not, so it was not now convenient that any man should have any kind of conversation with them.

4 ¶ Then said the king to Amasa, Assemble me the men of Judah within three days, and be thou here present.

Assemble me the men of Judah, and much in the head of them as their generals, as I have provided these, chap.

xix 13. Within three days; which he supposed Amasa, having been their late general, could easily do, and the business required haste. Be thou here present within that time to receive orders and instructions from me.

5 So Amasa went to assemble the men of Judah: but he tarried longer than the set time which he had appointed him.

Either because the people, being wearied out by the late civil war, were not forward to engage in another, or because the soldiers had more affection to Joab than to their new general to whose ill conduct possibly they might impute their unsuccessfulness in the last battle, or because Amasa for his own interest might seek delays, to render himself more necessary and useful to the king, and to keep up his honourable and profitable employment, which is the common policy of such men.

6 And David said to Abishai, Now shall Sheba the son of Bichri do us more harm than did Absalom: take thou thy servants and pursue after him, lest he get him fenced cities, and escape us.

David said to Abishai, not to Joab, lest by this means he should recover his place and Amasa be discontented and David's fidelity in making good his promise to Amasa be questioned. Thy lord's servants, i.e. my guards that attend upon my person and the other soldiers who are now peaceable with me. He speaks of himself in the third person, as is very frequent. For it is not probable he would now call to himself, whom he had lately disposed, nor Amasa who had just taken actual possession of his place, nor had the command over the king's guards.

7 And there went out after him Joab's men, and the Cherethites and the Pelethites, and all the mighty men: and they went out of Jerusalem, to pursue after Sheba the son of Bichri.

Joab's men, the remainders of Joab's army who were there present with whom also Joab might go as a reformer, watching in opportunity to do what he designed. Of the Cherethites and the Pelethites see chap viii 18.

8 When they were at the great stone which was in Gibeon, Amasa went before them. And Joab's garment that he had put on was girded unto him, and upon it a girdle with a sword fastened upon his loins in the sheath thereof, and as he went forth it fell out.

Amasa went before them, having gathered some forces and given due orders for the rest to follow him, he returned to Jerusalem, and by the king's command went after those mentioned ver 7, and being come up to them at the place where they waited for him, he put himself into the head of Joab's men, and the Cherethites and the Pelethites, and such as he had brought along with him, and marched before them as their chief and general. Girded unto him, after the manner of travellers and soldiers. As he went forth to meet and salute Amasa, who was coming towards him to his honour. It fell out, things having (it is likely) been contrived by Joab, that upon the least motion of his body his sword should drop out, and he might take it up without raising Amasa's suspicion.

9 And Joab said to Amasa, Art thou in health, my brother? And Joab took Amasa by the beard with the right hand to kiss him.

As the manner of ancient times was when they kissed and saluted one another.

10 But Amasa took no heed to the sword that was in Joab's hand: so he smote him therewith in the fifth rib, and shed out his bowels to the ground, and struck him not again; and he died. So Joab and Abishai his brother pursued after Sheba the son of Bichri.

The sword that was in Joab's hand, which falling out it seemed, casually, he supposed that Joab intended only to put it into its scabbard, and therefore took no care to defend himself against the stroke. In the fifth ver. see on chap. 23. Struck him not again he de-patched him at one stroke, or gave him his death's wound at the first blow, and needed not to smite him again. Joab now boldly resumed his former place, and marched in the head of the army. It is not strange that Amasa's soldiers did not fight to revenge his death, partly because not many of them were yet come up, but came by degrees, as the following verses show, and partly because Joab's interest and authority with the military men was very great, especially with David's guards, who were here present and who had no kindness for Amasa, as having been the general of the rebellious army. And, as they might think it was not fit to be put into a place of so great power and trust.

11 And one of Joab's men stood by him, and said, He that favoureth Joab, and he that is for David, let him go after Joab.

One of Joab's men, left there on purpose to deliver the following message. He that favoureth Joab. In that would have Joab to be general rather than such a perfidious rebel and traitor as Amasa. He that is for David. He that wisheth David good success against Sheba, and against all rebels, which he implies that though this fact of his was done against the king's command yet it was for his interest and defence.

12 And Amasa wallowed in blood in the midst of the highway. And when the men saw that all the people stood still, he removed Amasa out of the highway into the field, and cast a cloth upon him when he saw that every one that came by him stood still.

Wallowed, Heb. rolled himself, being, in the pangs of death, yet having so much life left as to move himself a little though not to raise himself up from his place. In blood, in his own blood which he shed there. All this piece to wit the soldiers which were upon their march stood still, wondering at the spectacle and enquiring into the author and occasion of it. He removed Amasa out of the highway into the field, perceiving that it both increased the indignation against Joab, and hindered the king's present service.

13 When he was removed out of the highway, all the people went on after Joab, to pursue after Sheba the son of Rechab.

14 And he went through all the tribes of Israel unto Abel, and to Beth-maachah, and all the Berites, and they were gathered together and went also after him.

He went, either 1. Joab, who pursued Sheba through all the tribes, as far as Abel. Or rather 2. Sheba, who was last mentioned, who marched from tribe to tribe to stir them up to sedition, and to him the following words seem best to agree. Into Abel and to Beth-maachah. Rather to Abel, even to Beth-maachah, i.e. unto Abel & to Beth-maachah as this place is called here in the Hebrew text ver. 15. 1 Kings xv. 20, 2 Kings xv. 29 to distinguish it from other Abels, and to signify that this was that Abel which was in the tribe of Naphtali in the northern border of the land towards that part of Syria called Maachah. 2 Sam. x. 4. The Berites, such as lived in the city or territory of Beroth of Benjamin Josh. xviii. 25 who being of the same tribe, if not city, with Sheba and his greatest acquaintance and friends, or being most implacable against David, adhered to Sheba and followed him through all the tribes of Israel. They were gathered together to wit the tribes of Israel, i.e. a considerable number of them, as might well be expected, when the discontents were so high and general. After him, i.e. after Sheba.

15 And they came and besieged him in Abel of Beth-maachah, and they cast up a bank against the city, and it stood in the trench, and all the people that were with Joab battered the wall, to throw it down.

They came, i.e. Joab and his army, which is easily understood, both from the foregoing and following verses. They cast up a bank; from whence they might either batter the wall, or shoot at those who defended it against them who should assault it. See 2 Kings xix. 32. For xxxix. 24; xxxiii. 4. Otherwise, they threw down the bank of the city, which they had raised up to defend the city on the weakest side. It stood in the trench, i.e. the bank stood in or near to the trench, or wall of the city, so that the city was in great danger of being taken. Otherwise, the city stood within the trench, or wall, being defended only by a single trench or a weak wall, the bank which was raised up there to defend it being thrown down.

16 ¶ Then cried a wise woman out of the city, Hear, hear, say, I pray you, unto Joab, Come near hither, that I may speak with thee.

17 And when he was come near unto her, the woman said, Art thou Joab? And he answered, I am he. Then she said unto him, Hear the words of thine handmaid. And he answered, I do hear.

18 Then she spake, saying, ¶ They were wont to speak in old time, saying, They shall surely ask counsel at Abel: and so they ended the matter.

According to this translation the sense is. This city which thou art about to destroy is no mean and contemptible one, but so honourable and considerable for its wisdom and the wise people in it that when any differences did arise among any of the neighbours they used proverbially to say. We will ask the opinion and advice of the men of Abel about it and we will stand to their arbitration, and so all parties were satisfied and disputes ended. But there is another translation in the margin embraced also by some others which seems to be the best. They (i.e. the citizens of this city) plainly (or commonly) spoke (among themselves) in the beginning (to wit, when Sheba and his men first came into the city, and they were informed that Joab was pursuing him) saying, Surely they will ask of Abel and so make an end. They will peaceably expostulate the business with us and inquire why we received Sheba into our city, and whether we would deliver him up into their hands, and would inform us of the result of their hostile attempt upon us, and order to us as we see us of peace, which by God's law Deut. xx. 10 they were to do even to strange, and much more to Jewish cities. So she doth both modestly reprove Joab for the neglect of this duty, and oblige him to the performance of it.

19 I am one of them that are peaceable and faithful in Israel: thou seekst to destroy a city and a mother in Israel: why wilt thou swallow up the inheritance of the Lord?

¶ (To wit, the city of Abel in whose name and person she speaks this) one of the peaceable and faithful cities of Israel. Whatsoever Sheba may design when we have innocently received into our city before we well understood the matter we of this city abhor the thoughts of warring and rebelling against the king, as having had no hand in Absalom's late rebellion which is probable enough considering both their situation in the utmost borders of the land very remote from the seat of that civil war, and their open profession of their peaceableness and fidelity or loyalty to the king, which had been unpardonable if they had been so lately involved in the last war and rebellion. I city and a mother, i.e. a mother, for great cities as commonly called mothers, as lesser towns or villages subject to them and depending upon them for direction and defence are called their daughters as Jer. xvi. 10. The inheritance of the Lord, i.e. a considerable part of that land which God hath chosen for his peculiar possession. The destruction which thou art about to bring upon us is an injury also to Israel, and to the God of Israel.

20 And Joab answered and said, Far be it, far be it from me, that I should swallow up or destroy.

21 The matter is not so but a man of mount Ephraim, Sheba the son of Bichri by name, hath lifted up his hand against the king, even against David deliver him only, and he will depart from the city And the woman said unto Joab, Behold, his head shall be thrown to thee over the wall

A man of Mount Ephraim Quest How can this be so, when he is called a Benjamin, ver 11. Answer Either he was a Benjamin by birth but dwelt in the tribe of Ephraim, as many did upon several occasions dwell out of the tribe of Ephraim was a place in Benjamin which might be so called either because it was upon the borders of Ephraim and looked towards it, or from some notable action in event of the Ephraimites in that place. Compare chap xviii 6. Hath lift up his hand i.e. taken up arms or raised rebellion. This head shall be thrown to thee over the wall, which she undertook because she knew the present temper and great fears of the citizens and soldiers too, and that considering their evident and extreme danger, they were generally desirous of peace from which they were restrained only by Sheba's authority and interest, and therefore did not doubt by God's blessing upon her wise counsel to effect it as indeed she did. And it is not unlikely that this woman might be a governess in that city for though in this office was commonly performed by men yet were not the women wholly excluded but sometimes employed in the government as we see in Deborah who judged Israel, Judges 4, and queen Athaliah 2 Kings xi 22 Then the woman went unto all the people in her wisdom. And they cut off the head of Sheba the son of Bichri and cast it out to Joab. And he blew a trumpet, and they retired from the city, every man to his tent. And Joab returned to Jerusalem unto the king.

In her wisdom prudently treated with them about it, either civilly or gently as he ought to continue to them the certainty and necessity of all their sin if they did not speedily comply with her desires and certain deliverance if they did. They retired, Joab and his army which he engaged them.

23 ¶ Now Joab was over all the host of Israel and Benaiah the son of Jehonada was over the Cherethites and over the Pelishtines.

Joab was over all the host of Israel the good man of this and of the former expedition under the conduct of David had chiefly his interest in the army, and others of David's trusty friends that the king could not without danger to the public weal displace him.

24 And Adoram was over the tribute, and Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud was recorder.

Over the tribute the receiver and manager of the king's public revenue. See 1 Kings iv 6. Jehoshaphat was recorder See 2 Sam viii 16.

25 And Sheva was scribe and Zadok and Abiathar were the priests.

See 2 Sam viii 17. vi 3.

26 And he also the Jarmite was chief ruler about David.

The Jarmite, so called from his birth or dwelling in the tribe of Jarm, in Galad Num vi xxxv 11, Judges 4. A chief minister, the president of the king's council or his chief minister (as the Hebrew word chazan signifies) of state instead of the prophet, or one of other very high place near the king's person. Compare 2 Sam viii 18, where this title is given to Balaam the chief of which were now cut off. And these names are here repeated with some alteration to show that David was now fully re-established in his former estate.

CHAP. XXI.

A three years' famine declared by God to be for the Gibeonites' sake, ceased by their hanging seven of Saul's sons, 1-9. Ransome preserved the dead bodies, 10-11. David buries the bones of Saul and Jonathan, as also of them that were hung up, in his father's sepulchre 12-14. Four battles against the Philistines, wherein four valiants of David slew four giants 15-22.

THEN there was a famine in the days of David three years, year after year, and David inquired of the Lord. And the Lord answered, It is for Saul, and for his bloody house, because he slew the Gibeonites.

Then there was a famine when? Either, first after Achish's and Sheba's rebellion, as it is here related, or rather secondly in some other time before. It is well known and confessed that the particle then doth not always note that the thing was done in that order in which it is mentioned, but is oft of an indefinite signification as also that the Scripture in its histories and relations does not always observe the order of time, but the order of things putting that after which was done before as occasion requires. And so it seems to be here. The famine related here and chap xxviii by the most and best interpreters conceived to have been done long before Absalom's rebellion. And this opinion is not without still great grounds. First The particle then is explained in the days of a during the life and reign of David, which general and indefinite words seem to be added as an intimation that these things were not done after the next for going passages, for then the said writer would rather have added, after these things or some such expression, as it is 2 Chron xxxiii 1 and in many other places. Secondly Here are divers passages which it seems very improbable to ascribe to the first year of David's reign, such as these in 1, That Saul's sin against the Gibeonites should so long remain unpunished. And indeed that this was done and Saul's seven sons hanged by David's order before that time seems plainly to be intimated by that passage, 2 Sam vii 29, where he is charged with the blood of the house of Saul, for which there was not the least colour till this time. Secondly That David should not remove the bones of Saul and Jonathan to their proper place here ver 12-14 till that time. Thirdly That the Philistines should wage war with David again and again, ver 15 &c. so long after he had fully subdued them, chap viii 1 and that David's old age should attempt to fight with a Philistine giant or that his people should suffer him to do so. Fourthly That David should here have so vehement a desire to number his people chap xxvi 1 &c, which being a work of youthful heat and vigour, seems not at all to agree with that state of deep humiliation and great affliction to which he then was. And the reason why the matters are put here out of their proper order is plainly this because David's sin being once related it was very convenient that David's punishments inflicted for it should immediately succeed this being very frequent in Scripture story to put those things together which belong to one matter, though they happened at several times. And this is the more considerable because it tends to the clearing of that great difficulty, 2 Sam xi 7. David inquired of the Lord concerning the reason of his displeasure and the judgment. Because he slew the Gibeonites, which was not only an act of cruelty, but also of perfidiousness and perjury, because it was a direct and public violation of that solemn oath given to them for their security by Jonathan and the princes in the name of all the Israelites of that and succeeding generations, and consequently a great scandal to the true religion, and the professors of it, and a mean to discourage others from embracing it as the Gibeonites had done. Quest Why did not God punish Saul whilst he was alive for this fault, but his innocent children, and David, and the Israelites of this age? Answer First God did severely punish Saul for this and his other sins. Secondly As God may justly inflict temporal punishments upon any offender either in his person or in his posterity, when he pleases, so it is meet he should take his own time for it; and if he fully and wickedness in us to quarrel with God for so doing. Thirdly The Israelites might stand by ways make themselves guilty of Saul's sin though it be not particularly mentioned in Scripture; advising or encouraging him to it, or by assisting him in the execution of it; or by conniving at it, or by rejoicing in it for some worldly advantage which they received or expected from it; or by not repairing the injuries which Saul had done them as far as they might. And some of these ways David himself might be involved in the guilt, although indeed this evil fell principally upon the people. And whereas many of the people probably were innocent of that crime, yet they also were guilty of many other sins, for which God might punish them, though he took this occasion for it. And it may be further observed, that God is pleased many times severely to punish never delinquents and to suffer the guilty for the present to go unpunished, and that not only to manifest his own sovereign power and liberty, but also to give the world thereby assurance of a future judgment, and punishments reserved for the next life.

2 And the king called the Gibeonites, and said unto them, (now the Gibeonites were not of the children of Israel) but of the remnant of the Amorites; and the children of Israel had sworn unto them, and Saul sought to slay them in his zeal to the children of Israel and Judah.)

Saul sought to slay them? he sought to slay them, and he sought how he might cut them off with some colour of law or justice, diligently searching out and executing their faults, and punishing them worse than they deserved, oppressing them with excessive labours, and openly killing some of them, and intending by degrees to wear them out, but as to the children of Israel and Judah, concerning which he pretended, that it was not for the honour, nor for the advantage of God's people, to nourish any of the viperous brood in their bosoms, and that how ever they should and the princes which then were had by then fraud been drawn into an oath to preserve them, Josh. ix. 15. yet in truth that oath was contrary to God's command, 1 Sam. xii. 2. Deut. x. 2. and therefore (as he thought) not to be observed. This was his pretence. But how little zeal he had for God, or for the public good of his people, is evident by the whole course of his life, and therefore it is not more than probable he had some particular motive or design in this case, either because some of them had highly provoked him, for whose sake he would be revenged of the whole race; or because they being cut off their estates, and put forfeited to the crown, or for some other reason now unknown.

3 Wherefore David said unto the Gibeonites, What shall I do for you? and wherewith shall I make the atonement, that ye may bless the inheritance of the Lord?

Into the Gibeonites, to some of the flock of them, who were to impart it to the rest. What shall I do for you? what satisfaction do you expect or require for the wrongs formerly done to you? That ye may bless the inheritance of the Lord, that by your acknowledgment of satisfaction received the guilt and curse may be removed from the land and people of God, and by this means as also by your prayers God may be reconciled, and in mercy to us his blessing of plenty to us, which hitherto he hath denied us.

1 And the Gibeonites said unto him, We will have no silver, nor gold of Saul, nor of his house, neither for us shalt thou kill any man in Israel. And he said, What ye shall say, that will I do for you?

Any man in Israel, except Saul's family as it here follows. What you shall say, to wit, in any reason, and as far as God's law will permit.

5 And they answered the king, The man that consumed us, and that devised against us, that we should be destroyed from remaining in any of the coasts of Israel.

That we should be either killed, or banished from the land of Israel; which is as bad as death to us, because here, and here only God is truly worshipped and enjoyed. Whereby it seems divers of them were hearty proselytes, and godly persons, and therefore God is more severe in punishing the injuries done to them. Compare 1 Sam. xvi. 19.

6 I of seven men of his sons be delivered unto us, and we will hang them up unto the Lord in Gibeah of Saul, of whom the Lord did choose. And the king said, I will give them.

Into the Lord, to vindicate his honour, which was injured by Saul's violation of the oath and covenant of God, and to appease his wrath. In Gibeah of Saul, Saul's country, 1 Sam. x. 26, xi. 1. for their greater shame, of whom the Lord did choose, this is added to aggravate Saul's offence, that it was committed not only against them, but also against the Lord, who had chosen and adorned him, and therefore did little deserve this from Saul's hand, to have his laws broken, and his name dishonoured by perjury. I of seven men, he says doubtless, consulted God in the matter, who as he had before declared Saul's bloody house to be the cause of the judgment so now commanded that justice should be done upon it, and that the remaining branches of it should be cut off, as sufficiently appears from hence, that God was satisfied and well pleased with the action, which he would not have been if David had done it without his command. For then it had been a sinful action of David's, and contrary to a double law of God, Deut. xxxi. 23. xxxv. 10. which none but God himself could dispense with.

7 But the king spared Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan the son of Saul, because of the Lord's oath that was between them, between David and Jonathan the son of Saul.

The king spared Mephibosheth, for the Gibeonites desiring only such number without demanding the persons, it was at David's choice whom to spare. Or he prevailed with the Gibeonites that they did not do him, and with the Lord that he might not be one of those who were devoted to destruction. The son of Jonathan thus especially added to distinguish him from the other Mephibosheth, ver. 8.

8 But the king took the two sons of Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, whom she bore unto Saul, Armoni and Mephibosheth, and the five sons of Michal the daughter of Saul, whom she brought up unto Adriel the son of Barzillai the Meholathite.

Rizpah Saul's concubine ver. 11, chap. x. 7. The five sons of Michal or of Michal's sister to wit Michal, for Michal had no children, 2 Sam. vi. 23. nor was she married to this Aiah, but to Phalti, or Phaltai, the son of Achish 1 Sam. xxv. 41. 2 Sam. iii. 15, and Michal her sister was married to this very Adriel, the Meholathite, 1 Sam. xxvi. 16. And it must be remembered, that the Hebrew language is very short, and full of ellipses, and facts of words which yet may be easily understood from the context. Particularly relative words are oft left out, and to be supplied, as God with is put for Goliath's brother here ver. 19. and wash let uncle's son, Jer. xxxiv. 7, 12. On the sons of Michal are called the sons of Michal to wit her daughters, or the near kindred and next heirs of Michal, and brought up by her, for upon that, and such like accounts the title of son is oft given in Scripture as Gen. xlii. 5, Exod. x. 10, Deut. xxv. 5, 6, Ruth i. 11. 12. is 12. Quest. But why then are not these called the sons of Michal? Answer. Because they were better known by their relation to Michal, who was David's wife, and it may be alive at this time, and having no children of her own took these, and bred them up as her own, when Michal was now a more obscure person and possibly dead many years before this. Whom she brought up, for so this Hebrew verb, which primarily and properly signifies to bear, is sometimes used as Gen i 23, Ruth iv 17 because the education of children is a kind of bearing of them, as requiring frequently no less care and pains than the bearing doth whence it is that nurse, are reputed as mothers and sometimes go under that name both in sacred and profane writers. See Ruth iv 16 17, and compare Gen xvi 2, xxx 3, Numb xi 12, Gal iv 19. The Micholite, of Abel-meholah in the tribe of Benjamin Judg vi 22, so he is here called by way of distinction from Berziah the Gileadite, chap xix 31.

9 And he delivered them into the hands of the Gibeonites, and they hanged them in the hill before the Lord, and they fell all seven together, and were put to death in the days of harvest, in the first days, in the beginning of barley harvest.

He delivered them into the hands of the Gibeonites. Quest. How could David do this when he had sworn that he would not cut off Saul's seed? 1 Sam xvi 21 22. Ans. Because he had special warrant and direction from God about it, who is all compass and discretion with men's souls, and with his own laws when he is fit. And that he did so here is manifest because God was pleased with it, and removed the judgment upon it, which is otherwise David had been guilty of the same, in with Saul to wit of the breach of his oath and covenant for which this curse was inflicted. See the note on 1 Sam xxv 22. In the hill or, in a fall in or in a Gabah, in a conspicuous place for their public infamy, and for the caution and terror of others who should make any attempt upon the Gibeonites for the future. Before the Lord, as a sacrifice offered up to God to appease his wrath, in that the Lord was said to be in the hill, as deduced from the words in the hill is often used. 1 Kings xvi 21. 1 Chron xvi 11. Ps lxxvii 7, for xxxix 18. Ho v 5, or were executed. The barley harvest was before the wheat harvest.

10 ¶ And Rizzah the daughter of Aiah took sackcloth, and spread it for her upon the rock, from the beginning of harvest until water dropped upon them out of heaven, and suffered neither the birds of the air to rest on them by day, nor the beasts of the field by night.

Spread it for her, as intent to dwell in, being informed that their bodies were not to be taken away speedily, is the course of the law was in other and ordinary cases. Deut xxi 23 but was to continue there until God was entreated and did remove the present punishment. And God was herein pleased to dispense with his own law, that it might plainly appear that these were not put to death by David for public reasons, as that he and his sons might be freed from complicity, which doubtless David's enemies were ready to suggest, but by God's special command, who was pleased to execute this judgment upon them as partly and principally for the punishment of Saul's sin so secondarily for the satisfaction of David's claim to himself and to his seed for ever, as he had promised. Upon the rock, in some convenient place, as a rock near adjoining. Until water dropped upon them out of heaven, until they were taken down, which was to be done all God had given rain as a sign of his favour, and the water fell on the fanny, which was cut off by the water, as it fell on them, as on their carcases. Neither birds of the air, nor beasts of the field, from which she might preserve her self and them by several methods.

11 And it was told David what Rizzah the daughter of Aiah the concubine of Saul, had done.

It was told David, who heard it with so much approbation, that he thought fit to impute the party being by her example provoked to do what she had neglected to do, to show an honourable interment upon the remains of Saul and Jonathan, and, with them upon those that were now put to death, that the honour done to them herein might be some comfort to this dejected and disconsolate widow.

12 ¶ And David went and took the bones of Saul and the bones of Jonathan his son from the men of Jabesh-gilead, which had stolen them from the street of Beth-shan, where the Philistines had hanged them, when the Philistines had slain Saul in Gilboa.

13 And he brought up from thence the bones of Saul and the bones of Jonathan his son, and they gathered the bones of them that were hanged.

Having first burnt off the flesh which remained upon them when they were taken down. Compare 1 Sam xxxi 10 &c.

14 And the bones of Saul and Jonathan his son buried they in the country of Benjamin in Zelah, in the sepulchre of Kish his father, and they performed all that the king commanded. And after that God was intreated for the land.

Zelah, a place in Benjamin, mentioned Josh xviii 28. After that, after those things were done which were before related, and after they were hanged up, for by the God was purified and not by their burial. So the relation belongs to the former antecedent. Or if this relate to what was last mentioned, the meaning is that God was pleased to restore the blessing of plenty to the land.

15 ¶ Moreover the Philistines had yet war again with Israel, and David went down and his servants with him, and fought against the Philistines, and David waxed faint.

These wars, though here related, were transacted long before the time of which see the notes on ver 1. For it is now very probable, either that the Philistines, being so bold and perfectly subdued by David, chap viii 1, should in his day be in a capacity of warring with the Israelites, or that David in his old age would undertake to fight with a giant, or that his people would permit him to do so.

16 And Ishbi-banob, which was of the sons of the giant, the weight of whose spear weighed three hundred shekels of brass in weight, he being girded with a new sword, thought to have slain David.

The giant, so called by way of eminency. Or, of Ishbi-banob, a giant so called. The weight of whose spear weighed three hundred shekels, see 1 Sam xviii 6. With a new sword, or rather with a new girdle or belt, for first, this was the usual habit of soldiers. 1 Sam xviii 1, 2 Sam xviii 11, xxviii 1 Kings ii 21, 1 Chr v 27 and when it was of an extraordinary fashion and price, an ensign of dignity and command in the army. Jerk xxiii 15. So this may be questioned to note that this was the first time either of his going out to fight, or of his advancement to some eminent place in the army, which made him desirous to strengthen himself with some great action. Secondly, This supplement is more natural and usual, the word preparation is supplied from the word being girded, such ellipses of copulative words being frequent in the Hebrew tongue, as Numb xi 11, Psal lxxvi 12. Matt xx 12. Thundiv, the muzzles of the sword seems to have no emphasis nor significance for the present purpose, seeing an old and tried sword would seem more considerable for his encouragement than one new and unproved.

17 But Abishai the son of Zeruiah succoured him, and smote the Philistine, and killed him. Then the men of David swore unto him, saying, Thou shalt go no more out with us to battle, that thou quenchest not the light of Israel.

Least thou be slain, and thereby thy people be ruined.

land kings are in Scripture justly called the light of their people as 1 Kings xi 36, xv 4. Psal cxxiii. 17, because their beauty and glory, the conduct and direction, the comfort, and safety, and welfare of a people depend upon them, and come from them.

18 And it came to pass after this, that there was again a battle with the Philistines at Gob: then Sibbechai the Hushathite slew the giant, which was of the sons of the giant.

After this; after the battle last mentioned at Gob, or in Gath, as it is 1 Chron xx 1 where by it seems Gob and Gazer were neighbouring places, and the battle fought in the confines of both. Sibbechai the Hushathite, one of David's worthies, 1 Chron xi 29.

19 And there was again a battle in Gob with the Philistines, where Elhanan the son of Jaare Oregim, a Bethlehemitite, slew the brother of Goliath the Gittite, the staff of whose spear was like a weaver's beam.

Elhanan, another of David's worthy and valiant commanders. The brother of Goliath the Gittite, the relative word brother is not in the Hebrew text, but is truly supplied out of the parallel place 1 Chron xx 5 where it is expressed. And such defects of relatives are not unusual in Scripture. Thus the word wife is understood Mat i 6 John xix 25 and father or mother Mark xv 10, 17 compared with Mark xxi 1, Luke xxiv 10, and so 1 Mat xxv 21 Mark ii 14 John xxi 15, and brother Luke vi 16 compared with Jude 1. And such ellipses do also frequently occur in profane authors. Although the place may be and is otherwise rendered, Elhanan the son of Jaare Oregim slew Beth-halechem or Ishai (as he is called by way of abbreviation, 1 Chron xv 1) which is very frequent in the Hebrew tongue) who was (which words are frequently understood in the Hebrew & X) gith (which is oft rendered, as hath been noted before) Goliath the Gittite, i.e. in his company, bred up with him to the war, and related to him as his brother. Or, he slew Beth-halechem, i.e. Goliath (or another Goliath) of Gath, or the Gittite. So the name of the giant was Beth-halechem, who was yet he called Goliath not only for his resemblance to him being his brother, but for his exact resemblance of him in feature or in stature and strength or in courage and military skill as John the Baptist was called Tha for the like reason Perdiccas also, after the death of the first and famous Goliath the Gittite, 1 Sam xxv that name was either given to him by others, or taken by himself. Take a name's beam in thickness. See 1 Sam xxv 7.

20 And there was yet a battle in Gath, where was a man of great stature, that had on every hand six fingers and on every foot six toes, four and twenty in number, and he also was born to the giant.

In Gath, i.e. in the territory of the city of Gath, which circumstance intimates that this, and consequently the other battles here described were fought betwixt David and the Philistines at the hands of the Philistines which he did 2 Sam viii 1, compared with 1 Chron xxi 1 and here fore not in the last days of David as some conceive from their mention in this place. A man of great stature, i.e. a man of Uddin or Madon, as the LXX render it, so called from the place of his birth, as Goliath, and so he of Gath for the same reason.

21 And when he defied Israel, Jonathan the son of Shimeah the brother of David slew him.

22 These four were born to the giant in Gath, and fell by the hand of David, and by the hand of his servants.

Fell by the hand of David, either because they were slain by his conduct, and counsel, or concurrence; for he attributed by his hand to the death of one of them, whilst maintaining a fight with him, he gave Abishai the easier opportunity of killing him, yet 16, 17, or because what is done by the inferior commanders is commonly ascribed to the general, both in sacred and profane writers.

CHAP XXII.

A Psalm of thanksgiving for God's powerful deliverance and manifold blessings.

This chapter is in a manner wholly the same with Psalm xxviii, and therefore I shall adjourn the exposition of it to that place.

AND David spake unto the Lord the words of this song in the day that the Lord had delivered him out of the hand of all his enemies, and out of the hand of Saul.

2 And he said, The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer.

3 The God of my rock, in him will I trust: he is my shield, and the horn of my salvation, my high tower, and my refuge, my saviour, thou sweetest me from violence.

4 I will call on the Lord, who is worthy to be praised: so shall I be saved from mine enemies.

5 When the waves of death compassed me, the floods of ungodly men made me afraid.

6 The sorrows of hell compassed me about, the snares of death prevented me.

7 In my distress, I called upon the Lord, and cried to my God: and he did hear my voice out of his temple, and my cry did enter into his ears.

8 Then the earth shook, and trembled: the foundations of heaven moved, and shook, because he was wroth.

9 There went up a smoke out of his nostrils, and fire out of his mouth devoured coals were kindled by it.

10 He bowed the heavens also, and came down, and darkness was under his feet.

11 And he rode upon a cherub, and did fly, and he was seen upon the wings of the wind.

12 And he made darkness pavilions round about him, thick waters, and thick clouds of the skies.

13 Through the brightness before him were coals of fire kindled.

14 The Lord thundered from heaven, and the most High uttered his voice.

15 And he sent out arrows, and scattered them, lightning, and discomfited them.

16 And the channels of the sea appeared, the foundations of the world were discovered, at the rebuking of the Lord at the blast of the breath of his anger.

17 He sent from above, he took me, he drew me out of many waters.

18 He delivered me from my strong enemy, and from them that hated me, for they were too strong for me.

19 They prevented me in the day of my calamity but the LORD was my stay

20 He brought me forth also into a large place he delivered me, because he delighted in me

21 The LORD rewarded me according to my righteousness according to the cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me

22 For I have kept the ways of the LORD, and have not wickedly departed from my God

23 For all his judgments were before me and as for his statutes, I did not depart from them

24 I was also upright before him, and have kept myself from mine iniquity

25 Therefore the LORD hath recompensed me according to my righteousness, according to my cleanness for his eyesight

26 With the merciful thou wilt shew thyself merciful, and with the upright in in thou wilt shew thyself upright

27 With the pure thou wilt shew thyself pure and with the froward thou wilt shew thyself unsavoury

28 And the afflicted people thou wilt save but thine eyes are upon the haughty that thou mayest bring them down

29 For thou art my lamp, O LORD and the LORD will lighten my darkness

30 For by thee I have run through a troop by my God have I leaped over a wall

31 For for God, his way is perfect the word of the LORD is tried he is a buckler to all them that trust in him

32 For who is God save the LORD? and who is a rock save our God?

33 God is my strength and power and he maketh my way perfect

34 He maketh my feet like hinds' feet and setteth me upon my high places

35 He teacheth my hands to war so that a bow of steel is broken by mine arms

36 Thou hast also given me the shield of thy salvation and thy gentleness hath made me great

37 Thou hast enlarged my steps under me so that my feet did not slip

38 I have pursued mine enemies, and destroyed them and turned not again until I had consumed them

39 And I have consumed them, and wounded them that they could not arise even they are fallen under my feet

40 For thou hast girded me with strength to battle thou that rose up against me hast thou subdued under me

41 Thou hast also given me the necks of mine enemies, that I might destroy them that hate me.

42 They looked, but there was none to save, even unto the LORD, but he answered them not

43 Then did I beat them as small as the dust of the earth, I did stamp them as the mire of the street, and did spread them abroad

44 Thou also hast delivered me from the strivings of my people, thou hast kept me to be head of the heathen a people which I knew not shall serve me

45 Strangers shall submit themselves unto me as soon as they hear, they shall be obedient unto me

46 Strangers shall fade away, and they shall be afraid out of their close places

47 The LORD liveth, and blessed be my rock, and exalted be the God of the rock of my salvation

48 It is God that avengeth me, and that bringeth down the people under me,

49 And that bringeth me forth from mine enemies thou also hast lifted me up on high above them that rose up against me thou hast delivered me from the violent man

50 Therefore I will give thanks unto thee O LORD, among the heathen and I will sing praises unto thy name

51 He is the tower of salvation for his king and sheweth mercy to his anointed, unto David, and to his seed for evermore

CHAP XXIII

David's last words a character of himself, of his virtues, and his usefulness 1-11 His faith on God's return with him 5 Destruction to the wicked 6, 7 The church's worthiness, and their valiant acts 8-39

NOW these be the last words of David David the son of Jesse said, and the man who was raised up on high, the anointed of the God of Jacob, and the sweet psalmist of Israel said,

The last words of David not simply the last that he spoke but some of the last uttered in his last days upon the approach of his death, or the last which he spoke by the Spirit of God assisting and directing him in an extraordinary manner Raised up on high, advanced from an obscure family and estate to the kingdom The anointed of the God of Jacob whom, though despised by men and rejected by his own brethren God himself singled out from all his father's house and out of all the families and tribes of Israel and anointed to be king The sweet psalmist of Israel, or sweet or delightful, or amiable in the songs of Israel either, first, As the object of them, in which the people of Israel mentioned in their songs with joy and praise as when they sang, Saul hath slain his thousands and David his ten thousands, and many others which doubtless they made and sung concerning him upon the occasion of his eminent victories, and the blessings of his wise and righteous government some whereof we have in the book of Psalms Or secondly, As the author of them he was eminent and famous among the people of God for the composing of sweet and holy songs to the praise of God and for the use of his church in after ages, for he did not only indite most of the Book of Psalms by the direction of God's Spirit, but also invented the tunes, or appointed tunes to which they were to be sung, and the instruments of music which were used in and with these holy songs, 1 Chron.

xxx 1. 6, Amos vi 5 If the expressions here used seem arrogant, and not fit to be said by David in his own praise, let it be considered, first, That holy men spake by inspiration from God; and therefore must follow his suggestions impartially, as if they did so sometimes in the publishing their own praises, which yet is never done unnecessarily, and always moderately, and sometimes in the publishing of their own infirmities and shame as they are moved thereto and as the edification of the church requires. Secondly That these seem not to be the words of David, but of the sacred penman of this book, to make for and gain the greater attention and respect unto David's following words.

2 The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and his word was in my tongue.

The following words, and consequently the other words and Psalms composed and uttered by me upon the like solemn occasions are not to be looked upon as my private fancies or human inventions, but both the writer and the words of them are suggested and governed by God's Spirit, which is the great teacher of the church.

3 The God of Israel said the Rock of Israel spake to me, He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God.

The God of Israel, he who is the strength and defence and protector of his people, which he here manifests by ordering and directing kings and rulers so to manage their power and authority as may most conduce to their comfort and benefit. Spake to me by way of command, or, of my own suggestion and promise concerning me, and my house. He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God. But it is a precept or declaration of the duty of kings and princes, as Solomon his son (to whom is a duty of justice the duty) and of his successors the kings of Israel. And by whose instruction he gives this rule, which sheweth the two principal parts of a king's duty, to wit, to the two titles of God's law, justice to his men and piety towards God, both which he is to maintain and promote among his people, to which if you add benignity and clemency whereby a king renders his government to his faithful and humble men, but acceptable and profitable to his people, which possibly may be meant by the following sentence, here is a complete character of an excellent prince in government. Orders in the law of the Lord, and in the words of our holy law, that namely, there shall be Rulers over men (or rather among men) the Hebrew word properly signifies, to wit, the Messias, who though he be the eternal and invisible God yet shall visibly appear and rule among men as a just and righteous one. He shall be Ruler over men as he is in the Hebrew, giving the fear of the Lord, the govern and ordering the worship of God which is oft called the fear of God. And so this clause is added to prevent or remove scandals and offences which might be taken if it were when he should come, because of his changing and changing the ceremonial law, and to insinuate that he shall have no less power in the government of God's house and worship than Moses had, and that he might rule as he does as he thought meet. And if this be the meaning of the place then as Job, being greatly afflicted with the troubles which he by the Spirit of prophecy for saw were coming upon his posterity, comforts himself with thoughts of that great and glorious salvation of God which he should see and waited for, Gen. xlix 18, and I will be waiting upon the great disorders, and miseries and calamities which had already arisen in his house and either wisely preaching or foreseeing by the Spirit of the Lord ver 2 that the same sins and miseries should befall his posterity and successors, he supports and comforts himself with this consideration, that one of them should be a most excellent person, just, and pious, and merciful and unspeakable blessing to David himself, and to all his family and people, and to the whole world, even the great Messias, who was undoubtedly revealed to and expected by David, as appears by many passages of the Psalms and by other scriptures.

4 And he shall be as the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, even as a morning without clouds, as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain.

These words are either, 1 A further description of the king's duty, which is not only to rule with exact justice and piety, but also with sweetness, and gentleness and consideration to the infirmities of his people, to render his government as pleasant and acceptable to them as is the sunshine in a clear morning, or the tender grass which springs out of the earth by the warm and refreshing beams of the sun after the rain, which hath a peculiar kind of sweetness and fragrance in it. Or rather, 2 A prediction or declaration of the sweet and blessed effects of such a government, both to the governor himself in that peace, and prosperity, and glory and happiness which it brings to him, and to his people, to whom it is no less grateful, and comfortable, and beneficial, than the great and public blessings of sunshine and rain, and the fruit which they produce, which is true of every good king or governor but most eminently of the Messias.

5 Although my house be not so with God, yet he hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things, and sure for this is all my salvation, and all my desire, although he make it not to grow.

Although my house be not so with God, although God know that neither I nor my children have lived and ruled as we should have done, or judy and in the fear of the Lord, and therefore I have not enjoyed that uninterrupted prosperity which we might have enjoyed, but our mourning light or the darkness of that kingdom prevaileth over me for ever, hath been over us with many thick and small clouds, and my children have not withstood like the tender grass, growing out of the earth after the shower by the influence of the sun and rain, but rather like the grass that withereth away and ceaseth before its due time. Yet he hath made with me an everlasting covenant, not wasteful, not broken, not void, but sure, and I have broken no covenant with God, and the people, and civil wars which have the done ever since, yet I comfort myself with this that God doth love all my house for ever, before I came into the world, was graciously pleased to make a covenant with me, and continue the promise to me, and to my seed for ever, chap. vi 16, and the coming of the Messias, who is to be my Son and successor, and whose kingdom shall have no end. On repentance, and, ordered in all point by God's eternal and unchangeable counsel, and disposed by his wise and powerful providence, which doth and will overcome all things, even the innumerable miseries of my house, so far as it although he would punish them for their sin, yet he will not utterly break them out, nor break his covenant made with me, and mine, as ver 34, and Psalm lxxxix 34 Sure preserved my covenant, or kept to wit, on God's part, or by God's power and faithfulnes, in the midst of all the oppositions and uncertainties, to which it seems to be exposed on our part. Compare Rom in 3, 2 Tim in 13. For on therefore as the Hebrew particles ch'et et et et, therefore for because God hath made such a covenant, this is or he is he who hath made this covenant, or on this is it consist, in and depends upon this covenant, all my salvation, both my own eternal salvation and the temporal salvation, or the preservation of the kingdom to me and mine. All my desire, or, every desire from the word desire being oft put for desire, and all things, as Psalm xxi 2, lxxxviii 29, 1 Pet xii 16 David being deeply sensible, and having had long experience, of the vanity and uncertainty of all earthly things, is declared that the covenant made by God with him and his in the Messias, is the only happiness which he praiseth and desireth, in which he doth fully acquiesce. Although he make it not to grow, or my house in mine house in the sense is, Although God is yet hath not made my house or family to grow, i e to increase, or to flourish with worldly glory and prosperity, as I expected, but hath for my sin cut off divers of my most eminent branches, and sorely afflicted my person and family, and although he may for the future deal in like manner with my sons and successors for the like miscarriages, which it is probable they may commit yet this is my great support and comfort, that God will constantly and inviolably keep this covenant, and therefore, in the midst of all the shakings, and confusions, and interruptions which may happen in my house and kingdom will preserve my line and family until the coming of the Messiah out of my loins, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, who, as he is the desire of all nations, His is 7, so in a special manner is my desire and the author of all my salvation

6 ¶ But the sons of Bebai shall be all of them as thorns thrust away, because they cannot be taken with hands

The sons of Bebai or, the men of Bebai, as it is expressed 2 Sam xvi 7, and elsewhere. Having in the foregoing verses described the nature and fidelity and stability of that kingdom which God himself had by a sure and everlasting covenant settled upon him and his seed, and especially upon the Messiah, who was to be one of his posterity, he now describes the quality, the malicious nature, the hazardous and miserable condition of all the enemies of this holy and blessed kingdom whom he justly calleth sons of Bebai because they rebelled against God's appointment, and against that king whom God had set over them for whose reason others are so called 1 Sam x 27 2 Chron xvi 7. 1. Thorns thrust away which men do not use to handle as they do other trees but thrust them away from themselves by some instrument chosen for that purpose. And so will God remove or thrust away from himself and his people and his kingdom all to whom shall either secretly or openly set the selves against it. And this may be here added either 1 By way of prescription to ruler whom as before he admonished to be just and kind to their people ver 3, I so here he requirer them to be severe in punishing and purging away wicked and incorrigible men from about his throne and from among his people, the encouraging of the good and the punishing of the bad being the two chief works of every good magistrate, and the two pillars of all government. Or 2 By way of caution to show that notwithstanding the holiness, and happiness, and sureness of this kingdom yet there would be sons of Bebai in it who would endeavour to disturb and overthrow it but to no purpose for all their projects against it should be vain and fall upon their own heads

7 But the man that shall touch them shall be pierced with iron and they shall be utterly burned with fire in the same place

The staff of a spear so the meaning is he must fill his hand or arm himself with some iron weapon whereby he may cut them down or with the staff of a spear or some such like thing whereby he may thrust them away from himself that they do him no hurt. Or thus he will be filled or will fill himself with his hand wherewith he is tempted to touch or feel them with thorns as with iron and the staff of a spear so he will be sorely and sorely wounded as if one should reach the iron end and part of the wood of a spear into his hand. And then shall he utterly burn or be consumed by fire, we cannot directly touch them therefore they will burn them up. Or once if they do not cut him down with iron or thrust them away with the staff of a spear they will burn and consume them. In the same place as in the place where they grow or stand; and they will not be able to hazard themselves to remove them. Which may imply that they shall be destroyed as a weed and where they thought themselves most secure even in their own place. And it may possibly intimate, that the children of Bebai the wicked and unbelieving Jews who justly rebelled against the Messiah, David's successor and their lawful king, should be destroyed in their own and strong, and holy city Jerusalem, where the greater part of that people were gathered together as fuel for the fire, and were destroyed together by the Romans under Titus, where also their wicked predecessors had been destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar in former times

8 ¶ These be the names of the mighty men whom David had ¶ The Tachmonite that sat in the seat, chief among the captains, the same was Admo the Eanite. He lift up his spear against eight hundred, whom he slew at one time

Of the mighty men whom David had, i e, of his chief and most valiant commanders. And as it was noted upon chap xxi 1, that the things related in that chapter were done before Absalom's and Shoba's rebellion, though the names be mentioned after them, so that opinion is confirmed by this catalogue, which, though placed here was taken long before, as is manifest from hence, that Asahel and Uriah are named here. And whereas there are some differences between this list and that 1 Chron xi, most of them are easily reconciled by these two considerations. 1 That nothing is more common than for one person to have divers names. 2 That as some of the worthies died, and others came in their steads, so this must needs cause some alteration in the latter catalogue, 1 Chron xi, from this, which was the former. The Tachmonite or, Tachmonite, called Iashobeam 1 Chron xi 11, from his place, or, as here Ioshab-bassabet i e as we render it, that sat in the seat, i e was under Ioshab chief or president of the council of war, or lieutenant (locum tenens). The same was Admo, this was his proper name. The Eanite, so called, either from his family, or from the place of his birth or education. He lift up his spear, which words are fully supplied out of 1 Chron xi 11 where they are expressed. Or thus he was some eight hundred, i e he conquered them. So there is only an ellipsis of the verb substantive, which is most frequent. At one time, in one battle which though it be strange, cannot seem incredible, supposing him to be a person of extraordinary strength and activity and his enemies to be weak and discouraged and flying away, and especially God's singular blessing and assistance, all which may very reasonably be supposed. Object But this man is said to have slain only three hundred in 1 Chron xi 11. Ioshab-bassabet 1 Possibly he slew eight hundred at one time and three hundred at another whereof the former is related here as being most considerable, and the latter in the Book of Chronicles which supplies many passages omitted in the former writings. 2 He slew three hundred with his own hands and the other five hundred, though killed by his men are said to be slain by him because he was the chief cause of all their deaths, for he, by his undaunted courage, killing three hundred put the rest to flight who were easily slain by his soldiers in the pursuit. Some of the Hebrew writers affirm that these were two distinct persons, being killed by differing names, the one the father and the other the son, who succeeded his father, as in strength and valour, so also in his place of honour and trust.

9 And after him was Hicazar the son of Dodo the Ahoite, one of the three mighty men with David, when they defied the Philistines that were their gathered together to battle, and the men of Israel were gone away

The Ahoite, of the children of Ahoah, 1 Chron viii 1 One of the three, i e one of the first three ver 19. Mighty men with David, who were with David at this time or who usually attended upon David. When they defied the Philistines, when he either in the name of all the Israelites, or with the countenance and help of some of them, challenged the Philistines to fight. Or when some of, or among the Philistines defied them, i e the Israelites, according to their manner, and the example of their great Goliath, 1 Sam xvii 25, 36. Or in Hoipam (for some make it a proper name of a place) among the Philistines. Four away, i e fled away 1 Chron xi 13, being dismayed at the approach of their enemies. Heb asended i e, vanished away like smoke, which ascends, and so disappears, as that verb is oft used.

10 He arose, and smote the Philistines until his hand was weary, and his hand clave unto the sword: and the Lord wrought a great victory that day: and the people returned after him only to spoil.

He arose, i. e. he undertook the work, as that word sometimes is used. Or, he stood (as it sometimes signifies) when the rest fled. His hand clave unto the sword, either through sweat or blood, or by a contraction of the sinews. Or thus, yet still his hand cleave to his sword, i. e. though he was weary, he did not desert, but continued fighting only to spoil, i. e. to pursue the enemy, whom he had discomfited, and to take their spoil.

11 And after him was Shamunah the son of Agee the Hararite. And the Philistines were gathered together into a troop, where was a piece of ground full of lentiles: and the people fled from the Philistines.

Full of lentiles, or barley, as it is 1 Chron xi 13, for which might very well grow in the same field, in divers parts. And this fact is ascribed to Eleazar, 1 Chron xi 12, not so as it is implied that he had some partner or partner in it for it is there said, ver 14 They set themselves, &c. Eleazar might stand and fight in that part where the victory was, and Shamunah there where the lentiles were.

12 But he stood in the midst of the ground, and defended it, and slew the Philistines and the Lord wrought a great victory.

Defended it, that the Philistines could neither burn nor cut it down and spoil it, nor carry it away.

13 And three of the thirty chief went down, and came to David in the harvest time unto the cave of Adullam and the troop of the Philistines pitched in the valley of Rephaim.

Three of the thirty, either 1 The three already named is generally supposed because it is said of them in the rest of this history, 1 Chron xi 19, These things did these three mightiest. But in the Hebrew it is only these three mighty men, as the same words are rendered here, ver 17. Or rather, 2 The following three, for it is expressly said both here, ver 18, and 1 Chron xi 20, that Ishai was chief, and therefore one of the three, and thus three are plainly distinguished from the first three ver 19, 1 Chron xi 25. Unto the cave of Adullam, which was a strong place, where David had been before 1 Sam xxv 1, &c. and where he had now again fortified himself in the beginning of his reign, when the Philistines were too strong for him. In the valley of Rephaim, of which see above, chap 18.

14 And David was then in an hold, and the garrison of the Philistines was then in Beth-lehem.

15 And David longed, and said, Oh that one would give me drink of the water of the well of Beth-lehem, which is by the gate.

Being hot and thirsty, he expresseth how acceptable a draught of that water would be to him, as is usual with men to do in such cases, but was far from desiring or expecting that any of his men should hazard their lives to procure it, as appears from ver 17.

16 And the three mighty men brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David nevertheless he would not drink thereof, but poured it out unto the Lord.

The host of the Philistines was in the valley of Rephaim, ver 13, and in the way to Beth-lehem. He would not drink thereof, lest by gratifying himself upon such terms, he should seem either to set too high a price upon the satisfaction of his appetite, or too low a price upon the labours of his soldiers, or should encourage others to the like ungrateful and foolish attempts. Poured it out unto the Lord.

And he acknowledged of their goodness in preserving the lives of his captains in so dangerous an enterprise; and to show that he esteemed it a sacred thing, which, considering all things, it was not fit for him to drink it.

17 And he said, Be it far from me, O Lord, that I should do this: in not this the blood of the men that went in jeopardy of their lives? therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mighty men.

It is not this the blood of the men, i. e. the price of their blood or lives, which they rashly exposed to manifold hazard? These things did these three mighty men; either one of these three are here omitted, as one of the first three is not named, 1 Chron xi, or Abishai, who follows next, was one of these three.

18 And Abishai, the brother of Joab, the son of Zeruiah, was chief among three. And he lifted up his spear against three hundred, and slew them, and had the name among three.

He fought with and killed three hundred men in one battle. And the name among the three is was the most famous and eminent among them.

19 Was he not most honourable of three? therefore he was their captain howbeit he attained not unto the first three.

He fell short of them in strength and valour.

20 And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man, of Kabzeel, who had done many acts, he slew two lionlike men of Moab. He went down also and slew a lion in the midst of a pit in time of snow.

Of Kabzeel, a place in Judah, Josh xv 21. Who had done many acts, this may belong either to Benaiah, or to his father, to note that Benaiah was a son becoming unto a father. Two lionlike men, for courage and strength. Or, lions of God, i. e. great and strong lions. Or, two gigantic persons, and therefore both called as being either equal in might or brethren by birth. In the midst of a pit, where he put himself under a necessity, either of killing, or being killed. In time of snow, when lions are most fierce both from the sharpness of their appetite in cold seasons, and from want of provisions, cattle being then shut up, and fed at home.

21 And he slew an Egyptian, a goodly man, and the Egyptian had a spear in his hand, but he went down to him with a staff, and plucked the spear out of the Egyptian's hand, and slew him with his own spear.

A goodly man, for stature, as it is expressed, 1 Chron xi 23. With a staff, without a sword, or any warlike weapon.

22 These things did Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and had the name among three mighty men.

23 He was more honourable than the thirty, but he attained not to the first three. And David set him over his guard.

Heb. over (for el is sometimes put for al) the men (which is oft understood, as hath been noted before) of his command. So his guard is called, because they were always at the king's hand, ready to hear and receive the king's commands, and to put them in execution. Over the Cherethites and Pelethites, as appears by comparing 2 Sam vii 16, xx, 23, who were faithful and obedient to him, when others revolted from him, chap. xv 18.

24 Asahel the brother of Joab was one of the thirty; Elhanan the son of Dodo of Beth-lehem.

One of the thirty, Heb. with or among the thirty, not only as one, but as the chief of them.

25 Shammoth the Harodite, Elika the Harodite.

In 1 Chron. xi 27, Shammoth the Harodite, concerning which and such like alterations and other changes of the names, which will be observed by comparing this catalogue with that it will be sufficient to suggest, 1 That the same names of persons or places are differently pronounced, according to the different dialects used by men of diverse places or ages. 2 That one man had oft two names. 3 That David had more worthies than those here mentioned, and as some of these were slain in the former part of David's reign, as Asahel was, so others came up in their steads, and some were added to this number, as appears from 1 Chron. xi, where they are named but not numbered as they were here, and where there is a greater number than is here expressed.

26 Hilez the Pallite, Ira the son of Ikesh the Tekoite,

27 Abiezer the Anethothite, Mebunnai the Hushathite, 28 Zalmon the Ahohite, Maharai the Netophathite, 29 Heleb the son of Baanah, a Netophathite, Ittai the son of Ribai out of Gihah of the children of Benjamin,

30 Benaiah the Pirathonite, Hiddai of the brooks of Gush,

31 Abialbon the Arbathite, Azmaveth the Barhumite, 32 Thabba the Shaalbomite, of the sons of Jashin, Jonathan, 33 Shammah the Hararite, Ahum the son of Sharar the Hararite,

34 Hiphlet the son of Ahasbai the son of the Maachathite, Eliam the son of Ahithophel the Gilomite, 35 Hezrai the Carmelite, Pairu the Arbite,

36 Igal the son of Nathan of Zobah, Bani the Gadite,

37 Zelek the Ammonite, Nahai the Beerothite, amonibearu to Joab the son of Zeruiah, 38 Ira in Ithrite, Gieob an Ithrite,

39 Uriah the Hittite thirty and seven.

Here are thirty six named, either therefore one must be supplied whose name is not expressed among the three second worthies of Joab is comprehended in the number, as being the lord general of all.

CHAP XXIV

David tempteth Satan, fourth Joab to number the people, who are drunken humbled, thousand fighting men 1-9 David acknowledged his sin in it, having three judgements propounded by God he is in great distress and chooseth the pestilence, though he saith thousand men die, 10-15 David built his family, to give to the destruction of Jerusalem 16-17 He built a flesh altar to build an altar unto God, which he did, the plague ceased, 18.

AND again the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel, and he moved David against them to say, Go, number Israel and Judah.

Again, to wit, after the former sin of his anger such as the three years' famine, chap. x. he moved David he who, Father, i. Satan, as is expressed, 1 Chron. xxi 1. Or, 2. God, who is said, in like manner, to stir up Saul against David, 1 Sam. xxvi, 19, and to turn the hearts of the Egyptians to hate his people Psal. cv. 25, and to make men to err from his ways, Isa. lxvi 17, and to send strong delusions, &c., and to harden their hearts. All which expressions are not so to be understood, as if God did work these sinful dispositions, which neither was necessary, because they are naturally in every man's heart, nor possible for the holy God to do; but because he permits them, and withdraws his grace and all restraints and hindrances from them, and giveth occasions and advantages to them, and directs their thoughts to such objects as may induce or incite them to do; but because he permits them, and gives them up to Satan, who he knows will deceive and entice them to such and such sins, which, being tempted to do by Satan, and being affected by their own wicked hearts, he so orders and overrules, that they shall be punishments for their former sins against them, i. for Israel's punishment. To say, or, saying. For thus may be referred either 1 To God of whom the same expression is used 2 Sam. xxi 10, The Lord said to Shimei, curse David, which in both places is not to be understood of any command or impulse of God but of his secret providence disposing things in manner here above expressed. Or, 2 To David, he moved David to say, to wit, to Joab as he did, ver. 2.

2 I or the king said to Joab the captain of the host, which was with him, Go, number now through all the tribes of Israel, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, and number ye the people, that I may know the number of the people.

Which expression points at David's sin in this matter, that he numbered them, not by direction from God, nor for any important business of the church or kingdom, but out of mere curiosity and pride, and vain glory accompanied either with a secret distrust of God's promise of raising with a royal confidence in the numbers of his people, all which were great sins and were so manifest, that not only God saw them, but all the degrees and orders of them in David. but even Joab and the captains of the host were very sensible of them, ver. 3.

3 And Joab said unto the king, Now the LORD thy God add unto the people, how many soever they be, an hundredfold, and that the eyes of my lord the king may see it: but why doth my lord the king delight in this thing?

What reason of necessity is there for this action? It is to no purpose, and will be burdensome to thy people, and may offend God, and produce ill effects.

4 Notwithstanding the king's word prevailed against Joab, and against the captains of the host. And Joab and the captains of the host went out from the presence of the king, to number the people of Israel.

Joab perceiving the king bent upon it, would not hazard the king's favour by further disputing or disobeying his command.

5 And they passed over Jordan, and pitched in Aroer, on the right side of the city that lieth in the midst of the river of Gad, and toward Jazer.

They passed over Jordan, they began their computation in the eastern part of David's dominions which were beyond Jordan. Pitched or encamped. For Joab came with him divers of his commanders, and others, partly for his honour and the credit of the work, partly to assist him in that troublesome work, and partly to convince the people, in case they should oppose it as burdensome or savouring of some evil design which David might have upon them. Of the river of Gad, i. e. of the river which lay in the tribe of Gad, or upon the borders of Gad and Ruben, which was called Arnon, Deut. ii 36. Toward Jazer, or, near Jazer, which also was upon the river Arnon.

6 Then they came to Gilead, and to the land of Tahtim-hodshi, and they came to Dan-jaan, and about to Zidon.

To Gilead, to Mount Gilead, which lay northward from Tahtim-hodshi, a place so called. Or, the land lately gained, i.e. not given by Joshua, but taken lately from the Hagganites by Saul: which was near Gilead, 1 Chron. v. 10. Dan-jaan, i.e. probably the famous city of Dan, as it is called, Josh. xix. 47. Judg. xviii. 7, for this was in the northern border of the land and in the way from Gilead to Zidon. About to Zidon, i.e. to the city and territory of Zidon, but not into it because it was not in the power and possession of the Israelites and the like is to be thought concerning Tyre, and the cities which the Hivites and Canaanites yet possessed in the neighbourhood of Tyre and Sidon.

7 And came to the strong hold of Tyre, and to all the cities of the Hivites, and of the Canaanites, and they went out to the south of Judah, even to Beer-sheba.

8 So when they had gone through all the land, they came to Jerusalem at the end of nine months and twenty days.

9 And Joab gave up the sum of the number of the people unto the king, and there were in Israel eight hundred thousand valiant men that drew the sword, and the men of Judah were five hundred thousand men.

Eight hundred thousand. Object. In 1 Chron. xxi. 5 they are numbered 1,100,000. Answer. The sum here expressed is only of such as were not in the ordinary and settled military service upon the king, which being 210,000 for every year, as is largely related, 1 Chron. xxviii, amounts to 2,100,000 which either with their several commanders or with the soldiers placed in several garrisons might very well amount to 300,000. Or 250,000 may pass in such accounts for 300,000, it being frequent in such great sums to neglect a smaller number. But in the Book of the Chronicles which was to gather up the fragments scattered in the former books both sorts are put together, and so they amount to 1,100,000. Free hundred thousand. In 1 Chron. xxi. 5 but 170,000. Answer. Either 1. They were exactly 170,000 more called 500,000 in a round sum, as is usual in Scripture and other authors. Or, 2. The number 500,000 is used in other senses in other scriptures about the same or less included, which are there excluded. Or, 3. They were 300,000 when Joab gave up the number to the king, but afterwards that they were but 170,000, 30,000 being slain by the plague in the tribe of Judah, which being David's own tribe, it was but just and fit it should suffer more than the rest for this sin. And though it be true that Joab gave up the sum before the plague began yet the sacred penman of the Book of Chronicles thought fit to make a deduction of them who had been swept away by the plague, that the judgment of God therein might be observed. Or, 4. There are included here the 30,000 which belonged to the thirty colonels mentioned chap. xxiii. who are excluded 1 Chron. xxi. although it be questionable whether those were all of the tribe of Judah.

10 ¶ And David's heart smote him after that he had numbered the people. And David said unto the Lord, 'I have sinned greatly in that I have done, and now, I beseech thee O LORD, take away the iniquity of thy servant, for I have done very foolishly.'

David's heart smote him, his conscience distressed him, and he was heartily sorry for it. And the occasion of his repentance was God's message by the prophet Gad, as it here follows, ver. 11. For when, &c. as formerly God's message by Nathan had the same effect, 2 Sam. xii. both which passages are noted to show how necessary the further and repeated supplies of God's grace are, even to the best of men, to raise them when they fall into sin. For I have done very foolishly, because I am sensible of my sin and folly, as it is more fully expressed, Psal. h. 5, 6. Or, as this particle is oft used.

11 For when David was up in the morning, the word of the Lord came unto the prophet Gad, David's seer, saying,

David's seer, so called, because he was a prophet (for such were called seers, 1 Sam. ix. 9.) now and at other times employed by God to reveal his mind and will to David. See 1 Sam. xxii. 5, 1 Chron. xxi. 29.

12 Go and say unto David, Thus saith the Lord, I offer thee three things, choose thee one of them, that I may do it unto thee.

13 So Gad came to David, and told him, and said unto him, Shall seven years of famine come unto thee in thy land? or wilt thou flee three months before thine enemies, while they pursue thee? or that there be three days' pestilence in thy land? now advise, and see what answer I shall return to him that sent me.

Seven years of famine. Object. In 1 Chron. xxi. 12, it is only three years of famine. Answer. Some conceive that here was an error in the transcriber and that the true reading is three years, as the LXX read it in this place, being supposed to have found it so in their copies, and that otherwise they durst never have presumed to make so great a change in the text. 2. In Chron. he speaks exactly of those years of famine only which came for David's sin, but here he speaks more confusedly and comprehensively, including those three years of famine sent for Saul's sin, chap. xxi. And this sin of David was committed in the year next after that, which was in a manner a year of famine, either because it was the sabbatical year, wherein they might not sow nor reap, or rather, because not being able to sow in the third year because of the excessive drought they were not capable of reaping the fourth year. And three years more being added to these four, make up the seven here mentioned. So the meaning of the word is this, As thou hast already had four years of famine, so three years more come. And that it is such a synecdochical expression frequent in Scripture because a part of the years were yet to come, even as it is used of the Israelites that they should wander in the wilderness forty years, Num. xiv. 33, when part of that time was already spent.

14 ¶ David said unto Gad, I am in a great strait: let us fall now into the hand of the Lord, for his mercies are great. And let me not fall into the hand of man.

Into the hand of the Lord to wit, his immediate stroke, which is chiefly in the pestilence, for though the sword and famine be also God's hand, yet there is also the hand of many other creatures in them. The reason of this choice was partly his experience in and confidence of God's great goodness, partly, because the other judgments, especially the sword had been more dishonourable, not only to David, but also to God, and to his people, and to the true religion, and partly, because he having sinned himself, thought it just and reasonable to choose such a plague to which he was obnoxious as against his people, whereas he had better feared for himself against sword and famine than they had. For his mercies are great, and therefore will not exceed measure in his strokes, as men will do.

15 ¶ So the Lord sent a pestilence upon Israel from the morning even to the time appointed, and there died of the people from Dan even to Beer-sheba seventy thousand men.

To the time appointed, either, 1. From morning to evening which is here called the time appointed, or, the time of the convention, or, public meeting, as this Hebrew word signifies, i.e. till the time of the evening prayer and sacrifice.

fire, when the people used more solemnly to meet together see Psal. cxi 2, Acts ii 1 Thus God mitigated his intentions, and turned three days into one, it being a thing not unusual with God to qualify his threatenings, and to take off the evil threatened sometimes wholly, as in Nineveh's case, and sometimes in part. And this God might do here upon the speedy and serious repentance of David, and of his people. Or rather, 2 From the morning, (or rather, from that morning, for the article seems to be emphatical, and to denote that very morning in which God came to David, ver 11 and that the plague did immediately ensue after God's offer and David's choice,) even to the time appointed, to wit by God i.e. for three days as God had set the time, ver 13. Object If it continued three days, how is it said that God repented him of the evil and stopped the angel in his course? ver 16. Answer This he did in the beginning of the third day, whereas otherwise it should have gone on to the end of the day. Or it may signify no more but this, At the end of the third day God gave over sinning, for then is God said (after the manner of men) to repent, when he ceaseth to proceed as before he had done. Seventy thousand men, so the number of his people, which was the matter of his pride and glorying, was diminished.

16 And when the angel stretched out his hand upon Jerusalem to destroy it, the Lord repented him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed the people, It is enough stay now thine hand. And the angel of the Lord was by the threshingplace of Araunah the Jebusite.

The angel appeared in the shape of a man with a sword in his hand 1 Chron xxi 16 to convince them more fully that this was no natural nor common plague but inflicted immediately by the hand of God. Upon Jerusalem, which he had begun to smite, and was proceeding to make a further slaughter. The Lord repented him of the evil i.e. he moderated and in part recalled his sentence of the plague's continuance for three whole days and thus he did upon David's prayer and sacrifices ver 19 appears from ver 21, though these be mentioned afterwards. Araunah called also Araunah in the Hebrew of ver 18 and Ornan 1 Chron xxi 22, such changes in the pronunciation of the names being usual in Scripture.

17 And David spake unto the Lord when he saw the angel that smote the people and said Lo, I have sinned and I have done wickedly but these sheep, what have they done? let thine hand, I pray thee be against me, and against my father's house.

Let thine hand be against me, wherein David shows his justice, and piety, and chiefly care of his people, and that he was a type of Christ. Against my father's house, against my nearest relations who probably either put David upon, or encouraged him in this action because they were no less vain glorious than David. And the honour which they thought would come to David thereby would also redound to them, or at least they did not use their utmost endeavours to dissuade David from it as they should have done and therefore were involved in David's guilt. However it was but fit and reasonable that his family which did partake of his honour and happiness should also partake in his suffering, rather than those who were less related to him. Nor doth David abjectly declare that they may suffer, but only speaks comparatively and with a way of supposition and with reference to God's judgment.

18 And God came that day to David, and said unto him, Go up, rear an altar unto the Lord in the threshingfloor of Araunah the Jebusite.

God came that day to David by command from God, ver 19, 1 Chron xxi 18. Go up to Mount Moriah. In the threshing floor of Araunah the Jebusite, which place God appointed for this work, partly in grace and condescension to and compliance with David's fear of going to Gibeon, which is expressed 1 Chron xxi 29, 30, partly, because this was the place where God by his angel appeared in a threatening posture, where therefore it was meet he should be appeased, and partly because God would hereby signify the translation of the tabernacle from Gibeon hither, and the refection of the temple here, 2 Chron iii 1.

19 And David, according to the saying of God, went up as the Lord commanded.

20 And Araunah looked, and saw the king and his servants coming on toward him and Araunah went out, and bowed himself before the king on his face upon the ground.

21 And Araunah said, Wherefore is my lord the king come to his servant? And David said, To buy the threshingfloor of thee, to build an altar unto the Lord, that the plague may be stayed from the people.

Wherefore is my lord the king come to his servant? wherefore doth the king do me this honour, and give himself the trouble of coming to me?

22 And Araunah said unto David, Let my lord the king take and offer up what seemeth good unto him. behold, here be oxen for burnt sacrifice, and threshing instruments and other instruments of the oxen for wood.

Here be oxen, which were employed by him in his present work which was threshing, 1 Chron xxi 20. See the notes on Deut xxi 4.

23 All these things did Araunah; as a king gave unto the king. And Araunah said unto the king, The Lord thy God accept thee.

In calling the particle as being understood, as it is in the Hebrew i.e. with a royal bounty. Or, Araunah the king as he might be called either because he was king of the Jebusites before David took their city or because he was the son and heir of that king. These things did Araunah give, he not only offered, but actually gave them i.e. he actually resigned his right and property in them unto David, for so he did, and David by his refusal returned it to Araunah again. The Lord thy God accept thee, he was a Jebusite by nation, but a hearty proselyte which made him so liberal in his offers to God's service and the common good of God's people.

24 And the king said unto Araunah, Nay, but I will surely buy it of thee at a price: neither will I offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God of that which doth cost me nothing. So David bought the threshingfloor and the oxen for fifty shekels of silver.

Of that which doth cost me nothing, for this would be both dishonourable to God, as if I thought him not worthy of costly sacrifice, and a disparagement to myself, as it were unable and unwilling to offer a sacrifice of my goods, and unsatisfactory to the command of God who obligeth all offenders, and me in a particular manner to offer sacrifice of their own estate. For fifty shekels of silver. Object In 1 Chron xxi 25, he is said to give for the place six hundred shekels of gold by weight. Answer These two places may be fairly reconciled divers ways. First Here he speaks of the price paid for the threshing-floor, the oxen, and instruments, and there for the whole place, including on which the temple and its courts were built which certainly was very much larger than this threshing floor, and probably had Araunah's house, if not some others now built upon it. Secondly, The shekels here may be of gold and in 1 Chron xxi of silver and so the proportion of gold to silver being that of twelve to one fifty shekels of gold make six hundred shekels of silver. And where it may be objected, that on the contrary these fifty shekels was said to be of silver, and the six hundred of gold, this they answer by another translation of the words. For they render this place thus, agreeably enough to the words and the order of the Hebrew text, he bought them for silver, (or, for money, as the Hebrew word cheseph oft signifies, and particularly in this very history in the parallel place, 1 Chron. xxi. 24, where David desires to buy it for the full price, or for full money, where in the Hebrew it is for full silver;) even for fifty shekels, to wit, of gold, as it is expressed 1 Chron. xxi. 25, which place they render thus, and that consonantly to the Hebrew, he gave shekels of gold of the value (for the Hebrew word mishkal signifies value as well as weight, as was before noted on 2 Sam. xii. 30) of six hundred shekels, to wit, of silver. And this may now be added in the Book of the Chronicles, lest it should be thought that the fifty shekels here mentioned were but common and silver shekels. Thirdly, There is a considerable difference in the phrase in these two places: here he mentions for what David bought it, or what he was obliged to give for it, and in Chronicles what he actually gave for it, to wit, of his royal bounty, over and besides the full price of it, which was decent and convenient for so great a king, and especially upon so great an occasion, and to him who had given him such a noble example.

25 And David built there an altar unto the Lord, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings. So the Lord was entreated for the land, and the plague was stayed from Israel.

David built there an altar unto the Lord, which he might well do, having God's command for it, and the place being sanctified by God's special presence in and by the angel. Offered burnt offerings, to make atonement for his sins. And peace offerings, to praise God for his gracious manifestation of himself. The Lord was entreated for the land, as appears both by fire from heaven, which consumed the sacrifice, as was usual in such cases, and by the speedy cessation of the plague.

THE FIRST BOOK OF ## THE KINGS,

COMMONLY CALLED

THE THIRD BOOK OF THE KINGS.

THE ARGUMENT

THESE two Books called Of the Kings because they treat of the Kings of Judah and Israel, were written by the prophets or holy men of God, living in or near their several times, and by some one of them digested into this order. But whoever was the penman, that these are a part of those Holy Scriptures which were Divinely inspired is evidently evident first from the concurring testimony of the whole Jewish church in all ages to whom were committed the oracles of God Rom. iii. 2 who also did faithfully discharge their duty in preserving and delivering them entirely and truly to their posterity from time to time as plainly appears, because Christ and his apostles who reproved them severely for their several sins never taxed them with this fault of depraving the Holy Scriptures of the Old Testament. Secondly Because this is manifest concerning divers parts of them which were taken out of the records of the prophets Nathan, Ahijah and Iddo, 2 Chron. ix. 29 and out of the prophecies of Isaiah and Jeremiah: and the rest doubtless were of the same nature. Thirdly, From the approbation of these books by the New Testament, both generally as 2 Tim. iii. 16, All Scripture is given by inspiration from God &c., which is affirmed concerning all those Holy Scriptures which Timothy had known from a child, ver. 1, and therefore must necessarily be meant of all the books of the Old Testament, which the Jews owned for canonical Scripture, and particularly Rom. xi. 2, &c. where a passage out of these books is quoted and owned as a part of the Holy Scripture, called the Scripture by way of eminency.

CHAP. I

Adonijah usurpeth the kingdom, 5—10. By the counsel of Nathan to Bath-sheba, and then petition to David he renounceth his oath of making Solomon king after him. 11—31. He by David's appointment is anointed king the people triumph, 32—40. Adonijah hearing this his servants flee, and himself fleeth to the horns of the altar, is pardoned by Solomon, and sent to his own house. 41—43.

NOW king David was old and † stricken in years, and they covered him with cloths, but he gat no heat.

Stricken in years, being in the end of his seventieth year. He gat no heat, which is not strange in a person not only of so great an age, but also who had been exercised with so many hardships in war, and with such tormenting cares and fears and sorrows, for his own sins, (as divers of his Psalms witness) and for the sins and miseries of his children and people. See Prov. xii. 22. Besides, this might be from the nature of his disease, or bodily distemper.

2 Wherefore his servants said unto him, † Let there be sought for my lord the king † a young virgin, and let her stand before the king, and let her † cherish him, and let her lie in thy bosom, that my lord the king may get heat.

His servants his physicians. A young virgin whose natural heat is fresh and wholesome, and not impaired with leaching or breeding of children. The same counsel doth Galen give for the cure of some cold and dry distempers. Let her stand before the king, i. e. minister unto him, or wait upon him, (as this phrase is oft used) in his sickness, as occasion requires. Let her lie in thy bosom, as his wife or concubine, for that she was so much importuned by divers arguments. First Otherwise this had been a wicked counsel and course, which therefore neither his servants durst have prescribed, nor would David have used, except ally being now in a dying condition. And seeing this as easily prevented by his taking her for his concubine which then was esteemed allowable, it is absurd to think that he would not choose the safer way. Secondly That passage, ver 4, but the king knew her not implies that the king might have had carnal knowledge of her without sin or scandal. Thirdly, It appears from this phrase of lying in his bosom, which is every where in Scripture mentioned as the privilege of a wife and concubine, as Gen xvi 5, Deut xii 6, 2 Sam xli. 8, Mic vii 5. Fourthly, This made Adonijah's crime, in desiring her to wife so heinous in Solomon's account because he wisely saw that by marrying the king's wife he designed to revive his pretence to the kingdom at least in case of Solomon's death which pretence had been ridiculous, if she had been only the king's handmaid.

3 So they sought for a fair damsel throughout all the coasts of Israel, and found Abishag a Shunammite, and brought her to the king.

A fair damsel whose beauty might engage his affections and refresh his spirits and invite him to those embraces which might communicate some of her natural heat to him as was designed. A Shunammite, of the city of Shunem in Issachar, Josh xix 18. See 2 Kings iv 8.

4 And the damsel was very fair, and cherished the king, and ministered to him: but the king knew her not.

Which is mentioned to note the continuance and progress of the king's malady and the ground of Adonijah's rebellion, and of his following request chap. ii 17.

5 ¶ Then Adonijah the son of Haggith exalted himself, saying, I will be king: and he prepared him chariots and horsemen, and fifty men to run before him.

Then, upon notice of the desperation of the king's disease, and the approach of his death Adonijah the son of Haggith (see 2 Sam iii 1) exalted himself entertained high thoughts and designs. I will be king is the right of the kingdom is mine ver 1 so I will now take possession of it. I let Solomon attempt to deprive me of it. He prepared him chariots and horsemen, and fifty men to run before him, as Absalom had done upon the like occasion, 2 Sam xv 1. such ill use did he make of that example, that he committed the same wickedness which he had done, and yet found not the same disappointment and destruction which he brought upon himself.

6 And his father had not displeased him at any time in saying, Why hast thou done so? and he also was a very goodly man: and his mother bare him after Absalom.

His father had not displeased him at any time this is noted as David's great error and the occasion of Adonijah's presumption. Why hast thou done so? he neither restrained him from nor reproved him for his misdeeds, which was a great sin against that plain law, Lev xix 17 and severely punished in him which David was not ignorant of except Adonijah's error were small or concealed from David. He also this phrase relates either first to Absalom but following who also was a goodly man. Or father, secondly to what he said before to signify that this was a second ground of his confidence, because his great comeliness made him unduly in the people's eyes as his father's indulgence was the first. After Absalom, ver 3, 4.

7 And he conferred with Joab the son of Zeruiah, and with Abiathar the priest, and they following Adonijah helped him.

Either because they thought the right of the crown was his, or rather from secret envy because they perceived themselves neglected by David and possibly by Solomon too, and from carnal policy, that they might secure and advance their own interest which they saw to be in manifest danger.

8 But Zadok the priest, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and Nathan the prophet, and Shimei, and Rei, and the mighty men which belonged to David, were not with Adonijah.

His great and famous commanders, and the guards and soldiers under them.

9 And Adonijah slew sheep and oxen and fat cattle by the stone of Zoheleth, which is by Beth-el, and called all his brethren the king's sons, and all the men of Judah the king's servants.

Adonijah slew sheep and oxen and fat cattle, partly for a sacrifice, and partly for feasts, that he might engage God, to be on his side and draw a multitude of people after him. By Beth-el, the fountain of Rogel, or, of the fuller, a place near to Jerusalem. See Josh. xv 7. xvi 16, 2 Sam xvi 17. Called all his brethren the king's sons; either because he knew they loved and were disaffected with Solomon and therefore would favour him, or that he might engage them so to do. All the men of Judah the king's servants, except these here excepted, ver 10.

10 But Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah, and the mighty men, and Solomon his brother, he called not.

Because he knew they favoured Solomon his competitor.

11 ¶ Wherefore Nathan spake unto Bath-sheba the mother of Solomon, saying, Hast thou not heard that Adonijah the son of Haggith doth reign, and David our lord knoweth it not?

Nathan was prompted to this both by his duty as faithful minister of God declared to him and by his love to David concerning Solomon's succession, 2 Sam vii 13, 1 Chron xxi 8. 9. and by his prudence as knowing that Adonijah hated him for being the principal instrument of Solomon's advancement. Bath-sheba being retired and private in her apartment was yet ignorant of what was done abroad and she was likely to be most zealous in the cause and most prevalent with David. David our lord knoweth it not, so far is he from consenting to it that thou mayst fear or others think that they have not yet acquainted him with it.

12 Now therefore come, let me, I pray thee, give thee counsel that thou mayest save thine own life, and the life of thy son Solomon.

For he will never reckon himself safe till his competitor and his friends be taken out of the way.

13 Go and get thee in unto king David and say unto him, Didst not thou, my lord O king, swear unto thine handmaid saying, Assuredly Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne? why then doth Adonijah reign?

Didst not thou swear? Thou didst swear, which David himself owneth ver 30, which probably he did to satisfy Bath-sheba's doubts and fit us to it and to oblige himself to a compliance with the Divine will declared about it. See chap. ii 15, 1 Chron xxxiii 5. Thine handmaid, so she calleth herself to testify her reverence and submission to him not only as her husband but as her king. He shall sit upon my throne, another expression of the same thing, to signify David's sincerity and fidelity in his swearing, which adds to his obligation. Why then doth Adonijah reign? how comes this to pass or why dost thou suffer it?

14 Behold, while thou yet talkest there with the king, I also will come in after thee, and I confirm thy words.

15 ¶ And Bath-sheba went in unto the king into the chamber, and the king was very old; and Abishag the Shunammite ministered unto the king.

16 And Bath-sheba bowed, and did obeisance unto the king. And the king said, <sup>11th. What to thee?</sup> What wouldest thou?

17 And she said unto him, My lord, <sup>1st. 14. 70</sup> thou swarest by the Lord thy God unto these handmaid, saying, Assuredly Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne.

<sup>11th. What to thee?</sup> Thou swarest by the Lord thy God to whom thou art highly obliged whose name thou justly fearest and honour-est, and therefore thou wilt not pollute it by perjury, but make conscience of thy oath.

18 And now, behold, Adonijah reigneth, and now, my lord the king, thou knowest it not.

This she adds partly lest she should seem to accuse the king of inconstancy and perfidiousness, and partly to aggravate Adonijah's crime, from that gross neglect and contempt of the king which did accompany it.

19 And he hath slain oxen and fat cattle and sheep in abundance and hath called all the sons of the king, and Abiathar the priest and Joab the captain of the host, but Solomon thy servant hath he not called.

Who is not so presumptuous as Adonijah usurping the throne before his time, but carries himself modestly and submissively, as thy son, and servant and subject.

20 And thou, my lord, O king, the eyes of all Israel are upon thee, that thou shouldst tell them who shall sit on the throne of my lord the king after him.

The eyes of all Israel are upon thee, the generality of the people are in suspense whether Adonijah's practices be with thy consent or no and wait for thy sentence which they will readily embrace. Who shall sit upon the throne of my lord the king, she speaks only in general as owning the king's prerogative to give the crown to which of his sons he pleased, if he had not restrained him (it by his oath to Solomon) after him, i. e. after thy death whereby she taxeth Adonijah's ambition, who usurped the crown whilst his father lived.

21 Otherwise it shall come to pass, when my lord the king shall sleep with his fathers, that I and my son Solomon shall be counted offenders.

<sup>11th. What to thee?</sup> Shall sleep with his fathers i. e. die as his father did. See Gen. xlii. 30. I and my son Solomon shall be counted offenders, we shall be punished with death as malefactors as guilty of practicing against the right heir of the crown and transferring the kingdom to Solomon and covering our ambitious designs with a pretence of religion.

22 And, lo, while she yet talked with the king, Nathan the prophet also came in.

To discourse with the king, which made it fit for her to withdraw, as she did, ver. 24.

23 And they told the king, saying, Behold Nathan the prophet. And when he was come in before the king, he bowed himself before the king with his face to the ground.

24 And Nathan said, My lord, O king, hast thou said, Adonijah shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne?

Is this done by thy consent without which it seems strange that he durst attempt it.

25 For he is gone down this day, and hath slain oxen and fat cattle and sheep in abundance, and hath called all the king's sons, and the captains of the host, and Abiathar the priest, and, behold, they eat and drink before him, and say, <sup>11th. Let him add. What to thee?</sup> God save king Adonijah.

26 But me, even me thy servant, and Zadok the priest, and Benaiah the son of Jehonada, and thy servant Solomon, hath he not called.

Even me thy servant, whom he knew to be acquainted with thy mind, and with the mind of God in this matter, and therefore his neglect of me herein gives me cause to suspect that this is done without thy privity, which now I come to know.

27 Is this thing done by my lord the king, and thou hast not shewed it unto thy servant, who should sit on the throne of my lord the king after him?

Thou hast not shewed it unto thy servant, who, having been an instrument in delivering God's message to thee concerning thy successor, might reasonably expect that if the king had changed his mind or God had since made some revelation contrary to the former, thou wouldst have acquainted me with it as being both a prophet of the Lord, and one whom thou hast always found faithful to thee and to whom thou hast used to communicate thy secret counsels.

28 Then king David answered and said, Call me Bath-sheba. And she came into the king's presence, and stood before the king.

Call me Bath-sheba, who upon Nathan's approach to the king, had modestly withdrawn herself, either in another room or into another part of this room, more remote from the bed upon which David lay.

29 And the king swore, and said, <sup>1st. 14. 49</sup> As the Lord liveth that hath redeemed my soul out of all distress, 30 I even as I swore unto thee by the Lord God of Israel, saying, Assuredly Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne in my stead, even so will I certainly do this day.

31 Then Bath-sheba bowed with her face to the earth, and did reverence to the king and said, Let thy lord king David live for ever.

For a long time, as that word is oft used in chap. ii. 1. David said, Though I desire thy oath may be kept and the right of succession confirmed to my son, yet I am far from this sin, after thy death for his advancement, and shall rather rejoice, if it were possible for thee to live and enjoy the crown for ever.

32 And king David said, Call me Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehonada. And they came before the king.

33 The king also said unto them, Take with you the servants of your lord, and cause Solomon my son to ride upon mine own mule, and bring him down to Gihon.

The servants of your lord, i. e. my public officers, and my mule. <sup>1st. 14. 49</sup> Ride upon mine own mule, as a token that the royal dignity is transferred upon Solomon and that by my consent. Compare Gen. xli. 43, Esth. vi. 8. <sup>1st. 14. 49</sup> Gihon, a river near Jerusalem, on the west side, as it is called from 2 Chron. xxxii. 30 as Lu. xiv. 28 where Adonijah was inaugurated, was on the east side. Thus David chose, either as remote from Adonijah and his company that so the people might go thither, and be there without fear of insults or bloodshed, or to show that Solomon was chosen king in opposition to Adonijah, or because this was a place of great resort and fit to receive and display that numerous company, which he knew would follow Solomon thither, or that he might lead thence return and make the more magnificent entry into the city.

34 And let Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet <sup>a</sup>anoint him there king over Israel: and blow ye with the trumpet, and say, God save king Solomon

Anoint him there king, as they used to do where there was any thing new, or doubtful, or extraordinary in the succession, as 1 Sam x 1, xvi 12, 13, 1 Kings xiv 13, 16 2 Kings ix 3 And this anction signified both the designation of the persons to the office, and the gifts and graces which were necessary for their office and which they, seeking them sincerely from God, might expect to receive Blow ye with the trumpet, to make the action more solemn and glorious, and public

35 Then ye shall come up after him that he may come and sit upon my throne, for he shall be king in my stead: and I have appointed him to be ruler over Israel and over Judah

King in my stead, my deputy and vice king whilst I live, and absolutely king when I die Or if David and Solomon were joint kings, it is no more, than was afterwards frequent at Rome: where the father and son or two other persons were not seldom joint emperors I have appointed, and that by Divine direction And over Judah this is added partly as being the most eminent and royal tribe: it being frequent together with the general distinction to mention one of the most eminent particulars, as 1 Kings xi 1 Psal xviii title, Mark xvi 7 and partly lest the race of Judah, who were in a special manner invited by Adonijah, see 9, might think themselves exempted from his jurisdiction

36 And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada answered the king, and said Amen: the Lord God of my lord the king say so too

Amen which was both an approbation of the king's fact and a protestation of his allegiance to the new king and a petition to God to ratify and confirm it The Lord God of my lord the king say so too, the Lord establish Solomon's throne in place of Adonijah and all his other enemies

37 As the Lord hath been with my lord the king, even so be he with Solomon: and make his throne greater than the throne of my lord king David

Which petition albeit it might have offended in unworthy vain glories, and envious flattery he knew would be welcome to so pious and generous a man as David was: and to one so kind and indulgent to his children

38 So Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and the Cherethites, and the Pelethites, went down, and caused Solomon to ride upon king David's mule, and brought him to Gihon

39 And Zadok the priest took an horn of oil out of the tabernacle, and <sup>a</sup>anointed Solomon: And they blew the trumpet, and all the people said God save king Solomon

Zadok the priest for though he was not the high priest he might do the office especially having the direction of the prophet Nathan see 34 Out of the tabernacle, that which David had erected for the ark 2 Sam vi 17 in which oil was kept for divers sacred uses for Moses's tabernacle was at Gihon 1 Chron xvi 39 xvi 29 which was too remote for the present occasion, which required all possible expedition

40 And all the people came up after him, and the people piped with pipes, and rejoiced with great joy: so that the earth rent with the sound of them

And the people came up after him when a flock of <sup>a</sup>thither in abundance some out of curiosity to see so excellent a person others to do their duty and other in expectation of some advantage by their cheerful attendance upon the new king Rejoiced with great joy, partly because this would certainly prevent civil wars, under which they had so lately and so sorely groaned, and which they had reason to fear from Adonijah's pretence to the crown, and the assistance he might have from the great and famous general Joab, and from Abiathar the high priest, and from others who were or might easily be engaged for him, if David had not ended the controversy in his lifetime, and partly because of the singular wisdom and virtue for which Solomon was even then famous See chap ii 6, 9 The earth rent, an hyperbolical expression, yet even solid bodys have been oft broken and rent by great sounds

41 ¶ And Adonijah and all the guests that were with him heard it as they had made an end of eating: And when Joab heard the sound of the trumpet, he said, Wherefore is this noise of the city being in an uproar?

As they had made an end of eating, for Nathan having given wise counsel took all due care to expedite the execution of it that it might not be spoiled by delays as frequently happens

42 And while he yet spake behold, Jonathan the son of Abiathar the priest came: and Adonijah said unto him, Come in for thou art a valiant man, and bringest good tidings

Jonathan it seems was left at Jerusalem for a spy, as he had formerly been under Absalom Thou art a valiant man or a man of worth as this Hebrew word is used Prov xii 4 and therefore a happy man, and hast good news for thyself and us Compare 2 Sam xviii 27

43 And Jonathan answered and said to Adonijah: Verily our lord king David hath made Solomon king

Verily, or but or my bet i e the matter is not as thou expectedst but quite contrary

44 And the king hath sent with him Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada: and the Cherethites, and the Pelethites, and they have caused him to ride upon the king's mule

45 And Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet have anointed him king in Gihon: and they are come up from thence rejoicing, so that the city rang again: This is the noise that ye have heard

46 And also Solomon sitteth on the throne of the kingdom

Is put into actual possession of the kingdom

47 And moreover the king's servants came to bless our lord king David, saying, God make the name of Solomon better than thy name, and make his throne greater than thy throne: And the king bowed himself upon the bed

To bless our lord king David, to praise and thank him for his great and good care in leaving them in the hand of so excellent a successor, under whom they might expect peace and all prosperity, and to congratulate with him for God's great mercy to him in giving him such a son and successor: and that his eyes had now seen the actual accomplishment of God's promise made to him concerning this thing The king bowed himself upon the bed, adorning himself for this great mercy, and thereby declaring his hearty approbation and consent to this action Compare 1 Chron 31

48 And also thus said the king, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, which hath given one to sit on my throne this day, mine eyes even seeing it

49 And all the guests that were with Adonijah were afraid, and rose up, and went every man his way

1 e. The way to his own house, lest they should be discovered and slain.

50 ¶ And Adonijah feared because of Solomon, and arose, and went, and caught hold on the horns of the altar.

Father that which was at Gibeon as appears from 1 Chron. xvi. 39, 2 Chron. i. 8, and was made with four horns, Exod. xxxviii. 2, to which the sacrifices were bound, Psal. cxviii. 27. Or rather, that which David had lately set up in the threshing-floor of Araunah, which doubtless was made after the same form as that at Gibeon, for, first, this was next at hand. Secondly, The altar only is mentioned here, whereas in Joab's case there is mention of the tabernacle and altar both, chap. ii. 28, 29 which seems to be noted to distinguish the two altars, for Adonijah being the king's son, he might safely go to Araunah's altar and the people would not be forward to seize upon him, or bring him to justice but Joab truly thought it was not safe for him to venture himself there, and therefore he fled to Gibeon, as a place more remote from Jerusalem. Either he fled, either to implore God's mercy, or rather to avoid Solomon's rage, supposing that his reverence to that sacred place would not permit him to pollute it with his brother's blood, or that the consideration of God's grace and mercy which himself needed and begged of God in pardoning his offences, and accepting the sacrifices which he should offer there, would engage and dispose him to show mercy to his offending and now penitent brother or that his piety would not allow him violently to pluck him as it were out of the arms of God into which he had put himself. And for these or such like reasons the altar was esteemed a kind of sanctuary or place of refuge not only among the Gentiles, but also among the Hebrews though it be not called by that name, as may be gathered from Exod. xxi. 14, 1 Kings ii. 28.

51 And it was told Solomon, saying Behold, Adonijah hath king Solomon for, lo he hath caught hold on the horns of the altar saying, Let king Solomon swear unto me to day that he will not slay his servant with the sword.

He owns Solomon as his king and himself as his servant and subject, and being sensible of his great guilt and of the jealousy which kings have of their competitors could not be satisfied without Solomon's oath.

52 And Solomon said, If he will shew himself a worthy man, there shall not an hair of him fall to the earth but if wickedness shall be found in him, he shall die.

A worthy man. Heb. a man of strength or courage, for it requires great strength of mind and resolution to resist all temptations of vice, and to do virtuously. There shall not an hair of him fall to the earth. Herein Solomon manifests his clemency and brotherly affection and withal his prudence in sparing him, when, being his brother and his eldest brother too, it would have been malicious to have slain him. If wickedness shall be found in him, not only if he shall be guilty of some capital crime, but of any great wickedness or evil design, for in this pardon was Solomon's snare, so he might justly qualify it as he pleased.

53 So king Solomon sent, and they brought him down from the altar. And he came and bowed himself to king Solomon and Solomon said unto him, Go to thine house.

Lead a private or retired and quiet life, without noise and numerous attendants and meddle not with the affairs of the court and kingdom.

CHAP. II.

David lying on his death-bed, giveth charge to Solomon of a religious life, 1-4. Of Joab, Bazzai, and Shimei 5-9. He doeth Solomon succedeth 10-12. Adonijah suing for Abiathar, is put to death, 13-25. Abiathar is deprived of the priesthood 26-27. Joab fleeing to the horns of the altar is slain there, 28-34. Benaiah is put in Joab's room, and Zadok to Abiathar's, 35. Shimei confined to Jerusalem, going thence to Gath is put to death, 36-46.

NOW the days of David drew nigh that he should die, and he charged Solomon his son, saying,

2 ¶ I go the way of all the earth: he thou strong therefore, and shew thyself a man.

Of all the earth, i. e. of all men upon the earth. Compare Josh. xxiii. 14. Heb. ix. 27. Be thou strong to govern his people according to the law of God, as it here follows, requires great fortitude or strength of mind: to trim himself against the subtle devices and evasions of some against the statutes and importunities of others, against terrors and dangers from revengeful men, and especially against himself and his own weakness, partiality, through fear or favour and against all those evil thoughts and passions to which the temptations of their great wealth and glory and uncontrollable power naturally expose them. See Prov. xvi. 32. Shew thyself a man, in manly wisdom and courage and constancy, though thou art but young in years. 1 Chron. xiii. 5.

3 And keep the charge of the Lord thy God to walk in his ways, to keep his statutes and his commandments, and his judgments, and his testimonies, as it is written in the law of Moses, that thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest and whithersoever thou turnest thyself.

The charge of the Lord thy God, i. e. what God hath charged or commanded thee to do the act him, put for the object as is usual. In the law of Moses, which the prince was enjoined to transcribe and read. D. of xviii. 18, that he might govern his own and his people's actions by it. That thou mayest prosper, or, behave thyself prudently, for the word signifies both. Hereby he intimates that religion is the truest reason of state and that all true wisdom and good success depends upon piety.

4 That the Lord may continue his word which he spake concerning me, saying, If thy children take heed to their way to walk before me in truth with all their heart and with all their soul, there shall not fail thee (said he) a man on the throne of Israel.

Confirm his word, i. e. fulfil his promise, the condition upon which it was suspended being performed. Take heed to thy ways, i. e. diligently observe all their actions, to order them according to God's word. To walk before me to live as those that have God before their eyes, and endeavour to approve themselves to him. In truth, not only in presence and show, but truly and sincerely. With all their heart and with all their soul, i. e. universally, freely and fervently. There shall not fail thee a man on the throne of Israel, the succession shall be continued in thy line without any interruption.

5 Moreover thou knowest also what Joab the son of Zeruiah did to me, and what he did to the two captains of the hosts of Israel, unto Abner the son of Neri, and unto Amasa the son of Jether, whom he slew, and shed the blood of war in peace, and put the blood of war upon his girdle that was about his loins, and in his shoes that were on his feet.

And to me, i. e. against me, rather, first directly and immediately, how insolently and impudently he hath carried himself towards me from time to time in plunging upon my authority and commands when they thwarted his humour or interest, provoking my spirit by his words and actions. See 2 Sam. iii. 39, xix. 7. Or secondly indirectly, in what he did against Abner and Amasa, whose death was a great injury to David, as it was a breach of his laws and peace, a contempt of his person and government, a pernicious example to others of his subjects upon the like occasions; a great scandal and dishonour to him, as if Job had been only David's instrument, to effect what he secretly desired and designed, whereby the hearts of his people either were or might have been alienated from him, and inflamed against him and the wounds which were well nigh-healed might have been widened again, and made to bleed afresh. And what he did, or, even, the following branches being added as an explication of the foregoing to show what and how he acted towards or against David. Or, and particularly, as his other miscarriages, so these especially. Shed the blood of war in peace, he slew them as if they had been in the state and act of war, when there was not only a cessation of arms but also a treaty and agreement of peace of which also they were the great promoters. Upon his girdle that was about his loins, and in his shoes that were on his feet. This is added to note his impudence and impetuosity that although by his perfidious manner of killing them when he pretended to embrace them he stained his own garments with their blood yet he was not ashamed of it but gloried in it and marched boldly along with the army with the same girdle and shoes which were sprinkled with their blood. See 2 Sam. xx. 10.

6 Do therefore according to thy wisdom and let not his hoar head go down to the grave in peace.

According to thy wisdom, i.e. what in reason and justice thou seest fit. For though I was forced to forbear him when it was in my power to punish him yet I never forgave him, and therefore do thou wisely and severely examine all his actions and particularly this last rebellion and punish him according to his demerits. Let not his hoar head go down to the grave in peace, though he be old having been the general of the army forty years yet do not suffer him to die a natural death but cut him off by the sword of justice.

7 But shew kindness unto the sons of Buziur the Gileadite and let them be of those that eat at thy table for so they came to me when I fled because of Absalom thy brother.

Quest. Why doth he not require the like kindness to Micaphoboth the son of his dear Jonathan? Answer Either he and his were now extinct or by then after miscarriages and forfeited his favour. For so, i.e. with such kindness order as I cannot express (as the particle so is elsewhere used) I commend thee to show to them. They, i.e. Buziur and his sons, for though Buziur only be mentioned 2 Sam. xix. 27 yet his sons doubtless were instrumental in the business, especially Chibriah, 2 Sam. xix. 37, 38.

8 And behold thou hast with thee Shimei the son of Gera, a Benjamite of Bahurim, which cursed me with a grievous curse in the day when I went to Mahanaim; but he came down to meet me at Jordan, and I swear to him by the Lord, saying, I will not put thee to death with the sword.

With thee, i.e. in thy power, as that phrase is oft used. Cursed me with a grievous curse, or reproached me with bitter reproaches. 2 Sam. xvi. 7, 8. which David could not but deeply resent in him then, as it was an affliction sent from God he justly submitted to it. I will not put thee to death with the sword. Quest. How then could David lawfully engage Solomon to punish him for it? And did David upon his death bed bear witness against Shimei? Answer First, David was not a private person which might remit such offences without inconvenience, but a public magistrate, who by the honour and maintenance of government was obliged to punish such insolent and opprobrious speeches as the weakness of his arms had not then engaged him to pass by. Otherwise it appears from divers passages of the Psalms, and of this history, how free David was from a rancorous and revengeful spirit, even towards his enemies. Secondly, The following advice is not contrary to David's oath, both because this was only personal, that David would not kill him either at that time, as Abiathar desired him, or whilst he lived, and did not oblige his successors, and especially, because it was not David's mind that Shimei should be put to death for that fault, (as is evident, for then there was no need of Solomon's wisdom to find out an occasion, but only of his justice to punish him for the old crime,) but for some other competent crime, which Solomon's wisdom, narrowly prying into all his actions, would easily find out. And if the condition which Solomon imposed upon Shimei, ver. 36, 37, seem hard, it must be remembered that David only swore that he would pardon him as to life, but not that he would exempt him from all punishment at or confinement.

9 Now therefore hold him not guiltless for thou art a wise man, and knowest what thou oughtest to do unto him, but his hoar head bring thou down to the grave with blood.

Hold him not guiltless, though I have spared his life do not treat him as an innocent person neither let him go wholly unpunished. Thou art a wise man, and therefore wilt easily find out just occasions to chastise him, especially considering his perverse and wicked disposition. What thou oughtest to do unto him, how to punish him, not without just cause and yet without any violation of my oath, or reflection upon me or upon religion for my or thy sake. With blood, i.e. with the effusion of his blood, with a bloody or violent death.

10 So David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David.

Slept with his fathers, i.e. of this phrase. David xxix. 16. 1 Kings i. 21. In the city of David, i.e. in that part of Jerusalem which was called by his name, because he took it from the Jebusites. See 2 Sam. v. 7, 1 Chron. xi. 3, 2 Chron. v. 2.

11 And the days that David reigned over Israel were forty years; seven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty and three years reigned he in Jerusalem.

Seven years, more precisely, seven years and six months. 2 Sam. v. 5, but smaller sums are oft neglected in scriptural computations.

12 ¶ Then sat Solomon upon the throne of David his father, and his kingdom was established greatly.

Being settled upon him with universal consent and approbation and with the hearty affections of his people, which all wise men know to be a prince's best and surest establishment.

13 ¶ And Adonijah the son of Haggith came to Bath-sheba the mother of Solomon. And she said, Comest thou peaceably? And he said, Peaceably.

Comest thou peaceably, or with some evil design upon me or my son which she might well surmise, knowing his ambition and envy at Solomon, and his hatred against her, as the chief occasion of his dejection.

14 He said moreover, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And she said, Say on.

15 And he said, Thou knowest that the kingdom was mine, and that all Israel set their faces on me, that I should reign; howbeit the kingdom is turned about, and is become my brother's; for it was his from the Lord.

The kingdom was mine, both by birthright and by actual inauguration. It seems he could not yet forget his pretence to the crown, nor his ambition for it but continues his claim, which, it seems, Solomon did apprehend and resent though Bath-sheba did not; the wives and counsellors of the late king being reputed to inherit to the successor. See 2 Sam. xii. 8. All Israel set their faces on me; they looked upon me as their king, and David's successor, expecting that David should confirm my election. The kingdom is turned about; translated from me to him, by the vicissitude of human affairs and the changeable humour of the people. It was his turn the Lord; either, first, By God's providence so disposing David's mind, and the people's hearts. Or rather, secondly, By God's appointment and particular designation, whom he would permit to succeed, which he intended, not that he made any conscience of it, or had any regard to it; but only that by this pretence he might deceive both her and Solomon, as if he were far from any design of usurping the kingdom.

Deny me not Heb. do not turn away my face; i. e. do not send me out of thy presence and so ashamed. Compare 2 Chron. vi. 42, Psal. cxviii. 10.

17 And he said, Speak, I pray thee, unto Solomon the king, (for he will not say thee nay,) that he give me 'Abishag the Shunammite to wife.

Which though it was against a positive law of God, Lev. xviii. 7, yet either Adonijah might be ignorant of it, being a man more studious in the affairs of the court than in the book of God; or might think her not concerned in it, because David knew her not, chap. i. 1.

18 And Bath-sheba said, Well, I will speak for thee unto the king.

19 ¶ Bath-sheba therefore went unto king Solomon, to speak unto him for Adonijah. And the king rose up to meet her, and bowed himself unto her, and sat down on his throne, and caused a seat to be set for the king's mother, and she sat on his right hand.

The most honourable place next to the king. See 2 Chron. viii. 18, Neh. viii. 1, Psal. xlv. 9, Matt. xx. 21.

20 Then she said, I desire one small petition of thee, I pray thee, say me not nay. And the king said unto her, Ask on, my mother: for I will not say thee nay.

One small petition; so she esteemed it because he did not perceive his design in it, and as for that law, Lev. xviii. 7, she might apprehend that because David knew her not, it was only a contract for marriage; and therefore no impediment of her marriage to any other after his death, which also is the opinion of some of the late learned Hebrew doctors. I will not say thee nay; supposing this request be but small, as thou sayest it is, and is unlawful, or injurious to myself or others.

21 And she said, Let Abishag the Shunammite be given to Adonijah thy brother to wife.

Thy brother, by the father's side, whom brotherly affection and relation obligeth thee to gratify, at least, in small things.

22 And king Solomon answered and said unto his mother, And why dost thou ask Abishag the Shunammite for Adonijah? ask for him the kingdom also, for he is mine elder brother, even for him, and for Abiathar the priest, and for Joab the son of Zeruiah.

Ask for him the kingdom also; his design is not upon Abishag, but upon the kingdom, which, by this means, he thinks to recover; partly because she was the last king's wife, or concubine, which might strengthen his pretence to the crown, see 2 Sam. iii. 7, xii. 8, xvi. 21; and partly because by her eminent beauty, and near relation to David, she had a powerful interest in the court. Quest. Was not this too harsh a censure, and the following punishment of too severe? Answer. 1. That Adonijah had such a design is very probable, both from his temper for he was an aspiring and designing man, and highly discontented with Solomon's government, and desirous of a change; and from the nature of the thing, because he would not have made so daring and presumptuous a request, if he had not some great design in it. 2. It is very likely from the following words, though not expressed that he, and Joab, and Abiathar were engaged in some design against Solomon, and that Solomon had got information of it, and that, therefore he did not might reasonably take this for indication, and the first overt act of his treason. 3. Solomon did not pardon Adonijah's treason simply and absolutely, but upon condition that he carried himself worthily, chap. i. 22, and this being confessedly a bold and unworthy action, and arising more of dishonour and presumption than became him and crown, that the appearance and intention of an unbecoming marriage, he might justly revive his guilt, and take this occasion to execute the sentence which he formerly deserved. If it be said, that it is very improbable that Adonijah should expect to get the kingdom from Solomon who is so firmly established in it with universal applause, it may be answered, That Adonijah was not the only man that hath fed himself with vain hopes and engaged himself in high and unreasonable designs where to other wise men there was but little likelihood of success, and that he might now be only laying the foundation of what he further intended when he saw a fit time, and getting a pretence for his future attempt upon the crown, either when Solomon should lose the people's affections, as David had done; or when Solomon should die, which also Adonijah might secretly procure and hasten, and he had only Solomon's youth and tender age to trust with. All which, and many other things Solomon in his great wisdom might easily discern, and so have some secret intelligence of though it be not recorded. He is mine elder brother, he looks upon the kingdom as his by nature and birthright, and the life of millions, and therefore he may seek to recover his own and to cast me out as a usurper. but for Abiathar and for Joab, who have all a hand in the plot though he alone appears in it, which appears the more likely, because of Solomon's proceeding against them all at the same time as appears in the following vers. 4.

23 Then king Solomon swore by the Lord saying, God do so to me, and much more also, if Adonijah have not spoken this word against his own life.

Swore by the Lord, once here and again ver. 24, which he did to oblige himself more closely to it, and to prevent all intercessions for his life, by being of so great importunity to him.

24 Now therefore, as the Lord liveth, which hath established me, and set me on the throne of David my father, and who hath made me an house, as he promised, Adonijah shall be put to death this day.

That is Adonijah be my elder brother, yet I have an undoubted right and title to the crown and that from the promise and appointment of that God who disposeth of all kingdoms, and especially this of Israel to whom all people oath, and therefore Adonijah in this and his former attempt is guilty of treason against me, and of rebellion against God. He hath made me an house, either 1. Who hath given me posterity as that phrase is used 1 Kings i. 21 and else where for he Solomon most probably was born before this time, by comparing 1 Kings vi. 21. Or rather, 2. Who hath established me in the house and throne of David, which he thus expresses to signify, that God hath fulfilled in and to him that promise which he made to David, in 2 Sam. vii. 11, where the same phrase is used and where it doth not so much signify the giving of David posterity, which he had sufficiently before that time as the setting on of the crown in him and his seed. Adonijah shall be put to death this day, for he knew daily were dangerous in matters of that nature.

25 And king Solomon sent by the hand of Benaiash the son of Jehonada, and he fell upon him that he died.

For the execution of justice was not then committed to obscure persons, as now it is, but to persons of great honour and authority' See Judg viii 21, 1 Sam xxii 14, 2 Sam i 15, iv 12 He fell upon him with a sword, or other instrument of death, as below ver 32, 34, 46

26 ¶ And unto Abiathar the priest said the king, Get thee to <sup>1</sup> Anathoth, unto thine own fields, for thou art worthy of death but I will not at this time put thee to death, because thou barest the ark of the Lord God before David my father, and because thou hast been afflicted in all wherein my father was afflicted

To Anathoth city of the priests Josh xvi 18 to lead a private life there Unto thine own fields, either that put of the fields which fell to his share, or other land which he had purchased there See Jer xxvii 7 At this time he did not fully pardon him but only forbears him and reserves to him all a liberty of punishing him after wards if he saw occasion which he doth to keep him in awe that he might not dare to raise or tumult discounts or tumults among the people which otherwise he might be prone to do Because thou barest the ark of the Lord God before David my father when he thought fit to carry it out with him as 2 Sam vi 21 29, 1 Chron xv 11, 12 when he a high priest was to attend upon it Thus Solomon sheweth his respect to his sacred function Thou hast been afflicted in all wherein my father was afflicted here he moveth mercy with justice and requites Abiathar's former kindness to David, hereby teaching princes that they should not write injuries in mud, and benefits in sand or water, as they have been too oft observed to do

27 So Solomon thrust out Abiathar from being priest unto the Lord, that he might fulfil the word of the Lord which he spake concerning the house of Eli in Shiloh

From being priest unto the Lord, either from his office, or at least from the execution of his office To see <sup>1</sup> think that he was thrust from his office before David's death when Zadok was formerly made priest the high priest, in his stead 1 Chron xxix 22 But that seems to be a mistake, for although that passage immediately follow the history of what was done in the time of David's life and health when he was in a capacity of going into the public congregation, yet it manifestly belongs to another time, and was done after it for he there speaks of Solomon's being made king the second time and he was much later, but twice, once undoubtedly before this 1 Chron xxix 1 and again 1 Kings i 39 when David was bedrid and Adonijah's usurpation made a second union necessary And therefore what is said 1 Chron xxix 22 of Zadok's being made priest, was done after Abiathar's deposition and upon that occasion That he might fulfil the word of the Lord, for whatinders but Solomon might intend this not only as a punishment for his treason but also as a means to accomplish God's word? Concerning the house of Eli, i.e. concerning the translation of the priesthood from the house of Eli and of Elihu into that of Eleazar which being threatened a long years ago is now executed So Divine vengeance though sometimes it be slow is always sure

28 ¶ Then tidings came to Joab for <sup>1</sup> Joab had turned after Adonijah though he turned not after Absalom And he fled unto the tabernacle of the Lord, and caught hold on the horns of the altar

Tidings came to Joab concerning Adonijah's death, and Abiathar's deposition The tabernacle of the Lord then was at Gibeon, 1 Kings ii 1 compared with 2 Chron i 5 Caught hold on the horns of the altar at which see before, chap i 50

29 And it was told king Solomon that Joab was fled unto the tabernacle of the Lord, and, behold, he is by the altar Then Solomon sent

Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, saying, Go, fall upon him

To wit, if he will not come thence, as I foresee he will not 30 And Benaiah came to the tabernacle of the Lord, and said unto him, Thus saith the king, Come forth And he said, Nay, but I will die here And Benaiah brought the king word again, saying, Thus said Joab, and thus he answered me

Thus saith the king, Come forth that the king gave him this command, though it be not mentioned before, is evident, both from the nature of the thing, for Solomon would not pollute the altar without necessity, and from Benaiah's affirmation of it, for why should he tell a lie without a cause? and from his return to the king for new orders upon Joab's resolution not to come thence I will die here, for he supposed either that Solomon would not debase the place with his blood, or that he would spare him for his respect to it, as he had done Adonijah, or he had a superstitious conceit that his dying there might give him guilty and miserable soul some advantage

31 And the king said unto him, Do as he hath said, and fall upon him, and bury him, that thou mayest take away the innocent blood, which Joab shed, from me, and from the house of my father

Do as he hath said, either, 1 Kill him in that place, and for so doing Solomon might seem to have warrant from God, 1 Sam xxi 11 and might further design by this just severity to deter future offenders by showing that no plier nor person should protect them from the stroke of justice Or rather 2 Let him die as he is resolved, kill him, though he be there take him by violence from that place, and then kill him for 1 Sam xxi 14 doth not command the ruler to kill the murderer there but to remove him thence, to take him from the altar that he may die And seeing this might be done why should Solomon unnecessarily stain the altar with his blood? The innocent blood, i.e. both the guilt of it, which would rest upon my father and myself if it went unpunished and the scandal and reproach of it that neither this nor following ages may imagine that it was done by David's secret instigation, or with his consent

32 And the Lord shall return his blood upon his own head, who fell upon two men more righteous and better than he, and slew them with the sword, my father David not knowing thereof, to wit, Abner the son of Neri, captain of the host of Israel, and Amasa the son of Jether, captain of the host of Judah

His blood i.e. the guilt of the blood which he shed More righteous and better than he, of more ingenuous and cautious tempers abhorring from all such treacherous practices, and both of them then devoted to and employed in my service

33 Their blood shall therefore return upon the head of Joab, and upon the head of his seed for ever but upon David, and upon his seed, and upon his house, and upon his throne, shall there be peace for ever from the Lord

Upon the head of his seed for ever, either as long as he shall have a posterity, or for a long time, as that phrase is commonly used; but in and by this execution of justice upon him, and such malefactors, my throne shall be established, and God will bless me and mine with peace and prosperity

34 So Benaiah the son of Jehoiada went up, and fell upon him, and slew him and he was buried in his own house in the wilderness

Places which have but few houses and inhabitants are oft so called in Scripture, as Isa. xlii 11, Jer xxv 24, Ezek xxiv 25

35 ¶ And the king put Benaiah the son of Jehoiada in his room over the host and Zadok the priest did the king put in the room of Abiathar.

He now put him in the execution of that office to which he may seem to have been appointed before, 1 Chron xxix 22, but of that, see my notes here on ver 27

36 ¶ And the king sent and called for Shimei, and said unto him, Build thee an house in Jerusalem, and dwell there, and go not forth thence any whither

This Solomon ordered, partly, for his own security, that being removed from that place where his kindred and estate, and interest lay, to a place where he was but a stranger, and sufficiently odious for his former and never-to-be-forgotten insolency towards his lord and king he might be incapable of raising any tumults and seditions, partly, as a penalty for his former wickedness, wherein yet there was more mercy than justice, and from which David had not promised him any security, but only given him his life and partly, that being in this public theatre, all his words and actions might be narrowly observed, which considering his busy, and covetous and wicked temper, was likely to give Solomon the advantage which he sought for in this very prohibition would probably inflame his desire of transgressing it, as the manner of men is

37 For it shall be, that on the day thou goest out, and passest over the brook Kidron, thou shalt know for certain that thou shalt surely die thy blood shall be upon thine own head

The brook Kidron, a brook nigh unto Jerusalem, of which see 2 Sam xv 23, 2 Kings xxiii 1, which he particularly names, because that was the way to Bahurim, his former and settled habitation but this is not to be understood exclusively to other ways and places for the reason was general, that he should not go forth thence any whither ver 36 to wit, as far as any oil or way as Cedron was which also appears from the following history, for when he went to Gath, he went not over Cedron (which he castward from the city,) but westward, as Gath lay Thy blood shall be upon thine own head, the blame and guilt of thy blood shall lie upon thyself only

38 And Shimei said unto the king The saying is good as my lord the king hath said, so will thy servant do And Shimei dwelt in Jerusalem many days

The saying is good, thy sentence is much more merciful than I expected or deserved So will thy servant do and Shimei did not only promise it but also swore to it to require by Solomon to do so, as is manifest from ver 12, 13

39 And it came to pass at the end of three years, that two of the servants of Shimei ran away unto Achish son of Maachah king of Gath And they told Shimei, saying, Behold thy servants be in Gath

Achish son of Maachah king of Gath, a king, but subject and tributary, first to David, and then to Solomon This might be either that Achish who showed so much kindness to David, 1 Sam xxvii, xxviii, or his son who in requital of this kindness, was still permitted to enjoy the title and honour of a king, but not the full power, whence it was that Achish could not, or durst not, keep these servants, though they had fled to him for protection but suffered Shimei to take them away from his royal city

40 And Shimei arose, and saddled his ass, and went to Gath to Achish to seek his servants and Shimei went, and brought his servants from Gath

Went to Gath, which, though highly dangerous, he attempted, partly, because he was blinded with covetousness and rage against his servants which two lusts have done, and daily do, engage men to such courses and actions as are no less dangerous to their lives than this is, partly, because he thought length of time had worn this out of Solomon's mind, and other men's thoughts, and that this being done secretly and speedily, would never have come to Solomon's ears, or that Solomon would not be severe in this case where it was not wantonness nor contempt of his authority, but the necessity of his household concerns, which put him upon it; and partly, because God withdrew from him the light of common prudence, and wholly left him to his own mistakes, and folly, and lusts, and withal to the instigation of the devil whose cunning and powerful artifices and insinuations he could not resist without Divine help

41 And it was told Solomon that Shimei had gone from Jerusalem to Gath, and was come again

It was told Solomon who doubtless had his spies appointed to observe him in all his motions

42 And the king sent and called for Shimei, and said unto him, Did I not make thee to swear by the LORD, and protested unto thee, saying, Know for a certain, on the day thou goest out, and walkest abroad any whither, that thou shalt surely die and thou saidst unto me, The word that I have heard is good 43 Why then hast thou not kept the oath of the LORD, and the commandment that I have charged thee with?

He was only both of rebellion against the express, and just, and (as himself called it) good command of the king, and of perjury to most God? which were two high and heinous crimes His oath he calls the oath of the Lord because it was taken in God's presence and he was called upon as a witness of it and as the avenger of all violations of it, and because the law of God obliged him to the performance of it

44 The king said moreover to Shimei, Thou knowest all the wickedness which thine heart is privy to, that thou didst to David my father therefore the LORD shall return thy wickedness upon thine own head

Thou knowest all the wickedness which thine heart is privy to for which thy own conscience accuseth thee, and there is no need of other witnesses Shall return He hath returned which seems most proper God hath punished thee for thy former wickedness, by suffering thee to fall in further crimes, and expose thyself to thy deserved death

45 And king Solomon shall be blessed, and the throne of David shall be established before the LORD for ever

The throne of David, that royal power and dignity conferred upon David to him and his heirs for ever Shall be established by the execution of such righteous judgment as this is Before the Lord, in the presence of that God who is both an observer and rewarder of all such righteous actions, or under God's inspection and by his blessing

46 So the king commanded Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, which went out, and fell upon him, that he died And the kingdom was established in the hand of Solomon

Which went out, carrying Shimei along with him to the place of execution which was not fit to be in the king's presence The kingdom was established in the hand of Solomon, his secret and worst enemies being taken out of the way

AND *Solomon made affinity with Pharaoh king of Egypt, and took Pharaoh's daughter, and brought her into the city of David, until he had made an end of building his own house, and the house of the Lord, and the wall of Jerusalem round about

Made affinity with Pharaoh king of Egypt as being a powerful nation. Look Pharaoh's daughter, upon what conditions I not here expressed, but it is probable she was first instructed in and proselyted to the Jewish religion, I may be persuaded 1 Because he was not yet fallen from God but loved the Lord and walked in the statutes of Israel, ver. 3, and therefore would never have married a Pagan idolater which was so contrary to God's law and so pernicious in its consequences. 2 Because he is not there reproved for this fact, as he is for loving many other strange women, 1 Kings x. 1-3. By comparing Psal. xlv. and the Book of Canticles, where by it plainly appears that this action had something extraordinary in it, and was designed by God to be a type of Christ, calling his church to himself, and to the true religion not only out of the Jews but even out of the Gentile world. The city of David, of which see chap. v. 10, into David's palace there The house of the Lord i. e. the temple appointed to the worship and honour of God. The wall of Jerusalem round about, which though in some sort built by David 2 Sam. v. 9 yet Solomon is here said to build rather because he made it higher and stronger and more beautiful and glorious, in which of the like sense Nehemiah's is used to have built Babylon Dan. ix. 30, or because he built an other wall besides the former for greater safety, for that this temple Jerusalem is encompassed with more walls than one.

2<sup>1</sup> Only the people sacrificed in high places, because there was no house built unto the name of the Lord, until those days.

Only this practice is used here and ver 3 as an exception to Solomon's integrity and glory and his humanity and willingness to let government that he himself had permitted and practised this which was expressly forbidden Lev xiii 14 Deut xii 15 16 except in some un-ordinary cases. Possibly he permitted it because he thought it better to allow in one or more circumstances than to occasion the neglect of the influence of God's worship which he apprehended would follow upon a severe prohibition of that practice because the people's heart were generally and entirely set upon these high places as appears from all the following history, and they were not willing to submit to so much trouble and charge as the bringing of all their sacrifices to one place would cause, nor would yield to it until the temple was built, which he knew would easily induce and oblige them to it and that being specially to be done he might think it more advisable rather to delay the execution of that law of God for an approaching season when he doubted not they would be sincerely and fully drawn to it than at present to drive them to it by force although these and all other prudential consideration should have given place to the will and wisdom of God. In high places, which were groves or other consecrated places upon hills in which the patriarchs used to offer up their worship and sacrifices to God, and from thence this custom was derived both to the Gentiles and the Jews, and in them the Gentiles sacrificed to idols, Jer vii 31 Ezek vi 3 4 Hos x 8, the Hebrews to the true God. These places are no house, which reason was not sufficient for there was a tabernacle to which they were so much constrained to the temple Deut xii &c. Into the name of the Lord either 1 To the Lord the name of the Lord being set up in the Lord him-elf, as Deut xxvii 18 Job x 1, Ps vi 17 Job xxi 13, xxvii 1 Or 2 To the honour and praise and service of God to the glory of his name, and of his worship and all his perfections which shall be adored and praised, and

3 And Solomon loved the LORD, walking in the statutes of David his father only he sacrificed and burnt incense in high places

And, or, yet, although he mistook and mislearned himself in the matter of high places yet in the general his heart was right with God, and he both loved him with inward affection, and walked with him in outward conversation and worship. In the statutes of David, i. e. according to the statutes or commands of God, which are here called the statutes of David, not only because they were so freely chosen, and heartily loved, and diligently practised by David but also because the observation of them was so earnestly pressed upon Solomon and fortified with David's authority and command (1 Kings i 2-1, 1 Chron. xxvii 8 9

1 And the king went to Gibeon to sacrifice there, <sup>1</sup>for that ~~was~~ the great high place: a thousand burnt offerings did Solomon offer upon that altar.

The great high place, the most eminent and frequented because there was the tabernacle and the altar of Moses 1 Chron xvi 39, xxi 29, 2 Chron i 3 5, 6, which possibly were placed upon a high or raised ground 4 thousand burnt offerings did Solomon offer upon that altar, thereby showing his special respect for this above all other places, and by his example teaching and inviting all his people to do so

5 ¶ In Gibeon the Lord appeared to Solomon<sup>m</sup> in a dream By night and God said Ask what I shall give thee

Quest. How could Solomon pray in his dream, or that prayer be acceptable to God, as this was, ver 10? Answer. The dreams of men are not such insignificant things as many imagine. That good dreams are oftentimes praise worthy, and evil dreams blameworthy is not only the opinion of the Jews and Christians but of divers of the wisest and better heathens: and the reason hereof is evident because men's dreams are commonly the images of the minds and tempers, and do only reflect and represent though but faintly and imperfectly, those very things which are most imprint upon their hearts by their waking meditations and duly conversation, and therefore at a nearness is such that either the sinful dreams of evil minded men should be imputed to them and punished in them, or the virtuous dreams of good men be imputed to them and rewarded in them: which was Solomon's case: for he had been living soberly and constantly employed in pious attainments and prayers for the wisdom which here he begs at was a natural and likely thing that his heart should as it did, work that way even in his dreams. Although to speak truly and strictly Solomon's prayer made in his dream would have been no way pleasing to God, nor profitable to himself if it had not been the result of his duty and most serious practice: and though God signified his mind in a dream yet it was Solomon's waking prayer (which were shadowed by this dark representation) which God accepted and required, and this acceptance of God was signified to him in an extraordinary manner, as by a Divine dream which was one of those ways whereby God oft used to communicate his will to his prophets and people. So the whole business here thus Solomon dreamed that God bid him ask what he would 1 Kings vi 5 and that he did ask wisdom ver 6, &c. and that God accepted his desire, ver 10 and gave him that gracious answer ver 11 &c. And all this was done in a dream, but with this difference, Solomon's prayer was but imaginary, but God's answer was real though conveyed in a dream. And when he awoke he knew by Divine inspiration that this was a dream sent from God to assure him that he would give him wisdom, and riches, and honour, and thus with respect unto his frequent constant, and fervent waking desires which his dream of his prayers did sufficiently intimate. See more on ver 6. God said, &c. he dreamed that God said so.

6th And Solomon said, Thou hast shewed unto thy servant David my father great mercy, according as he <sup>had</sup> walked before thee in truth, and in righteousness, and in uprightness of heart with thee, and thou hast kept for him this great kindness, that thou hast given him a son to sit on his throne, as it is this day

Solomon said, &c. he dreamed that he said. See on ver 5. Or he really said. For although the use of reason is ordinarily so dark and imperfect in dreams, that such actions are not human actions, yet in extraordinary and divine dreams it is but reasonable to allow something extraordinary. For who can doubt but God may so clear up and assist a man's reason in his dream, that he may have a true and strong apprehension of some things, which also may make a suitable impression upon the will or affections, and consequently such acts of the soul may be moral acts, and commendable by God and men. And this might be a kind of a statistical rapture, whereby his soul might be as it were carried out of his body, as St Paul's was 2 Cor xii 3, for a season, in which case both his reason might clearly and distinctly apprehend God's mind, and his gracious offer, and his will might make a free choice of wisdom, which therefore might be accepted and rewarded by God. In truth, either first, sincerely, and without dissimulation. But that is more fully expressed in the following words in uprightness of heart. Or rather secondly. In the true worship and service of God in the profession of his practice, and defence of the truth, or of the true religion of God's will or word which is called truth Prov xxiii 23, John xvi 17, Gal iii 1. So truth here contains all his duties to God as righteousness doth his duties to men, and uprightness the right manner of performing both sorts of duties. Uprightness of heart with thee, &c. in thy judgment, to whom thou hast put it is known, and to whom he did appeal as the witness of his integrity, and with respect to whom he performed all his duties even to men. Thou hast kept or rewarded, that which thou hast not reserved for Saul & his posterity thou didst cut off from the kingdom

7 And now, O Lord my God, thou hast made thy servant king instead of David my father. I am but a little child I know not how to go out or come in

I am but a little child, so he was in years not as if he were now but twelve years old, as many gather from the name of child; for that name is given to him when eighteen years old, Gen xxi 14, 15 and to Rehobam when forty one years old 2 Chron xiii 7, where the word is the same in the Hebrew, and before this time David calls him a wise man, chap ii 9 but he was now not above twenty years old, and withal (which he principally intend) he was raw and inexperienced as a child in state affairs and altogether unfit for so hard a task. To go out or come in, &c. to govern my people and manage affairs as that phrase signifies, Numb xxvii 17 Deut xxxi 2 Josh iv 11

8 And thy servant is in the midst of thy people which thou hast chosen, a great people, that cannot be numbered nor counted for multitude

In the midst of thy people, &c. is set over them to rule and guide them, a metaphor from the overseer of divers workmen, who usually is in the midst of them, that he may the better observe how each of them discharge his office. Which thou hast chosen, thy peculiar people who thou takest special care of, and therefore wilt expect a more punctual account of my government of the same

9 Give therefore thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad, for who is able to judge this thy so great a people?

An understanding heart, whereby I may both clearly discern, and faithfully perform, all the parts of my duty, for both these are spoken of in Scripture as the effects of a good understanding, and he that lives in the neglect of his duties, or the practice of wickedness, is called a fool, and one void of understanding. Judge, or govern, as that word is used, Judg iii 10, 14, Psal vii 8; Lxxvi 4; Isa ii 3, xvi 5. That I may discern between good and bad, to wit, in causes and controversies among my people, that I may not through mistakes or prejudices, or passions, give wrong sentences, and call evil good, or good evil. Who is able of himself, or without thy gracious assistance

10 And the speech pleased the Lord, that Solomon had asked this thing

How such a praying prayer could please God see in the notes on ver 5, 6

11 And God said unto him, Because thou hast asked this thing, and hast not asked for thyself long life; neither hast asked riches for thyself, nor hast asked the life of thine enemies, but hast asked for thyself understanding to discern judgment,

For hast asked the life of thine enemies, that God would take away their lives, or put them into thy power to destroy them

12 Behold, I have done according to thy words. lo, I have given thee a wise and understanding heart, so that there was none like thee before thee, neither after thee shall any arise like unto thee

I have done according to thy words. I have granted and do it thus present grant unto thee that thou desire. And accordingly at this time God did infuse into him a far higher degree and greater measure of wisdom than he naturally had. A wise and an understanding heart, &c. wisdom to govern thy people, to know and do thy several duties, which was the thing that Solomon desired, ver 9 and the effects whereof here follow ver 16 &c. and xxi, all Divine and human wisdom, the knowledge of all things, of all the arts and sciences, as may be perceived from I Kings, vi 29 &c. and that in a far greater proportion than by his years, and the time he could yet for his mind could possibly produce. So that there was none, either before him, or after him, but he had a higher portion of wisdom than any other king, but before all men, chap i 1, &c. more in measure than he fully equaled him to, in any real knowledge and especially in the use of so great a wisdom, his people. Neither after her full any arise unto thee. Quest. Did not the practice of him? Answer. They did not in natural and political knowledge, but only in the knowledge of the mysteries of God, which were more fully and more fully revealed in the covenant, the government whereof was no doubt committed to Solomon's wisdom, because they were not revealed by any nature without Divine revelation, which God saw fit not to afford in Solomon's time. I know no more in measure in illumining that Solomon's natural capacities were higher than any of the apostles, and Solomon had a more comprehensive knowledge of all things known in that age, than the apostles had in all the discoveries of their age

13 And I have also given thee that which thou hast not asked, both riches and honour, so that there shall not be any among the kings like unto thee all thy days

I have also given, either, first, I have granted and do it, for words signifying action are only put in for the purpose of the action. The author, secondly, I will give, as it is expressed in the parallel place 2 Chron i 12, I will as certainly give them as if I had actually done it, for future certain things are oft expressed in Scripture in the past time, as is well known to all. There shall not be so it is true of all the succeeding kings, of Israel, of whom he speaks. Or, hath not been, as it is in the Hebrew, and so it may be true of all the kings that there were or had been in the world, what of men was like to him to wit, in all the things here mentioned, and yet again he is compared with them, which is not only in riches but also in wisdom, and in honour or renown. All thy days, to wit, of thy life, whereby he signifies, that these gifts of God were not temporary and transient, as they were in Saul, but such as should abide with him whilst he lived.

14 And if thou wilt walk in my ways, to keep my statutes and my commandments, *as thy father David did walk, then I will lengthen thy days.

If thou wilt walk in my ways this caution God gives him, lest his great wisdom should make him proud, or careless, or presumptuous, as if he were out of all danger, and to oblige him to more care and circumspection to avoid the snare and snares to which so much prosperity and glory would probably expose him, and withal, to justify himself in case he should afterwards alter the course of his providence towards Solomon, and that when men are surprised with Solomon's dreadful fall, they might know it was no surprise to God, but that he did foresee it, and would overrule it to his own glory one way or other.

15 And Solomon awoke, and, behold, it was a dream. And he came to Jerusalem, and stood before the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and offered up burnt offerings, and offered peace offerings, and made a feast to all his servants.

It was a dream, i. e. he perceived that it was a dream, not a vain dream, which with men are commonly denuded, but a Divine dream assuring him of the thing which he knew, partly by a Divine impression and inspiration there of, and thus mind after he was awakened, and partly by the vast alteration which he presently found within himself in point of wisdom and knowledge. The ark of the covenant of the Lord was there in the city of David 2 Sam. vi. 17, before which he presented himself in the way of holy munition and adoration, which may be noted by the word stood. On that word may note his abode there for some considerable time as the offering of so many sacrifices required. Offered up burnt offerings, chiefly for the expiation of his and his people's sin through the blood of Christ manifestly signified in these sacrifices. And offered peace offerings solemnly to pursue God for all his mercies, and especially for giving him a quiet and fixed possession of the kingdom, and for his glorious appearance to him in a dream and for the great promise therein made to him and the actual accomplishment of it since wrought in him.

16 ¶ Then came there two women, that were harlots, unto the king, and stood before him.

Harlots, or, actuals, for the Hebrew word signifies both. See on Josh. ii. 1. And possibly they might be both, this by their open profession, and the other by their secret practice, not that they were common harlots, for neither would Solomon have tolerated such, nor durst such have presented themselves before so wise and just a ruler, nor did such use either to bring forth children, or to have such a tender care of and affection to them as these express. Yet that they were unmarried persons and so guilty of fornication seems most probable, both because there is no mention of any husband whose office it was, if there were any such, to consent for their wives, and because they lived a solitary life in one house. Unto the king haply they had presented the cause to the inferior court, who could not determine, and therefore now they bring it to the king, as the supreme magistrate and famous for his wisdom. Stood there i. e. him desiring and expecting his sentence in the case.

17 And the one woman said, O my lord, I and this woman dwell in one house, and I was delivered of a child with her in the house.

18 And it came to pass the third day after that I was delivered, that this woman was delivered also, and we were together, there was no stranger with us in the house, save we two in the house.

The third day so they could not be distinguished by their ages. There was no stranger with us in the house, therefore no witness on either side, and although there might be some sensible difference to an exact observer between the features of the two children, yet it is not probable that was much minded by the neighbours, for cunning civil women might assist them both in their child-births, yet it is not likely they would afterwards converse much with them, as being persons of suspected fame, and the features of the children, especially for so few days, might easily be so like, that it was difficult to discern the one from the other. And the testimonies of the women were of equal credit, i. e. of none at all.

19 And this woman's child died in the night, because she overlaid it.

And so smothered it, which she justly conjectures, because there were evidences of that kind of death, but an appearance of any other cause thereof.

20 And she arose at midnight, and took my son from beside me, while thine handmaid slept, and laid it in her bosom, and laid her dead child in my bosom.

She arose at midnight, when I was asleep, as she reasonably and truly concluded. Took my son from beside me, either because she really desired the comfort of a child, to be educated by her, and owned as hers, or because she would not be thought guilty of the child's death, for which she knew not how severely Solomon would punish her. While thine handmaid slept, as she might well know, because had she been awake, she had discovered and prevented her design.

21 And when I rose in the morning to give my child suck, behold, it was dead: but when I had considered it in the morning, behold, it was not my son, which I did bear.

22 And the other woman said, Nay, but the living is my son, and the dead is thy son. And this said, No, but the dead is thy son, and the living is my son. Thus they spake before the king.

Both promptly and vehemently assumed the same thing, off repeating the same words.

23 Then said the king, The one saith, This is my son that liveth, and thy son is the dead; and the other saith, Nay, but thy son is the dead, and my son is the living.

24 And the king said, Bring me a sword. And they brought a sword before the king.

25 And the king said, Divide the living child in two, and give half to the one, and half to the other.

He said this with seeming sincerity and earnestly, though with a design far above the reach of the two women or of the people present, who probably with admiration and horror expected the execution of it.

26 Then spake the woman whose the living child was unto the king, for *her bowels were moved upon her son, and she said, O my lord, give her the living child, and in no wise slay it. But the other said, Let it be neither mine nor thine, but divide it.

27 Then the king answered and said, Give her the living child, and in no wise slay it: she is the mother thereof.

As is evident from her natural and motherly affection to the child, which she had rather have alienated and given away from her than destroyed.

28 And all Israel heard of the judgment which the king had judged, and they feared the king: for they saw that the wisdom of God was in him, to do judgment.

The wisdom of God, either great and eminent wisdom.

as the cedars or mountains of God are the highest and most eminent of the land, or Divine wisdom, with which God had inspired him for the better government of his people. Was in him to judgment, to assist him in wisely examining and justly determining the causes and controversies of his people.

CHAP. IV.

Solomon's chief princes, 1-6, and officers for provisions 7-19 The peace and largeness of his kingdom, 20, 21 His daily provision for his court, 22-25 The stables for his horses, 26-28 His wisdom, 29-34

NO king Solomon was king over all Israel

This is spoken with respect to his successors, who were only over a part, and that the smallest part of it in reference to the times of division and rebellion under David, when part went after David, and part after his son, or part after Absalom, or Sheba, or Adonijah, and all Israel were united under Solomon, and adhered to him, not only a part of them, especially near the death of Adonijah and Joab, (who may be suspected to have watched an opportunity of revolting,) and the confinement of Abiathar and of Shimei (if not his death also,) who could not have little or no interest or opportunity of setting up a party against Solomon, (their principals being taken away to whom they were but accessories,) nor in probability any design to attempt it.

2 And these were the princes which he had, Azariah the son of Zadok the priest,

The princes which he had, i.e. the chief rulers, or officers belonging to him. The son or the grandson by comparing this with 1 Chron vi 8, 9 Of Zadok, either Zadok the priest, 1 Chron vi 8, 9, or some other of that name. The prince, so he was the second priest or the priest that it stood upon Solomon's person in holy offices and administrations. But when this sacred writer professeth to give an account of Solomon's princes, why should he put the second priest or Solomon's domestic priest in the first place, or why should he be mentioned distinctly from his father, who was generally present with Solomon and consulted with, either by himself, or some other fit person or persons appointed by him, manage all the king's sacred concerns? or why is he named before his father? Others therefore render this Hebrew word prince as it is used Gen xli 45, xlii 22, 26, 1 Chron ii 16, 2 Sam vii 18, so he was either the chief in dignity the first prince, and the highest officer in the state next to the king, or the chief minister of state, by whom the great affairs of state were managed and prepared for the king's consideration. &c.

3 Eliephaz and Ahiah, the sons of Shisha, || scribes, *Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud, the || recorder

Scribes, i.e. secretaries of state. He chose two, because David had but one, either because he observed that in conveniences in trusting all those matters in one hand, or because he had now much more employment than David had, this being a time of great peace and prosperity, as empire enlarged, and his correspondences with his princes more frequent. The recorder, of which see 1 Sam vii 16

4 And Benaiiah the son of Jehoiada was over the host and Zadok and Abiathar were the priests

i.e. The high priests, to wit, successively, first Abiathar, and then Zadok. Quæst Why is Abiathar named when he was deposed? Answer First, because it is ordinary for persons to retain the names and titles of those places which in reality they have lost. Secondly, because though he was deposed from the high priesthood yet he was a priest, and the chief of one of the priestly families, and as Zadok was jointly named with Abiathar, when Abiathar alone was the high priest, as 2 Sam vii 17, xx 23, so now Zadok and Abiathar are joined, although the high priesthood was fixed in Zadok alone. Thirdly, Possibly Abiathar, though he was deposed from the supreme priesthood yet upon his VOL. 2.

serious repentance, and by the intercession of his friends, was restored to the execution of the priestly office, and put into that place which Zadok enjoyed when Abiathar was high priest. Fourthly, Some say that here is mention made of all Solomon's chief officers, both such as now were, and such as had been, and such as were afterwards, as they gather from ver 11 and 15, where two persons are named who married two of Solomon's daughters, which could not be till many years after this time.

5 And Azariah the son of Nathan was over the officers, and Zabud the son of Nathan was principal officer, and the king's friend

Over the officers or overseers, or superiors, to wit, over those twelve officers named ver 7, &c., where this Hebrew word is used who were all subject, and to give up their accounts to him, though the word signifies any governors or commanders of the higher sort as 1 Kings v 16, 2 Chron vii 10 Son of Nathan, the prophet who had been so highly instrumental in Solomon's establishment in the throne. Principal officer, possibly president of the king's council. The Hebrew word is cohen, which, ver 4, rendered priest, whence some read this place cohen, and the son of Nathan the priest or the minister, (as the word properly signifies and that title well enough applies to a prophet, or the prince for the prophet Nathan was a man considerable both for his quality and for his honour and esteem with the king,) was the king's friend. The king's friend either his special favourite both for his father's sake and for his own having it seems been brought up with him, or his confidant with whom he used to communicate his most secret counsel.

6 And Ahishur was over the household and Adoniram the son of Adoniay over the tribute

Over the household, steward of the king's household. Over the tribute to wit the personal tribute, or the levy of men as appears by comparing this with chap v 13, 14 it being very fit that there should be some one person to whom the chief conduct or inspection of that sort of business was committed.

7 ¶ And Solomon had twelve officers over all Israel, which provided victuals for the king and his household each man his month in a year made provision

8 And these are their names ¶ The son of Hur in mount Ephraim

This and others of them are denominated from their fathers because they were known and famous in their generation.

9 ¶ The son of Dekar, in Makaz and Beth-haiun

Or Beth-haiun, the house or the dwelling-place of Hanan, and Hanan may be a man's name, and this place may be so different from other Beth-haiun. Or the plain (for so the Hebrew word signifies) of Beth-hanan.

10 ¶ The son of Heseid, in Aruboth, to the land of Hopher

There were two Sechohs, but both men together See 1 Chron iii 35 18 The land of Hopher, in Judah See 1 Chron iii 6

11 ¶ The son of Abinadab, in all the region of Dor, which had Paphath the daughter of Solomon to wife

The region of Dor, in Manasseh within Jordan where also were Tarnath, Megiddo, and Beth-shean ver 12

12 Baana the son of Ahilud, to him pertained Taamath and Megiddo, and all Beth-shean, which is Zartanah beneath Jezreel, from Beth-shean to Abel-meholah, even unto the place that is beyond Jokneam

Zartanah beneath Jezreel which was in Issachar. And this seems added to distinguish it from the Zartanah, Josh iii 16

13 ¶ The son of Geber, in Ramoth-gilead, to him pertained the towns of Jair the son of Manassch, which are in Gilead, to him also pertained the region of Argob, which is in Bashan, threescore great cities with walls and brasen bars

In Ramoth-gilead, Ramoth in the land of Gilead, Dent iv 43, Josh x 8, 1 Kings xiii 3, so called to difference it from Ramoth in Issachar, 1 Chron vi 73 Jair, in Manassch beyond Jordan See Numb xxxii 41, Dent ii 14 Great cities with walls and brasen bars this is added by way of distinction from those towns of Jair, for being without Jordan they were liable to the attempts of their enemies

14 Ahimadab the son of Iddo had Mahanaim

The city and territory of Mahanaim, of which see Gen xxxii 2 Josh xii 26 But this seems too narrow a compass for one of the great officers and unequal to the rest, although these portions seem not to be distributed into equal portion of land but into larger or lesser parts according to the utility of barrenness And this seems to have been a very fruitful place See 2 Sam xvii 27 Or to Mahanaim So he may understand all the space from the parts last mentioned to Mahanaim which was in the tribe of Gad

15 Ahimaaz was in Naphtali, he also took Basmath the daughter of Solomon to wife

16 Baanah the son of Hushai was in Asher and in Aloth

17 Ichoshaphat the son of Paruah, in Issachar 18 Shimei the son of Elipha, in Benjamin

The son of Elipha which he adds to distinguish him from that cursed and cursing Shimei, 2 Sam xvi 5

19 Geber the son of Uri was in the country of Gilead, in the country of Sihon king of the Amorites, and of Og king of Bashan, and he was the only officer which was in the land

In the country of Gilead is in the same part of that land of Gilead, which was mentioned above ver 13 In the land or rather in that land for the 11 brow points intimate that the emphatic article is there understood to wit, in all Gilead excepting the parcels mentioned before in all the territories of Sihon and Og, which because they were of large extent, and yet all committed to the one man it is here noted concerning him as his privilege above the rest whose jurisdiction were of narrower extent

20 ¶ And Judah and Israel were many as the sand which is by the sea in multitude, eating and drinking, and making merry

21 And Solomon reigned over all kingdoms from the river unto the land of the Philistines, and unto the border of Egypt they brought presents, and served Solomon all the days of his life

From the river Euphrates for so far David, having conquered the Syrian extended his empire which Solomon also maintained in that extent And so God's promise concerning the living of the whole land, is far as Euphrates, to the Israelites, was fulfilled And if the Israelites had multiplied so much that the land of Canaan would not suffice them, having God's grant of all the land as far as Euphrates, they might have seized upon it whensoever occasion required Unto the land of the Philistines, which is to be understood exclusively for it is unreasonable to think that the Philistines were within Solomon's dominions Unto the border of Egypt, unto the river Sihon, which was the border between Egypt and Canaan Josh xii 3, Compare Gen x 18 Served Solomon by tribute, or other ways, as he needed and required

22 ¶ And Solomon's provision for one day was thirty measures of fine flour, and threescore measures of meal, Thirty measures, Heb. ephah, each of which contained ten ephahs Exod xvi 36 So this provision was sufficient for near three thousand persons Meal, of a coarser sort, for common use, and for the inferior sort

23 Ten fat oxen, and twenty oxen out of the pastures, and an hundred sheep, beside harts, and roebucks, and fallowdeer, and tatted fowl

Ten fat oxen fattened in stalls Out of the pastures, well fleshed, tender, and good, though not so fat as the former

24 For he had dominion over all the region on this side the river, from Tiph-sah even to Azzah, over all the kings on this side the river and he had peace on all sides round about him

Tiph-sah, either that Tiph-sah, 2 Kings xv 16, which was in the kingdom of Israel within Jordan, or rather, another place of that name upon the river now mentioned, to wit, Euphrates, even that eminent city which is mentioned by Ptolemy and Strabo, and Pliny, called Thapsarum And this best agrees with the following Azzah, which was the border of Canaan in the south and west Gen x 19, Dent ii 23 as Tiph-sah was in the north and east And so his dominion is described by both its borders All the kings on this side the river, who owned subjection and paid tribute to him

25 And Judah and Israel dwelt safely, every man under his vine and under his fig tree from Dan even to Beer-sheba, all the days of Solomon

Under his vine and under his fig tree, enjoying the fruit of his own labours with safety and comfort Under these two trees which were most used and cultivated by the Israelites he understands all other fruit bearing trees, and all other comforts by a synecdoche And they are brought in as sitting or dwelling under these trees partly, for recreation delight in the shade and purity, for the comfort advantage of the fruit and withal to note their security, not only in their strong cities, but even in the country, where the vines and fig trees grew, which were most open to the incursions of their enemies

26 ¶ And Solomon had forty thousand stalls of horses for his chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen

Forty thousand stalls of horses In 2 Chron ix 25 it is but four thousand Ansv First, Some acknowledge an error of the transcriber writing arbahim forty for arbak four, which was in easy mistake And such mistakes in some copies in these lesser matters God might permit for the trial and exercise of our faith without any prejudice to the authority of the sacred Scriptures in the great doctrine of faith and good life Secondly It is not exactly the same Hebrew word which is here and there, though we translate both stalls, and therefore there may well be allowed some difference in the signification the one signifying properly stables, of which there were 1000, the other stalls or accommodations for each horse which were 40,000, which great number seems directly forbidden, Dent xxi 16 except Solomon had some particular dispensation from God which might be thought it be not recorded For his chariots both for his military chariots, which seem to be about 1000 1 Kings x 26, and for divers other uses, as about his great and various buildings, and merchandises and other occasions which might require some thousands of other chariots Twelve thousand horsemen, appointed partly for the defence and preservation of his people in peace, and partly for attendance upon his person, and for the splendour of his government Compare chap x 26 But the words may be otherwise rendered, and twelve thousand horses for parry manifestly signifies both a horse and horsemen And there might be a better sort of horses than most of those which were designed for the chariots Or thus, and for (which phrase is easily understood and borrowed from the foregoing clause) twelve thousand horsemen, and so he means that the 40,000 horses were in part appointed for his chariots, and in part for his 12,000 horsemen

27 And those officers provided victual for king Solomon, and for all that came unto king Solomon's table, every man in his month. they lacked nothing

These officers, named above, ver 7, &c. They lacked nothing, or rather, they suffered nothing to be lacking to any man that came thither, but plentifully provided all things necessary

28. Barley also and straw for the horses and dromedaries brought they unto the place where the officers were, every man according to his charge

Dromedaries, or mules, by comparing this with 2 Chron ix 24, or post horses, which are particularly mentioned and distinguished from the other horses, because they took a more exact and particular care about them. However, it is agreed that these were swift beasts, which is evident from Esth viii. 10, 14, Micah i 13

29 ¶ And God gave Solomon wisdom and understanding exceeding much and largeness of heart, even as the sand that is on the sea shore

Largeness of heart, i.e. either first Magnanimity or generosity, and greatness of spirit, whereby he was disposed and emboldened to undertake great things. But this seems not so well to suit with the following resemblance. Or rather secondly, Vastness of understanding, a most comprehensive knowledge of all things both Divine and human for this wisdom is the thing for which he is here commended, both in the foregoing and following words. Even as the sand that is on the sea shore which cannot be numbered, or measured, and which though it be so vast and comprehensive, yet consists of the smallest part, and so it may note that Solomon's wisdom was both vast reaching to all things; and most accurate, searching and discerning every small thing

30 And Solomon's wisdom excelled the wisdom of all the children of the east country, and all the wisdom of Egypt

The children of the east country the Chaldeans Persians and Arabians, who all lay eastward from Canaan and who were famous in ancient times for their wisdom and learning as appears both from sacred and profane writers. The wisdom of Egypt i.e. the Egyptians whose fame is then great for their skill in the arts and sciences which made them despise the Grecians & children in knowledge. Acts vii 22

31 For he was wiser than all men than Ethan the Ezrahite, and Heman and Chalcol, and Darda, the sons of Mahol and his fame was in all nations round about

Wiser than all men either of his nation or of his time or of all times and nations, whether of the east or any other country excepting only the first and Second Adam. Ethan the Ezrahite and Heman, Israhelites of eminent wisdom, probably the same mentioned 1 Chron ii 6 xv 19 xxv 1. Psal lxxviii title, lxxvix title Chalcol and Darda of whom see 1 Chron ii 6. The sons of Mahol Obadiah these four were the sons of Zerach 1 Chron ii 6. Ezrah as others call him Ansu rather the same man of two names, Zerach and Mahol which was common amongst the Jews, and he might be called Mahol from his office or employment, for that signifies a dance, or a pipe, and he was expert in musical instruments, and so were his sons, 1 Chron xv 17—19, who possibly may here be called, by a vulgar Hebrewism, sons of the musical instrument from their dexterity in handling it, as upon another account we read of the daughters of music, Eccles xii 4

32 And he spake three thousand proverbs, and his songs were a thousand and five

Proverbs, i.e. short, and deep and useful sentences, whereof a great and the best part are contained in the Books of Proverbs and Ecclesiastes. Of his songs the chief and most divine are in the Canticles

33 And he spake of trees, from the cedar tree that is in Lebanon even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the wall he spake also of beasts, and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fishes

Of trees, i.e. of all plants, of their nature and qualities all which discourses are lost, without any impeachment of the perfection of the Holy Scriptures, which were not inspired and written to teach men philosophy or physic, but only to make men wise to salvation. See John xi 31, 2 Tim iii 16, 17. From the cedar tree unto the hyssop, i.e. from the greatest to the least 34 And there came of all people to hear the wisdom of Solomon, from all kings of the earth, which had heard of his wisdom

From all kings of the earth, to wit, from all the neighbouring kings, universal particles being frequently understood in a restrained sense, and such restriction is grounded upon the following words, where this is limited to such as heard of Solomon's wisdom

CHAP V

Hiram sendeth to congratulate Solomon, who denreth of Hiram timber to build the temple, 1- 6. Hiram bleaseth God for Solomon, and to food for his family, sendeth him trees 7- 12. The number of labourers and workmen employed about the temple 13- 18.

AND Hiram king of Tyre sent his servants unto Solomon, for he had heard that they had mounted him king in the room of his father. For Hiram was ever a lover of David.

Hiram sent his servants unto Solomon to wit, as soon as he heard of his succession in the throne, as the following words how he sent to congratulate with him, as the manner of princes is.

2 And Solomon sent to Hiram, saying,

3 Thou knowest how that David my father could not build an house unto the name of the Lord his God for his wars which were about him on every side, until the Lord put them under the soles of his feet.

Thou knowest by common fame, and by particular information, could not build an house unto the name of the Lord his God i.e. either first For the worship and service of God's name in 2. Or secondly, For the Lord himself, as that phrase is used, Deut xxviii 38. Psal xx i. in 9. Which were about him on every side, which diverted his care and thoughts to other things and withal occasioned God's denial of the honour of that work to him. Put them under the soles of his feet i.e. made them subject to him that he might trample upon them at his pleasure. Compare Psal viii 6. 1 Cor xv 27.

4 But now the Lord my God hath given me rest on every side, so that there is neither adversary nor evil occurrence.

5 And, behold, I purpose to build an house unto the name of the Lord my God, as the Lord spake unto David my father, saying, Thy son, whom I will set upon thy throne in thy room, he shall build an house unto my name.

6 Now therefore command thou that they hew me cedar trees out of Lebanon, and my servants shall be with thy servants and unto thee will I give hire for thy servants according to all that thou shalt appoint for thou knowest that there is not among us any that can skill to hew timber like unto the Sidonians

Command thus that they & thy servants, as appears both from the foregoing words, command, &c. and from the following opposition of my servants. And this assistance which these Gentiles gave to the building of Solomon's temple was a type of the calling of the Gentiles, and that they should be very instrumental in the building and constituting of Christ's spiritual temple, to wit his church How me cedar trees, which, for their soundness, and strength, and fragrancy, and durableness, were most excellent and proper for his design. Of these David had procured some, but not a sufficient number. Lebanon was either wholly or in part in Solomon's jurisdiction, and therefore he doth not desire that Hiram would give him the cedars, because they were his own already but only that his servants might hew them for him, which required art and skill in the time and manner of doing of it, all which the ingenious Syrians well understood. My servants shall be with thy servants, either to be employed therein as they shall direct, or to receive the cedars, being cut down and hewed, from their hands, and to transmit them to me, although Hiram in his return caused him of that trouble. Unto thee will I give him for thy servants, & give them for their labour and art. The Sidonians or Tyrin for these places and people being near, and subject to Him, are promiscuously used one for another.

7 ¶ And it came to pass, when Hiram heard the words of Solomon, that he rejoiced greatly, and said, Blessed be the Lord this day, which hath given unto David a wise son over this great people.

He rejoiced greatly, being in dignuous prince a lover of excellency and a faithful friend to David and to his house. Blessed be the Lord, in though it be not probable that he was a sincere proselyte because he did not endeavour the instruction of his people and the extirpation of their gross idolatry which by God's blessing and Solomon's help he might easily have effected, yet he had sufficient admiration concerning the nature and excellency of the God of Israel, and had honourable thoughts of him. He also divers other heathens had, 1 Sam. ix. 6. Dan. vi. 16. 2 Mac. iii. 3.

8 And Hiram sent to Solomon, saying, I have considered the things which thou sentest to me for and I will do all thy desire concerning timber of cedar, and concerning timber of fir.

Hiram sent a letter, 2 Chron. ii. 11. Concerning timber of fir, which formerly was, and still is, very useful in most buildings. Others render the Hebrew word pitch trees or ash trees or pine trees. To other it was a particular sort of cedars, and therefore comes under the general name of cedars in Solomon's message before related.

9 My servants shall bring them down from Lebanon unto the sea, and I will convey them by sea in floats unto the place that thou shalt appoint me and will cause them to be discharged there, and thou shalt receive them, and thou shalt accomplish my desire, in giving food for my household.

That the sea the midland sea, in floats or ships, or rafts. It is thought the timbers were tied together in the water, as now it is usual, and so by the help of boats or skiffs conveyed to the appointed place, which was at no great distance. unto the place that thou shalt appoint me, which was Joppa. 2 Chron. ii. 11. down upon the sea, 1 Kings ix. 11. 2 Chron. ii. 13. Heb. dispersed a dispersed, which implies that they were tied together. Food for my household, & either just My kingdom or people, for the word house or family is sometimes used for a nation or people, as Jude. vii. 2. xviii. 11. Zech. vi. 13. xiv. 20. The reason of this desire is because the country belonging to Tyre and Sidon was very barren, and the people there being poor, were dependent upon Solomon's country for relief, as is manifest from Acts ii. 20 compare Ezra. iii. 7. Ezek. xxvii. 17. And this relief or provisions Hiram doth not desire to be freely given to him, but to be sold to him and his people at a reasonable rate, as Josephus reports it. Or, secondly, My servants employed in the work, as it is expressed, 2 Chron. ii. 15. though divers, both Jewish and Christian, interpreters conceive that this and that are differing accounts; and that here he speaks of the recompence which was given to Hiram himself, and to his house, for the materials which were taken out of his territories; and in 2 Chron. ii. of what was given to his servants for their labour. Or, thirdly, My royal family and court, which most properly is called his house.

10 So Hiram gave Solomon cedar trees and fir trees according to all his desire.

11 And Solomon gave Hiram twenty thousand measures of wheat for food for his household, and twenty measures of pure oil thus gave Solomon to Hiram year by year.

Twenty measures of pure oil, Heb. twenty cors of pure oil, but in 2 Chron. ii. 10, it is twenty thousand baths of oil, to which is there added twenty thousand measures of barley, and twenty thousand baths of wine. Either therefore first, He speaks of several things, as was now said on ver. 9. Or secondly, He speaks here of what Solomon offered, for it runs thus, I will give, and here of what Hiram accepted, and accordingly Solomon gave for it is here said Solomon gave Hiram. Or, thirdly, The barley and wine and twenty thousand baths of common oil, mentioned 2 Chron. ii. must be added to the twenty thousand measures of wheat, and the twenty measures of pure oil, here expressed, and the whole sum is to be made up from both places, that Book of Chronicles being written to supply and complete the history of the Books of Samuel and of the Kings. Thus gave Solomon to Hiram year by year, either, first, For sustenance to the workmen during the years wherein they were employed in the cutting down and hewing of the timber. Or secondly, For the yearly support of the king's house during the said time. And these words being left out in 2 Chron. ii. may seem to favour their opinion that these places speak of divers presents, and several recompences: the one given to the king's house, the other to the labourers. Although the argument is not cogent, and this might be omitted there either because it was sufficiently implied in the nature of the thing, or because it had been plainly expressed here.

12 And the Lord gave Solomon wisdom, as he promised him and there was peace between Hiram and Solomon, and they two made a league together.

The Lord gave Solomon wisdom, & he increased in wisdom more and more, which is here mentioned, because he showed his wisdom in all his transactions with Hiram.

13 ¶ And king Solomon raised a levy out of all Israel, and the levy was thirty thousand men.

Which were to be employed in the most honourable and easy parts of the work relating to the temple, in manners expressed, ver. 14. And these were Israelites, but the 150,000, mentioned ver. 15, were strangers, by comparison with chap. ix. 21, 22. If it seem strange to any man that so many thousands should be employed about so small a building as the temple was, it must be considered that the temple all its parts being considered, was far larger than men imagine, of which more hereafter. That it is probable, that they were employed by turns, the 30,000 were, ver. 14, else they had been oppressed with hard and unintermitted labours. 3 That the timber and stone hewed and carried by them was designed, not only (though principally) for the temple, but also for Solomon's own houses and buildings, because we read of no other levy of men, nor of any great care and pains taken, after the building of the temple, for the procurement or preparation of materials for his own houses, or his other buildings, which implies, that that work was done before this, that very levy of men was made and employed for the building of the Lord's house and Solomon's house, and the wall of Jerusalem, and Hazer, and Megiddo, and Gezer, as expressed 1 Kings ix 15, which may fully satisfy that ripple

14 And he sent them to Lebanon, ten thousand a month by courses a month they were in Lebanon, and two months at home; and Adoniram was over the levy

15 And Solomon had threescore and ten thousand that bare burdens, and four-score thousand hewers in the mountains;

Butler of timber, or rather of stones, for Hiram had taken care for the timber.

16 Beside the chief of Solomon's officers which were over the work, three thousand and three hundred, which ruled over the people that wrought in the work

What of 3000 were set over the 150 000, expressed ver 15, each of these over 50 of them and the odd 300 were set over those 3000, each of these to have the oversight of ten of them, to take an account of the work from them. But in 2 Chron ii 18 these overseers are said to be 3000

In ver 300 added in 2 Chron ii might be a reserve to supply the places of the other 3000, or of the 3000, or any of them should be taken off from the work by death or sickness, or weakness or necessary occasions, which was a prudent provision and not unusual in such like cases. And so there were 3600 commissioned for the work, but only 3300 employed at one time, and therefore both computations may fairly stand together. Some learned men add, that those 3600 were strangers, which indeed is manifest from 2 Chron ii 17, and that those 3300 were a distinct number of men, and Israelites which were set over all the rest, both strangers and Israelites who therefore were called the chief of Solomon's officers, and are said to rule over the workmen, whereas all that is said of those 3600, 2 Chron ii 18, is, that they were overseers to set the people a work, which may deserve further consideration. Others say, that the 300 added in 2 Chron were overseers of the Syrian workmen in Mount Lebanon, and the rest in all other places, or that they were set over some particular and more curious and considerable parts of the work.

17 And the king commanded, and they brought great stones, costly stones, and hewed stones, to lay the foundation of the house

Costly stones, marble and porphyry, or other stones of great size and value. To lay the foundation of the house, where they could not afterwards be seen, and therefore that this was done, is mentioned only as a point of magnificence. Except it was intended for a type or mystical signification of the preciousness of Christ who is the foundation of the true temple, the church of God, as he is called 1st xxviii 16, 1 Cor iii 11

18 And Solomon's builders and Hiram's builders did hew them, and the stonesquarers so they prepared timber and stones to build the house

The stonesquarers, Heb the Gabbites, the inhabitants of Gebel a place near Sidon, named Psal lxxxiii 7, Jerk xxvii 9, famous for artificers and architects, Job xiii 5. These are here mentioned apart, as distinct from the rest of Hiram's builders, as the most eminent of them of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the fourth year of Solomon's reign over Israel, in the month Zif, which is the second month, that he began to build the house of the Lord.

This chronological difficulty is too vast and comprehensive to be fully discussed here, or to be determined by unlearned readers, and for the learned, I refer them to what is largely digested in my Latin Synopsis upon this place. It may suffice at present to suggest these particulars. 1 That Israel's coming out of Egypt is variously understood in Scripture, and with some latitude, so as not only to note the time when first they came out of Egypt, but the time of their being in or coming out of the wilderness, as is manifest from Dent iv 45 where the words in the Hebrew are not after, &c. as we translate it, but in their coming forth out of Egypt, and Psal cxiv 1-3, When Israel came forth, &c. Heb in their coming forth, &c. And it is not impossible it may be so understood here, after they were come out &c. to wit completely, i. e. towards the end of their expedition out of Egypt into Canaan. Nor doth the difference between the Hebrew prepositions lamed and beth, which a learned man objects, hinder this sense; for beth signifies (as he saith) after so also doth lamed, Gen vii 10, Numb xxviii 38. 2 That whereas the times of the judges do chiefly cause this difficulty there are many things which will relieve us therein. 1 That divers of the years there mentioned belong to one and the same time, as is evident from Jan's twenty two years within which fell out as divers learned chronologists agree, the eighteen years of the oppression of the Ammonites, and several years of the Philistine tyranny, who oppressed Israel in the west, whilst the Ammonites oppressed them in the east, and the like might be observed in other cases. 2 That the years of rest are not necessarily to be understood of so many distinct years, besides those of war and servitude, and those words which are generally rendered the land had rest forty or eighty years or the like, may be thus rendered, and thus very agreeable to the Hebrew, The land had rest or began to rest or recovered its rest, in the fortieth or in the eightieth (the cardinal numbers being frequently put for the ordinal, especially where the number exceeds ten) year, and so that phrase doth not note how long time or till what time, the rest continued, but at what time it began. As for a time, in Judg. ii 11 the land had rest not forty year it is in our translation, but in the fortieth year, to wit from and after their first rest in or quiet possession of the land of Canaan which Joshua gave them, which time may very probably be made up of the days of Joshua, after he had settled them in a state of rest, and of the elders that outlived him, Judg. i 7 and the time of their corruption after the death of the Elders and the eight years of servitude under the king of Mesopotamia. So Judg. iii. 30 The land had rest in the eighth year to wit, from and after that rest which Othniel obtained for them ver 11. And Judg. v 31 It rested in the fortieth year, to wit, after that rest got by Deborah, Judg. iv 30. And Judg. viii 28 It rested in the fortieth year to wit from the last rest got by Deborah. And thus the computation of years is more plain and certain being thus made from rest to rest, than thereby that proceed the other way. And this is the more considerable because it was the opinion of that famously learned and pious bishop of Armagh. All which considered, it will be very easy to continue all the parts and passages of sacred story, from the coming out of Egypt to this time within the compass of four hundred and eighty years, of the several periods whereof see my Latin Synopsis. And as for other scriptures which seem to consent to the contradictory to this, I shall by God's help vindicate them in their several places. In the fourth year of Solomon's reign, his three first years being spent partly in settling the affairs of his kingdom, without which neither civil nor ecclesiastical concerns could have any consistency, and partly in making necessary preparations for the work. He began to build, for so it is expressed 2 Chron ii 1 and so it is explained here below, ver 37, The foundation of the house was laid, though in the Hebrew it be only he built. Thus active words are oft understood of the beginning of the action, as Gen i 32; 1st 24;

2 And the house which king Solomon built for the Lord, the length thereof was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits.

The house, properly so called as distinct from all the walls and buildings which were adjoining to it, to wit, the holy and most holy place. The length thereof, from east to west. And thus and the other measures may seem to belong to the inside from wall to wall. Threescore cubits, cubit of the sanctuary, of which see on Gen vi 15. The height thereof to wit of the house, for the porch was 120 cubits high 2 Chron iii 4. So that all the measures compared each with other were harmonious. For 60 to 20 (the length to the breadth) is triple, or as 3 to 1, and 60 to 30 (the length to the height) is double, or as 2 to 1, and 30 to 20 (the height to the breadth) is sesquialter, or one and a half as 3 to 2, which are the proportions answering to the three great concords in music commonly called a twelfth in eighth and a fifth, which therefore must needs be a graceful proportion to the eye, as that in music is graceful to the ear.

3 And the porch before the temple of the house, twenty cubits was the length thereof according to the breadth of the house, and ten cubits was the breadth thereof before the house.

Before the temple of the house, in the front of or entrance into the house 2 Chron iii 1. being a peristyle or portico walk or gallery, at one end of the building (from side to side). And the measures of this were harmonious also. For 20 to 10 (the length of the portico to the breadth of it) is double, or as 2 to 1. And if the height within be the same with that of the house, that is 30, it will be to the length of it as 3 to 2, and to its breadth as 3 to 1. Or if we take in the whole height mentioned 120 in 4 which is 120, there is in that no disproportion to wit, to its length is 6 to 1, and to its breadth a 12 to 1. Especially when that height was conveniently divided into several galleries one over another, each of which had the due proportions.

4 And for the house he made windows of narrow lights.

Windows of narrow lights, and narrow in width of the wall between them.

Narrow outward to prevent the inconvenience of the weather widening by degrees inward, that so the house might better receive and more disperse the light. Or for prospect to give light, yet shut it so far closed is to keep out weather and let in light.

5 ¶ And against the wall of the house he built chambers round about, against the walls of the house round about, both of the temple and of the oracle, and he made chambers round about.

Against the wall, or upon it, or joining to it, for the beams of the chambers were fastened into the wall but leaned upon the battens of the wall. He built chambers for the living the priests' garbages and other utensils belonging to the temple or to the worship of God therein see 2 Kings x 2 1 Chron xxviii 12, 13 xlii 13 14.

Round about, not simply for there were none on the east side and it may seem that there were some spaces left for the windows which being narrow outwardly little spaces would suffice, but in an inner row on all the sides except the east, where the porch was, and except some very small passages for the light. And yet these holes might be in the five uppermost courses of the wall which were above all the chambers, for these were only little cubits high, and the wall was twenty cubits high. He made chambers, Hebrew, either other chambers above and besides the former, or rather long galleries which encompassed all the chambers, as the ribs of a body, and which were necessary for passage to all the several chambers.

6 The northmost chamber was five cubits broad, and the middle was six cubits broad, and the third was seven cubits broad, for without in the wall of the house he made narrowed rests round about, that the beams should not be fastened in the walls of the house.

Five cubits broad, to wit, on the inside, and besides the galleries mentioned above. Narrowed rests, or, narrowings, as in our buildings the walls of a house are thicker or broader at the bottom, and narrower towards the top; only these narrowings were in the outside of the wall, which at each of the three stories was a cubit narrower than that beneath it. And this is mentioned as the reason of the differing breadth of the chambers, because the wall being narrower, allowed more space for the upper chambers. That the beams should not be fastened in the walls of the house, that there might be no holes made in the wall for the fastening of them, and that the chambers might be removed, if occasion were, without any inconvenience to the house.

7 And the house, when it was in building, was built of stone made ready before it was brought thither, so that there was neither hammer nor ax nor any tool of iron heard in the house, while it was in building.

Made ready, hewed, and squared, and fitted exactly according to the direction of the architect. No tool heard in the house while it was in building, so it was ordered, partly for the ease and convenience of carriage, partly for the magnificence of the work, and commendation of the workmen's skill and diligence, and partly, for mystical signification. And as this temple was a mixed type both of Christ's church upon earth and of the heavenly Jerusalem, so this circumstance signified as to the former, that it is the duty of the builders and members of the church, as far as in them lies to take care that all things be transacted there with perfect peace and quietness, and that no noise of contention or division, or violence be heard in that sacred building; and for the latter, that no spiritual stone, no person, shall bear a part in that heavenly temple, unless he be first hewed, and squared, and made meet for it in the life.

8 The door for the middle chamber was in the right side of the house, and they went up with winding stairs into the middle chamber and out of the middle into the third.

The door for the middle chamber, by which they entered to go up to the middle chamber or chamber with such as were in the middle story. In the right side, in the south side called the right side here and in the Hebrew text Psal lxxviii 12, and in other authors, because when a man looks towards the east or sunrise, which is esteemed the most glorious part of the heavens and to which men most frequently look for divers reasons, the south is on his right hand, whereby it is implied that there was another door on the left, or the north side leading to the chambers on that side, though for brevity sake it be not mentioned here. With winding stairs, which were either, 1. Within the thickness of the temple wall as many think, which is not probable, as tending to the great weakening of the wall, especially in the upper parts where the wall was much narrower. And if such care was taken to preserve the walls entire and unbroken, that there might not be small holes made into it for the fastening of the beams of the chambers, yet it seems very absurd and incredible that there should be made such great breaches within them as the stairs would require. Or rather 2. Without the wall, and without the chambers too, as leading up to the gallery out of which they went into the several chambers. Into the middle chamber, or rather into the middle story, or row of chambers, and so in the following words, out of the middle story, for the stairs could not lead up into each of the chambers, nor was it needful or convenient it should do so, but only into the story, which was sufficient for the use of all the chambers.

9 So he built the house, and finished it, and covered the house with beams and boards of cedar.

With narrowings, or, recesses.

he was 14, 20
g. 11.
the walls beams and the ceiling with cedar

He built the house, and finished it, to wit, the bulk and the body of the house. Covered the house, or, the house, i. e. the top of the house, for the like is said of the sides and bottom, ver 15, even the beams and boards (or, the rafters and the ceilings, the arched beams and boards wherewith the top of the house was covered which was made of other wood, which was more pliable than cedar, and would better endure bowing and bending,) with cedars

10 And then he built chambers against all the house, five cubits high and they rested on the house with timber of cedar

I cannot all the house, which interpreters understand of those chambers described ver 5, 6. But why should that be repeated again, and that so darkly and confusingly, after he had particularly and exactly treated of them (unless to give an account of the height of each chamber or story which before was not done)? And the Hebrew words may be truly and properly rendered thus. He built a roof (to wit, a flat and plain roof called yatziah, because of the great resemblance it hath with the floor of a house) over all the house, according to the manner of all the Israelitish buildings, which were flat at the top, of which see Deut. xxi. 8, Josh. ii. 6, 2 Sam. xi. 2. The inner roof was arched, ver 9, that it might be more beautiful and glorious to behold, but the outward roof was flat. Five cubits high above the walls of the temple, which was necessary, that it might be a little higher than the arched roof which it was designed to cover and secure. They rested, Heb. it rested, to wit, the roof, for the Hebrew verb is of the singular number. With timber of cedar, which rested upon the top of the wall, as the chambers ver 5 rested upon the sides of the wall. But all this I submit to the learned and judicious

11 ¶ And the word of the Lord came to Solomon, saying,

I have by some prophet, or rather in a vision or dream, as it did before

12 Concerning this house which thou art in building, if thou wilt walk in my statutes, and execute my judgments and keep all my commandments to walk in them, then will I perform my word with thee, which I spake unto David thy father

God speaks thus partly to encourage him to proceed in his work, and partly to purge out that pride and vain glory (which God the searcher of hearts saw either then did or would rise in Solomon's mind as being the author and builder of so glorious a work) and that presumption and security, which was very likely to grow, and God foresaw would grow, both in Solomon and in the people, if God should show in a manner intended to continue his presence with them and in his own temple, and that they had in what he gave it reason to let in God's departure from them though they should provoke him. Therefore he expresses the condition upon which his promise and favour is suspended, and by assuming him the reward of obedience, he plainly intimates the contrary upon his disobedience

13 And I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will not forsake my people Israel

14 So Solomon built the house, and finished it

15 And he built the walls of the house within with boards of cedar, both the floor of the house, and the walls of the ceiling, and he covered them on the inside with wood, and covered the floor of the house with planks of fir

Both the floor, or rather from the floor, as it is in the Hebrew, for the floor itself was not covered with cedar but with fir as it here follows. And the walls of the ceiling, or rather, as it is in the Hebrew, unto the walls of the ceiling, or of the roof, i. e. unto the top of the wall which was even with the roof, for the roof itself was not of stone, but wood

Or, unto the walls of the ceiling, i. e. unto the ceiling itself, which performing the office of a wall may well be called by that name. For the name of a wall is not appropriated to stone or brick, because we read of a heaven wall Jer. xv. 20, and a wall of iron, Ezek. iv. 3. And that wall unto which Saul smote his javelin, 1 Sam. xix. 10, seems more probably to be understood of wood than of stone, especially, considering that it was the room where the king used to dine. So by this periphrasis from the floor of the house unto the walls of the ceiling he designs all the side walls of the house. He covered them, to wit the side walls of the house, now mentioned. With wood i. e. with other kind of wood (even with fir, as appears from 2 Chron. iii. 5 wherewith the floor is here said to be covered. The floor of the house this is here spoken only concerning the floor, because there was nothing but planks of fir, whereas there was both cedar and fir in the sides of the house, the fir being either put above or upon the cedar, or intermixed with or put between the boards or ribs of cedar, as may be gathered from the said parallel place, 2 Chron. iii. 5

16 And he built twenty cubits on the sides of the house, both the floor and the walls with boards of cedar. he even built them for it within, even for the oracle, even for the most holy place

Twenty cubits on the sides of the house i. e. the most holy place which continued in the length of the house twenty cubits by computing this with ver 2, and ver 17, which may be said to be on the sides of the house because this part took off twenty cubits in length from each side of the house, and was also twenty cubits from side to side, so it was twenty cubits every way. Or on the sides (i. e. on all the sides as indeed it was) of the house, or of that house to wit the most holy place, as it here follows. On from the sides of the house i. e. from one side to the other. And so this is meant only of the partition wall, which was between the holy and the most holy place. Both the floor and the walls, or rather, as ver 15 from the floor to the wall, or ceiling, or roof. So it is not necessary, at least by virtue of these words to understand thus, as they generally do that the floor itself was built with cedar, but only all the sides of it from the bottom twenty cubits upward. If it be said that the whole house, and consequently the most holy place, was thirty cubits high ver 2 it may be replied, either that that is true only of the greater part of the holy place, which I called the house ver 17, and that the lesser, or the most holy place was but twenty cubits high as divers think, or that the ten cubits at the top were covered with some other wood or thing, or were left open that it might thereby receive both light from the candlesticks, and smoke from the altar of incense. For the oracle even for the most holy place, i. e. that it might be the oracle, or the most holy place. Or on the inner side (wherby he might meanly thus be out side of the partition wall which looked to the most holy place was not so covered) of (for the Hebrew word is very oft a note of the genitive case) the oracle, even of the most holy place, which last words are added to explain what he means by the word oracle, which he had not used before

17 And the house, that is, the temple before it, was forty cubits long

The house i. e. the holy place. That is the temple thus is added to restrain the signification of the word house, which otherwise notes the whole building. Before it, i. e. before the oracle. Or as it is in the Hebrew, before my face, i. e. before the place of my presence. Or it may be said to be before God because he being pleased to dwell himself is sitting upon the cherubim, with his face towards this house where he beholds the services of his people. So this part of the house, distinct from the most holy place, has its harmonious proportions also. The length 40 to the height 30 is a squarian, or 4 to 3 (which is that of a fourth in music), the length to the breadth, 40 to 20, is 2 to 1, the height to the breadth, 30 to 20 is 3 to 2

18 And the cedar of the house within was carved with knops and open flow-ers all was cedar, there was no stone seen

19 And the oracle he prepared in the house within, to set there the ark of the covenant of the Lord
He prepared, i. e. adorned and fitted it for the receipt of the ark. In the house, Heb. in the middle of the house or building, not the middle mathematically or exactly but in general within the house. Is that phrase in the middle of significance, is Deut. iv. 11, Josh. vi. 21, Dan. ii. 26. Within or in the uttermost part of the house for so this was, the entrance into the house being at the other end.

20 And the oracle in the forefront was twenty cubits in length, and twenty cubits in breadth, and twenty cubits in the height thereof, and he overlaid it with pure gold, and so covered the altar which was of cedar

In the forefront, or rather, which was in the inner part, to wit of the house, called here in Hebrew the forefront, not because a man first enters there but because when a man is entering or newly entered into the house it is still before him. Thus the same, or the like word proceeds from the same root is oft used, Is. x. 18, 1 Kings vi. 19. 29. 30. 36, 1 Chron. xxi. 11. Twenty cubits in the height thereof. Object. The first house was thirty cubits high above ver. 2. Answer. It is probably assumed by divers that the most holy place was not so high as the holy place by ten cubits, which was no way inconvenient, nor against the rules of proportion observed in buildings. And the second part of the building was far lower than the first which was the porch, so the third part might be considerably lower than the second. And it might be lower either 1. Outwardly or in respect of the walls of it which might be only twenty cubits high, and at that height covered with a flat roof, it being so decent that that eminently holy place should be distinguished from the less holy, even by its outward and visible shape. Or 2. Inwardly, or within the walls of that part. For although this part might be vaulted at the top as the holy place was, which vaulted roof must think was ten cubits high, yet here might be the difference that the vaulted roof of the holy place lay open to view whereas that of the most holy was covered with a flat roof from wall to wall, at the height of twenty cubits. So entered it with gold chap. vi. 18, 1 Chron. xxi. 18. I called to wit the altar of incense, which was put next to the first holy place ver. 22. Which was of cedar. Object. This altar was made of shittim wood 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100. 101. 102. 103. 104. 105. 106. 107. 108. 109. 110. 111. 112. 113. 114. 115. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 127. 128. 129. 130. 131. 132. 133. 134. 135. 136. 137. 138. 139. 140. 141. 142. 143. 144. 145. 146. 147. 148. 149. 150. 151. 152. 153. 154. 155. 156. 157. 158. 159. 160. 161. 162. 163. 164. 165. 166. 167. 168. 169. 170. 171. 172. 173. 174. 175. 176. 177. 178. 179. 180. 181. 182. 183. 184. 185. 186. 187. 188. 189. 190. 191. 192. 193. 194. 195. 196. 197. 198. 199. 200. 201. 202. 203. 204. 205. 206. 207. 208. 209. 210. 211. 212. 213. 214. 215. 216. 217. 218. 219. 220. 221. 222. 223. 224. 225. 226. 227. 228. 229. 230. 231. 232. 233. 234. 235. 236. 237. 238. 239. 240. 241. 242. 243. 244. 245. 246. 247. 248. 249. 250. 251. 252. 253. 254. 255. 256. 257. 258. 259. 260. 261. 262. 263. 264. 265. 266. 267. 268. 269. 270. 271. 272. 273. 274. 275. 276. 277. 278. 279. 280. 281. 282. 283. 284. 285. 286. 287. 288. 289. 290. 291. 292. 293. 294. 295. 296. 297. 298. 299. 300. 301. 302. 303. 304. 305. 306. 307. 308. 309. 310. 311. 312. 313. 314. 315. 316. 317. 318. 319. 320. 321. 322. 323. 324. 325. 326. 327. 328. 329. 330. 331. 332. 333. 334. 335. 336. 337. 338. 339. 340. 341. 342. 343. 344. 345. 346. 347. 348. 349. 350. 351. 352. 353. 354. 355. 356. 357. 358. 359. 360. 361. 362. 363. 364. 365. 366. 367. 368. 369. 370. 371. 372. 373. 374. 375. 376. 377. 378. 379. 380. 381. 382. 383. 384. 385. 386. 387. 388. 389. 390. 391. 392. 393. 394. 395. 396. 397. 398. 399. 400. 401. 402. 403. 404. 405. 406. 407. 408. 409. 410. 411. 412. 413. 414. 415. 416. 417. 418. 419. 420. 421. 422. 423. 424. 425. 426. 427. 428. 429. 430. 431. 432. 433. 434. 435. 436. 437. 438. 439. 440. 441. 442. 443. 444. 445. 446. 447. 448. 449. 450. 451. 452. 453. 454. 455. 456. 457. 458. 459. 460. 461. 462. 463. 464. 465. 466. 467. 468. 469. 470. 471. 472. 473. 474. 475. 476. 477. 478. 479. 480. 481. 482. 483. 484. 485. 486. 487. 488. 489. 490. 491. 492. 493. 494. 495. 496. 497. 498. 499. 500. 501. 502. 503. 504. 505. 506. 507. 508. 509. 510. 511. 512. 513. 514. 515. 516. 517. 518. 519. 520. 521. 522. 523. 524. 525. 526. 527. 528. 529. 530. 531. 532. 533. 534. 535. 536. 537. 538. 539. 540. 541. 542. 543. 544. 545. 546. 547. 548. 549. 550. 551. 552. 553. 554. 555. 556. 557. 558. 559. 560. 561. 562. 563. 564. 565. 566. 567. 568. 569. 570. 571. 572. 573. 574. 575. 576. 577. 578. 579. 580. 581. 582. 583. 584. 585. 586. 587. 588. 589. 590. 591. 592. 593. 594. 595. 596. 597. 598. 599. 600. 601. 602. 603. 604. 605. 606. 607. 608. 609. 610. 611. 612. 613. 614. 615. 616. 617. 618. 619. 620. 621. 622. 623. 624. 625. 626. 627. 628. 629. 630. 631. 632. 633. 634. 635. 636. 637. 638. 639. 640. 641. 642. 643. 644. 645. 646. 647. 648. 649. 650. 651. 652. 653. 654. 655. 656. 657. 658. 659. 660. 661. 662. 663. 664. 665. 666. 667. 668. 669. 670. 671. 672. 673. 674. 675. 676. 677. 678. 679. 680. 681. 682. 683. 684. 685. 686. 687. 688. 689. 690. 691. 692. 693. 694. 695. 696. 697. 698. 699. 700. 701. 702. 703. 704. 705. 706. 707. 708. 709. 710. 711. 712. 713. 714. 715. 716. 717. 718. 719. 720. 721. 722. 723. 724. 725. 726. 727. 728. 729. 730. 731. 732. 733. 734. 735. 736. 737. 738. 739. 740. 741. 742. 743. 744. 745. 746. 747. 748. 749. 750. 751. 752. 753. 754. 755. 756. 757. 758. 759. 760. 761. 762. 763. 764. 765. 766. 767. 768. 769. 770. 771. 772. 773. 774. 775. 776. 777. 778. 779. 780. 781. 782. 783. 784. 785. 786. 787. 788. 789. 790. 791. 792. 793. 794. 795. 796. 797. 798. 799. 800. 801. 802. 803. 804. 805. 806. 807. 808. 809. 810. 811. 812. 813. 814. 815. 816. 817. 818. 819. 820. 821. 822. 823. 824. 825. 826. 827. 828. 829. 830. 831. 832. 833. 834. 835. 836. 837. 838. 839. 840. 841. 842. 843. 844. 845. 846. 847. 848. 849. 850. 851. 852. 853. 854. 855. 856. 857. 858. 859. 860. 861. 862. 863. 864. 865. 866. 867. 868. 869. 870. 871. 872. 873. 874. 875. 876. 877. 878. 879. 880. 881. 882. 883. 884. 885. 886. 887. 888. 889. 890. 891. 892. 893. 894. 895. 896. 897. 898. 899. 900. 901. 902. 903. 904. 905. 906. 907. 908. 909. 910. 911. 912. 913. 914. 915. 916. 917. 918. 919. 920. 921. 922. 923. 924. 925. 926. 927. 928. 929. 930. 931. 932. 933. 934. 935. 936. 937. 938. 939. 940. 941. 942. 943. 944. 945. 946. 947. 948. 949. 950. 951. 952. 953. 954. 955. 956. 957. 958. 959. 960. 961. 962. 963. 964. 965. 966. 967. 968. 969. 970. 971. 972. 973. 974. 975. 976. 977. 978. 979. 980. 981. 982. 983. 984. 985. 986. 987. 988. 989. 990. 991. 992. 993. 994. 995. 996. 997. 998. 999. 1000.

21 So Solomon overlaid the house within with pure gold, and he made a partition by the chains of gold before the oracle, and he overlaid it with gold.

The house, or, at it house, to wit the oracle. With pure gold. Compare 2 Chron. iii. 1. He made a partition by the chains of gold, i. e. he made a curtain which was upon or before the partition, or which was a further partition between the holy and the most holy, which he did hang upon these golden chains. Others render it thus. In closed or shut (is the word signifying in the Chaldee dialect from which divers Hebrew words are borrowed) it

(i. e. the house now mentioned, to wit, the door of it) with chains or bars of gold. Before the oracle, i. e. in the outward part of the wall, or partition, which was erected between the oracle and the holy place, which is properly said to be before the oracle, which was the space within, and beyond that partition, for there the veil was hung, and there the chains or bars, or whatsoever it was which fastened the doors of the oracle, were placed. He overlaid it to wit, the partition, which he here distinguishes from the house, or the main walls of the house, which he had in the former part of this verse told us were overlaid with gold, and now he affirms as much of the partition.

22 And the whole house he overlaid with gold, until he had finished all the house also, the whole altar that was by the oracle he overlaid with gold.

The whole house, not only the oracle, but all the holy place, and, as some add, even the chambers belonging to it. The whole altar that was by the oracle, i. e. the altar of incense, which was set in the holy place close by the door of the oracle. He overlaid with gold, as before he overlaid it with cedar, of which see the notes on ver. 20.

23 ¶ And within the oracle he made two cherubims of olive tree, each ten cubits high.

Inside those two made by Moses, Exod. xxv. 18, which were of gold and far less than these and fixed in another place and posture. Of olive tree, or, of olive trees, which some time are distinguished from the olive tree, as Isa. xli. 19.

24 And five cubits was the one wing of the cherub, and five cubits the other wing of the cherub, from the uttermost part of the one wing unto the uttermost part of the other were ten cubits.

25 And the other cherub was ten cubits both the cherubims were of one measure and one size.

26 The height of the one cherub was ten cubits, and so was it of the other cherub.

27 And he set the cherubims within the inner house, and they stretched forth the wings of the cherubims, so that the wing of the one touched the one wall, and the wing of the other cherub touched the other wall, and then wings touched one another in the midst of the house.

28 And he overlaid the cherubims with gold.

29 And he carved all the walls of the house round about with carved figures of cherubims and palm trees and open flowers, within and without.

Carved figures of cherubims is signification of the presence and protection of the angels vouchsafed by God to that place. Palm trees, emblems of that peace and victory over their enemies which the Israelites duly serving God in that place might expect. Within and without, within the oracle and without it in the holy place.

30 And the floor of the house he overlaid with gold, within and without.

31 ¶ And for the entering of the oracle he made doors of olive tree the lintel and side posts were a fifth part of the wall.

i. e. Four cubits in height or breadth, where the wall was twenty cubits. Or a fifth part of the door was mentioned. Or rather, five-square, having five sides and no angles, which is not incongruous nor unusual in building.

32 The two doors also were of olive tree, and he carved upon them carvings of cherubims and palm trees and open flowers, and overlaid them with gold, and spread gold upon the cherubims, and upon the palm trees.

33 So also made he for the door of the temple posts of olive tree, ¶ a fourth part of the hall

Or rather, four square. See on ver 31

34 And the two doors were of fir tree. the two leaves of the one door were folding, and the two leaves of the other door were folding

35 And he carved thereon cherubims and palm trees and open flowers and covered them with gold fitted upon the carved work

36 ¶ And he built the inner court with three rows of hewed stone, and a row of cedar beams

The inner court, i. e. the priests' court, 2 Chron iv 9 so called because it was next to the temple, which it did encompass. With three rows of hewed stone, and a row of cedar beams; which is understood either 1 Of the thickness of the wall, the three rows of stones being one within another, and the cedar innermost, as a lining to the wall. Or 2 Of the height of the wall, which was only three cubits high, that the people might see the priests sacrificing upon the altar, which was in this court, each row of stones being about a cubit, and possibly of a differing colour from the rest and all covered with cedar. Or rather, 3 Of so many galleries, one on each side of the temple, whereof the three first were of stone, and the fourth of cedar, all supported with rows of pillars, upon which there were many chambers for the uses of the temple, and of the priests, for it is hard to think that only the making of a low wall about the court would be called a building of the court. And that a great number of buildings and rooms were necessary for the various offices and works which were to be done, and the treasures of all sorts which were to be laid up in the temple, largely so called is sufficiently evident from the nature of the times and divers passages in Scripture. See, among others, 1 Chron xxviii 11, 12

37 ¶ In the fourth year was the foundation of the house of the Lord laid, in the month Zil

38 And in the eleventh year, in the month Bul, which is the eighth month was the house finished ¶ throughout all the parts therof, and according to all the fashion of it. So was he seven years in building it

Seven years complete and six months as appears by computation. But smaller sums are usually mentioned and allowed up in the gutter both in Scripture. 1 Judg xvi 27 2 Sam v 4, 1 Kings vi 11 and in other authors. It is strange that this work took up so much time, for 1 The temple properly so called was but quantity the least part of it, there being very many and great buildings both above ground in the several courts (for though only the court of the priests be mentioned yet it is thereby implied that the same thing was proportionably done in the others,) and underground. 2 The great curiosity of art which was used here, and the tediousness of exquisite artists in the longer time for the doing of it. And if the building of Diana's temple did employ all Asia for two hundred years, and the building of one pyramid employed three hundred and sixty thousand men for twenty years together, both which Phry affirms, no reasonable man can wonder that this temple was seven years in building

BUT Solomon was building his own house fifteen years, and he finished all his house

His own house: the royal palace for himself and for his successors. Of his houses, the singular number being put for the plural. Fifteen years, almost double time to that in which the temple was built, because neither were the materials so far provided and prepared for this as they were for the temple, nor did either he or his people use the same alacrity and diligence in this as in the other work, nor had they the same obligations to this work as they had to that, to which they were quickened by God's express command, and by the necessity of setting up God's worship there, as the foundation of all the hopes and happiness both of king and people, whereas his building was only for Solomon's greater convenience, and he had already a picture of David's building

2 ¶ He built also the house of the forest of Lebanon, the length thereof was an hundred cubits, and the breadth thereof fifty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits, upon four rows of cedar pillars, with cedar beams upon the pillars

The house of the forest of Lebanon, a house so called either first Because it was built in the mountain and forest of Lebanon for his recreation there in summer time. But it is generally and more probably held, that it was in or near Jerusalem both because there was the throne of judgment ver 7 which was fittest to be in the place of his constant and usual residence, and because there was the chief magazine of arms for ver 8 and Solomon's golden shields were put there as is manifest from 1 Kings x 17, xiv 25 26 28, which no wise prince would do in a place so remote from his royal city, and in the utmost borders of his kingdom, as this was. Or rather, secondly from some resemblance it might have with that place, for the pleasant shades and groves which were about it, nothing being more frequent, both in sacred and other writers, than to transfer the names of Carmel, or Tempe, or the like, to other places of the same nature and quality with them. The length thereof, to wit of the principal mansion, to which doubtless other buildings were adjoined. Upon four rows of cedar pillars, upon which the house was built, and between which there were four sturdy alms. With cedar beams in the pillars, which were in the floor of the second story

3 And it was covered with cedar above upon the beams, that lay on forty five pillars, fifteen in a row

So in this second story were only three rows of pillars, which was sufficient for the ornament of the second, and for the support of the third story

1 And there were windows in three rows, and light was against light in three ranks

Light was against light, one directly opposite or answering to the other as is usual in well-contrived buildings. In three ranks, one exactly under another

5 And all the doors and posts were square, with the windows and light was against light in three ranks

He speaks either first of the same lights mentioned ver 4, it being the manner of the Hebrews to repeat the same things, or rather of the smaller windows or lights which were over the several doors, as the manner of many buildings is

6 ¶ And he made a porch of pillars, the length thereof was fifty cubits, and the breadth thereof thirty cubits, and the porch was before them and the other pillars and the thick beam were before them

A porch of pillars, i. e. supported by divers pillars for the more magnificent entrance into the house, upon which also it is thought there were other rooms built as in the house. The porch, now mentioned, which is said to be before them, i.e. before the pillars on which the house of Lebanon stood, or before the doors and posts mentioned ver. 5, or, a porch, i.e. another and a lesser porch, which was before them, i.e. before the pillars of the greater porch now mentioned. And the other pillars, or, and pillars, i.e. a fewer and lesser pillar for the support of the lesser porch. The thick beam, which was laid upon these pillars, as the others were, ver. 2.

7 ¶ Then he made a porch for the throne where he might judge, even the porch of judgment, and it was covered with cedar from one side of the floor to the other.

<sup>1 Heb from floor to floor</sup> He made a porch, another porch or distinct room with out the house. For the throne described chap. x. 18. Where he might judge the people that brought their causes before him. From one side of the floor to the other, i.e. the whole floor, or from floor to floor, i.e. from the lower floor on the ground, to the upper floor which covered it.

8 ¶ And his house where he dwelt had another court within the porch, which was of the like work. Solomon made also an house for Pharaoh's daughter, whom he had taken to wife like unto this porch.

9 All these were of costly stones, according to the measures of hewed stones, sawed with saws within and without, even from the foundation unto the coping, and so on the outside toward the great court.

All these buildings described here and in the former chapter, according to the measures of hewed stones, either of which were hewed in such measure and proportion exact workmen used to hew ordinary stones, or so exactly as large as common hewed stones, which are still very great. Within and without, both on the inside of the buildings which were covered with cedar, and on the outside also. From the foundation unto the coping, from the bottom to the top of the building. On the outside toward the great court, not only on the outside of the front of the house, which being most visible men are more careful to adorn, but also of the other side of the house, which looked towards the great court belonging to the king's house.

10 And the foundation was of costly stones, even great stones, stones of ten cubits, and stones of eight cubits.

<sup>1 Heb 10 cubits</sup> Not of ten cubits, not square, which would have been both unmanageable and unportable, and unmanageable, but of solid measure, by which stones and timber are usually measured, and so they were only two cubits square, but there were twenty solid cubits contained in them. And so also the following, eight cubits are to be understood.

11 And above were costly stones, after the measures of hewed stones, and cedars.

Above, i.e. in the roof or upper part, for this is opposed to the foundation. Costly stones and cedars, intermixed here the one and there the other.

12 And the great court round about was with three rows of hewed stones, and a row of cedar beams, both for the inner court of the house of the Lord, and for the porch of the house.

in that inner court of which the very same thing is said 1 Kings vi. 36. Otherwise it might seem very improper and impertinent to speak of the court of the Lord's house here, when he is treating only of Solomon's house. For the porch of the house, or of this house, to wit, of which I am here speaking, i.e. of the king's house, the porch whereof had pillars, ver. 6, and these both of stone and cedar, as may seem most probable, because the other pillars were such. And whereas the number and quality of the pillars of the porch was omitted, ver. 6, that defect is here supplied, and we are implicitly acquainted with both of them. But thus I speak with submission.

11 He was a widow's son of the tribe of Naphtali, and his father was a man of Tyre, a worker in brass, and he was filled with wisdom, and understanding, and cunning, to work all works in brass. And he came to king Solomon, and wrought all his work.

<sup>1 Heb 11</sup> A widow's son of the tribe of Naphtali. Object. He was one of the daughters of Dan, 2 Chron. ii. 14. Answer. So said Hiram, king of Tyre, there affirms, but he might easily mistake or be misinformed, especially being no Israelite, nor a careful observer of the distinction of tribes. Or she might be of Dan by her father, and of Naphtali by her mother, or by her husband, who was of that tribe, and therefore she was truly a widow of Naphtali. His father was a man of Tyre, either by his descent, being a Tyrian by birth, or by education and habitation, he or his father being given to the study of these arts and having planted themselves at Tyre for their improvement therein. However that was it was a singular providence of God that there was at that time so excellent a workman fit for so great and glorious work. All works in brass, and of gold and stone, and purple and blue, &c., as is affirmed, 2 Chron. ii. 14. But only his skill in brass is here mentioned, because he speaks only of the brass things which he made.

15 For he cast two pillars of brass, of eighteen cubits high apiece, and a line of twelve cubits did compass either of them about.

<sup>1 Heb 18 cubits</sup> He cast two pillars of brass, of which see 2 Kings xv. 16, 17, for he 21. Of eighteen cubits high apiece. Object. They are said to be thirty five cubits high 2 Chron. iii. 15. Answer. This place manifestly speaks of both the pillars, and thus of each or one pillar, as it is in the Hebrew. Object. But then it should have been thirty six cubits. Answer. I trust the odd half cubit is swallowed up either in the top or the chapter, or in the bottom of the basis of each pillar, as it is neglected in the account, as commonly small measures or numbers are. Line of twelve cubits did compass either of them about, so the diameter was four cubits, which considering the chapter of five cubits added to the height of each pillar 2 Chron. iii. 14, was not unproportionable to the height.

16 And he made two chapters of molten brass, to set upon the tops of the pillars, the height of the one chapter was five cubits, and the height of the other chapter was five cubits.

The height of the one chapter was five cubits. Object. It is but three cubits in 2 Kings xvi. 17. Answer. The word chapter is taken diversely as hundreds of other words are, either more largely for the whole, so it is five cubits, or more strictly either for the pommels as they are called 2 Chron. iii. 12, or for the cornice or crown, and so it was but three cubits, to which the pomegranates being added make it four cubits, as it is below ver. 19, and the other work upon it took up one cubit more, which in all made five cubits.

17 And nets of checker work and wreaths of chain work, for the chapters which were upon the top of the pillars, seven for the one chapter, and seven for the other chapter.

For the chapters, which these nets and wreaths did cover.

compass, either covering and as it were receiving and holding, the pomegranates, or being mixed with them.

18 And he made the pillars, and two rows round about upon the one network, to cover the chapters that were upon the top, with pomegranates: and so did he for the other chapter.

And he made; or, so he made, or framed, or perfected two rows, either of pomegranates, by comparing this with ver 20, or of some other curious work.

19 And the chapters that were upon the top of the pillars were of lily work in the porch, four cubits.

Of lily work, made like the leaves of lilies or such flowers. In the porch, or, as in the porch, i. e. such work as there was in the porch of the temple in which these pillars were set, ver 21, that so the work of the tops of these pillars might agree with that in the top of the porch so there is only an ellipsis or defect of the particle as which is frequent, as Gen xlv 9, Dent xxxii 22, Psal xl 1, Isa xli 8. Four cubits, of which see on ver 16.

20 And the chapters upon the two pillars had pomegranates also above over against the belly which was by the net work and the pomegranates were two hundred in rows round about upon the other chapter.

Over against the belly, so he calls the middle part of the chapter and that which pitted furthest out. The pomegranates were two hundred, the pomegranates are variously accounted in Scriptures. They are said to be ninety and are on a side of a pillar, i. e. in one row and in all one hundred Jer li 23, four great pomegranates between the several checker works being added to the first ninety six. And it must needs be granted that there were as many on the other side of the pillar or in the other row which makes them two hundred upon a pillar as is here said and four hundred upon both pillars, as they are numbered 2 Chron iv 13.

21 And he set up the pillars in the porch of the temple and he set up the right pillar, and called the name thereof Jachin and he set up the left pillar, and called the name thereof Boaz.

In the porch of the temple, where they were placed for ornament and magnificence, for they supported nothing.

Jachin signifies he in God shall establish to wit the temple and church, and people, and Boaz signifies in it or rather in him, (to answer the he in the former name) is strength. So these pillars being monuments of the strength which was in God, and would be put forth by God for the building and establishing of his temple and people if they were careful to keep the conditions required by God on their parts.

22 And upon the top of the pillars was lily work so was the work of the pillars finished.

23 And he made a molten sea, four cubits from the one brim to the other, it was round all about and his height was five cubits and a line of thirty cubits did compass it round about.

He made a molten sea, he melted the brass and cast it in the form of a great vessel for its vastness called a sea, which name is given by the Hebrews to all great collections of waters. The use of it was for the priests to wash their hands and feet, or other things as occasion required, with the water which they drew out of it. See 2 Chron iv 2. Compare Exod xxx 19, 20.

24 And under the brim of it round about there were knops compassing it, ten in a cubit, compassing the sea round about the knops were cast in two rows, when it was cast.

Knops, or carved or molten figures, for learned Hieronimus notes, that this word signifies the figures or pictures of all sorts, as flowers, beasts, &c. This general word is particularly explained of oxen, 2 Chron iv 3, unless there were so many figures, or sculptures of gourds, or other flowers, and in each of these a little ox's head. Ten in a cubit, so there were three hundred in all. The knops were cast together with the sea, not carved. In two rows it seems doubtful whether the second row had ten in each cubit and so there were three hundred more or whether the ten were distributed into five in each row.

25 It stood upon twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east and the sea was set above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward.

It stood upon twelve oxen of solid brass, which was necessary to be so great a weight. It is probably conceived that the water was by cocks drawn out of the mouths of these oxen. Three of these looked each way, partly for the more equal and convenient support of the vessel and partly that divers persons might draw water out of it at the same time which was frequently necessary, especially in great solemnities.

26 And it was an hand breadth thick, and the brim thereof was wrought like the brim of a cup with flowers of lilies, it contained two thousand baths.

Which amounts to five hundred barrels, each bath containing about eight gallons, the bath being a measure of the same bigness with an ephah. Ezek xlv 11. Object. This sea is said to contain three thousand baths. 2 Chron iv 5. Answer. Either there were two sort of baths, as of cubits the one common the other sacred, and the sacred held half as much more as the common, or rather he here speaks of what it did actually and usually contain, to wit, two thousand baths which was sufficient for use, and in 2 Chron iv 5 he speaks of what it could contain if it were filled to the brim as it is implied in the Hebrew words, which differ from this, and properly and thus, strength one itself, (to wit to receive and hold) much as it could, or being filled to its utmost capacity contained, or could contain three thousand baths.

27 And he made ten bases of brass, four cubits was the length of one base, and four cubits the breadth thereof, and three cubits the height of it.

He made ten bases upon which stood the ten layers mentioned in ver 38, in which they washed the parts of the sanctuary. 2 Chron iv 6.

28 And the work of the bases was on this manner they had borders, and the borders were between the ledges.

They had borders, broad brims, possibly for the more secure holding of the layers.

29 And on the borders that were between the ledges were lions, oxen, and cherubims and upon the ledges there was a base above and beneath the lions and oxen were certain additions made of thin work.

Phaw, so he calls the uppermost part of the base, for though it was above, yet it was a base to the layer which stood upon it. Certain additions; either as bases for the feet of the said lions and oxen, or only as further ornaments.

30 And every base had four brazen wheels, and plates of brass and the four corners thereof had undersetters under the laver more undersetters molten, at the side of every addition.

Four brazen wheels; whereby the bases and layers might be carried from place to place, as need required. Undersetters, Heb shoulders, fully so called, because they strongly supported the lavers, that they should not fall from their bases when the bases were removed together with the lavers.

31 And the mouth of it within the chapter and above was a cubit but the mouth thereof was round after the work of the base, a cubit and an half, and also upon the mouth of it were gravings with their borders foursquare, not round.

The mouth of it, so he calls that part in the top of the base which was left hollow that the foot of the laver might be let into it and fastened in it. Within the chapter is within the little base which he calls the chapter, because it rose up from and stood above the great base, as the head doth above the rest of the body. And above, above the chapter for the mouth went up and grew wider like a funnel. It was a cubit, either in breadth or rather in height, ver 35 whereof half a cubit was above the chapter or little base as is said, ver 33, and the other half is here implied to be within it and below it. A cubit and a half, to wit in compass. Four square, not round, so the most proper called the mouth was round but the outward part was square, is when a circle is made within a quadrangle.

32 And under the borders were four wheels, and the axletrees of the wheels were joined to the base and the height of a wheel was a cubit and half a cubit.

33 And the work of the wheels was like the work of a chariot wheel their axletrees, and their naves, and their fellows, and their spokes were all molten.

And cast together with the base.

34 And there were four undersettors to the four corners of one base and the undersettors were of the very base itself.

Not only of the same matter, but of the same piece being cast with it.

35 And in the top of the base was there a round compass of half a cubit high and on the top of the base the ledges thereof and the borders thereof were of the same.

36 For on the plates of the ledges thereof, and on the borders thereof, he graved cherubims, lions, and palm trees, according to the proportion of every one, and additions round about.

According to the proportion or, empty place according to the bulk of the spaces which were left empty for them, implying that they were smaller than those above mentioned.

37 After this manner he made the ten bases all of them had one casting, one measure, and one size.

38 ¶ Then made he ten lavers of brass one laver contained forty baths and every laver was four cubits and upon every one of the ten bases one laver.

Forty baths ten barrels of which see above, on ver 26.

39 And he put five bases on the right side of the house, and five on the left side of the house and he set the set on the right side of the house eastward over against the south.

On the right side, i.e. in the south side as is expressed in the end of the verse and as the right side is used above 1 Kings vi 9, 12 and xxvii 12. On the right side of the house, not within the house, in the priests' court where they washed either their hands or feet in the parts of the sacrifices. On the left side of the house, i.e. on the north side, for this is here opposed to the right or south side. Over against the south, i.e. in the south-east part, where the offerings were prepared.

40 ¶ And Hiram made the lavers, and the shovels, and the basons. So Hiram made an end of doing all the work that he made king Solomon for the house of the Lord.

41 The two pillars, and the two bowls of the chapters that were on the top of the two pillars, and the two networks to cover the two bowls of the chapters which were upon the top of the pillars;

42 And four hundred pomegranates for the two networks, even two rows of pomegranates for one network, to cover the two bowls of the chapters that were upon the pillars;

43 And the ten bases, and ten lavers on the bases,

44 And one sea, and twelve oxen under the sea,

45 And the pots, and the shovels, and the basons and all these vessels, which Hiram made to king Solomon for the house of the Lord, were of bright brass.

The pots, to wit the those parts of the sacrifices which the priests or officers were to eat. To these flesh-hooks are added, 2 Chron ix 16.

46 In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in the clay ground between Succoth and Zarthan.

In the clay upon it or in that clay, fat and tallow and tenuous and then it is fit to make moulds of all sorts into which the molten brass was to be poured.

47 And Solomon left all the vessels unweighed because they were exceeding many neither was the weight of the brass found out.

Solomon left all the vessels unweighed because the weighing of them was very troublesome, and to no purpose.

48 And Solomon made all the vessels that pertained unto the house of the Lord the altar of gold, and the table of gold, whereupon the shewbread was,

All the vessels that pertained unto the house of the Lord such as God by the mouth of Moses had commanded to be made for his house and service and such as Moses had made only these were larger and richer and more according to the difference of the temple and tabernacle, and Solomon's vast riches and the poverty of Moses and the Israelites at that time. The altar of gold, to wit, of incense as appears from 1 Chron xxviii 18 where this is mentioned among the things for which David left gold, and Solomon is here said to build it, and therefore this cannot be that altar made by Moses, Exod xxx 23, 21, xxx 1, 3, which altar was of shittim wood where it was made of cedar and covered with gold 1 Kings vi 20. The table of gold whereupon the shewbread was, under which, by synecdoche are comprehended both all the utensils belonging to it, and the other ten tables which he made together with it 1 Chron ix 7.

49 And the candlesticks of pure gold, five on the right side, and five on the left, before the oracle, with the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs of gold.

The candlesticks, which were ten, according to the number of the tables, where as Moses made but one, whereby might be signified the progress of the light of sacred truth which was now grown clearer than it was in Moses' time and should shine brighter and brighter until the perfect day of gospel light. Of pure gold, of massy and fine gold before the oracle, in the holy place. The flowers wrought upon the candlesticks, as it had formerly been. See on Exod xxx 31

50 And the bowls, and the snuffers, and the basons, and the spoons, and the censers of pure gold, and the hinges of gold, both for the doors of the inner house, the most holy place, and for the doors of the house to wit, of the temple

51 So was ended all the work that king Solomon made for the house of the Lord. And Solomon brought in the things which David his father had dedicated; even the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, did he put among the treasures of the house of the Lord

The silver and the gold, either, first all of it, and so Solomon built it wholly at his own charge or secondly, so much of it as was left. The vessels, those which David had dedicated, and with them the altar of Moses and some other of the old utensils which were now laid aside for better being put in the room of them

CHAP VIII

The feast of the dedication of the temple, the ark of the covenant with the holy instruments are brought into it, the Lord giveth a token of his presence 1-11 Solomon's blessing and thanksgiving, 12-21 His prayer, 22-61 His sacrifice of peace-offerings, 62-66

THEN Solomon assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto king Solomon in Jerusalem, that they might bring up the ark of the covenant of the Lord out of the city of David, which is Zion

The elders of Israel, the senators, and judges and rulers. The heads of the tribes for each tribe had a peculiar head or governor. The chief of the fathers, the chief persons of every great family in each tribe. Unto king Solomon, unto himself, the antecedent noun being put for the relative and re-upon pronoun as is frequent with the Hebrews. In Jerusalem, where the temple was built and was finished. That they might bring up the ark to the temple this hill of Sion upon which it was built whether the ark was now to carry the ark in a solemn pomp, that by the then attend once they might make a public profession of that service and respect and obedience which they owed unto that God who was graciously and gloriously present in the ark. Out of the city of David, where David had placed the ark. 2 Sam vi 12, 17 See on 1 Kings ii 10, in 3 Which is Zion, which is called Zion, because it was built upon that hill

2 And all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto king Solomon at the feast in the month Ethanim, which is the seventh month

All the men of Israel, not only the chief men who were particularly invited, but a vast number of the common people, as being forward to see and to join in this great and glorious solemnity. At the feast understand either, first the feast of tabernacles. Or rather, secondly, The feast of the dedication, to which Solomon had invited them. It was before that feast for that began on the 15th day of the 7th month, Lev xxiii 34, but this began at the feast seven days before that feast, for Solomon and the people kept the feast for fourteen days here, ver 15, 16 seven days for the dedication of the temple and seven other days for that of tabernacles, and after both these were finished, he sent all the people to their homes on the twentieth day of the month. See 2 Chron vi 9, 10 Which is the seventh month, which time he chose with common respect to his people's convenience, because now they had gathered in all their fruits, and now they were come up to Jerusalem to celebrate the feast of tabernacles. Quert. The temple was not finished till the eighth month, 1 Kings vi 38, how then could he invite them in the seventh month? Answer. This was the seventh month of the next year; for although the temple in all its parts was finished the year before, yet the details of it, described Chap vi, were not then fully finished, but took up a considerable time afterward, and many preparations were to be made for this great and extraordinary occasion

For although the Levites might do this, Numb iv 15, yet the priests did it at this time, partly for the greater honour of the solemnity, and partly because the Levites might not enter into the holy place, much less into the holy of holies, where it was to be placed, into which the priests themselves might not have entered, if the high priest alone could have done it. Observe The Levites are said to have done this 2 Chron v 4 Answer That is most true, because all the priests were Levites, though all the Levites were not priests

4 And they brought up the ark of the Lord, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle even those did the priests and the Levites bring up

The tabernacle of the congregation, that made by Moses, which doubtless before this time had been translated from Gibeon to Zion and now together with other things, was put into the treasures of the Lord's house, to prevent all the superstition use and profane abuse of it, and to oblige the people to come up to Jerusalem, as the only place where God would now be worshipped. The priests and Levites, the priests carrying some, and the Levites, others

5 And king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel, that were assembled unto him, were with him before the ark, sacrificing sheep and oxen, that could not be told nor numbered for multitude

Sacrificing sheep and oxen, either first In the way, as David did upon the like occasion 2 Sam vi 13 Or secondly When the ark was come into the priests court, where the altar stood whence it was so easy to be conveyed to that place where the people never beheld it more. Or rather thirdly When the ark was seated in its place for either which they might in the way or passage offer some sacrifices. David did, yet that was not a proper season to offer so many sacrifices as could not be told nor numbered, as these are here said to be which for better agree with what is more particularly related below, ver 62-61 which is here signified in the general by way of intimation is frequently done in the scripture in like cases

6 And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the Lord unto his place, into the oracle of the house, to the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims

Into the oracle of the house i. e. to that part of the house which is called the oracle 1 Kings vi 5, 16, 19, 23, &c, as it here follows the most holy place. Under the wing of the cherubims to wit, of Solomon's new made cherubim 1 Kings vi 23, 24, 27, not of the Mosiac cherubims which were far less and unmovably fixed to the ark, Exod xxxvii 7, 8, and therefore, together with the ark, were put under the wings of these cherubims

7 For the cherubims spread forth their two wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and the staves thereof above

8 And they drew out the staves, that the ends of the staves were seen out of the holy place before the oracle. They were not seen without and they are unto this day

They drew out the staves, not withdrew them

prossly forbidden, Exod xxv 15, Numb iv 6, but in part in the holy place, either first, Properly so called, which place was indeed before the oracle. But how then could it be said that they were not men without, to wit, in the holy place? For that they should be seen without, to wit, in the court, was so ridiculous a conceit, that it had been absurd to suppose it or to say any thing to prevent it. Nor is it much better what others say, that these ends of the staves did discover themselves through the veil, which they thrust forward though they did not pierce through it, for neither in that case had they been seen, and besides, there was a wall as well as a veil in that place. Or rather secondly, In the most holy place, which is oft called by way of eminency the holy place, as Exod xxix 30, xxxix 1, 17, 30, 38, xvi 2, 16, 17, 20. And the Hebrew words rendered before the oracle may be as well rendered as than the oracle, the phrase al pene being so used Gen i 1. The Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters, i.e. in the waters, or in that confused heap of earth and water in which God was now working, that he might bring it into order and use, and Gen i 20 where it is well rendered in the open firmament of heaven, i.e. of the air. And thus the whole is most true, they were seen out to wit without the ark and the cherubims which covered all the other parts, but they were not seen without the oracle to wit in the holy place, strictly so called, for how could they be seen there when there was both a wall and a thick veil between that place and the oracle. And the staves were left in this posture that the high priest might hereby be certainly guided to that very particular place where he was one day in a year to sprinkle blood and to offer incense before the ark, which otherwise he might mistake in that dark place where the ark was wholly covered with the wings of the great cherubims, which stood between him and the ark when he entered thither. Some conceive that the door of the oracle stood always open (which yet is very improbable) and that they who were in the door might see the end of the staves though by reason of the darkness of the place they could see nothing else there.

9. Then saw nothing in the ark save the two tables of stone which Moses put there at Horeb, when the Lord made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt.

Nothing in the ark, strictly and properly, for in a more large sense, as is oft taken for by error, is a confused and dark hath been proved before, so the pot of manna and tables too were also in it Heb ix 1. For by it to wit in the most holy place, before the ark of the testimony, which God commanded Moses to put there, it is expressed, Exod xxv 11, Numb xxi 10 and not strictly in it. But of this more, God assisting on Heb ix 1.

10. And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, that the cloud filled the house of the Lord.

Out of the holy place, either first, The most holy place, into which the priests had now entered to carry in the ark. Or rather, secondly, The holy place, where they might have stood to minister if the cloud had not hindered them, as may be gathered from the next verse. The cloud, the usual token of God's glorious presence. See Exod xxx 10, xxxv 15, 16. Numb ix 15. Filled the house of the Lord, partly in testimony of his gracious acceptance of this work and their service, and partly to beget an awe and reverence in them and in all others, when they approach to God.

11. So that the priest could not stand to minister because of the cloud, for the glory of the Lord had filled the house of the Lord.

Because of the cloud, because the cloud was either so bright that it dazzled the eyes, or so dark, that it struck them with horror and confusion, as is implied in the next verse.

12. Then spake Solomon, The Lord said that he would dwell in the thick darkness.

Perceiving both priests and people struck with horror and wonder at this darkness, he minds them that this was no sign of God's dislike or disfavour, as some of them might possibly imagine, but a token of his approbation, and grace, and special presence among them. The Lord said, not in express words, but by plain consequence, because he hath declared both by his words and actions, that he would manifest his presence with and dwelling among his people by a dark cloud, in which he would appear. See Exod. xxi 21, 22, xxiv 16, xl 35, Numb ix 15, Deut ii 11, v 22, Psal xvi 12, xcvi 12.

13. I have surely built thee an house to dwell in, a settled place for thee to abide in for ever.

I have surely built thee an house to dwell in, I perceive by this thick darkness that thou art coming among us, and therefore make haste and come, O thou blessed Guest, into the dwelling-place which I have built by thy command, and for thy service. A settled place for thee to abide in for ever, not a tabernacle which was made to be carried from place to place, but a durable, and I hope, perpetual habitation.

14. And the king turned his face about, and blessed all the congregation of Israel (and all the congregation of Israel stood.)

The king turned his face about, from the temple, towards which he was looking, to observe that thick and extraordinary darkness to the body of the congregation. Blessed all the congregation of Israel, or, blessed (to wit, the Lord, which is easily understood from the following words, in which he only, bleareth or praiseth God, but doth not bless the people at all) with (so the Hebrew eth is oft used, as hath been showed before) all the congregation. Although he might do both first bless the congregation, which possibly he might do in that solemn and appointed form, Numb vi, which therefore it was needless to repeat here, and then blessed God. And indeed he doth both here below where the same words are used, ver 55, 56 &c. The congregation of Israel stood, partly in way of devotion to God whom they adored, and partly out of respect to the king.

15. And he said, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, which spake with his mouth unto David my father, and hath with his hand fulfilled it, saying, Praised be God both for his grace in making such a promise, and for his goodness and truth in fulfilling it.

16. Since the day that I brought forth my people Israel out of Egypt I chose no city out of all the tribes of Israel to build an house, that my name might be there, but I chose David to be over my people Israel.

Since the day that I brought forth my people Israel out of Egypt, until David's time, for then he did choose Jerusalem. I chose no city, i.e. I did not declare my choice of it, for so choosing is used for declaring or revealing one's choice, as Deut xii 1, 2 Chron vi 5, Zach ii 12 and things are oft said to be done when they are only manifested or declared to be such in which sense God is said to be justified, Psal li 1 and men to be guilty, Hos vi 1. Otherwise, to speak properly, whatsoever God chooses he chooses from eternity. That my name might be there, that my presence, and grace, and worship and glory might be there. I chose David and in and with him the tribe of Judah of which he was, and Jerusalem, where he dwelt, which is here implied by the opposition of this to the former part of the verse.

17. And it was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the Lord God of Israel.

In the heart of David my father, in his desire and purpose, as this or the like phrase is used, 1 Sam x 7, xiv 7, 2 Sam vii 3.

18. And the Lord said unto David my father, Whereas it was in thine heart to build an house unto my name, thou didst well that it was in thine heart

Thy intention and affection was well-pleasing to me

19 Nevertheless (thou shalt not build the house, but thy son that shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house unto my name.

20 And the Lord hath performed his word that he spake, and I am risen up in the room of David my father and sit on the throne of Israel, as the Lord promised, and have built an house for the name of the Lord God of Israel

21 And I have set there a place for the ark, wherein is the covenant of the Lord, which he made with our fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egypt

The covenant of the Lord, i. e. the tables of the covenant, by a metonymy, wherein the conditions of God's covenant with Israel are written

22 ¶ And Solomon stood before the altar of the Lord in the presence of all the congregation of Israel and spread forth his hands toward heaven

Solomon stood upon a scaffold set up for him in the court of the temple, 2 Chron. vi. 1. Before the altar of the Lord, with his face towards the altar of burnt offerings. In the presence of all the congregation of Israel who stood round about the scaffold, in the same court with him

23 And he said 'Lord God of Israel, there is no God like thee, in heaven above or on earth beneath, who keepeth covenant and mercy with thy servants that walk before thee with all their heart

24 Who hast kept with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him: thou spakest also with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand as it is this day

That thou promisedst him, that branch of thy promise concerning the building of this house by David, 2 Sam.

25 Therefore now, Lord God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him, saying, 'I thine shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit on the throne of Israel, so that thy children take heed to their way, that they walk before me as thou hast walked before me

Keep with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him, make good the other branch of thy promise, and do not lose the glory of thy faithfulness which now is manifested

26 And now, O God of Israel let thy word, I pray thee, be verified, which thou spakest unto thy servant David my father

27 But will God indeed dwell on the earth? behold, the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee, how much less this house that I have builded?

Reflecting upon God's performance of his promise concerning the building of the temple, he breaks forth into admiration. Is it possible that the great and high and lofty God should stoop so low, as to take up his dwelling here among men? O astonishing condescension! The heaven, all this vast space of the visible heaven. And heaven of heavens, the third and highest, and therefore the largest heaven, called the heaven of heavens here, as also Deut. x

14; Psal cxlviii. 4, for its eminency and comprehensiveness. Cannot contain thee; for thy essence reacheth far beyond them, being omnipresent. How much less this house that I have builded? this house therefore was not built as if it were proportionable to thy greatness, or could contain thee, but only that therein we might serve and glorify thee

28 Yet have thou respect unto the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O Lord my God, to hearken unto the cry and to the prayer, which thy servant prayeth before thee to day

Though thou art not comprehended within this place, yet show thyself to be graciously present here by accepting and granting my present requests here tendered unto thee,

29 That thine eyes may be open toward this house night and day, even toward the place of which thou hast said 'My name shall be there: that thou mayest hearken unto the prayer which thy servant shall make toward this place

That thine eyes may be open to behold, to wit with all eye of favour and compassion. So it is a synecdochical expression compare Psal xxxiii. 19, xxxiv. 15; Zech. vi. 1. My name my presence and glory and grace. See above ver. 16. Towards this place, this temple to which Solomon did now look, and it may be, point, and towards which the godly Fathers directed their looks in their prayers. See Deut. vi. 10

30 And hearken thou to the supplication of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, when they shall pray toward this place: and hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place: and when thou hearest, forgive

Thou dwelling place which he adds that the people might not idolize the temple nor presume upon it as if God were now tied to them as having no other dwelling place, and to direct them in all their addresses to God in his temple to lift up their eyes above it even to heaven where God's most true and most glorious dwelling place is. And when thou hearest forgive, to wit sins of thy people private and even of their prayers. Such if not pardoned will certainly hinder the access of all their prayers and the issue of all thy blessings upon them

31 ¶ If any man trespass against his neighbour, and an oath be laid upon him to cause him to swear, and the oath come: I will be true unto him in this house

If a man trespass, i. e. if he be accused of a trespass. An oath be laid upon him either by the judge, or by the party accusing him, or by the accused person himself, which was usual, when there were no witnesses. See Exod. xxi. 11. Numb. x. 12. 15, &c. And the oath come before thee in this house, for here God, who was appealed to as witness, was especially present. Hence the heathens used to swear at their altar.

32 Then hear thou in heaven, and do, and judge thy servants, condemning the wicked, to bring his way upon his head, and justifying the righteous, to give him according to his righteousness

To bring his way, i. e. the just recompence of his wicked action and curse. Justifying the righteous to give him according to his righteousness, to vindicate him, and to manifest his integrity

33 ¶ When thy people Israel be smitten down before the enemy, because they have sinned against thee, and shall turn again to thee, and confess thy name, and pray, and make supplication unto thee in this house

knowledging their sins, and thy justice, and by accepting the punishment of their iniquity, and by trusting to thy power and goodness alone for their deliverance

34 Then hear thou in heaven, and forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land which thou gavest unto their fathers

*Bring them again from the land into which they are supposed to be carried by their enemies, into Canaan. Quest If they were banished into a strange land, how could they pray in this house as they are said to do, ver 33? Answer 1 That may be rendered to or towards this house as it is expressed ver 29 30. The Hebrew preposition leth, being set put for to, to, or towards. 2 This may be understood of divers persons, and so the sense is this. When the people of Israel be defeated in battle, and many of them brethren be taken prisoners, and carried into captivity, if then their brethren remaining in the land, shall heartily pray for their captive brethren, they shall be delivered.*

35 ¶ When heaven is shut up, and there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee, if they pray toward this place, and confess thy name, and turn from their sin when thou afflictest them.

Heaven, the lower heaven, in which the clouds are. Deut xi 17, Psal cxlvi 8. I shut up the heaven as compared to a great store house in God's keeping out of which nothing can be had so long, as it is close shut up. If they turn from their sin when thou afflictest them, do not reject their prayers. Because they are forced from their afflictions, as thou mayest justly do.

36 Then hear thou in heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel: that thou teach them the good way wherein they should walk, and give rain upon thy land, which thou hast given to thy people for an inheritance.

*That thou teach them, if it thou in heaven paid and thou hast recommended unto them may teach us to teach them. Or rather as our translators render the very words, 2 Chron vi 27, when thou hast taught, or hast taught them not only by thy word, for that was done before, but by their afflictions, which is one of God's schools, and especially by thy Spirit enlightening their minds, and informing their hearts, that they may learn and profit both by the word and by their affliction. And this is here fully added to show that he could not expect, and did not desire from God the pardon of their sins, but upon God's promise to visit upon them true repentance. The good way, the way or will of God, or the way of their duty, as the following words explain it, which is most richly called the good way here. 1 Sam vi 23, because it is both just and holy, and therefore good in itself and good that is, both delightful and profitable to those that walk in it. The meaning is, when thou hast effectually taught them, and they have thoroughly learned how to please and serve thee acceptably, and to walk before thee in the way which thou hast prescribed them. Give rain The order of Solomon's prayer is very observable. First and chiefly he prays for their repentance and forgiveness, which is the chief blessing, and the only solid foundation of all other mercies, and then he prays for the temporal mercies, thereby teaching us what to mind, and desire principally in our prayers, which also Christ hath taught us in his perfect pattern and form of prayer, when in that, but his petition for outward, and all the rest are for spiritual blessings.*

37 ¶ If there be in the land famine, if there be pestilence, blasting, mildew, locust, or if there be caterpillar, if their enemy besedge them in the land of their cities, whatsoever plague, whatsoever sickness there be.

Caterpillar, 1. a plague of locusts, or caterpillars, infesting a land by their great numbers, and venomous or noxious qualities, of which see Exod x 5, Deut xxxiii

42, Psal cv 34, 35. Whatsoever plague, that chiefly signifies an extraordinary judgment sent from God.

38 What prayer and supplication soever be made by any man, or by all thy people Israel, which shall know every man the plague of his own heart, and spread forth his hands toward this house.

The plague of his own heart, i. e. either, 1 His sin, which may be called the plague of his heart, in opposition to the other plagues here mentioned, which afflict only the body, or outward man, so the sense is, Who by their afflictions are brought to a true and serious sense of their worst and inward plague of their sins, which are most fully called the plague of the heart, because that is both the principal seat of sin and the fountain from whence all actual sins flow. Matt xi 19. Or rather, 2 His affliction; for so this is explained in the parallel place, 2 Chron vi 28, (which is the more considerable, because that book was written after this to explain what was dark or doubtful, and to supply what was lacking in this,) when every one shall know his own sin, and his own grief; which is not unfitly called the plague of his heart, because it was that plague which his heart was most afflicted with, which pained him at the very heart, as the phrase is Jer. iv 19; compare Psal lv 4, which caused him most vexation or grief, which is a passion of the heart, and so the sense is, Who shall know to be duly and deeply sensible of his affliction, and the hand of God in it, and his sin as the cause of it, for words of knowledge in Scripture do very frequently note such a kind of knowledge as affects and changeth the heart, and reforms the whole course of a man's life, for which cause men of ungodly lives are frequently said in Scripture not to know God, or Christ, or his word, &c. And therefore no man knows his sin in a Scripture sense, but he who has the word who turneth unto him that smiteth him, and merely stretcheth to the Lord for relief.

39 Then hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place, and forgive, and do, and give to every man according to his ways, whose heart thou knowest (for thou even thou only, knowest the hearts of all the children of men).

According to his ways according to his repentance or unrepentance. I pray with more hope and confidence, because I do not desire that thou wouldst deliver such as are unrepentant of their judgment, and then sin, but only those who truly know the plague of their own heart in manner before explained. Thou knowest thou knowest who are truly penitent and who are not, and therefore the granting of my request will be no dishonour to thy government, nor injury to thy holy nature.

40 ¶ That they may fear thee all the days of their life, that they live in the land which thou gavest unto our fathers.

That they may fear thee that when thou hast first smitten them, and then so eminently delivered them, and then in answer to their prayer, they may hereby be taught to fear thee, and thy justice, and thy goodness.

41 Moreover concerning a stranger, that is not of thy people Israel, but cometh out of a far country for thy name's sake.

This may note either, 1 The end of his coming, that he may worship and glorify thy name, or rather, 2 The motive or occasion of his coming, which was the same of God's greatness and power and kindness to his people, as the following words explain it.

42 (For they shall hear of thy great name, and of thy strong hand, and of thy stretched out arm,) when he shall come and pray toward this house.

43 Hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for, that all people of the earth may know thy name, to fear thee, as do thy people Israel, and that they may know that this house, which I have builded, is called by thy name.

Do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for, to wit, agreeable to thy will and word, for he would not have thou heard, if thy had prayed for any thing dishonourable to God, or destructive to his people. It is observable, that his prayer for the strangers is more large and comprehensive than for the Israelites, that thereby he might both show his public spirit, and encourage strangers to the worship of the true God. That all people may know thy name, to wit, that they do thy people Israel, whereby we see how sincerely and heartily the ancient and godly Jews desired the conversion of the Gentiles, whereas the latter and degenerate Jews, in the days of Christ and of the apostles, did ever oppose it, and fret at it. It called by thy name, i. e. is owned not only by us but by thyself is thy house, the only place in the world to which thou wilt vouchsafe thy presence and protection, and wherein thou wilt be publicly and solemnly served.

44 ¶ If thy people go out to battle against their enemy, whithersoever thou shalt send them, and shall pray unto the Lord, † toward the city which thou hast chosen, and toward the house that I have build for thy name † Whithersoever thou shalt send them, i. e. in justice and by thy warrant or commission, whereby he impleth that it is unlawful for them to undertake any war merely for their own glory or lust, or to enlarge their empire beyond its due bounds, and that they could not with safe conscience pray to God for his blessing upon such a war, and shall pray unto the Lord, whereby he instructs them that they should not trust either to the strength or justice of their arms, but only to God's help and blessing which they were to pray for. The city which thou hast chosen, i. e. wit, for thy dwelling place, and the seat of thy temple. I build the house that I have built for thy name, for to it they were to turn their faces in prayer, partly thereby to put themselves to be the worshippers of the true God, in opposition to idol, and that they should be helped from him and from no other, and partly to strengthen forth in God's promises and covenant, the tables whereof were contained in that house.

45 Then hear thou in heaven their prayer and their supplication, and maintain their cause.

46 If they sin against thee, (for there is no man that sineth not) and thou be angry with them, and deliver them to the enemy, so that they carry them away captives unto the land of the enemy, far or near,

There is no man that sinneth not, the universality of corruption of man's whole race and nature makes me perceive that they will fall into sin, and withal, makes me to hope that thou wilt not be severe to deal with them as they deserve.

47. ¶ Yet if they shall forget themselves in the land whither they were carried captives, and repent, and make supplication unto thee in the land of them that carried them captives, saying, We have sinned, and have done perversely, we have committed wickedness,

If they shall bethink themselves, Heb bring back their hearts to wit, their sin, expressed ver 46 and implied in the following word, repent. Saying, sensibly, and with an honest heart, We have sinned &c.

48 And so return unto thee with all their heart, and with all their soul, in the land of their enemies, which led them away captive, and pray unto thee toward their land, which thou gavest unto their fathers, the city which thou hast chosen, and the house which I have built for thy name.

With all their heart, and with all their soul, i. e. sincerely, universally, and steadfastly.

19 Then hear thou their prayer and their supplication in heaven thy dwelling place, and maintain their cause,

Heb then fight against their invaders and oppressors. For they had forfeited all their rights to God only, but not to their enemies whom though God used as scourges to chastise his people's sins, yet they had no pretence of right to their land nor any regard to it but only minded the satisfaction of their own lusts and interests. See Isa x 5, 6. xlvii 6. Zech i 15.

50 And forgive thy people that have sinned against thee, and all their transgressions wherein they have transgressed against thee, and give them compassion before them who carried them captive, that they may have compassion on them.

May gently use them whilst they are there and procure liberty to their captives to go to their own land.

¶ I or they be thy people, and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest forth out of Egypt from the midst of the furnace of iron.

They be thy people, for howsoever they may sin against thee or suffer from men yet still remember that they are thy peculiar people and therefore do thou pity and pardon and save them. The furnace of iron, i. e. called after from the metal melted in it, or rather from the matter of which it consisted, an iron furnace being more hot and terrible than one of brick or stone. He under stand hereby, their cruel bondage and painful labours. See Gen 15 20.

52 That thine eyes may be open unto the supplication of thy servant, and unto the supplication of thy people Israel, to hearken unto them in all that they call for unto thee.

53 For thou didst separate them from among all the people of the earth, to be thine inheritance, as thou spakest by the hand of Moses thy servant, when thou broughtest our fathers out of Egypt, O Lord God.

Thou didst separate them to be thine inheritance, thou hast begun to build a work of great and I promise mercy to them, do not give occasion to their enemies to think thou art unable to finish it, or that thou art unstable in thy words and counsels, or unkind to thine own children.

54 And it was so, that when Solomon had made an end of praying all this prayer and supplication unto the Lord, he arose from before the altar of the Lord, from kneeling on his knees with his hands spread up to heaven.

55 And he stood, and blessed all the congregation of Israel with a loud voice saying,

56 Blessed be the Lord, that hath given rest unto his people Israel according to all that he promised: there hath not failed one word of all his good promises, which he promised by the hand of Moses his servant.

There hath not failed one word of all his good promises, i. e. he kept all that he promised. See the like Josh, xxi 45, xxii 11, 2 Kings x 10.

57 The Lord our God be with us, as he was with our fathers: let him not leave us, nor forsake us.

The Lord our God be with us, by the presence of his grace and mercy.

58 That he may incline our hearts unto him to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and his statutes, and his judgments, which he commanded our fathers.

That he may incline our hearts unto him; that he may not only bless us with outward prosperity and glory, but especially with spiritual blessings, and that as he hath given us his word and statutes to teach and direct us so he would by his Holy Spirit effectually incline and engage our hearts to keep and obey them.

59 And let these my words, where-with I have made supplication before the Lord, be nigh unto the Lord our God day and night, that he maintain the cause of his servant, and the cause of his people Israel at all times, as the matter shall require.

Of his servant, i. e. of me as ver. 29. 30, their king and consequently of all my successors. And the cause of his people Israel, according to mine or their various necessities and exigencies.

60 That all the people of the earth may know that the Lord is God, and that there is none else.

Both by our virtuous and holy lives, to which thou inclinest us by thy grace, and by the eminent manifestations of thy power and goodness in defending and delivering us from all the assaults and devices of our enemies.

61 Let your heart therefore be perfect with the Lord our God, to walk in his statutes, and to keep his commandments, as at this day.

Perfect i. e. sincere and serious in your purposes of obedience: for unless perfection he himself taught them was not to be expected here. 1 Chron. vii. 20.

62 ¶ And the king, and all Israel with him, offered sacrifice before the Lord.

63 And Solomon offered a sacrifice of peace offerings, which he offered unto the Lord, two and twenty thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep. So the king and all the children of Israel dedicated the house of the Lord.

Solomon offered a sacrifice by the hands of the priests. A hundred and twenty thousand sheep, not all in one day, but in the seven or it may be in the fourteen days, mentioned ver. 65. So i. e. by these sacrifices and holy exercises. Dedicated the house of the Lord i. e. began to set it apart for the work and service of God.

64 The same day did the king hallow the middle of the court that was before the house of the Lord: for there he offered burnt offerings, and meat offerings, and the fat of the peace offerings: because the brasen altar that was before the Lord was too little to receive the burnt offerings, and meat offerings, and the fat of the peace offerings.

The middle of the court to wit of the priests' court, in which the great altar was. Thus he consecrated as he did the great altar, so wit, by sacrifices. But with this difference, that he consecrated that for time and perpetual use, but this only for the present time and occasion being warranted to do so both by the necessity of it for God's service, and for the present solemn work, for which the brasen altar was not sufficient, as it here follows; and by the direction of God's Spirit wherewith Solomon was endowed, as being a prophet as well as a king. Here therefore he suddenly reared up divers altars, which after this solemnity were demolished.

65 And at that time Solomon held a feast, and all Israel with him, a great congregation, from the entering in of Hamath unto the river of Egypt, before the Lord our God, seven days and even fourteen days.

Held a feast, i. e. kept the solemnity. From the entering in of Hamath unto the river of Egypt, the usual and known bounds of the land, in the utmost length of it; of which see Numb. xxxiv. 8, Josh. xiii. 5, Judg. iii. 3. Before the Lord i. e. before the temple, and as in God's presence. Seven days and seven days, seven for the dedication of the temple or altar, and the other seven for the feast of tabernacles, as may be gathered from 2 Chron. vii. 9. And it seems to be expressed in this manner, to intimate that these fourteen days of rejoicing were not all together, but that there was some interval between them, which indeed was necessary because the day of atonement was on the tenth day of this month Lev. xxiii. 27. And because these fourteen days ended on the twenty-second day, 2 Chron. vii. 10, it may seem most probable that the feast of the dedication was kept before the tenth day, and the feast of tabernacles some days after it.

66 On the eighth day he sent the people away, and they blessed the king, and went unto their tents joyful and glad of heart for all the goodness that the Lord had done for David his servant, and for Israel his people.

Solomon having ended with the people in the solemn assembly, which was kept on the eighth day, in the close of that day and service he took his solemn farewell, and dismissed them with his blessing, and the next morning when the heralds and elders who came to Solomon upon this special summons above ver. 3 and with them divers of the people came to take their leave of the king he sent them away. And so this place agrees very well with 2 Chron. vii. 9. 10. They blessed the king, i. e. they prayed to God to bless him, according to their duty and custom. Or they praised him for his great care and pains in building of the temple and setting up God's worship among them. The goodness that the Lord had done for David, in giving him a sure house and a wise and religious son by whom he had now fulfilled the promise made to David about the building of the temple.

CHAP. IX.

God's covenant, in a second vision, with Solomon, 1—9. The mutual presents of Solomon and Hiram, 10—11. Shemy holds built by Solomon 15—19. The Gethites are bound men the Israelites not so, 20—23. Pharaoh's daughter removed to her house, 24. Solomon's yearly solemn sacrifices 25. Hiram's fetcheth gold from Ophir 26—28.

AND it came to pass, when Solomon had finished the building of the house of the Lord, and the king's house, and all Solomon's desire which he was pleased to do.

2 That the Lord appeared to Solomon the second time, as he had appeared unto him at Gibeon.

To wit, in a dream or vision, for that which is mentioned chap. vi. 11, seems to have been imparted unto him in some prophet or messenger sent from God with that command. The time of this revelation was either, 1. After Solomon's buildings, as the words thus rendered plainly imply. And if it seem strange that God should not reveal this purpose and sentence of his concerning the temple till so many years after the finishing of it, it must be con-considered, 1. That as it is an act of God's singular grace, when he doth thus reveal himself to any person, so it is, but meet he should choose his own time for it. 2. That God had presently after the finishing of the temple at the feast of the dedication of it, sufficiently showed his acceptance and approbation of it by that glorious cloud, chap vii 10, 11, and therefore this revelation was not then necessary.

3. That God might choose that as the fittest time for giving Solomon the following admonition, when he perceived that his heart began to be lifted up in pride for his sumptuous and magnificent buildings, &c., and that he was grown vain, and careless, and secure, and therefore most needed such an awakening oracle. Or, 2. Presently after the building of the temple, as may be thought from the matter of this revelation, which seems best to suit with that time when it was newly built, and when Solomon's prayer here mentioned was newly made, for among the following words contain God's answer to that prayer it seems very probable, that the answer should come so many years after it. But then this second verse, and the rest even to ver 11 are to be enclosed with a parenthesis, and the place must be thus rendered, ver 2. For (so the Hebrew text is so rendered) the Lord appeared, or had appeared, to Solomon, &c. ver 3. And the Lord had said unto him &c. And this parenthesis may seem to have a foundation in ver 10, where the first verse (in substance, though not in the very same words) is repeated, as is usual after long digressions: and then he completes the sentence ver 11, &c. which till then had been suspended. Nor are such long parentheses without example in Scripture. See my Latin Synopsis on Rom. x. 12 &c., Eph. iii. 1, &c., Rev. xiii. 7.

3 And the Lord said unto him, I have heard thy prayer and thy supplication, that thou hast made before me: I have hallowed this house, which thou hast built, to put my name there for ever: and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.

I have hallowed this house, I have by my glorious presence in the cloud, and by my acceptance of the sacrifices sacrificed it to my proper use and service. For ever, is long as the Mosaiac dispensation lasts, where is hitherto my name and worship hath been successively in several places. Mine eyes, i. my watchful and gracious providence. Mine heart, my true and tender affection. Shall be there, shall be towards this place and people. Perpetually, upon a condition of your obedience, as it here follows.

4 And if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, in integrity of heart, and in uprightness, to do according to all that I have commanded thee, and wilt keep my statutes and my judgments.

As David thy father walked, who, though he incurred in some things, yet in the general course of his life was up right and faithful towards me.

5 Then I will establish the throne of thy kingdom upon Israel for ever, as I promised to David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man upon the throne of Israel.

Then, upon that condition, for my promise to David was conditional.

6 But if ye shall at all turn from following me, ye or your children, and will not keep my commandments and my statutes which I have set before you, but go and serve other gods, and worship them.

If ye shall at all turn from following me, or rather if ye shall wholly turn, &c., if you shall wilfully and obstinately depart from God, and violate his laws, as the denbling of the word implies. Whereby he also intimates that he would not be so rigid and severe towards them, as to mark every thing that was amiss, but would bear with much, as he did in David, &c., only that he would not endure a total defection from him.

7 Then will I cut off Israel out of the land which I have given them, and this house, which I have hallowed for my name, will I cast out of my sight, and Israel shall be a proverb and a byword among all people.

Will I cast out of my sight, I will not regard it: I will take away my protection and gracious providence from it. Israel shall be a proverb, their miseries shall be named proverbially, to express extreme calamities. See Deut. xxviii. 37.

8 And at this house, which is high, every one that passeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss, and they shall say, Why hath the Lord done thus unto this land, and to this house?

Which is high, i. exalted in its privileges, glorious, and renowned. The particle which is oft understood and is here fully supplied out of 2 Chron. vii. 21, where it is expressed. Shall be astonished at its unexpected and wonderful ruin. Shall hiss by way of contempt and derision. See Jer. xix. 8, xlix. 17, 18.

9 And they shall answer, Because they forsook the Lord their God who brought forth their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and have taken hold upon other gods, and have worshipped them, and served them: therefore hath the Lord brought upon them all this evil.

10 And it came to pass at the end of twenty years, when Solomon had built the two houses, the house of the Lord, and the king's house, 11 Aom Hiram the king of Tyre had furnished Solomon with cedar trees and fir trees and with gold, according to all his desire, that then king Solomon gave him twenty cities in the land of Judah.

On which as both our translators as it has been proved before, are of quite contrary meaning, as it, in those parts which were near and adjoining to Hiram's dominions with the cities under the hands and territories belonging to them. Quest. How could Solomon give away any part of that land which was the people's right by a Divine gift, as God had a right, as being the only proprietor, upon which ground the total alienation of it, or any part of it was forbidden, Lev. xxv. 23. Answer. It was not that he gave them away wholly, and for ever, but he made them over to him only for a time, until he was fully repaid for his debt. 2. If these cities were possessed by Israelites, Solomon did not give them their particular possessions but only his own royalties over them, and all the profits he received from them, which were very considerable, as may be gathered from that passage, chap. xix. 1. These cities, though they were within those large bounds which God fixed to the Land of Promise, Gen. xv. 18, Josh. i. 4, yet were not within those parts which were distributed by Lot in Joshua's time, nor belonging to the tribe of Asher (as some suppose,) as may be gathered both from Josh. xix. 27, where their border is said to go out only to the land of Cabul, to wit, exclusively, and ver. 30, where all their cities are said to be, but twenty and two, and from 2 Chron. vii. 2, where it is said of those cities, when Hiram restored them, that Solomon built them, and caused the children of Israel to dwell there, which makes it more than probable, that these cities were not inhabited by Israelites but by Canaanites, or other heathens, who being subdued and extirpated by David, or Solomon, those cities became a part of their dominions, and at their disposal, and afterwards were reckoned a part of the tribe as Josephus notes, and may be one reason why he gave these rather than other cities, because they were in his power to give, when others were not.

12 And Hiram came out from Tyre, to see the *Hah were not right in his eyes

cities which Solomon had given him, and they pleased him not

He did not accept them for satisfaction, because the cities were out of repair as appears from ver 13, and the soil not good in his eye, and therefore he refused them, 2 Chron vii 2 and expected, and doubtless had, satisfaction some other way, as may be gathered from the following story 13 And he said, What cities are these which thou hast given me, my brother?

And he called them the land of Cabul unto this day

The land of Cabul is of doubtful interpretation. Not that it was barren soil, as some imagine, for they who describe the parts command the soil fruitful, nor would Solomon have made him so unworthy a return but because it was not pleasant nor agreeable to his nor to his people's humours because, though the land was very good, yet being a thick and stiff clay and therefore requiring great pains to manure and improve it it was very unsuitable to the disposition of the Tyrians, who were delicate, and leery, and luxurious, and wholly given to merchandise

14 And Hiram sent to the king sixscore talents of gold

Or rather for Hiram had sent And this seems to be here added both to declare the quantity of the gold sent, which had been only named before, ver 11 and also the reason why he resented Solomon's action so ill, because so great a sum required a better recompence

15 ¶ And this is the reason of the levy which king Solomon raised, for to build the house of the Lord, and his own house, and Milo, and the wall of Jerusalem, and Hazor, and Megiddo, and

The levy which king Solomon raised, both the levy of men of which chap x and the levy of money upon his people and subject which is sufficiently evident from many scriptures. And this notice may look both backward and forward. He read the levy both for what he owed to Him who commanded him to build the work here following. Milo seems to have been eminent and large and strong fort or castle in Jerusalem, as may be gathered from 1 Kings xi 27 2 Chron xxvii 5 The wall in Megiddo See 2 Kings xix 35 Megiddo in that part of the tribe of Manasse which lay to the north of which see Josh xvi 11 Gezer in Ephraim Josh xvi 11 It now we know, and long, had been in the possession of the Canaanites Josh xvi 10 Jude x 29 was permitted to be by David and Solomon with a benevolent intention, because they were buried in peace and in a free enjoyment

16 For Pharaoh king of Egypt had gone up and taken Gezer and burnt it with fire, and slain the Canaanites that dwelt in the city and given it for a present unto his daughter Solomon's wife

Not now but long before this time, and possibly for the marriage of his daughter, as is most probable, and it is here mentioned only as the occasion of Solomon's building it. And the Canaanites of the place had been recently come home from war, and because Solomon thought it better to cut them off himself he desired Pharaoh to give him on Paganus to offer his service hereafter though it was a bad advantage

17 And Solomon built Gezer, and Bethanath, and the nether

In Benjamin Josh xvi 11 and 12 and 13 and 14 and 15 and 16 and 17 and 18 and 19 and 20 and 21 and 22 and 23 and 24 and 25 and 26 and 27 and 28 and 29 and 30 and 31 and 32 and 33 and 34 and 35 and 36 and 37 and 38 and 39 and 40 and 41 and 42 and 43 and 44 and 45 and 46 and 47 and 48 and 49 and 50 and 51 and 52 and 53 and 54 and 55 and 56 and 57 and 58 and 59 and 60 and 61 and 62 and 63 and 64 and 65 and 66 and 67 and 68 and 69 and 70 and 71 and 72 and 73 and 74 and 75 and 76 and 77 and 78 and 79 and 80 and 81 and 82 and 83 and 84 and 85 and 86 and 87 and 88 and 89 and 90 and 91 and 92 and 93 and 94 and 95 and 96 and 97 and 98 and 99 and 100

Baalath, in the tribe of Dan, Josh xix 40, 41 Tadmor, supposed to be called Tamar, 1'zek xlvii 19 In the land this clause may belong either, first, To all the places above mentioned, which are here declared to be in the land of Canaan But so that clause may seem superfluous, for none would easily think that he would build much out of his own land Or rather, secondly, To Tadmor, which otherwise being in that wilderness which was the border of the land, might have been presumed to have been out of the land

19 And all the cities of store that Solomon had, and cities for his chariots, and cities for his horsemen, and that which Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, and in Lebanon, and in all the land of his dominion

The cities of store, to lay up arms and ammunition for war and corn or other provisions against a time of scarcity See 1'rod i 11 In Lebanon, either in the mountain of Lebanon which being the border of his land, he might build some forts or a frontier city in it, or in the house of the forest of Lebanon, of which see chap vii 2

20 And all the people that were left of the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites, which were not of the children of Israel,

21 Their children that were left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel also were not able utterly to destroy upon those did Solomon levy a tribute of bondservice unto this day

He used them as bond men, and imposed burdens and bodily labour upon them See 2 Chron ii 18 Hence some think they were called Solomon's servants 1'za ii 5 58 Quest Why did not Solomon destroy them, as God had commanded when now it was fully in his power to do so? Answer First The command of destroying them, Deut ii 2 did chiefly if not only concern that generation of Canaanites who lived in Canaan at the time of the Israelites entering into Canaan Secondly That command seems to be absolute and unqualified and unconditional, and yet some exception for those who should submit to them as I submit to the true religion as may be gathered both from Josh xi 19 and from the history of the Gibeonites Josh ix 27 when they did not so in spring when he had sworn to do so and Saul did sin in endeavouring to destroy them But if God's command had been absolute the oaths of the Gibeonites could not have obliged them, nor dispensed with such a command

22 But of the children of Israel did Solomon make no bondmen but they were men of war, and his servants, and his princes, and his captains, and rulers of his chariots, and his horsemen

23 These were the chief of the officers that were over Solomon's work, five hundred and fifty, which bare rule over the people that wrought in the work

Object They were only two hundred and fifty in 2 Chron vii 10 Answer First, These might be officers of the sort for they are not said to be over the work, as these were but only over the people Secondly, The two hundred and fifty were Israelites who are therefore distinctly named in that book where many things are more exactly noted than in the former and the other three hundred were strangers who therefore are neglected in that more accurate account Or, thirdly, There was but two hundred and fifty at one time which is not so there and two hundred and fifty at another time if it is upon that they did their work by turns and the other fifty either were superior to all the rest or rather were a reserve to supply the place of any of the five hundred when there was occasion, which might frequently happen And so this was an act not unbecoming Solomon's wisdom, to make provision for emergencies

24 ¶ But Pharaoh's laughter came up out of the city of David unto her house, which Solomon had built for her: then did he build Millo.

25 ¶ And three times in a year did Solomon offer burnt offerings and peace offerings upon the altar which he built unto the Lord, and he burnt incense upon the altar that was before the Lord. So he finished the house.

Three times in a year, i. e. at the three solemn feasts, which is not said exclusively, as is evident both from 2 Chron. vii. 13, and from the express and oft repeated commands of God to offer at other times, which it is absurd to think that Solomon, not yet fallen into sin, should so wickedly and scandalously neglect, but because the he did it more solemnly, and more costily and more publicly, whereby it might be presumed that he did so at all other appointed times. So he finished the house, i. e. so he perfected the house, to wit, by applying it to the use for which it was made, in which the perfection of such things consists. Or the house may be put metonymically for the work or service of the house, as it is elsewhere commonly used for the things or persons in the house. On the words may be and are rendered thus, After that (for so the Hebrew word signifies, as Is. xxxiii. 9. 30, Hos. i. 11. Jer. xii. 23) he finished the house, i. e. from the time of the finishing of the house until this time he continued to do so.

26 ¶ And king Solomon made a navy of ships in Ezion-geber, which is beside Elloth, on the shore of the Red sea, in the land of Edom.

Solomon made a navy of ships, not now in the order in which it is placed in the history, but in the beginning of his reign, as appears because the almon trees which he used in this work were brought in this navy from Ophir, chap. x. 11, 12, 2 Chron. ix. 10, 11, which was a three years' voyage thence, chap. x. 22. For Ophir and Tharshish were either the same place, or one near to another. Plath or Plath, as it is called 2 Kings xiv. 22. See Deut. ii. 8. It is thought to be that famous port in the Red Sea which Ptolemy and Strabo call Plana. In the land of Edom, which David brought under his dominion, and Solomon kept it.

27 ¶ And Huram sent in the navy his servants, shipping in that had knowledge of the sea with the servants of Solomon.

The Tyrians were famous for knowledge of the sea. He sent also ships to join with Solomon's 2 Chron. viii. 18, not from Tyre, the famous city of Phoenicia, which was in the midland sea, from whence he could not sail to the Red Sea without fetching a vast compass, but from a port in the Red Sea, called Tyre, because it was a colony of the Tyrians, as Strabo notes.

28 And they came to Ophir, and fetched from thence gold, four hundred and twenty talents, and brought it to king Solomon.

Ophir, a place famous for the plenty and richness of the gold there, of which see Gen. ii. 11, 12, Job xxi. 21, xxviii. 16, Psal. xlv. 9, Isa. xlii. 12. It is manifest out of what that it was a part of the East India Archipelago, as a note from us, yet was far nearer to the Red Sea than what they might easily sail to it in the ancient times, because they needed not to go far from the coast to come to it, because they might (according to the manner of the ancient ages) sail all along near the coast through the voyage, was thereby more tedious, which was the reason why three years were spent in it. And here, and here only, were to be had all the commodities which Solomon fetched from Ophir. 1 Kings x. 22. Four hundred and twenty talents, in all there came to the king four hundred and twenty talents, whereof it seems thirty talents were allowed by Solomon to Hiram and his men for the voyage, and so there were only four hundred and twenty that came clear into the king's treasury.

CHAP. X.

The queen of Sheba cometh to Jerusalem, admireth Solomon's wisdom and glory; giveth God thanks, and Solomon presents, 1-10. Her riches, 11-15. Suits her story throne, vessels, 16-23; presents, chariots and horses, tribute, 24-29.

AND when the queen of Sheba heard of the fame of Solomon concerning the name of the Lord, she came to prove him with hard questions.

The queen of Sheba, either, first, Of Ethiopia, as that people by constant tradition from their ancestors affirm, which also was truly in the ends of the earth, whence she came, Matt. vii. 42. Or rather, secondly, Of that part of Arabia called Saba, which was at a great distance from Jerusalem, and really in the ends of the earth, and bordering upon the southern sea, for there, much more than in Ethiopia were the commodities which she brought, ver. 2, 10. However this is here said for her commendation, that being a woman and a queen, and living at great ease and in such remote parts she was willing to take so long and dangerous a journey to improve herself in knowledge, and that of Divine things, as is here implied. Concerning the name of the Lord, i. e. concerning the great work which he had done for the name, i. e. the honour, and service and worship, of the Lord, as it is expressed chap. vii. 17, and elsewhere. On concerning God, the name of God being set out for God, as hath been noted before, concerning his deep knowledge in the things of God, for it is very probable that she had also had divers other heathens, some knowledge of the true God and an earnest desire to know more of the being and nature, and worship of God, wherein the heathens were generally at a great loss, and which many of them desired and endeavoured to understand. Or concerning the great things which God had done for him especially in giving him such incomparable wisdom, and that in an extraordinary manner. With hard questions, concerning natural and civil and especially concerning Divine things, about which there are, and ever were, the hardest questions.

2 And she came to Jerusalem with a very great train, with camels that bare spices, and very much gold, and precious stones: and when she was come to Solomon, she communed with him of all that was in her heart.

Of all the doubts and difficulties wherewith her mind was perplexed.

3 And Solomon told her all her questions: there was not any thing hid from her, which he told her not.

All her questions, Heb. all her matters. He satisfied her in all things she desired to know. There was not any thing she asked which Solomon did not both understand himself, and acquaint her with.

4 And when the queen of Sheba had seen all Solomon's wisdom, and the house that he had built,

5 And the meat of his table, and the sitting of his servants, and the attendance of his ministers, and their apparel, and his cupbearers, and his ascent by the stairs, which he went up unto the house of the Lord, there was no more spirit in her.

The sitting of his servants, i. e. the order and manner in which his courtiers or other subjects (who all were his servants in a general sense) sat down at meals at several tables in his court. The attendance of his ministers, to wit, upon the king, both at his table, and elsewhere in his court, and when he went abroad to the temple or other places. Their apparel, both the costume of it, and especially the continuance of it to their several places and offices. His

22 For the king had at sea a navy of Tharshish with the navy of Hiram once in three years came the navy of Tharshish, bringing gold, and silver, ivory, and apes, and peacocks

The navy of Tharshish, either fast the ships of the sea, which may seem to be called Tharshish as Psal xliii 7 for 1x 9, from an eminent part of the sea near Judæa, so called. Or rather, the ships that went to Tharshish, for Tharshish was the name of a certain place upon the sea famous for its traffic with merchants, as it is manifest from Isa xiii 6, 10, lxxi 19, Jer x 9, Ezek xxviii 12 and it was a place very remote from Judæa, as appears from the three years usually spent in that voyage. But whether it was Spain, where in those times there was abundance of gold and silver, as Strabo and others affirm, or some place in the Indies, it is needless to determine

Linens and linen yarn, the two chief commodities of Egypt. See Prov vii 16, Cant i 9, Isa iii 23, 1 & k xxiii 7. The king's merchants received the linen yarn at a price, Solomon received them from Pharaoh at a certain price agreed between them and gave this privilege to his merchants, for a tribute to be paid to him out of it

29 And a chariot came up and went out of Egypt for six hundred shekels of silver, and an horse for an hundred and fifty: and so for all the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, did they bring them out by their means

2 Chr 1, 16
1 Heb, by their hand

A chariot this is not to be understood of the chariots and horses themselves, (for then all horses had their set at an equal price, which is most absurd,) but by a metonymy, for the leading of chariots and horses, which consisting of fine linen and silk, &c., were of great value: and the king's custom, together with the charges of the journey amounted to these sums. The Hittites, a people dwelling principally in the northern and eastern parts of Canaan, Josh i 4, whom the Israelites, contrary to their duty spared, and suffered to live among them, Judg iii 3, who afterwards, it seems, grew numerous and potent, and it may be they sent out colonies (after the manner of the ancient times) into some parts of Syria and Arabia, and possibly these kings of the Hittites may be some of those kings of Arabia, I Kings x 15

CHAP. XI.

Solomon's wives and concubines, which in his old age seduce him to idolatry 1—4. God threateneth him, 9—13. His adversaries are, Hadad who fleeth into Egypt and is entertained there 14—22. Rezon, who reigned in Damascus 23—25. Jeroboam, to whom Ahijah foretelleth that he shall be king Solomon rareth his life, 26—40. His sons, reign, and death. Rehoboam succeedeth him, 41—43

BUT king Solomon loved many strange women, together with the daughter of Pharaoh, women of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Zidonians, and Hittites

He loved them inordinately and lustfully, and he sinned against God's known law, both in the number Deut xvii 17 and in their quality

2 Of the nations concerning which the Lord said unto the children of Israel, Ye shall not go in to them, neither shall they come in unto you: for surely they will turn away your heart after their gods. Solomon clave unto these in love

Ye shall not go in to them, i e marry them. See on Gen vi 1. They will turn away your heart after their gods: possibly Solomon might think himself too wise to be drawn to idolatry by his wives, and therefore to be unconcerned in the reason of the law, and consequently free in some measure from the obligation of the law: and so, like our first parents, trusting his own faith more than God's word, he fell dreadfully

3 And he had seven hundred wives princesses, and three hundred concubines: and his wives turned away his heart

Seven hundred wives and three hundred concubines, partly to wit, which being indulged becomes infinite and excessive, and partly from his pride accounting this a part of honour and magnificence

4 For it came to pass, when Solomon was old, that his wives turned away his heart after other gods, and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as was the heart of David his father

When Solomon was old, as having now reigned nigh thirty years, when it might have been expected that age should have cooled his lust and experience have made him wiser and better, and when probably he was secure as to any such misarranges, then God permitted him to fall so wholly that he might be to all succeeding generations an example of God's severity, and of the folly, and weakness and wickedness of the wise and best men, when left to themselves. Turned away his heart after other gods, not that they changed his mind or opinion about the true God and idols, which is not credible, but that they cooled his zeal against them, obtained from him a public indulgence for their worship, and money for the making of idols, and the support of the charges of their priests and sacrifices, and possibly persuaded him sometimes in complaisance to join with them in the outward act of idol worship, or, at least, in their feasts upon their sacrifices, which was a participation of their idolatry. See Psal cvi 25, 1 Cor x 20

5 For Solomon went after Ashtoreth the goddess of the Zidonians, and after Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites

Solomon went after Ashtoreth in manner explained in the former verse. Milcom, called also Molech, of which see Lev xviii 21, 2 Kings xxiii 10

6 And Solomon did evil in the sight of the Lord, and went not fully after the Lord, as did David his father

1 e Did not worship God wholly and solely, but joined idols with him

7 Then did Solomon build a high place for Chemosh, the abomination of Moab, in the hill that is before Jerusalem, and for Molech, the abomination of the children of Ammon

Then did Solomon build, i e suffer to be built, or give money for it. A high place, i e an altar upon the high place, as the manner of the heathens was. see Numb xxv 41, xxvi 1. In the hill that is before Jerusalem, i e in the Mount of Olives which was nigh unto Jerusalem. 2 Sam xv 30 and from this act was called the mount of corruption, 2 Kings xxiii 13, idolatry being often called and termed a corruption

8 And likewise did he for all his strange wives, which burnt incense and sacrificed unto their gods

Having once given way to the few of his most beloved wives he was forced to comply with the rest

9 And the Lord was angry with Solomon, because his heart was turned from the Lord God of Israel, which had appeared unto him twice,

From the Lord God of Israel, from the express command and from the worship of God: not that he wholly neglected God, but because God esteems all the worship of idols (though it be not exclusive of but compounded with his own worship) to be a forsaking of and departing from God, and oftentimes so calls it. Which had appeared unto him to wit in extraordinary and most gracious and obliging manner

10 And he had commanded him concerning this thing, that he should not go after other gods: but he kept not that which the Lord commanded

11 Wherefore the Lord said unto Solomon, Inasmuch as this has done of thee, and thou hast not kept my covenant and my statutes, which I have commanded thee, I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant

The Lord said unto Solomon either by suggestion to his mind or by appearance to him in a terrible manner or by the prophet Ahijah, of whom ver 29. I will surely rend, I will violently take away. The word in the Hebrew is doubled for the greater assurance of the thing. To thy servant to one of thy servants and subjects, which was Jeroboam ver 26 &c

12 Notwithstanding in thy days I will not do it for David thy father's sake: but I will rend it out of the hand of thy son

For David thy father's sake, in the respect I bear to his memory, and for my promise solemnly to him, 2 Sam vii

13 Howbeit I will not rend away all the kingdom, but will give one tribe to thy son for David my servant's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, which I have chosen

How but one tribe, when he had both Judah and Benjamin, 2 Chron vi 12. Now because Benjamin is situated lowed up in Judah, because it was comparatively very small, and their habitation much intermixed with that of Judah, or one, to wit, of that kingdom which he here threatens to rend away from him, i e. of the kingdom of Israel, and that was Benjamin: one beside Judah, which was his own tribe or but one, because Benjamin was not entirely his, but part of it adhered to Jeroboam, as both of 1 Kings xii 29, and Ephraim, 2 Chron xii 19, both which were towns of Benjamin, Josh xvii 22. Or if God promised to give one, and gave him two, I suppose that was no great injury to him. For Jerusalem's sake, not, surely, for its merits, but because he had chosen it, as it follows, to be the seat of his temple and worship, it being God's usual method to give to him that hath, and to continue and multiply favours to them whom he hath begun to favour

14 And the Lord stirred up an adversary unto Solomon, Hadad the Edomite: he was of the king's seed in Edom

15 For it came to pass, when David was in Edom, and Joab the captain of the host was gone up to bury the slain, after he had smitten every male in Edom,

When David was in Edom, to wit, by his army, to war against it. See 1 Chron xviii 12, 13. To bury the slain, to wit, the Israelites which were slain in the battle, 2 Sam viii 13, 14 whom he honourably interred in some certain place to which he is said to go up for that end. And thus may be mentioned as that which gave Hadad the opportunity of making his escape whilst Joab and his men were employed in that solemnity. After he had smitten every male in Edom, or and he smote &c, as it is in the Hebrew, which is here noted as the cause of Hadad's flight, he smote, &c. He understood what Joab had done in part, and intended further to do even to kill all the males, and therefore fled for his life

16 For six months did Joab remain there with all Israel, until he had cut off every male in Edom

17 That Hadad fled he and certain Edomites of his father's servants with him, to go into Egypt. Hadad being yet a little child

18 And they arose out of Midian, and came to Paran, and they took men with them out of Paran, and they came to Egypt, unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, which gave him an house, and appointed him victuals, and gave him land

They arose out of Midian, he fled at first with an intent to go into Egypt as is said, ver 17 but took Midian a neighbouring country in his way and staid there a while possibly till he had by some of his servants tried Pharaoh's mind, and prepared the way for his reception. Paran, another country in the road from Idom to Egypt where he hired men to attend him that making his entrance there something like a prince he might find more favour and respect from that king, and people. Appointed him victuals and gave him land to support himself and his train out of the profits of it

19 And Hadad found great favour in the sight of Pharaoh, so that he gave him to wife the sister of his own wife, the sister of Tahpenes the queen

God so disposing his heart, that Hadad might be a scourge to Solomon for his impiety, which God foresaw long before they were done

20 And the sister of Tahpenes bare him Genubath his son, whom Tahpenes weaned in Pharaoh's house, and Genubath was in Pharaoh's household among the sons of Pharaoh

21 And when Hadad heard in Egypt that David slept with his fathers, and that Joab the captain of the host was dead, Hadad said to Pharaoh, Let me depart, that I may go to mine own country

Josh. the captain of the host, whom he feared as much as David himself. Had I may go to mine own country; whether according to his came, and was there even from the beginning of Solomon's reign, where he either lived as a private person, yet secretly working for the recovery of his crown when an opportunity was offered, or rather, by the near relation which was between his wife and Solomon's; and by Pharaoh's intercession he obtained his kingdom, with condition of subjection and tribute to be paid by him to Solomon; which condition he kept till Solomon fell from God, and then it seems he began to be troublesome to him, and dangerous to his house and kingdom.

22 Then Pharaoh said unto him, But what hast thou lacked with me, that behold, thou seekest to go to thine own country? And he answered, † Nothing howbeit let me go in any wise.

23 ¶ And God stirred him up another adversary, Rezon the son of Hadad, which fled from his lord Hadadzer king of Zobah.

When Hadad had defeated him see 2 Sam x 10 & Zobah, a part of Syria between Damascus and Ephraim, of which see 1 Sam xiv 17, 2 Chron viii 3, Psal lxviii.

24 And he gathered men unto him, and became captain over a band, when David slew them of Zobah and they went to Damascus, and dwelt therein, and reigned in Damascus.

Over a band, to wit of soldiers who fled and dispersed themselves upon that defeat, 2 Sam x, and others who readily joined themselves with them, and lived by robbery as many Ammonites did. They went to Damascus when they were increased in number and strength and took it whilst Solomon was wallowing in luxury and grown effeminate.

25 And he was an adversary to Israel all the days of Solomon, beside the mischief that Hadad did and he abhorred Israel, and reigned over Syria.

He was a secret enemy, watching all occasions to do them mischief (commonly and privately all that time) and when Solomon had forsaken God and was forsaken by God he showed himself more openly and maliciously. *Beside the mischief that Hadad did, so the sense is, this mischief was added to the former concerning Hadad, mentioned above, ver 14, &c. Whilst Hadad molested him in the south Rezon threatened him in the north. But one understand this of Hadadzer whose name is called Hadad, by way of abbreviation (which is not unusual in proper Hebrew names, as is well known,) and that for or because of, (for the Hebrew participle eth is sometimes put for et, which oft signifies for, or because of as Hebrews know,) the evil which he did Hadad, or Hadadzer, i.e. he bore a grudge against the Israelites from and ever since the slaughter that Toab made in Hadadzer's camp, whereof he was a member, although he also took part in the action of striking a defection from his master. *Rezon over Syria, over all that part of Syria embracing his country more and more, and thereby laying a foundation for much mischief to Solomon's house and kingdom.

26 ¶ And Jeroboam the son of Nebat an Ephraimite of Zereda, Solomon's servant, whose mother's name was Zeruiah, a widow woman, even he lifted up his hand against the king.

i.e. Rebelled against the king, not only and immediately in the person of Solomon himself, but in his son and successor, Rehoboam.

27 And this was the cause that he lifted up his hand against the king. Solomon built Millo, and repaired the breaches of the city of David his father.

28 And the man Jeroboam was a mighty man of valour: and Solomon seeing the young man that he was industrious, he made him ruler over all the charge of the house of Joseph.

A mighty man of valour, or, a man of great strength of body, or courage of mind, or both. Industrious, ingenious, and diligent, and active, and every way fit for business and for command. Over all the charge, i.e. the taxes and tributes which were to be gathered of the people by his power and authority. Of the house of Joseph, either of Ephraim and Manasseh, who were jointly comprehended under this name, Josh xvii 17, or of Ephraim only, who elsewhere comes under that name, as 1 Chron v 1, Psal lxxviii 67, Ezek xxxvii 16. And it seems most probable that each tribe had a several ruler.

29 And it came to pass at that time when Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, that the prophet Ahijah the Shilonite found him in the way, and he had clad himself with a new garment, and they two were alone in the field.

When Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, upon some occasion possibly to execute his charge. They two were alone in the field, having gone aside thither for some private conference: for otherwise it is most likely that he had servants attending upon him who though they heard not the words, yet might see the action and the tending of Jeroboam's coat, and thus it came to Solomon's ears, who being so acute and wise could easily understand the thing by what he heard of the action, especially when a prophet did it.

30 And Ahijah caught the new garment that was on him, and rent it in twelve pieces.

31 And he said to Jeroboam Take thee ten pieces for thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee.

Take thee ten pieces, whence the kingdom of Israel is called the kingdom of the ten tribes, by which expression it may seem that David's posterity should have one tribe reserved out of the kingdom of Israel besides that of Judah which because of its greatness and eminency, is commonly distinguished from Israel, and that not only after the division of the two kingdoms but even before it, as 1 Sam vi 8, 2 Sam v 5.

32 (But he shall have one tribe for my servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, the city which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel.)

33 Because that they have forsaken me and have worshipped Ashtoreth the goddess of the Zidonians, Chemosh the god of the Moabites, and Milcom the god of the children of Ammon, and have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, and to keep my statutes and my judgments, as did David his father.

They have forsaken me, i.e. the king, and his concubines, and people who easily followed his example, but were not at all excused by it.

34 Howbeit I will not take the whole kingdom out of his hand but I will make him prince all the days of his life for David my servant's sake, whom I chose, because he kept my commandments and my statutes.

*The whole kingdom, to wit, of Israel that which I have designed for thee. Or rather I will not take any thing, or part of the kingdom. For the Hebrew phrase lo asah, which* properly signifies not all or not the whole doth usually signify not any thing, as Deut xii 9, thou shalt not want every thing, i. e. not any thing. So also Gen ix 13, xiii 6, xxxix 23, 1st Pet xix 17, 1st Cor ii 6, &c. The whole kingdom out of his hand, he shall possess it whilst he lives, as it follows, and therefore thou hast not yet attempt to invade it. Because he kept my commandments and my statutes, where by he sheweth that he doth not judge of men by some particular acts, but by their general purpose and course of life.

35 But I will take the kingdom out of his son's hand, and will give it unto thee, even ten tribes.

36 And unto his son will I give one tribe, that David my servant may have a flight alway before me in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen me to put my name there.

I light a candle on and successor to preserve his name and memory, and to give light to the people in his stead. Kings are often called lights partly from their great splendour and partly for the counsel and comfort which their people have or should have from them. Compare 2 Sam xvi 17 1 Kings xi 1, Psal cxxvii 17. Alway before me, in my presence which is in Jerusalem, and under my favour and protection.

37 And I will take thee, and thou shalt reign according to all that thy soul desireth, and shalt be king over Israel.

I will take thee and place thee in the throne as it follows. According to all that thy soul desireth, he secretly taxeth him for his ambition and aspiring mind.

38 And it shall be, if thou wilt hearken unto all that I command thee and wilt walk in my ways, and do that is right in my sight, to keep my statutes and my commandments as David my servant did, that I will be with thee, and I will build thee a sure house as I built for David, and will give Israel unto thee.

I will build thee a sure house, i. e. I will firmly settle thee and thy posterity in the throne as this or the like phrase is used 2 Sam vii 16 27, but he doth not say he would do this for ever, as is there said of David's house, ver. 16.

39 And I will for this afflict the seed of David, not now but for ever.

For this for this cause which I mentioned ver. 33. But not for ever, there shall a time come when the seed of David shall not be thus molested by the kingdom of Israel but that kingdom shall be destroyed and the kings of the house of David shall be uppermost as it was in the days of Asa, Hezekiah and Josiah. And at last the Messiah shall come, who shall unite together the broken sticks of Judah and Joseph and rule over all the Jews and Gentiles too.

40 Solomon sought therefore to kill Jeroboam. And Jeroboam arose and fled into Egypt, unto Shishak king of Egypt, and was in Egypt until the death of Solomon.

This might come to the ear of Solomon, either, 1 By Jeroboam himself who might speak of this, either out of vain glory and ostentation, or with design to prepare the people for his purpose. Or 2 By the servants. See above on ver. 29. Shishak king of Egypt, who was either, 1 Solomon's brother in law, or yet might be jealous of him, or alienated from him because he had taken so many other wives to his sister, as is here noted ver. 1, or might cast a greedy eye upon the riches and glorious things which Solomon had amassed to, there and upon which presently after Solomon's death he had violent hands. 2 Chron xii 9.

All this was known to Jeroboam who therefore durst put himself into Shishak's protection especially considering how little such relations countervailed in the affairs of princes, and without better male content by God's promise of the kingdom. Or 2 One of another line or house, to whom that power might or could descend without issue.

41 And the rest of the acts of Solomon, and all that he did, and his wisdom, are they not written in the book of the acts of Solomon?

In the public records, where the lives and actions of kings were registered from time to time. So this was only a political, but not a sacred book.

42 And the time that Solomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel was forty years.

43 And Solomon slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David his father, and Rehoboam his son reigned in his stead.

Slept with his fathers, this expression is promiscuous, used concerning good and bad, and signifies only that they died as their fathers did. But hence interpreters question, whether Solomon was saved or damned? That he was damned some believe upon this only argument, that he died without repentance, which they gather, 1 Because his repentance is not mentioned in his history. 2 Because if he had repented he would have abolished the monuments of idolatry which he had erected, which that he did not they gather from 2 Kings xxi 13, of which (God testifies) I shall speak upon that place. But to the former many things may be said. 1 We read nothing of the repentance of Adam Noth, after his drunkenness, for Samson Asa &c. shall we therefore conclude they were all damned? The silence of the Scripture is a very weak argument in matters of history. 2 If he did repent, yet the silence of the Scripture about it in this history was not without reason, as among others, that his eternal condition being thus left doubtful his example might have the greater influence for the terror and caution of future offenders. 3 His repentance is sufficiently implied in this, (to omit divers other passages) that after Solomon's death the city of Solomon is mentioned with honour and joined with the name of David. 2 Chron vi 17. But it seems to be put out of dispute by the Book of Ecclesiastes, which (by the general consent both of Jewish and Christian interpreters) was written by Solomon, and that after his fall as is evident not only from the unanimous testimony of the Hebrew writers who thence conclude that he did repent and was saved, but also from the whole strain of the book which was written long after he had finished all his works, and after he had liberally drunk of all sorts of sensual pleasures, and sadly experienced the bitter effects of his love of women, Eccles vii 26 &c, which make it more than probable that as David wrote Psalm li, so Solomon wrote this book as a public testimony and profession of his repentance. And this argument is so cogent, that those interpreters who are of the other opinion confess that Solomon did write this book after his fall, which he pretend he wrote before it, but they offer not any argument to prove it. And therefore we have reason to conclude that Solomon did repent and was saved.

CHAP. XII

The Israelites seek to Rehoboam for relaxation. 1. 5. He refusing the old men's counsel, by the advice of the young men answereth them roughly, 6-15, for which ten tribes revolt, kill Adoram, and make Rehoboam to flee 16-20. He raising an army is forbidden by Shemaiah, 21-22. Jeroboam, king of Israel, strengtheneth himself by cities, and by the idolatry of the two calves, 23-33.

AND Rehoboam went to Shechem for all Israel were come to Shechem to make him king.

Rehoboam did not call them thither but went thither because the Ephraimites prevented him, and had generally pitched upon that place rather than upon Jerusalem partly, because it was most convenient for all, as being in the centre of the whole kingdom partly, because that being in the potent tribe of Ephraim they supposed that they might use that freedom of speech which they resolved to use to get their grievances redressed, and partly, by the secret direction of Jeroboam, or his friends, who would not trust themselves in Jerusalem, and thought Shechem a fitter place to execute their design. To make him king, to confirm him in the kingdom which they generally intended to do, he being the undoubted heir of the crown, and the only son which Solomon had from so vast a number of wives.

2 And it came to pass, when Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who was yet in Egypt, heard of it, (for he was fled from the presence of king Solomon, and Jeroboam dwelt in Egypt,)

Heard of it, in the Hebrew it is only heut and may relate either to Solomon's death or to the meeting which all the tribes had appointed at Shechem.

3 That they sent and called him. And Jeroboam and all the congregation of Israel came, and spake unto Rehoboam, saying,

They sent and called him when the people sent him word of Solomon's death, they also sent a summons for him to come to Shechem. Or as soon as he had heard the tidings of Solomon's death from others, or from common fame, presently there came a solemn message to him from the people who desired his presence and assistance, as it seems probable, from divers motives: some that they might continue the kingdom from Rehoboam to him, and others only for this reason, that the presence and continuance of a man of so great interest and reputation and one that had some claim or pretence upon the kingdom might lay the greater obligation upon Rehoboam to grant their desires of ease and relief.

4 Thy father made our yoke grievous, now therefore make thou the grievous service of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us, lighter, and we will serve thee.

Thy father made our yoke grievous by heavy taxes and impositions, not only for the temple and his numerous attendants, but for the expenses of his numerous court, and for many wives and concubines, whose luxury and idleness cost needs be very costly. And Solomon having so greatly forsaken God, it is no wonder if he oppressed the people and made their yoke most grievous, as they speak. But here the people's perverseness is very observable both in this, that they mention and ask not only the grievances of the government, but take no notice of the benefits which they received from it, and in that they mind nothing but their outward grievances, and have no regard unto that abominable idolatry which he set up among them, being at second hand leavened with it by his pernicious example, grown careless and negligent of the concerns of religion, by which see how ripe they were for all those dreadful judgments of God which are hastening upon them.

5 And he said unto them, Depart yet for three days, then come again to me. And the people departed.

Give me that time for deliberation and advice.

6 ¶ And king Rehoboam consulted with the old men, that stood before Solomon his father while he yet lived, and said, How do ye advise that I may answer this people?

With the old men that stood before Solomon, with Solomon's old counsellors, whom age and experience of men and things, and converse with such a king had made wise.

7 And they spake unto him, saying, If thou wilt be a servant unto this people this day, and wilt serve them, and answer them, and speak good words to them, then they will be thy servants for ever.

If thou wilt be a servant unto this people this day, by complying with their desires and condescending to them for a season, till the troubled humours be quieted, and the opportunity they now have, and that some of them seek, for redemption be gone, and thou be better established in thy throne. They use this expression, as foreseeing that some would dissuade him from this course, as servile or slavish, and below the majesty of a prince. And answer them, for that is, answer them. Thy service, say they, is not hard, it is only a few good words, which it is as easy to give as bad ones.

8 But he forsook the counsel of the old men, which they had given him, and consulted with the young men that were grown up with him, and which stood before him.

He forsook the counsel of the old men, judgment unworthy of his majesty and authority, and likely to encourage and increase the people in their insolent demands. The young men, so called comparatively to the old men, otherwise they were near forty years old, as the following words imply. That were grown up with him, which is added is the reason of his inclination to their counsels, because he daily converse with them and the likeness of their age and humour to his had engaged his affections to them, and that bribed his judgment, as it commonly doth.

9 And he said unto them, What counsel give ye that we may answer this people, who have spoken to me, saying, Make the yoke which thy father did put upon us lighter?

10 And the young men that were grown up with him spake unto him, saying, Thus shall thou speak unto this people that pake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it lighter unto us: thus shall thou say unto them, My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.

Or rather is thicker and therefore stronger and more able to crush you if you proceed in the contentious demands than his loins, in which is the principal seat of strength. My father was young and weak and had many enemies, when he first took the kingdom, but I am the undoubted heir, and I find the kingdom by his weakness far better settled and fortified against all enemies foreign or domestic, than he did.

11 And now where is my father did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke: my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

I will add to your yoke, I will make it heavier and stronger, both to punish your perversity and to curb and restrain your insolent attempts. With scorpions, I with such whips as will sting you like scorpions, if you proceed in the courses I will most severely punish you for it.

12 So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam the third day, as the king had appointed, saying, Come to me again the third day.

13 And the king answered the people roughly, and forsook the old men's counsel that they gave him.

14 And spake to them after the counsel of the young men, saying, My father made your yoke heavy, and I will add to your yoke: my father also chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

15 Wherefore the king hearkened not unto the people, for the cause was from the Lord, that he might perform his saying which the Lord spake by Ahijah the Shilonite unto Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

The cause was from the Lord, who gave up Rehoboam to so foolish and fatal a mistake, and alienated the people's affections from him, and ordered all circumstances by his wise providence to that end.

16 ¶ So when all Israel saw that the king hearkened not unto them, the people answered the king, saying, What portion have we in David? neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse: to your tents, O Israel: now see to thine own house, David. So Israel departed unto their tents.

What portion have we in David, i. e. in David's family and ours? we can expect no benefit or relief from him, and therefore we renounce all commerce with him and subjection to him. See 2 Sam. x. 1. They named David rather than Rehoboam, to signify that they did renounce i. e. Rehoboam only but all David's family. The son of David, so they call David in contempt of Rehoboam both for reason to carry himself with such pride and contempt toward his people: for if we trace his original, it was as mean and obscure a man as ours. And since he thrust his power, let us reduce him to his former obscurity. To your tents, O Israel, i. e. let us all forsake him, and go to our own homes there to consult, and then to meet and conclude how to provide otherwise for ourselves. Now see to thine own house, David, i. e. govern thy own family, for thou hast no longer rule over us. Thus they brake out into actual rebellion against him whom God had made their lawful sovereign, wherein, though they fulfilled God's counsel yet they violated his authority and command. And they do again make an opprobrious mention of David, whom they should not have named without honour.

17 But as for the children of Israel which dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

Which dwelt in the cities of Judah, by which phrase he principally understands the tribe of Judah but withal those parts and parts of the tribes of Levi, and Simeon and Benjamin whose dwellings were within the confines of Judah or intermixed with them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent Adoram, who was over the tribute, and all Israel stoned him with stones, that he died. Therefore king Rehoboam made speed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem.

He sent Adoram either 1. To pacify the people and promise them relief now when it was too late. But that he would not have sent a person so ungrateful to the people as that sort of men use to be. Or rather 2. To pursue the counsel which he had resolved upon and to execute his office and exact their tribute with rigour and violence if need were. To flee to Jerusalem from Shechem, where it seems he yet stood and his guards and friend with him that being there in the midst of his kingdom and among the seditious tribes he might overcome them by his presence and repulse any tumults in their rise.

19 So Israel rebelled against the house of David unto this day.

Their rebellion is called rebellion and therefore was sinful because it was contrary to God's authority and command of subjection to David, and his seed for ever from which the people were not freed by God's promise and grant made to Jeroboam which was but a secret transaction, not yet sufficiently revealed to them and was not against of present and actual possession but only a promise that God would give it to him in his own time and way, which might have been done though neither Jeroboam nor the people had used these means and evil counsels to bring it about as it befell David upon the same occasion. Besides the people did not thus in contempt of God's counsel but to satisfy their own persons and yet themselves a little ease.

20 And it came to pass when all Israel heard that Jeroboam was come again, that they sent and called him unto the congregation, and made him king over all Israel: there was none that followed the house of David, but the tribe of Judah only.

That Jeroboam was come again to wit, from Egypt, which was known before to the chief of the tribes and to them who met at Shechem, and now was more universally known by all the people. They sent, to his tent or habitation, to which he had retired himself, as others also generally did see above, ver. 16. Called him unto the congregation, which was summoned by the elders of the several tribes, to take advice how to settle their affairs, which they easily agreed to do, by confirming the crown upon Jeroboam, according to God's promise made to him. There was none, i. e. no entire tribe. See on chap. xi. 13, 31, 32.

21 ¶ And when Jeroboam was come to Jerusalem, he assembled all the house of Judah, with the tribe of Benjamin an hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against the house of Israel, to bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam the son of Solomon.

With the tribe of Benjamin, i. e. that part of it which was next to Judah, and joined with them. See on chap. xi. 13. Against the house of Israel, i. e. the families or tribes (for these words are promiscuously used one for the other) of Israel.

22 But the word of God came unto Shemaiah the man of God, saying,

The man of God, i. e. the prophet, so called, partly to distinguish him from others of that name; see Neh. vi. 10. i. e. xxix. 31, and partly to add the more weight to his words.

23 Speak unto Rehoboam, the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and unto all the house of Judah and Benjamin, and to the remnant of the people, saying,

24 Thus saith the Lord, Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren the children of Israel: return every man to his house: for this thing is from me. They hearkened therefore to the word of the Lord, and returned to depart, according to the word of the Lord.

This thing is from me, this is a testimony from my counsel and providence to punish Solomon's apostasy though they procured it by sinful means, and therefore, if you proceed you must fight with me as well as them. They hearkened to the word of the Lord, either from conscience of their duty, or because they durst not oppose so potent an authority.

25 ¶ Then Jeroboam built Shechem in mount Ephraim, and dwelt therein, and went out from thence, and built Penuel.

Jeroboam built Shechem, i. e. he repaired and enlarged and fortified it: for it had been ruined long since. To be sure, He might choose it as a place both auspicious because here the foundation of his monarchy was laid and commodious as being near the frontiers of his kingdom. Penuel, a place beyond Jordan of which see Gen. xxxi. 30, Jude. viii. 17, to secure that part of his dominions.

26 And Jeroboam said in his heart, Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David.

Now in his heart, i. e. he reasoned within him. The phrase discovers the fountain of his error that he did not consult with God, who had given him the kingdom, as all reason and justice, and gratitude he should have done nor believed God's promise, chap. xi. 38, but his own imaginations and carnal policies.

27 If this people go up to do sacrifice in the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord, even unto Jeroboam king of Judah, and they shall kill me, and go again to Jeroboam king of Judah.

This in itself might seem a prudent conjecture, for this would give Jeroboam, and the priests and Levites the sure and faithful friends of David's house, many opportunities of alienating their minds from him, and of reducing them to their former allegiance. But considering God's providence, by which the hearts of all men, and the affairs of all kings and kingdoms, are governed, and of which he had lately seen so eminent an instance, it was a foolish as well as wicked course.

28 Whereupon the king took counsel, and made two calves of gold, and said unto them, It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem: behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

Made two calves of gold, in imitation of Aaron's golden calf, and of the Egyptians, from whom he was lately come. And this he rather presumed to do, because he knew the people of Israel were generally very prone to superstition and idolatry, as their whole history sheweth, and that Solomon's example and countenance given to false worship had exceedingly strengthened those inclinations, and therefore they were in a great measure prepared for such an attempt, especially when his proposition tended to their own ease, and safety and profit which he knew was much dearer to them, as well as to himself than their religion.

If it is too much for you, too great a trouble and charge, and neither necessary nor safe for them, things now good. Behold thy gods O Israel which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, not as if he did himself believe or thought to persuade the people to believe, that these calves were properly and truly that very God of Israel who brought them out of Egypt, (which was so manifestly absurd and ridiculous, that no Christian in his right mind could believe it,) and had been so far from atoning his sin and satisfying his people that this would have made him both hateful and contemptible to them. But his meaning was, that these images were visible representations, in and by which he designed to worship the true God of Israel, as appears, partly, from that parallel place, 1st Kings xxi. 1 where see my notes, partly because the priests and worshippers of the calves are said to worship Jehovah and upon that account are distinguished from those belonging to Baal 1 Kings xviii. 21 xxii. 6, 7 and partly from Jeroboam's design in this work which was to quiet the people's minds and remove their scruple about going to Jerusalem to worship their God in that place, as they were commanded, which he doth, by signifying to them that he did not intend any alteration in the substance of the religion nor to draw them from the worship of the true God to the worship of Asherah or Milcom, or of the Baals which were set up by Solomon, but to worship that same God whom they worshipped in Jerusalem even the true God and the God of their fathers who brought them out of Egypt, but only to vary a circumstance, and that as they worshipped God at Jerusalem by and before a visible sign, even the ark, and the sacred circumferences, so his subjects should worship God by another visible sign, even that of the calves in other places, and as for the change of the place he might suggest to them that God was present in all places where men with hearts minds did call upon him, that before the temple was built he best of kings, and prophets, and people did not sacrifice to God in divers high places, without any scruple without adding that restraint of God to one place Deut. xii. 5, &c., that God would dispense with them in that matter, because going to Jerusalem was very dangerous to them at this time, and God would have more rather than sacrifice, and God had been pleased to dispense with his own ordinances in cases of necessity or great inconvenience, as he did with circumcision for forty years in the wilderness.

29 And he set the one in Beth-el, and the other put he in Dan.

Which two places he chose for his people's convenience, Beth-el being in the southern, and Dan in the northern parts of his kingdom.

30 And this thing became a sin for the people went to worship before the one even unto Dan.

A sin, i. e. a cause or occasion of great wickedness among people, not only of idolatry, which is called sin by way of emulacry, nor only of the worship of the calves, whereon they pretended to worship the true God, but also of the worship of Baal, and of the utter desertion of the true God, and of all sorts of impiety and abominable sins, as is manifest from the history of that kingdom, in which there was not one good king and very few of the people who were not guilty of heinous crimes, as the prophet witnesses. The people went to worship the kings counsel, and example seduced them though it did not excuse their sin, and they willingly walked after this his wicked commandment, Hos. x. 11 Unto Dan, which is not here mentioned exclusively, for that they went also to Beth-el is evident Hos. x. 32, 33 but in other reasons, either because Beth-el was first made, or best frequented, the people in those parts having been long leavened with idolatry, see Judg. xviii. 30, or to show the people's readiness to comply with the king's command, and their zeal for idols, that those who lived in or near Beth-el had not patience to stay till that calf was finished, but all of them were forward to go as far as Dan which was in the utmost borders of the land, to worship an idol there, when it was thought too much for them to go to Jerusalem to worship God.

31 And he made an house of high places, and made priests of the lowest of the people, which were not of the sons of Levi.

In house of high places, i. e. an house of the houses, or chapels in the high places. Besides the famous houses, or temples which he built at Dan and Beth-el, he built also, for his people's better accommodation, lesser temples upon divers high places, which were esteemed sacred and venerable because their pious ancestor had served God in them, and thereby Jeroboam might not seem to bring in a new religion but only to revive the old. Made priests of the lowest of the people, which he might do either, 1. Because the better sort refused it, as an office below their quality. Or 2. Because such would be satisfied with men of low talents, and so he could put into his own purse a great part of the rich possessions and revenues of the Levites, which doubtless he seized upon when he forsake him, and went to Jerusalem, 2 Chron. xi. 13, 14, which also was very necessary for his present and pressing occasions, the latter, because he durst not yet lay grievous taxes upon that people, who had newly revolted from him for that reason. Or, 3. Because many persons would depend upon his favour and therefore be very pliable to his humour and to his interest, and zealous to promote the worship of the calves. But the words in the Hebrew properly signify, from the ends of the people, which is and may be translated thus, out of all the people, promiscuously out of every tribe, which exposition seems to be confirmed by the following words which are added to explain, which were not of the sons of Levi, though they were not of the tribe of Levi. And that indeed was Jeroboam's sin, not that he chose mean persons, for some of the Levites were such, and his sin had not been less, if he had chosen the noblest and greatest persons, as we see in the example of Uzziah 2 Chron. xxvi. 18, 19. But that he chose men of other tribes, contrary to God's appointment which restrained that office to that tribe. Not of the sons of Levi, to whom that office was confined by God's express command, but he gave the priesthood promiscuously to any person of any other tribe.

32 And Jeroboam ordained a feast in the eighth month on the fifteenth day of the month, like unto the feast that is in Judah, and he offered upon the altar. So did he in Beth-el, sacrificing unto the calves that he had made, and he placed in Beth-el the priests of the high places which he had made.

Feast 1. A feast of dedication, like that which was made at the dedication of the temple. Or rather 2. The feast of tabernacles, as may be thought. 1 Chron. xiii. 7. The feast began on the fifteenth day of the month, Lev. xxiii. 34. 2. Because he is not blamed for observing the feast, (which thereby seems to have been of God's appointment,) but only for demanding the month, ver 33, for keeping God's feast not in God's time, which was the fifteenth day of the seventh month and so onward Lev xxiii 34, but on the fifteenth day of the eighth month. And this alteration he made, either 1 To keep up the difference between his subjects and those of Judah as by the differing manners so by the distinct times of their worship. Or, 2 That he should seem directly to oppose the God of Israel (who had in a special manner obliged all the people to go up to Jerusalem at that time Deut xvi 16,) by requiring their attendance to celebrate the feast elsewhere at the same time. Or, 3 To engage many persons as possibly he could to come to his feast which they would more willingly do, when the feast at Jerusalem was past, and all the fruits of the earth were more perfectly gathered in. On the fifteenth day of the month and so onward till the even days ended. He took the pattern thence, to show that he worshipped the same God and professed the same religion for substance which they did, howsoever he differed in circumstance from what he did in the time. He offered, either, 1 By his priests. Or rather, 2 By his own hands as appears from chap xii 1, which he did to give the more countenance to his new-devised solemnity. Nor is this strange. In he might plausibly think, that he who by his own authority had made others priests, might much more exercise a part of that office, at least upon an extraordinary occasion, in which case he knew David himself had done some things which otherwise he might not do. So did he in both of these he himself did offer there in like manner as he now had done at Dan. Unto the calves, for they were two ver 29. He placed in Beth-el the priests as he had done at Dan ver 31.

33 So he offered upon the altar which he had made in Beth-el the fifteenth day of the eighth month, even in the month which he had devised of his own heart and ordained a feast unto the children of Israel and he offered upon the altar, and burnt incense.

Which he had devised of his own heart which he appointed without any warrant from God, which was superstitious. Comp. Jer vii 31.

CHAP XIII

A prophet of Judah prophesies against the altar at Beth-el. Jeroboam offering him violence and hand witheth, and at the prayer of the prophet is restored. Jeroboam refusing the king's entertainment, departs from Beth-el. The prophet's deceiving him, bringeth him back. He is taken and repented of God on the old prophet and is slain, when buried by the old prophet who confirms his prophecy. 20-32. Jeroboam's obstinacy. 33-34.

AND behold there came a man of God out of Judah by the word of the Lord unto Beth-el. And Jeroboam stood by the altar to burn incense.

A man of God, a holy prophet. By the word of the Lord, by Divine permission and command.

2 And he cried against the altar in the word of the Lord, and said, O altar, altar, thus saith the Lord, Behold, a child shall be born unto the house of David, Josiah by name: and upon thee shall he offer the priests of the high places that burn incense upon thee: and men's bones shall be burnt upon thee.

He cried against the altar, and consequently against all that worshiped, which is out of the name of the altar. See Jer xix 10, 1 Cor xiv 16, Heb vii 13, xiii 10. O altar, altar, he directed his speech to the altar partly because the following sign was wrought upon it, and partly to signify that Jeroboam would no more regard the words than the altar did, and yet they should take effect. 1 child shall be born unto the house of David, Josiah by name, which being done above three hundred years after this prophecy plainly shows the absolute certainty of God's providence and foreknowledge, even in the most contingent things. For this was in itself uncertain and wholly depended upon man's will, both as to the bearing of a child and as to the giving it this name. Therefore God can certainly and effectually overrule man's will which way he pleases, or else it was possible that this prediction should have been false, which is blasphemous to imagine. Upon thee shall he offer the priests synecdochically, the bones of the priests, 2 Kings xxiii 15, 16, whereby the altar should be defiled.

3 And he gave a sign the same day, saying, Thus is the sign which the Lord hath spoken, Behold, the altar shall be rent, and the ashes that are upon it shall be poured out.

He gave a sign the same day, i.e. he then wrought a miracle, to assure them of the truth of his prophecy.

4 And it came to pass, when king Jeroboam heard the saying of the man of God, which had cried against the altar in Beth-el, that he put forth his hand from the altar, saying, Lay hold on him. And his hand, which he put forth against him, dried up, so that he could not pull it in again to him.

He put forth his hand, to point out the man whom he would have the people lay hands on, and to sin them up to do so. From the altar, where it was employed in the sacrifice, and thence upon it. Dried up or withered, the muscles and sinews the instruments of motion were shrank up. The God did partly to chastise Jeroboam for offering violence to the Lord's prophet, partly to secure the prophecy, and further violence, and partly that in this example God might show how he does he resents the injuries done to his ministers in order for the faithful discharge of their office.

5 The altar also was rent, and the ashes poured out from the altar, according to the sign which the man of God had given by the word of the Lord.

6 And the king answered and said unto the man of God, Intreat now the face of the Lord thy God, and pray for me, that my hand may be restored unto me again. And the man of God besought the Lord, and the king's hand was restored unto him again, and became as it was before.

The king answered, i.e. spoke, is that word is often used in both Testaments. Intreat now the face of the Lord thy God, who by his zeal for thee hath manifested his will to be thy God and I intend in a singular manner, and therefore will be in thy prayers for me, though he will not regret mine because I have forsaken him and his worship. The man of God besought the Lord to assure Jeroboam that what he had said was not from ill-will to him, and that he heartily desired his reformation not his ruin. The king's hand was restored again, partly to assure him in that stroke was from God, partly because he repented of that violence which he intended against the prophet for whom God inflicted it, and partly that the goodness of God to him might have led him to repentance, or if he continued impenitent leave him without all excuse.

7 And the king said unto the man of God, Come home with me, and refresh thyself, and I will give thee a reward.

Horrid stupidity! He desires to requite the instrument but takes no notice of the chief cause and author of the great and wonderful mercy, which was God.

8 And the man of God said unto the king, If thou wilt give me half thine house, I will not go in with thee, neither will I eat bread nor drink water in this place.

9 For so was it charged me by the word of the Lord, saying, <sup>11</sup> Eat no bread, nor drink water, nor turn again by the same way that thou camest

My refusal of thy favour is not from any contempt or hatred of thy person, but in obedience to the just command of my God, who hath forbidden me all further converse or communication with thee. Let no bread nor drink water to wit, in that place, or with that people whereby God declares how detestable they were in God's eyes, not because their idolatry was so bad as that of the heathens, but because they were vile apostates from the true God, and embraced this idol-worship against the light of their own consciences, merely to comply with the king's humour and command, and because their vicinity and relation to the tribe of Judah made this more dangerous as to their infection by it. Nor turn again by the same way that thou camest; that by thy avoiding the way that led thee to Beth-el as execrable, although thou wastest by my special command, thou mightest teach all others how much they should abhor that way and all thoughts of going to that place, or to such people, upon any trivial and unnecessary occasion.

10 So he went another way and returned not by the way that he came to Beth-el.

11 ¶ Now there dwelt an old prophet in Beth-el, and his sons came and told him all the works that the man of God had done that day in Beth-el: the words which he had spoken unto the king, them they told also to their father.

An old prophet; a prophet of the Lord, one to whom and by whom God did sometimes impart his mind, as is manifest from ver. 20, 21, and one that had a respect to the Lord's holy prophets, and gave credit to their prediction: all which the following relation shows. But whether he was a holy and good man may justly be doubted, seeing all those qualifications might meet in a vicious man; to and by whom he may receive some part of his mind as he did to Balaam Num. xxiii. &c. and in such his other prophecies are sometimes found, and we find him in a down-right and premeditated lie, and that without any great temptation to it ver. 18. And albeit a holy prophet might possibly have continued in the kingdom of Israel, he would never have gone from his own habitation to dwell at Beth-el, the chief seat of idolatry, unless with design to preach against it, which it is evident he did not. His sons seem to have been present at and to have joined with others in that idolatrous worship ver. 11 and that not without the father's connivance. In Beth-el, for thither he came to dwell, probably expecting some great advantage from Jeroboam, but he came out of Samaria 2 Kings xiii. 18, where he either was born and had lived before, or his usual dwelling was at Beth-el, but had lately been at Samaria, and was now returned to Beth-el. His sons come, who probably were eye and ear witnesses of what had passed.

12 And their father said unto them, What way went he? For his sons had seen what way the man of God went, which came from Judah.

13 And he said unto his sons, Saddle me the ass. So they saddled him the ass and he rode thereon.

14 And went after the man of God, and found him sitting under an oak: and he said unto him, Art thou the man of God that camest from Judah? And he said, I am.

Sitting under an oak, being faint and weary with his journey, and possibly with the heat which makes him choose this shady place, and especially with hunger and thirst, ver. 9. And he might easily guess that this was the old prophet, by his age and carriage, and it may be, by his prophetic mantle, and by the character which his sons had given him.

15 Then he said unto him, Come home with me, and eat bread.

16 And he said, 'I may not return with thee, nor go in with thee: neither will I eat bread nor drink water with thee in this place.

17 In Beth-el, where thou desirest me to do it.

17 For it was said to me by the word of the Lord, Thou shalt eat no bread nor drink water there, nor turn again to go by the way that thou camest.

18 He said unto him, I am a prophet also as thou art, and an angel spake unto me by the word of the Lord, saying, Bring him back with thee into thine house, that he may eat bread and drink water. But he lied unto him.

Not with evil design against him, but out of curiosity to know all the truth and circumstances from his own mouth, and to express his kindness to him, and to relieve his pressing hunger, whereby possibly he thought to please God, and to compensate for his misgivings. But his son was great, for he did not only tell a premeditated lie, but also made God a liar and to contradict himself, and all this without any pretence of necessity, or benefit to himself.

19 So he went back with him, and did eat bread in his house, and drank water.

20 ¶ And it came to pass, as they sat at the table, that the word of the Lord came unto the prophet that brought him back.

As they sat at the table, there the prophet meets with a severe judgment, where he was placing himself with this seasonable refreshment. The word of the Lord came, by secret instinct into his mind, as sometimes God speaks to Moses and other prophets when they were in company with others. Unto the prophet that brought him back, so he makes this prophet public, to tell him all his sins, and to pronounce a terrible sentence against him, to whom he professed so much kindness. Indeed the Hebrew words are ambiguous, and by other renderings thus, to the prophet whom he had brought back, which covers well with the Hebrew phrase, and may seem to be the best translation by comparing ver. 25, where the same phrase is so rendered, and ver. 26, where the same is said to be spoken to him. But these arguments are not cogent, not that from ver. 25, because it is a common thing for the same phrase in divers verses and sometimes in one and the same verse to be diversely used, nor that from ver. 27, for that may be rendered concerning him. And therefore this translation is better, as is manifest from ver. 21.

21 And he cried unto the man of God that came from Judah, saying, Thus saith the Lord, Forasmuch as thou hast disobeyed the mouth of the Lord, and hast not kept the commandment which the Lord thy God commanded thee,

He cried with a loud voice, the effect of his passion, both for his own guilt and shame, and for the prophet's approaching misery, and his unhappy influence both in procuring and in denouncing of it. The mouth of the Lord, the word of command coming out of his mouth, a testimony of the cause for the effect.

22 But thou hast turned back, and hast eaten bread and drunk water in the place, of which the Lord said, Thou shalt eat no bread, and drink no water, thy carcass shall not come unto the sepulchre of thy fathers.

Thou shalt not die a natural, but a violent death, and that in this journey, before thou returnest to thy native habitation, and thy carcass shall not be buried in the proper sepulchre, which was esteemed a kind of curse, and a note of infamy, is the contrary was reckoned an honour and blessing. See chap. xii. 13, xiv. 19, 20; Jer. xlii. 42, xlii. 23.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, after he had eaten bread, and after he had drunk, that he saddled for him the ass, to mt, for the prophet whom he had brought back

That he might sooner come to his home, and, if possible, escape the judgment threatened. But it is observable he doth not accompany him his guilty conscience making him to expect and fear to be involved in the same judgment with him

24 And when he was gone, a lion met him by the way, and slew him: and his carcase was cast in the way: and the ass stood by it, the lion also stood by the carcase

A lion met him, for there were many lions in Judah, and this is lion hit him by God's special providence

Why doth God punish a good man so severely for so small an offence? Answer First, His sin was not small for it was a gross disobedience to a positive command. Object But he opposed and was told by another prophet that God had repeated his command and so was deceived

Answer First, He had no sufficient discharge from the former command for he neither was assured that the old man was a prophet nor that the message he delivered was from God, but had reason to suspect the contrary, or at least to inquire the mind of God in this doubtful point which he grossly neglected to do, and willingly believed the message because it suited with his own inclination and necessity. Add to this, that he being a prophet was obliged to the further exercise in obedience to all God's precepts, and therefore this sin was much greater in him than in another because hereby God was dishonoured and the authority and success of his message blasted, and Jeroboam and the idolatrous priests condemned in their wicked courses for the preservation of which it was necessary that God should execute justice upon him

Answer Secondly, A lion is not so small, so his punishment was not so great as may be imagined. For as to his outward man, he bodily death (which was due to him for his disobedience) in this way was a small and terrible punishment in kind of death, and a loss of his soul God by giving him a merciful admonition both of his sin and danger ver 21, 22 awakened him to true repentance which doubtless he practised and so was prepared for his death, and by this sudden death freed him from all the miseries of an evil time and world and speedily let him into eternal glory

Answer Thirdly, As the world and all men in it were made for God's glory and all their lives and deaths ought to be laid out in his service, but cannot seem strange nor harsh if God should bring his devoted death upon him in his return for the accomplishment of his own glorious designs, to vindicate his own honour and justice from the imputation of partiality, to show the truth of his predictions, and thereby provoke for him in his idolatry as follows to repentance, to put lively root in all his dear and precious which he intended to inflict upon Jeroboam's house and the whole kingdom of Israel for their cursed apostacy and to warn all such children of men not rashly to venture upon small sins, and especially to take heed of greater sins for which they might expect a sorer punishment

His carcase was cast in the way, his dead and out lying carcase was cast in the way, and his dead body told to be found and his there. ¶ The lion also stood by the carcase, ver 25

25 And, behold men, privied by, and saw the carcase cast in the way, and the lion standing by the carcase: and they came and told it in the city where the old prophet dwelt

26 And when the prophet that brought him back from the way heard thereof, he said, It is the word of God, who was disobedient unto the word of the Lord: therefore the wrath hath delivered him unto the lion, which hath torn him and slain him, according to the word of the Lord, which he spake unto him

Or rather, concerning him, for of the party taken is oft used, as Gen. xx 13; Psal. lii. 2; Job. xli. 1. See the notes on ver 20.

27 And he spake to his sons, saying, And he and the ass And they saddled him.

Being secure as to himself, because so many others had been there without any harm, and because he perceived the prophet's death was a judgment of God, and that for special reasons

28 And he went and found his carcase cast in the way, and the ass and the lion standing by the carcase: the lion had not eaten the carcase, nor † torn the ass

Here was a concurrence of miracles. That the ass did not run away from the lion, according to his nature and custom but boldly stood still as reserving himself for the carrying of the prophet to his burial, that the lion did not devour its prey in the manner is, nor yet go away when he had done his work which he was sent for, but stood still, partly to preserve the carcase of the prophet from other wild beasts or fowls, which would quickly have eaten it, partly as an evidence that the prophet's death was not casual nor the effect of a lion's hungry and ravenous disposition but of God's singular and just judgment, and consequently, that this prediction was Divine, and should be infallibly accomplished in its proper time, and partly, as a token of God's favour to the deceased prophet, of whose very carcase he took such special care thereby signifying, that although in wise and just reasons he thought fit to take away his life, yet his remains were precious to him, and his soul did live in his sight

29 And the prophet took up the carcase of the man of God, and laid it upon the ass, and brought it back, and the old prophet came to the city, to mourn and to bury him

30 And he had his carcase in his own grave, and they mourned over him, saying, Alas my brother!

So that the thing, ver 22, was fulfilled, and withal the memory of his prophecy was revived and preserved among them and his very carcase resting there might be a witness of their madness and desperate wickedness, in continuing their abominable idolatry after such an assurance of the dreadful effects of it. They mourned over him, the old prophet and his sons and others whom common humanity taught to lament the untimely death of so worthy a person. Alas, my brother! was a usual form of expression in funeral lamentation. See Jer xxii 18

31 And it came to pass, after he had buried him, that he spake to his sons, saying, When I am dead, then bury me in the sepulchre wherein the man of God is buried: Only my bones beside his bones

That I may be secured from that judgment threatened ver 2

32 ¶ I of the saying which he cried by the word of the Lord against the altar in Beth-el and against all the houses of the high places which are in the cities of Samaria, shall surely come to pass.

Of Samaria, i.e. of the kingdom of Samaria as it was called though not when this fact was done yet before these books were written. Samaria was properly the name of our city, 1 Kings xv 1, but from hence the whole kingdom of Israel was so called Jer xxxi 5 Hos vi 1, viii 5 Amos vi 9, and the king of Israel is called the king of Samaria, 2 Kings 13 Hos x 7, and (as here) we read of the cities of Samaria, Ezra iv 10

33 ¶ After this thing Jeroboam retained not from his evil way, but made again of the lowest of the people priests of the high places whosoever would, he consecrated him, and he became one of the priests of the high places

After the king, i. e. after all these things, the singular number is for the plural; after so many, and evident, and successive miracles; which is noted to aggravate his sudden and apostasy. Made again of the least of the people priests; he abused it of so much as a circumstance in his idolatrous worship. If however would, without any respect to tribe or family, or integrity of body, or mind, or life, all which were to be regarded in the priesthood. He consecrated him, Heb he filled his hand, of which phrase see Exod xxviii, 41, xxi 3, 38

34 And this thing became sin unto the house of Jeroboam, even to cut it off, and to destroy it from off the face of the earth.

This thing became sin, either an occasion of sin and means of hardening all his posterity in their idolatry or, a punishment, for so the word sin is oft used. This his obstinate continuance in his idolatry after such warnings was the utter ruin of all his family

CHAP XIV

Jeroboam sendeth his wife disguised and with presents to the prophet Ahijah at Shiloh, to inquire concerning his son, who was sick. 1-4 He, foretold by God his ruin because of idolatry, and the death of his child, and the destruction of Israel 5-16 His son dieth, and is buried, and he likewise. Nadab his son succeedeth, 17-20 Jeroboam and Judah sin again at the Lord, 21-22 Shishak King of Egypt spoileth Jerusalem, 23-28 His death, and Abijah his son succeedeth 29-31

AT that time Ahijah the son of Jeroboam fell sick

1stly, first, Presently after the things described in the former chapter which though related at the beginning of his reign yet might be done a good while after it and so Ahijah the prophet might be very old, as he is described to be ver 1 Or, secondly, Many years after it, i. e. while Jeroboam persisted in his former course, for this phrase is oft used indefinitely, and without respect to the time last mentioned before it, as Dan xii 1 Matt iv 1 Ahijah fell sick, by the stroke of God, to punish Jeroboam's rebellion against God

2 And Jeroboam said to his wife, Arise, I pray thee, and disguise thyself, that thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam, and get thee to Shiloh: behold there is Ahijah the prophet, which told me that I should be king over this people

Jeroboam said to his wife, partly, because he would trust none else with this secret, partly because she might without suspicion, inquire concerning her own child and partly because she would inquire most exactly and diligently, and faithfully acquaint him with the whole truth. Disguise thyself, change thy habit and voice and go like a private and obscure person. That thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam, this caution proceeded first, from the pride of his heart, which made him loth to confess his folly in worshipping such ignorant and helplessly idols and to give glory to the God whom he had forsaken. Secondly from jealousy and suspicion, lest the prophet knowing this, should either give her no answer, or make it worse than indeed it was. Thirdly, From policy, lest his people should by his example be drawn to forsake the senseless calves, and to return to the God of Judah, whom they had rashly forsaken

3 And take with thee ten loaves, and cracknels, and a cruse of honey, and go to him: he shall tell thee what shall become of the child

A cruse of honey, a present after the manner, Judges 17, 1 Sam. ix, 2, 8, 2 Kings v 15, viii 8, but mean, it came an ordinary country woman, which she person ated. And go to him, to inquire the event of this sickness, as the following words imply

4 And Jeroboam's wife did so, and arose, and went to Shiloh, and came to the house of Ahijah. But Ahijah could not see, for his eyes were set by reason of his age

Or, stood still, or were grown stiff, the nerves, by which the eyes and eyelids are moved, being contracted and withered

5 And the Lord said unto Ahijah, Behold, the wife of Jeroboam cometh to ask a thing of thee for her son, for he is sick: thus and thus shalt thou say unto her: for it shall be, when she cometh in, that she shall feign herself to be another woman

6 And it was so, when Ahijah heard the sound of her feet, as she came in at the door, that he said, Come in, thou wife of Jeroboam: why feignest thou thyself to be another? for I am sent to thee with these sayings

By this discovery he both proves them folly, who thought to conceal themselves or their designs from that God from whom they expected and desired the discovery of the most secret things, and withal gives her assurance of the truth and certainty of that message which he was to deliver

7 Go, tell Jeroboam, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, I as much as I exalted thee from among the people, and made thee prince over my people Israel,

They were God's people which Jeroboam was first set over them

8 And I rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it thee: and yet thou hast not been as my servant David: who kept my commandments, and who followed me with all his heart to do that only which was right in mine eyes,

Is my servant David, who though he was not come into the world yet first he constantly persecuted the true worship of God, from which thou art revolted, secondly he heartily repented of and turned from all his sins, whereas thou art obstinate and incorrigible

9 But hast done evil above all that were before thee: for thou hast gone and made thee other gods, and molten images to provoke me to anger, and hast cast me behind thy back

These all that were before thee, above all the former kings of my people, as Saul and Solomon, and Jeroboam (Other gods and molten images, or other gods to wit, (for a word oft signifies among the Hebrews as hath been formerly noted,) molten images, namely, the golden calves which he calls other gods, not as if the Israelites esteemed the calves made of their own gold to be gods indeed, which it is incredible should find belief with any man as his was especially with the whole body of the Israelites who knew that the ark and cherubims, though made by God's appointment, were not gods, but only pledges of God's presence &c., nor as if they thought them to be other gods in a strict and proper sense, for it is apparent that they still pretended to worship the God of their fathers as the Jews at Jerusalem did, though in a different manner: but only because God rejected their whole worship, and howsoever they called or accounted it, he rejected it as a manifest desertion from him, and a betaking of themselves to other gods, or devils as they are called 2 Chron xii 13, by whose instigation they were led to such idolatrous practices, and whom alone they served and worshipped, whatsoever pretences they had to the contrary) I have provoked me to anger, i. e. whereby thou dost provoke me; for otherwise this was not Jeroboam's design in it, but only to establish himself in the throne. Cast me behind thy back; despised, and disregarded, and forsaken me and my commands, and my worship, as we do things which we cast behind our backs.

10 Therefore behold, <sup>1</sup> I will bring evil upon the house of Jeroboam, and <sup>2</sup> will cut off from Jeroboam him that pisseth against the wall, <sup>3</sup> and him that is shut up and left in Israel, and will take away the remnant of the house of Jeroboam, as a man taketh away dung, till it be all gone.

See the note on I Sam xxv 22. Him that is shut up and left the one who had escaped the fury of their enemies invading them either because they were shut up in caves, or castles or strong towns or because they were left overlooked or neglected by them or spared as poor impotent helpless creatures. But now, saith he, they shall be all searched out and brought to destruction. See more on Deut xxviii 26. As a man taketh away dung, which they remove as a loathsome thing out of their houses, and that thoroughly and universally.

11 <sup>1</sup> Him that dieth of Jeroboam in the city shall the dogs eat, and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat: for the Lord hath spoken it.

So both sorts shall die unburied.

12 Arise thou therefore, get thee to thine own house, and <sup>2</sup> when thy feet enter into the city, the child shall die.

Presently upon thy entrance into the city when thou art gone but a little way in it, even yet as to the threshold of the king's door ver 17 which possibly was near the gates of the city. And by the event of this branch judge of the truth of the rest of my prophecy.

13 And all Israel shall mourn for him, and bury him: for he only of Jeroboam shall come to the grave, because in him <sup>2</sup> there is found some good thing toward the Lord God of Israel in the house of Jeroboam.

All Israel shall mourn for him either first for the loss of so worthy and hopeful a person, or secondly for the calamities which should follow his death which possibly his moderation and wisdom and virtue might have prevented whereof his death was a certain presage and evidence. So they should mourn not simply for him but for their own loss in him. Shall come to the grave shall have the honour of burial denied to the rest ver 11. Some good thing toward the Lord God of Israel, some pious inclinations and intentions of taking away the calves or of permitting or obliging his people to go up to Jerusalem to worship if God give him life and authority to do it and of trusting God with his kingdom in that case. In the house of Jeroboam, which is added for his greater commendation: he was good in the midst of so many temptations and wicked examples, and of so much of a bad stock.

14 Moreover the Lord shall raise him up a king over Israel who shall cut off the house of Jeroboam that day: but what? even now.

Baruch chap xv 28. Who shall cut off the house of Jeroboam that day when he is so raised in the very beginning of his reign chap xv 29. But what? but what do I say, he shall rise up to do a thing to be done at a great distance of time. He hath already raised him in some sort: the man is now in being, if not in power who shall do this, this judgment shall be shortly executed.

15 For the Lord shall smite Israel, as a reed is shaken in the water, and he shall <sup>2</sup> root up Israel out of this good land, which he gave to their fathers, and shall scatter them beyond the river, because they have made them groves, provoking the Lord to anger.

The Lord shall smite Israel, because they obeyed Jeroboam's wicked command of worshipping the calves, and that willingly, Hos v 11. As a reed is shaken in the water, easily and variously, hither and thither with every wind, so shall the kingdom and people of Israel be always in an unquiet and unsettled posture, tossed to and fro by foreign invasions and civil wars, by opposite kings and factions and by the dissensions of the people. See 2 Kings xvii 18. Beyond the river, to wit, Euphrates oft so called by way of eminency, as Gen xv 18, xxxi 21: 1 Kings xi 21, 24. This was accomplished in part, 2 Kings xv 29, and more fully 2 Kings xvii 6. Because they have made them groves, for the worship of their idols, Exod xxxiv 13. Deut xxi 21. God having before condemned the making and worshipping of the calves, by which they designed or pretended to worship the true God, he now takes notice that they were not contented with the calves, but (as it is the nature of idolatry, and all sin, to proceed from evil to worse) were many of them fallen into another and a worse kind of idolatry even their worship of the heathenish Baals, which they commonly exercised in groves. See on 1 Kings xvii 19.

16 And he shall give Israel up because of the sins of Jeroboam, <sup>2</sup> who did sin, and who made Israel to sin.

To wit, by his invention, and making of the occasion of their sin the calves, by his example, by encouraging those, and only those that worshipped the calves, and by his authority requiring and compelling them to do it. This is mentioned as a monstrous aggravation of his wickedness, that he is not content with his own sin but is the great author and chief cause of drawing others into sin and of corrupting and undoing the whole kingdom, which therefore God would not forgive him nor forget him, but upon all occasions mentions him with this eternal brand of infamy upon him.

17 <sup>1</sup> And Jeroboam's wife arose and departed and came to Tirzah, and <sup>2</sup> when she came to the threshold of the door the child died.

Tirzah an ancient and royal city Josh xii 21: a pleasant place Cant vi 1 where the kings of Israel had a palace, Chap xv 33. xvi 6, 8. 15. 23. Whither Jeroboam was removed from Shechem, either for his pleasure or for his sons recovery by the healthfulness of the place. At the threshold of the door, to wit, of the king's house which probably was upon or by the wall of the city and near the gate which was the place of judicature. See ver 12.

18 And they buried him, and all Israel mourned for him, according to the word of the Lord, which he spake by the hand of his servant Ahijah the prophet.

19 And the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, how he <sup>2</sup> warred, and how he reigned behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

Heb in the book of the words or things of the days &c By which you are not to understand that canon of books of the Chronicles, for that was written long after this book but a book of civil records the annals, wherein all remarkable passages were recorded by the king's command from day to day, out of which the sacred penman by the direction of God's Spirit, took those passages which were most considerable and useful for God's honour and man's edification.

20 And the days which Jeroboam reigned were two and twenty years, and he slept with his fathers, and Nadab his son reigned in his stead.

So he lived till his second year, chap xv 25. He slept with his fathers, either, first, He was buried with his ancestors. But their sepulchre seems to be too mean and improper for a great king, and kings used to be buried in peculiar sepulchres. Or, secondly, He died, as his father did.

21 ¶ And Rehoboam the son of Solomon reigned in Judah. Rehoboam was forty and one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the Lord did choose out of all the tribes of Israel, to put his name there. And his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess.

Rehoboam was forty and one years old, then fore he was born a year before Solomon was king, as appears from 1 Kings xi 42. This is noted as in aggravation of Rehoboam's folly, that he was old enough to have been wiser. An Ammonitess, a people cursed by God and shut out of the congregation of his people for ever Deut xxiii 3. Neh xiii 1. This is observed as one cause both of God's displeasure in punishing Solomon with such a son, and of Rehoboam's apostasy after his three first years, 2 Chron xi 17.

22 *And Judah did evil in the sight of the Lord, and they provoked him to jealousy with their sins which they had committed, above all that their fathers had done.

Judah did evil, after a little time, 2 Chron xi 17.

23 For they also built them high places, and images, and groves, on every high hill, and under every green tree.

They also built them high places, they followed the example of the Israelites although they were better instructed and had the temple in their kingdom and liberty of access to it which was denied to the Israelites, and the privilege of worshipping God in his own way and the counsels and sermons and examples of the priests and Levites to teach and establish them, and the dreadful example of Israel's horrid apostasy to caution and terrify them. The building of high places was unlawful and now especially when the temple was built and ready to receive them uncorrected and therefore expressed their contempt of God and his precepts and to the contrary. Images and groves not only after the manner of the heathens and Israelites but against a direct and particular prohibition. Under every green tree the people were universally corrupted, which is a prodigious evil in all things considered and is a clear evidence of the greatness and depth of the original corruption of man's nature which without God's grace is ready to break forth into all sorts of wickedness.

24 *And there were also sodomites in the land and they did according to all the abominations of the nations which the Lord cast out before the children of Israel.

Sodomites, i.e. males who prostituted their bodies to the filthy lusts of others, of whom see on Deut xxiii 17 who also did this in the worship and to the honour of their idols, as also the women did, Numb xxi 12. And this might be one occasion of so great a spreading of idolatry among the sinful Israelites. And on the other side God doth frequently punish idolatry with corporal punishments. 1 Sam i 21, 26. See 1 Kings xv 12, xxii 16, 2 Kings xiii 7.

25 ¶ And it came to pass in the fifth year of king Rehoboam that Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem.

In the fifth year of king Rehoboam presents at this and his people's apostasy, which was not till his fourth year when the apostatical Israelites enjoyed peace and some kind of prosperity, at first, for many years together, but which difference two reasons may be given. First that Judah's sins were committed against clear light, and more powerful means and remedies of all sorts, and therefore deserved more severe and speedy judgments. Secondly, that God discovered more love to Judah in chastising them speedily than so they might be humbled, and reformed and so graciously preserved, as it happened, and more as yet against Israel, that he spared them, and by their unpunished hardness and opened them to that total destruction which he intended to bring upon them. Shishak king of Egypt, of whom see 1 Kings xi 40, 2 Chron xii 2 &c., where this history is more fully described. He is thought by many to be Solomon's brother-in-law. But how little such relations signify among princes, when their interest is concerned, all histories witness. Besides, Rehoboam was not Solomon's son by Pharaoh's daughter, and so the relation was in a manner extinct. Came up against Jerusalem, either from ambition, and a desire to enlarge his empire, or from jealousy of Rehoboam's growing greatness; of which see 2 Chron xi, or by Jeroboam's instigation, or from a covetous desire of possessing these great treasures which David and Solomon had left and above all, by God's providence, disposing his heart to this expedition for Rehoboam's punishment.

26 *And he took away the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house, he even took away all and he took away all the shields of gold which Solomon had made.

He took away the treasures, it is implied, that first he took the city, which may seem strange, considering the great strength of that city and how much time it took Nebuchadnezzar and Titus to take it. But, first it might cost Shishak also some time and a long siege ere he took it though that be not here related. Secondly, it is probable that David and Solomon in their building and altering of this city, had more respect to state and magnificence than to its defence, having no great cause to fear the invasion of any enemies and being too secure in reference to their posterity because of God's promise of the kingdom to be continued to them and to their seed for ever. And it is probable and certain, that after the division between Judah and Israel the king of Judah did add very much to the fortifications of this city.

27 And king Rehoboam made in their stead brassen shields, and committed them unto the hands of the chief of the guard, which kept the door of the king's house.

Where the golden shields, as being more precious, were kept in a certain place.

28 And it was so when the king went into the house of the Lord that the guard bare them, and brought them back into the guard chamber.

When the king went into the house of the Lord by which it seems the affliction had done him some good and brought him back to the worship of God, which he had forsaken.

29 * Now the rest of the acts of Rehoboam and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

Such book of chronicles as that mentioned above, ver 19.

30 And there was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all their days.

Not an invasive war with potent armies, which was for hidden chips xii 21 and not revived till Abijah's reign, 2 Chron xiii but a defensive war from those hostilities which by small parties and skirmishes they did to one another.

31 * And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David. And his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess. And Abijah his son reigned in his stead.

His mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess this is repeated as a thing very observable. See above, ver 21.

CHAP XV

Abijah followeth his father's sins, God however keepeth prospering he death, and Asa his son succeedeth him, 1-8. His good reign, 9-15 Baasha warreth against him, 16-22.

maketh a league with Ben-hadad, 16—22. He dieth, and Jehoahaphat succeedeth him, 23, 24. Nadab's wicked reign, Jehoahaphat slayeth him, destroyeth his father's house, and succeeds him his wicked reign, 25—31.

NOW in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam the son of Nebat reigned Abijam over Judah.

Object How can this be when he reigned three years, ver. 2, and A his successor began his reign in the twentieth year of Jeroboam, ver. 9? Answer Parts of years are commonly called and accounted years, both in the Old and New Testament and in profane writers. So his reign began with Jeroboam's eighteenth year, and continued his whole nineteenth year and ended within his twentieth year, in which also A's reign began. And thus one and the same year may well be, as it frequently is, attributed to two several persons.

2 Three years reigned he in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Maachiah, the daughter of Abishalom.

Three years see the last note, on ver. 1. Of Abishalom, or, of Abshalom as he is called 2 Chron. xi. 21. And because he is here mentioned as a known person, without any addition of his kindred or quality, some conceive that this was Abshalom's daughter, called properly Pamir, 2 Sam. xiv. 27, and from her royal grandmother, 2 Sam. iii. 3. Maachiah, and that she is called Maachiah (which differs not much from Maachah) the daughter of Uriel 2 Chron. xiii. 2, because she was first married to Uriel as Josephus affirms Antiq. viii. 3, and afterwards to Rehoboam. Other think this was another person, and that both she and her father had each of them several wives, which was not unusual among the Hebrews.

3 And he walked in all the sins of his father, which he had done before him; and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as the heart of David his father.

In all the sins of his father which his father lived in, either, first, before his imputation. Of which see chaps. vi. After his deliverance from Shihab when though he did not openly renounce the worship of God, he seems to have relapsed into his former sins, which otherwise would not have been remembered against him, as David's name and memory is never loaded with the blame of his sin, because he truly repented of them.

4 Nevertheless for David's sake did the Lord his God give him a lamp in Jerusalem, to set up his son after him, and to establish Jerusalem.

A lamp is a son and successor to perpetuate his name and memory, which otherwise had gone into obscurity. The same phrase is used above chap. xi. 36. 2 Kings viii. 19, 2 Chron. xxi. 7. To establish Jerusalem i. e. that he might maintain that city, and temple and worship, as a witness for God in the world against the Israelites and heathen world who should have inquired after it and embraced the religion there established and set up, as a beacon upon a high hill that all men might take notice of it.

5 Because David did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, and turned not aside from any thing that he commanded him all the days of his life, save only in the matter of Uriah the Hittite.

Quest How is this to be seen, David sinned in the matter of Nabal, 1 Sam. xxv. and Achish, chap. xxvii. and Mephibosheth and in a multitude more, when Abijam, Amnon and Absalom were the murderers of the people? Answer This and the like phrases are not to be understood as exclusive of every sinful action, but only of a sinful course or state, or of an habitual continued apostasy from God, or from his ways, as the very phrase of turning aside from God, or from his commands, doth constantly imply, as appears from Exod. xxxii. b. Deut. ix. 12, 16,

1 Sam. viii. 3; Psal. lxxviii. 57; Isa. xlv. 20; 1 Tim. i. 6, v. 15, &c. And thus it is most true. For David's other sins were either sudden and transient acts, proceeding from human infirmity, and extraordinary temptations, and soon repented of and blotted out, as in the cases of Nabal and Achish, or mistakes of his judgment, which was not fully convinced of the sinfulness of such actions, as in the other cases alleged, whereas that which concerned Uriah's wife was a designed and studied sin, long continued in, defended with a succession of other sins, presumptuous, and scandalous to his government and to the true religion, which he so eminently professed.

6 And there was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all the days of his life.

Which was said chap. xiv. 30, and may be here repeated, to signify the cause and original of the war between Abijam and Jeroboam, which is implied here, and particularly described 2 Chron. xiii. Abijam continued the war which Rehoboam had begun, and pushed it on to a decisive battle. But the place may be thus rendered, For there was war, &c., i. e. although God was pleased to show so much respect to David, as for his sake to continue the succession to the kingdom in his posterity, yet he thought fit to punish this displeasure against David's successors for their sins, and to mix their honour and happiness with wars and troubles.

7 Now the rest of the acts of Abijam, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? And there was war between Abijam and Jeroboam.

The chronicles of the kings of Judah, in their annals, whence they were long after this time translated into the sacred Book of Chronicles. See above on chap. xiv. 19.

8 And Abijam slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David; and Asa his son reigned in his stead.

9 And in the twentieth year of Jeroboam king of Israel reigned Asa over Judah.

Here now ends the end of the sixth See above ver. 1. 10 And forty and one year reigned he in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Maachiah the daughter of Abishalom.

His grandmother's as appears from ver. 2, who is called his mother, as David is called Abijam's father, ver. 3, and this Asa's father, ver. 11. And so the names of father and mother, and sons, and daughters are often both in sacred and profane authors, for grandparents and grandchildren. And his grandmother's name may be here mentioned rather than his mother's, because his mother was either an obscure person, or was long since dead, or indisposed or unwilling to take care of the education of her son, and so he was educated by the grandmother, who though she did poison his father Abijam with her idolatrous principles, ver. 12, yet could not infect Asa nor withhold him from prosecuting his good purposes of reforming religion, which is here remembered to his praise.

11 And Asa did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, as did David his father.

That which was right in the eyes of the Lord, as to the government of his kingdom and life and the reformation and establishment of God's worship.

12 And he took away the sodomites out of the land, and removed all the idols that his fathers had made.

The sodomites of whom see chap. xxi. 24, not all of them, but those whom he could find out, but some escaped his observation and censure, as appears from chap. xxi. 16.

13 And also Maachiah his mother, even her he removed from being queen, because she had made an idol in a grove, and Asa destroyed her idol, and burnt it by the brook Kidron.

13 He removed from being queen, i. e. he took from her the name and authority of queen-regent, which she, having been Rehobam's wife, and Abijam's mother, took to herself during Asha's minority and abused to the patronage of idolatry, or the dignity of the queen-mother, and those guards, or other emblems of honour, or instruments of power, which, as such, she had enjoyed and misemployed. Others say, he removed her from the queen, i. e. from his wife, that she might not be infected by her, and afterwards infect his children, which was a prudent and necessary care, for the prevention of so great and public a mischief. An idol Heb. a terror, or horror, i. e. a horrible idol which it may be so called, either because all idols though for a person they please, yet in the end will bring dreadful effects upon their worshippers, or because this was an idol of a more horrible or terrible shape more abominable than ordinary, and not to be seen without horror, whether it was that filthy idol, called Priapus, which was commonly placed in groves or gardens, or Pan, or some other heathen god, to whose service she in a special manner devoted herself. Burnt it by the brook Kidron, that when it was burnt to powder, it might be thrown into the water and be unfit for any use. See Exod. xxxii. 20, Deut. xii. 3.

14 But the high places were not removed, nevertheless Asa's heart was perfect with the Lord all his days.

The high places were not removed. Object. He did take these away, 2 Chron. xiv. 2. Answer. He took away those which were devoted to the worship of idols, as is there said, he took away the altars of the strange gods, and the high places, to wit where they were worshipped, but as for those high places where the true God was worshipped, he did not take them away, partly because he thought there was no great evil in them, because they had been used by David and Solomon, and other good and wise men, and because the true God was there worshipped, and that in the manner though not in the place which God had appointed, and partly because he thought the removal of them might do much more hurt than their continuance to wit by occasioning the total neglect of God's worship by many of the people, who either could not, or through want of competent faith and zeal would not go up to Jerusalem to worship, now especially when the Israelites their neighbours, formerly their friends, were become their enemies, and watched all opportunities to invade or molest them, which they concluded they would do when all their miles were gone up to Jerusalem, and partly, because the people were so obstinately bent towards them that it was or at least seemed to him impossible to remove them without great offence, or such commotions as were highly dangerous to that church and state. Asa's heart was perfect with the Lord, i. e. he did sincerely and constantly adhere to the worship and service of God. Though he could not hinder the people from using the high places, yet he did entirely devote himself to the worship of God in the manner and place prescribed by God.

15 And he brought in the things which his father had dedicated, and the things which himself had dedicated, into the house of the Lord, silver, and gold, and vessels.

Which his father had dedicated. Abijam, to wit when he was in distress and going to fight with Jeroboam, 2 Chron. xii. 1. though afterwards he did not perform his vow, nor bring in what he had devoted, whether because he was prevented by death, or because he afterwards relapsed to idolatry, as may seem probable from the 12th verse of this chapter.

16 And there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days.

So long as they two lived and reigned together, which is not so to be understood, as if there were a solemn and declared war continuing all that time. (For Asa was quiet in a great measure for his first ten years, 2 Chron. xii. 1, till the Israelites had recovered themselves from that dreadful blow given them by Abijah, 2 Chron. xiii.) and Baasha began to reign in Asa's third year) but so that there were many private and particular hostilities practised and going on, in which sense the same phrase is used chap. xii. 30.

17 And Baasha king of Israel went up against Judah, and built Ramah, that he might not suffer any to go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

Baasha went up against Judah, to prevent Asa's great success, of which see 2 Chron. xii. 15, and the defection of many of his own subjects to him upon that occasion. 2 Chron. xv. 9, he began to bestir himself and commenced a war against him. Ramah, i. e. repaired and fortified, Ramah, a city of Benjamin, which either belonged to the kingdom of Israel, from the division, (as some other places of that tribe are supposed to have done, of which see on 1 Kings vi. 13,) or belonged to Judah, but was now invaded and taken by Baasha, and fortified. That he might not suffer any to go out or come in to Asa king of Judah, therefore he chose this place, because it was in the way from his kingdom to Jerusalem, and, as some add, in or near the straits of the mountains, where they could easily discover and hinder all passengers that way.

18 Then Asa took all the silver and the gold that were left in the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house, and delivered them into the hand of his servants, and king Asa sent them to Ben-hadad, the son of Tadmor, the son of Hezion, king of Syria, that dwelt at Damascus, saying,

All the silver and the gold that were left, the poor remainders which either Ishboshab had left at that time, chap. xii. 26, or Abijam or Asa or others, both of Israel and Judah, had dedicated; which probably was not inconsiderable, because Asa had got great spoils from Zerah, 2 Chron. xiv. 1, and he and his numerous and prosperous people did at that time express a great zeal for the house and worship of God. Asa sent them to Ben-hadad, wherein he committed three great faults, amongst many others. First, He alienated things consecrated to God with out necessity. Secondly, He did this out of carnal love and distrust of that God whose power and goodness he had lately experienced. Thirdly, He did this out of ill intent to lure him to the breach of his league and covenant with Baasha, ver. 19, and to take away part of that band which by right, and the good gift of God, belonged to the Israelites.

19 There is a league between me and thee, and between my father and thy father: behold, I have sent unto thee a present of silver and gold, come and break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may depart from me.

There is a league between me and thee, and between my father and thy father, whereby it appears, that albeit he was an adversary to Israel all Solomon's days, chap. xi. 25, yet after the division of the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, he was in league with both of them. Either because his designs lay upon the enlargement of his empire otherwise, or rather, because he thought it his wisdom and interest to leave them to themselves, to undo one another by their intestine wars, and so to prepare the way to his conquest of both: whereas his invading of either of them might have made up the breach, and forced them to unite against their common enemy. And therefore as soon as he was free from this fear, and one of them needed and earnestly desired his help against the other, he gladly embraced the opportunity. That he may depart from me, that being called to defend himself, he may be forced to depart from my territories.

20 So Ben-hadad hearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of the hosts which he had against the cities of Israel, and smote Ijon, and Dan, and Abel-beth-maacbah, and all Ginnath, with all the land of Naphtali.

The northern parts of Baasha's kingdom, which were nearest to his own kingdom of Damascus and most remote from those parts where Baasha was now employed, which were in the most southern parts of his dominions

21 And it came to pass, when Baasha heard thereof, that he left off building of Ramah, and dwelt in Tirzah

Now the royal city of Israel. See chap xiv 17 There he abode to defend his own kingdom, and durst not return to oppose Asa lest the Syrian king should make a second and worse invasion. So Asa met with success in his ungodly course as on the other side good men sometimes meet with disappointment in a good cause and course. So there is no judging of causes by events

22 Then king Asa made a proclamation throughout all Judah none was exempted and they took away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha had builded, and king Asa built with them <sup>a</sup>Gaba of Benjamin, and <sup>b</sup>Mizpah

None was exempted, all sorts of persons were obliged to come except those who were disabled by age or infirmity, or absence of by the public service of the king and kingdom in other places. Asa built with them Gaba of Benjamin and Mizpah, i.e. repaired and strengthened them for they were built before. See Jer xiv 9. Quest Why did he not rather perfect the fortifications of Ramah which Baasha had begun? Answer Because Baasha might have returned and recovered it afterward, and he thought it most convenient that there should be no city nor fort in that place

23 The rest of all the acts of Asa, and all his might, and all that he did, and the cities which he built, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? Nevertheless in the time of his old age he was diseased in his feet

Nevertheless notwithstanding the great things which he had done and the glory and prosperity which he enjoyed, he felt the effects of human infirmity, and of his own sins, of which see 2 Chron xvi 12 13

24 And Asa slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father. <sup>a</sup>and <sup>b</sup>Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his stead

25 <sup>a</sup>And Nadab the son of Jeroboam began to reign over Israel in the second year of Asa king of Judah, and reigned over Israel two years

Not complete as appears from ver 28 3

26 And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the way of his father, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin

In the worship of the calves which his father had made

27 <sup>a</sup>And Baasha the son of Ahijah, of the house of Issachar conspired against him, and Baasha smote him at Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines, for Nadab and all Israel laid siege to Gibbethon

Of the house of Issachar i.e. of the tribe, which is still called a house as Jud. i 9. Psal cxxxv 20, Hos i 7 Which belongs to the Philistines who taking advantage of the division between Israel and Judah had taken this town, which belonged to the tribe of Dan Josh xiv 14, and belonged to the Levites to i xxv 23, upon whose departure to Judah 2 Chron xi 14 the kings of Israel seized their towns and lands to their uses. As was noted before, which made them so much concerned for this town, to be sieged both now and many years after it. Quest chap xvi 15

28 Even in the third year of Asa king of Judah did Baasha slay him, and reigned in his stead

In the third year of Asa how this agrees with 2 Chron xvi 1, see in the notes there. Did Baasha slay him; which he did not to fulfil God's threatening, but only to advance himself, and therefore this is called murder, chap xvi 7.

29 And it came to pass, when he reigned, that he smote all the house of Jeroboam, he left not to Jeroboam any that breathed until he had destroyed him, according unto the saying of the Lord, which he spake by his servant Ahijah the Shilonite

Any that breathed i.e. any of the males of that family. See Deut xx 16, Josh x 10. According unto the saying of the Lord so God overruled Baasha's ambition and cruelty, to fulfil his own counsel and prediction

30 Because of the sins of Jeroboam which he sinned, and which he made Israel sin, by his provocation wherewith he provoked the Lord God of Israel to anger

Which he made Israel sin, so that same wicked policy which he used to establish the kingdom in his family proved his and their ruin, which is very frequently the event of ungodly counsels

31 Now the rest of the acts of Nadab, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

32 And there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days

33 In the third year of Asa king of Judah began Baasha the son of Ahijah to reign over all Israel in Tirzah, twenty and four years

34 And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin

CHAP XVI

Jehu prophesieth against Baasha 1-7. Liah succeedeth him him Zimri slayeth and succeedeth he besieged by Omri burneth himself 8-20. Omri prevaileth against Tibni and is king, buildeth Samaria, followeth the sins of Jeroboam and dieth 21-25. Ahab his son succeedeth him he is more wicked than his predecessors 26-33. Hiel buildeth Jericho, and Joshua's curse is fulfilled in him 34

THE word of the Lord came to Jehu the son of Hanani against Baasha, saying,

Jehu a prophet, of whom see more 2 Chron xiv 2, xx 34. Hanani also was a prophet 2 Chron xvi 7

2 <sup>a</sup>As much as I exalted thee out of the dust, and made thee prince over my people Israel, and thou hast walked in the way of Jeroboam, and hast made my people Israel to sin, to provoke me to anger with their sins,

Out of the dust, out of a low and mean estate. See 1 Sam ii 8, Psal cxlii 7. Quest How is Baasha's exaltation to the kingdom ascribed to God, when he got it by treachery and cruelty? Answer Though that way or manner of invading the kingdom was from himself and his own wicked heart yet the translation of the kingdom from Nadab to Baasha, simply considered, was from God, who by his decree and providence ordered it and disposed of all occasions, and of the hearts of all the soldiers and people, so that Baasha should have opportunity of executing God's judgment upon Nadab, and such success thereupon, that he should get a present and quiet possession of the kingdom. Nay the very act of Baasha, to wit, the killing of his master Nadab, was an act of Divine justice, foretold and appointed by God, chap. xiv. 10. And if Baasha had done this in obedience to God's command, and with a single design to execute God's vengeance threatened against him, he had been no more a man than Jehu's act in killing his master king Jehoram, upon the same account, 2 Kings ix. But that Baasha did this merely to gratify his own pride, of covetousness, or malice, this was not from God but from himself, and therefore is charged upon him as murder here, ver. 7. To provoke me to anger see on 1 Kings xiv. 9.

13 Behold, I will take away the posterity of Baasha, and the posterity of his house, and will make thy house like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

14 Him that dieth of Baasha in the city shall the dogs eat, and him that dieth of his in the fields shall the fowls of the air eat.

15 Now the rest of the acts of Baasha, and what he did, and his might, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

16 So Baasha slept with his fathers, and was buried in Tirzah, and Elah his son reigned in his stead.

17 And also by the hand of the prophet Jehu the son of Hanani came the word of the Lord against Baasha, and against his house, even for all the evil that he did in the sight of the Lord in provoking him to anger with the work of his hands, in being like the house of Jeroboam, and because he killed him.

By the hand of the prophet Jehu came the word of the Lord the meaning is the message which came from the Lord to Jehu ver. 1 &c. was here delivered by the hand of the ministry of Jehu, unto Baasha. Jehu did what he commanded him in this matter though it was not without apparent hazard to himself. And because he killed him, the Nadab, who though he be not expressed yet is tacitly understood. 1. By the manifest reference which these words have to the murder committed by Baasha, which was done upon Nadab only chap. xv. 25. 2. By the foregoing words the house of Jeroboam &c. the posterity which was Nadab. 3. Why doth God punish him for doing God's work thus 1. Then he God appointed that Jeroboam's family should be cut off yet he did not give Baasha commission to do it nor to be carried how or by whom he would do it. 2. Baasha did this not to fulfil God's will, but his own lusts. See on ver. 2.

8 ¶ In the twenty and sixth year of Asa king of Judah began Elah the son of Baasha to reign over Israel in Tirzah, two years.

One complete, and part of the other ver. 10, which in Scripture account is reckoned for a year. See above, chap. iv. 25.

9 And his servant Zimri, captain of half his chariots, conspired against him, as he was in Tirzah, drinking himself drunk in the house of Anazi, steward of his house in Tirzah.

Captain of half his chariots, i. e. of all his military chariots, and the men belonging to them, the chariots for carriage of necessary things being put into other and meaner hands. As he was in Tirzah, whilst his forces were elsewhere employed ver. 15, which gave Zimri advantage to execute his design.

10 And Zimri went in and smote him, and killed him, in the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah, and reigned in his stead.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, when he began to reign, as soon as he sat on his throne, that he slew all the house of Baasha: he left him not one that pisseth against a wall, neither of his kinsfolks, nor of his friends.

Kinsfolks Heb. avengers, to whom it belonged to revenge his death see Num. xxxv. 12. Ver of his friends, his confidants and familiar acquaintance such as were most likely to hinder his settlement in the throne, and to avenge their friend's quarrel.

12 Thus did Zimri destroy all the house of Baasha, according to the word of the Lord, which he spake against Baasha by Jehu the prophet.

Thus fulfilling God's threatening, but either without his knowledge, or merely for his own ends.

13 I or all the sins of Baasha, and the sins of Elah his son, by which they sinned, and by which they made Israel to sin, in provoking the Lord God of Israel to anger with their vanities.

Idols etc. called vanities as Deut. xxxii. 21, 1 Sam. xvi. 21. For xv. 22 because they are but imaginary deities and mere *nothing*s. 1 Cor. viii. 1, having nothing at all of a God in them, and nothing of power to do either good or hurt.

14 Now the rest of the acts of Elah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

15 ¶ In the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah did Zimri reign seven days in Tirzah. And the people were encamped against Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines.

Which had been besieged before p. xv. 27, but it seems, was then relieved or afterwards recovered by the Philistines taking the advantage of the disorders and contentions which were among their enemies.

16 And the people that were encamped heard say, Zimri hath conspired, and hath also slain the king: wherefore all Israel made Omri, the captain of the host, king over Israel that day in the camp.

17 And Omri went up from Gibbethon, and all Israel with him, and they besieged Tirzah.

18 And it came to pass, when Zimri saw that the city was taken, that he went into the palace of the king's house, and burnt the king's house over him with fire, and died.

Burnt the king's house over him, or and he burnt, &c. Either 1. Omri burnt it over Zimri, for pronouns sometimes respect more remote nouns. Or rather, 2. Zimri, (to whom both the foregoing and following words apparently belong) who burnt it upon himself, that neither himself nor the royal palace and treasures might come into the hands of his insulting adversary.

19 I or his sins which he sinned in doing evil in the sight of the Lord, in walking in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin which he did, to make Israel to sin.

I or his sins, i. e. thus befell him for his sins. Walking in the way of Jeroboam, which he might do, either before he reign, in the whole course of his life, which is justly charged upon him, because of his impenitency, or in the seven days of his reign, in which he had time enough to publish his intentions or decrees about the continuance of the worship of the calves, or to surrender to them for his good success, either already obtained, or further desired.

20 Now the rest of the acts of Zimri, and his treason that he wrought, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

21 ¶ Then were the people of Israel divided into two parts: half of the people followed Tibni the son of Ginnath, to make him king, and half followed Omri.

The people of Israel fell into a civil war, yet neither this nor any other of God's dreadful judgments could win them to repentance, which is an evidence of their prodigious impiety and incorrigibility, and how ripe they were for ruin. Half of the people followed Tibni, disdaining that the soldiers should usurp such a power over the whole kingdom. Half followed Omri, because they approved the person, though not the manner of his election.

22 But the people that followed Omri prevailed against the people that followed Tibni the son of Ginnath: so Tibni died, and Omri reigned.

The people that followed Omri prevailed, partly because they had the army on their side and principally by the appointment and judgment of God giving up the Israelites to him who was much the worst ver. 21, 26. Tibni died a violent death in the battle.

23 ¶ In the thirty and first year of Asa king of Judah began Omri to reign over Israel, twelve years: six years reigned he on Tirzah.

Began Omri to reign over Israel twelve years: 1 c and he reigned twelve years, not from the thirty first year of Asa, for he died in his thirty eighth year ver. 29, but from the beginning of his reign which was in Asa's twenty seventh year ver. 15, 16. So he reigned four years in a state of war with Tibni and eight years peaceably.

24 And he bought the hill Samaria of Shemer for two talents of silver, and built on the hill, and called the name of the city which he built, after the name of Shemer, owner of the hill, † Samaria.

† Built on the hill to wit the city, and especially, a royal palace, because that at Fuzah was burnt ver. 18.

25 ¶ But Omri wrought evil in the eyes of the Lord, and did worse than all that were before him.

26 For he walked in all the way of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin, to provoke the Lord God of Israel to anger with their vanities.

He walked in all the way of Jeroboam, 1 c did not only promote the worship of the calves, as Jeroboam and all his successors hitherto had done, but did also imitate all Jeroboam's other sins, which doubtless were many and great, and peradventure he added this to the rest, that together with the calves he worshipped devils, 1 c other idols of the heathens as may be thought from 1 Cor. x. 20, where his worship of the devils and of the calves is distinguished. Besides though he did no more for the substance of the action than his predecessors did yet he might justly and truly be said to do worse than they because he did it with greater aggravations after so many terrible examples of Divine vengeance upon the king and people of Israel for that sin, or because he made severer laws concerning the calf-worship, since we read of the statutes of Omri, Micah vi. 16, or did more intemperately and violently execute them, with greater diligence against God, and malice against his servants.

27 Now the rest of the acts of Omri which he did, and his might that he shewed, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

28 So Omri slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria: and Ahab his son reigned in his stead.

29 ¶ And in the thirty and eighth year of Asa king of Judah began Ahab the son of Omri to reign over Israel: and Ahab the son of Omri reigned over Israel in Samaria twenty and two years.

30 And Ahab the son of Omri did evil in the sight of the Lord above all that were before him.

31 And it came to pass, † as if it had been a light thing for him to walk in the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, that he took to wife Jezebel the daughter of Ethbaal king of the Zidonians, and went and served Baal, and worshipped him.

As if it had been a light thing for him, as if that sin were not big enough to express his contempt of God, as if he thought it below his wit and dignity to content himself with such a vulgar fault. But the Hebrew runs thus, Was it a light thing, &c. 1 c was this but a small sin, that therefore he needed to add more abominations? where the question, as is usual among the Hebrews implies a strong denial, and intimates that this was no small sin but a great crime, and might have satisfied his wicked mind without any additions. Jezebel, a woman infamous for her idolatry, and cruelty and sorcery and filthiness. See chap. xxi. 1 c xxi. 2 Kings ix. 22. Rev. ii. 20. Ethbaal, called Ethbaal or Ethubalus, in Hebrew with King of the Zidonians, so she was of a heathenish and idolatrous race and such whom the kings and people of Israel were expressly forbidden to marry. Baal, 1 c the idol which the Zidonians worshipped which is thought to be Baalim or Baalim-god, for this name is common to all such. And this idolatry was much worse than that of the calves because in the calves they worshipped the true God, but in these, false gods or devils as is evident from chap. xviii. 21.

32 And he reared up an altar for Baal in the house of Baal, which he had built in Samaria.

33 And Ahab made a grove, and Ahab did more to provoke the Lord God of Israel to anger than all the kings of Israel that were before him.

34 ¶ In his days did Hiel the Bethelite build Jericho: he laid the foundation thereof in Abiram his firstborn, and set up the gates thereof in his youngest son Segub, according to the word of the Lord, which he spake by Joshua the son of Nun.

In his days this is here added, 1 c As a character of the time and an instance of the truth and certainty of Divine predictions and communications: thus being fulfilled eight hundred years after it was threatened, and which, as a warning to the Israelites, not to think themselves secure or safe, because the judgment threatened against them. 1 c. Abiram, chap. xiv. 15, was not yet executed though it continued in that calf-worship which he continued, but to expect the certain accomplishment of it in due time, if they persisted in their impunity. Or, 2 c As an evidence of the horrible corruption of his times, and of that high contempt of God which then reigned. Hiel the Bethelite, who lived in Beth-el, the seat and sink of idolatry wherewith he was thoroughly leavened. Built Jericho a place seated in the tribe of Benjamin, but belonging to the kingdom of Israel, which place he seems to have chosen for his buildings, not so much for his own advantage as out of a contempt of the true God, and of his threatenings, which he designed to convince of falsehood.

by his own experience, and out of an ambitious desire to advance his own reputation and interest thereby, by attempting that which he knew his king and queen too would be highly pleased with. He laid the foundation thereof in Ahab's first-born, and set up the gates thereof in his youngest son Segub, i. e. in the beginning of his building God took away his first-born and others successively in the progress of the work, and the youngest when he finished it. And so he found by his own sad experience the truth of God's word, and how vain it was to contend with him. Quest Why did not God rather punish Hiel himself? Ans This was a terrible punishment, to see his children cut off by Divine vengeance before their time, one after another, and all this for his own folly and rashness. Compare Jer. li. 10. And as for Hiel himself possibly after he had been spared so long that he might be an eye-witness of his sons' untimely deaths, he also might be cut off, though it be not recorded as not belonging to the prophecy here mentioned or if not his present impurity was his greatest misery either as it continued his torment in the sad and lasting remembrance of his loss and misery, or as it was a mean to harden his heart so for greater judgments, to which he was reserved. According to the word of the Lord, which he spake by Ioshua, of which see on Josh. vi. 26.

AND Elijah the Tishbite, who was of the inhabitants of Gilead said unto Ahab, As the Lord God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word.

Elijah was the most eminent of the prophets. Matt. xiii. 17. who is here brought in like Melchisedek Gen. xiv. 18, Heb. vii. 3 without any mention of his father, or mother or beginning of his days, like a man dropped out of the clouds, and raised by God's special providence as a witness for himself in this most degenerate time and state of things, that by his zeal and courage, and power of miracles he might give some check to their various and abominable idolatrie, and some reviving to the small number of the Lord's prophets and people who yet remained in Israel as we shall see. The Tishbite so called either from the place of his birth or habitation or for some other reason not now known. Of the inhabitants of Gilead, which was the land he could Jordan. See Gen. xxxi. 21. Said unto Ahab, having doubtless admonished him of his sin and duty before this, and now upon his obstinacy in his wicked courses he proceeds to declare and execute the judgment of God upon him. As the Lord God of Israel liveth I swear by the God of Israel, who is the only true and living God when the gods whom thou hast joined with him, or preferred before him, are dead and senseless idols. Before whom I stand, either 1. Whose minister I am (as this phrase is oft used, as Numb. iii. 6, Dent. x. 8, xxv. 12, xxvii. 3), not only in general, but especially in this threatening, which I now deliver in his name and authority, and not from my own imagination or passion. Or 2. Who is now present with me, and a witness of what I say, and let him punish me severely if I speak not the truth. There shall not be dew nor rain this was a prediction, but was seconded with his prayer, that God would verify it as it is recorded, James v. 17. And this prayer of his was not voluntary and malicious, but necessary (and all things considered) truly charitable, that by this sharp and long affliction God's honour, and the truth of his word and threatenings, (which was now so horribly and universally contemned,) might be vindicated, and the Israelites (whom their present impiety and impiety had hardened in their idolatry) might hereby be awakened to see their own wickedness, and the vanity of their calves and other idols, and their dependence upon God, and the necessity of returning to the true religion. These years i. e. these following years, which were three and a half, Luke iv. 25, James v. 17. But according to my word, i. e. until I shall declare that this judgment shall cease, and shall pray to God for the removal of it.

2 And the word of the Lord came unto him, saying,

3 Get thee hence, and turn thee eastward, and hide thyself by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan.

Thus God rescues him from the fury of Ahab and Jezebel, who he knew would seek to destroy him. Quest Why did not Ahab seize upon him immediately upon these words? Ans 1. This must be ascribed to God's overruling providence, who hath the hearts of all men in his hands, and hath oft protected his prophets and servants in such cases. 2. He might say this not by word of mouth, but by letter and message sent to him as that word is sometimes used, as Exod. xiii. 6.

4 And it shall be, that thou shalt drink of the brook, and I have commanded the ravens to feed thee there.

1. I have decreed or appointed. Or I shall command, i. e. effectually move them by instincts and inclination which I shall put into them which shall be as terrible with them as a law or command is to man. God would to command both brute creatures as Amos ix. 3. Jonah ii. 10, and senseless things, as Job xxxviii. 11, 12, Psal. lxxviii. 2, Isa. vi. 11, 12, when he taught them to do the things which he intends to effect by them. I have commanded the ravens, which he names, and chooses for this work partly to succour the prophet with great hum in adversity, by the credibility of the thing, that being in my ravens in those parts, and those dejected to resort in brooks of water, and that sort of creature being apt and accustomed to seek provisions, and to carry them away to the places of their abode, and partly to show his omnipotence and power in providing for the prophet by those creatures, which are noted for their greediness in monopolizing provision to themselves and for their enmity and uncharitableness towards their own young. But by this strange and noble experiment he might be led to trust God in those many and great difficulties to which he was likely to be exposed. Obey The ravens were obedient, Lev. xi. 15.

Isa They were unclean for meat but not for the touch. But however that ceremonial law was overruled by necessity and by the Lawgiver's dispensation.

5 So he went and did according unto the word of the Lord: for he went and dwelt by the brook Cherith that is before Jordan.

6 And the ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening: and he drank of the brook.

Bread and flesh, not raw, but boiled by the ministry of some angel or man, and left in some place or places till the ravens came for it, in all which there is nothing incredible, considering the power and providence of God. In the morning and in the evening, i. e. for dinner and supper, according to the custom. See Gen. xlii. 25, Ruth ii. 14, Luke xii. 12, Acts x. 9, 10.

7 And it came to pass after a while, that the brook dried up, because there had been no rain in the land.

After a while, Heb. at the end of days, i. e. of a year; for so the word days is oft used as in Exod. xvi. 10, Lev. xxi. 29, Numb. ix. 22, Judg. xvii. 10. 1 Sam. i. 3. xxvii. 7.

And this seems to be a convenient time for the drying up of the brook, which was gradually dried up, and so thus agrees well with chap. xviii. 1. in the third year, of which see the notes there. The brook dried up, God so ordering it, partly for the punishment of those Israelites who had been at it, and had hitherto been helped by it, partly for the trial and exercise of Elijah's faith, and to teach him to depend upon God alone, not on any creature, for his support, and partly, to show his own all-sufficiency in providing for his people

8 ¶ And the word of the Lord came unto him, saying,

9 Arise, get thee to Zarephath, which belongeth to Zidon, and dwell there: behold, I have commanded a widow woman there to sustain thee

Zarephath, a city between Tyrus and Sidon, called Sarepta by St Luke chap iv 26 by Pliny, and others. To Zidon, to the port-faction of that city, which therefore was inhabited by Gentile. See Luke iv 25 And God's providing for his prophet first by an unclean bird and then by a Gentile, whom the Jews esteemed unclean, was a notable proof of the calling of the Gentiles, and of the rejection of the Jew. I have commanded i.e. appointed or provided as before, ver 4, for that she had as yet no revelation or command of God about it, appears from ver 12

10 So he arose and went to Zarephath. And when he came to the gate of the city, behold, the widow woman was there gathering of sticks; and he called to her, and said, Fetch me, I pray thee, a little water in a vessel, that I may drink

He called to her, knowing by Divine suggestion that this was the woman designed

11 And as she was going to fetch it, he called to her, and said, Bring me, I pray thee, a morsel of bread in thine hand

Which he said only to try her, and to make way for what follows

12 And she said, As the Lord thy God liveth, I have not a cake; but an handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruse: and behold I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for me and my son, that we may eat it and die

As the Lord thy God liveth, by which she discovers that though she was a Gentile yet she owned the God of Israel as the true God. I am stuck i.e. a few sticks that number being of use indifferently for any small number, both in Scripture as Heb vi 2 and by other authors. That we may eat it and die, in having no more provision we must needs perish with hunger. For though the famine was only in the land of Tyne, yet the effects of it were in Tyne and Zidon, which were fed by the corn of that land. See Acts xii 20. Or the same famine might be in those parts of the chief cause of the famine to wit, the wreck ship of Babel being common to both places

13 And Elijah said unto her, Fear not, go and do as thou hast said: but make me thereof a little cake first, and bring it unto me, and after make for thee and for thy son

Make me first of a little cake first, which he requires as a trial and exercise of her faith and charity, and obedience, which he knew God would graciously and plentifully reward, and so this would be a great example to encourage others to the practice of the same graces upon like occasions

14 For thus saith the Lord God of Israel, The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail, until the day that the Lord sendeth rain upon the earth

Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, in whom I perceive thou trustest. The meal of a barrel i.e. the meal of the barrel, in hyperbole, or metonymy. So the cruse of oil, for the oil of the cruse

15 And she went and did according to the saying of Elijah: and she, and he, and her house did eat many days

She did according to the saying of Elijah, giving glory to the God of Israel, by believing his prophet. Many days i.e. a long time, even above two years as chap xxiii 1. Hob days, i.e. a full year, as ver 7. namely, before the following event about her son happened, and the rest of the time of the famine after it

16 And the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail, according to the word of the Lord, which he spake by Elijah

God still creating new, as fast as the old was spent

17 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that the son of the woman, the mistress of the house, fell sick; and his sickness was so sore, that there was no breath left in him

Or no soul, or life as this Hebrew word oft signifies i.e. he died, is manifest from the following verses. See also Heb xi 35

18 And she said unto Elijah, What have I to do with thee, O thou man of God? art thou come unto me to call my son to remembrance, and to slay my son?

What have I to do with thee? wherein have I injured or provoked thee? or why didst thou come to sojourn in my house, (as the following words seem to explain these,) it is this be the fruit of it? These are words of a troubled mind, savouring of some rashness and impatience. But thou come unto me? didst thou come for this end that thou mightest severely observe my sins and by thy prayer bring down God's just judgment upon me for them, as thou hast for the like cause brought down this famine upon the nation? To remembrance either 1 To my remembrance, that I should by this dreadful judgment be brought to the knowledge and remembrance of my sin, which have procured it. Or rather 2 To God's remembrance, for God is oft and in Scripture to remember sins when he punisheth them, and to forget them when he spares the sinner. See 2 Sam xvi 10. Have I instead of the pleasure which I expected from thy presence, met with a curse?

19 And he said unto her, Give me thy son. And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him up into a loft where he abode, and laid him upon his own bed

Give me thy son unto mine arms. Into a loft, a private place where he might more freely and fully pour out his soul to God, and use such gestures or methods as he thought most proper without any offence or observation

20 And he cried unto the Lord, and said, O Lord my God, hast thou also brought evil upon the widow with whom I sojourn, by slaying her son?

A prayer full of powerful arguments. Thou art the Lord that canst revive the child, and my God, and therefore wilt not do not deny me. She is a widow, add affliction to the afflicted, deprive her not of the great support and staff of her age. She hath given me kind entertainment, let her not for the worse for her kindness to a prophet, whereby wicked men will take occasion to reproach both her and religion

21 And he stretched himself upon the child three times, and cried unto the Lord, and said, O Lord my God, I pray thee, let this child's soul come into him again

He stretched himself upon the child, not as if he thought this could contribute any warmth or life to the child, but partly to express and withal to increase, his grief for the child's death, and his desire of its reviving, that then by his prayers might be more fervent, and consequently more prevalent with God, and partly that it might appear that this miracle though wrought by God alone, yet was done for the sake of Elijah and in answer to his prayers. Compare 2 Kings v 31, John ix 6 Acts xx 10. And cried unto the Lord, first he stretched himself that he prayed, and that for three times successively. Let this child's soul come into him again, by which it is evident that the soul was gone out of his body, and the reason doth not without it after death. Compare Gen xxxi 18. This was a great request, but Elijah was encouraged to make it, partly, by his zeal for God's honour, which he thought was concerned in it, and would be eclipsed by it, partly, by the experience which he had of his prevailing power with God in prayer, and partly, by a Divine impulse moving him to desire it.

22 And the LORD heard the voice of Elijah, and the soul of the child came into him again, and he revived.

23 And Elijah took the child, and brought him down out of the chamber into the house, and delivered him unto his mother: and Elijah said, See, thy son liveth.

24 ¶ And the woman said to Elijah, Now by this I know that thou art a man of God, and that the word of the LORD in thy mouth is truth.

Now by this I know, now I am assured of that concerning which I began upon this sad occasion to doubt. That the word of the LORD in thy mouth is truth, that the God whom thou professest is the true God, and the doctrine and religion which thou teachest is the only true religion, and therefore henceforth I wholly renounce the worship of idols.

CHAP. XVIII.

Elijah in the extremity of famine is sent to Ahab, meeteth good Obadiah, 1-7, chargeth him to certify the king of his command, he bethoweth Ahab to him 8-16. He reproacheth Ahab and the congregation by fire from heaven cometh Baal's prophets they are slain, 17-40. Elijah by prayer obtaineth rain, runs before Ahab to Jezreel 41-46.

AND it came to pass after many days, that the word of the LORD came to Elijah in the third year, saying, Go, shew thyself unto Ahab, and I will send rain upon the earth.

In the third year, either 1. From the time when he cut off himself by the Brook Cherith, six months before which time the famine might begin, though it was not yet come to extremity. And so this being in a few words the end of the third year it makes up the 3. third year, and so it ends January 17. Or 2. From the time of his coming to Sarepta, which probably was even after the famine began, set on chap. xvii 7. and so this might be in the middle of the third year, which would make up the three years and six months. Shew thyself unto Ahab, so to acquaint him with the cause of the judgement yet to come, and advise him to remove it, and upon that condition to promise him rain. I will send rain upon the earth, according to thy word and prayer which thou shalt make for it. Thus God takes care to maintain the honour and authority of his prophet, and in judgment remembers mercy to him, and for the sake of the holy seed yet left among them, who suffered in this common calamity.

2 And Elijah went to shew himself unto Ahab, and there was a sore famine in Samaria.

Elijah went to shew himself unto Ahab, when he shows a strong faith and resolute obedience, and invincible courage that he durst at God's command run into the mouth of this raging lion, which was a degree of martyrdom.

3 And Ahab called Obadiah, which was the governor of his house. Now Obadiah feared the LORD greatly.

Which was the governor of his house, being valued by Ahab for his great prudence and fidelity, and therefore intrusted as to the worship of the calves and Baal. Obadiah feared the LORD greatly. Quest. How could he and some other Israelites be said to fear the LORD when they did not go up to Jerusalem to worship as God had commanded? Answer. Although they seem not to be wholly excusable in this neglect, because they should have preferred God's service before their worldly commodity, according to the good example of the priests and Levites, and the generality of the godly people who did so, 2 Chron. xi 13, 16, yet because they worshipped God in spirit and truth, and performed all moral duties to God and their brethren, and abstained from idolatry, and being kept from Jerusalem by violence, they thought necessity and the apparent hazard of their lives would excuse them from ceremonial services, and God bare with their infirmity herein.

4 For it was so, when Jezebel cut off the prophets of the LORD, that Obadiah took an hundred prophets, and hid them by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water.

Prophets, this name is not only given to such as are endowed with an extraordinary spirit of prophecy, but to such ministers as devoted themselves to the service of God in preaching, praying, praising God, and the like, as 1 Sam. x 10, 12, and in this place computed with 22, where Elijah saith, I only remain a prophet of the LORD, to wit, strictly so called, and Matt. x 41, 1 Cor. xii 28, 29, xii 29. Feed them, with the hazard of his own life, and against the king's command, is wisely considering that no command of an earthly prince could overrule the command of the supreme Lord, the King of kings, or discharge him from these acts of piety to God, and charity to men, which God's law indispensably required. With bread and water, either property which was a great kindness in those circumstances, or figuratively, with meat and drink.

5 And Ahab said unto Obadiah, Go into the land, unto all fountains of water, and unto all brooks: peradventure we may find grass to save the horses and mules alive, that we lose not all the beasts.

Unto all fountains of water, and unto all brooks, about which grass was most probably to be found in that great drought.

6 So they divided the land between them to pass throughout it: Ahab went one way by himself, and Obadiah went another way by himself.

Ahab went one way by himself, he dares to trust any other. Obadiah excepted lest being abused by such as had griefs for their own use, they should give him a true account.

7 ¶ And as Obadiah was in the way, behold, Elijah met him: and he knew him, and fell on his face, and said, Dost thou that my lord, I, Elijah?

By this profound reverence showing his great respect and love to him.

8 ¶ He answered him, I am go, tell thy lord: behold, Elijah is here.

Tell thy lord Ahab, whom though every wicked man, he owns for God's lord and king, thereby instructing him that he did well in owning him as such, and that the wickedness of kings did not exempt their subjects from obedience to their lawful commands.

9 And he said, What have I sinned, that thou wouldest deliver thy servant into the hand of Ahab, to slay me?

What have I sinned? wherein have I so offended God, and thee, that thou shouldst inflict this punishment upon me, and expose me to certain ruin by this means?

10 As the LORD thy God liveth, there is no nation or kingdom, whither my lord hath not sent to seek thee: and when they said, He is not there, he took an oath of the kingdom and nation, that they found thee not.

There is no nation or kingdom, to wit, men to his own, where he could in reason think that Elijah had hid himself. Nothing is more frequent than to understand general expressions with such limitations. He took an oath of the kingdom and nation, that they found thee not, not that he could force other kingdoms to take an oath, but that by his persuasions he prevailed with the chief persons in several kingdoms for his satisfaction to swear that they did not know of Elijah's being among them, which was not hard for him to obtain. For Ahab was a great prince, and had a great interest among the neighbouring kings: the king of Tyre was his father-in-law, the king of Moab tributary to him, Jezebel his friend and relation to whom the king of Edom was tributary. We read also of all the kings of Arabia, and of all the kings of the Hittites, and of Syria, 1 Kings x 15, 20, which is they corresponded with Solomon so how in they might be allied to or confederate with Ahab we know not, nor what articles or agreements were between him and them, among which this might be one, that they should deliver up to one another all their fugitive or banished subject upon demand, which might give sufficient ground for his desire or expectation of this oath. How then could Elijah be in the house of the widow of Sarepta? True That might easily be, either because she herself or at least others did not know particularly who he was, or because she used all possible care to conceal him, her conscience and interest both obliging her so to do, or because God secured him there.

12 And it shall come to pass, as soon as I am gone from thee, that the Spirit of the Lord shall carry thee whither I know not, and so when I come and tell Ahab, and he cannot find thee, he shall slay me: but I thy servant fear the Lord from my youth.

The Spirit of the Lord the Holy Ghost, to whom the inspiration and conduct of the prophets is commonly ascribed in Holy Scripture, as Isa xlviii 16. Isa I, Matt ix 1. Acts xvi 6, 7 who might do this either immediately by his own power or by an angel or by a strong wind. Shall carry thee whither I know not such transpositions of the prophets having doubtless been usual before this time as they were after it. See 2 Kings ii 16, Ezek iii 12, 11. Matt ix 1. Acts viii 39. He will slay me, either is a cursed impostor that hath deluded him with vain hopes, or rather because I did not forthwith rise upon thee and bring thee to him to receive punishment. I thy servant fear the Lord from my youth he speaks not of the following words in way of vain boasting, but only of his own necessary vindication and preservation that he might move the prophet to pity and spare him and not put him upon that hazardous action which yet he was resolved to do, if the prophet peremptorily required it.

13 Was it not told my lord what I did when Jezebel slew the prophets of the Lord, how I hid an hundred men of the Lord's prophets by fifty in a cave and fed them with bread and water?

14 And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold Elijah is here and he shall slay me.

15 And Elijah said As the Lord of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, I will surely shew myself unto him to day.

As the Lord of hosts liveth the Lord of all the creatures which are called Gods. Yea Gen i 1, Deut iv 19, Paul ep 21, Gal ii 2 and we all subject to his command. He mentions this title as his shield, under the protection whereof he did undaunted venture to come into Ahab's presence.

16 So Obadiah went to meet Ahab and told him and Ahab went to meet Elijah.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, when Ahab saw Elijah that Ahab said unto him, Art thou he that troubleth Israel?

Have I at last met with thee O thou great disturber of my kingdom, the author of this famine and of all our disquiet and calamities?

18 And he answered I have not troubled Israel; but thou, and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord, and thou hast followed Baalim.

These calamities are not to be imputed to my passions, but thine and thy father's wickedness, which God punisheth by this means. He answered him thus boldly, because he spoke and acted in God's name, and for his honour and service, whose vassal Ahab was.

19 Now therefore send, and gather to me all Israel unto mount Carmel, and the prophets of Baal four hundred and fifty, and the prophets of the groves four hundred, which eat at Jezebel's table.

Now therefore send, to wit, messengers, that this controversy between thee and me may be decided the true cause of these heavy judgments discovered and removed, that so this plague may be removed. Gather to me all Israel, by their deputies, or heads or representatives, that they may be witnesses of all our transactions. Unto Mount Carmel; not that Carmel in Judah 1 Sam xv 12, but another in Issachar by the midland sea Josh xix 26, Jer xlii 18, which he chose as a very convenient place, being not far from the centre of his kingdom to which all the tribes might conveniently resort, and at some good distance from Samaria, that Jezebel might not hinder his design, and a very high mountain, Amos ix 3, and that upon the sea, whence he might have the opportunity to discover the run at its first approach, which he did ver 42 &c. And the prophets of Baal which were dispersed in all the parts of the kingdom. The prophets of the groves, which attended upon those Baals or idols which were worshipped in the groves which were near the royal city and much valued and frequented by the king and the queen 1 Kings xv 13, xvi 33. 2 Kings viii 6 and therefore were maintained at the queen's charges.

He complied with Elijah's motion partly because it was so far from reasonable, that he could not refuse it with honour, not without the discontent of all his people, this being proposed in order to their deliverance from this terrible plague partly because the urgency of the present distress made him willing to try all means to remove it, partly from curiosity of seeing some extraordinary events, and principally because God inclined his heart to close with it.

21 And Elijah came unto all the people, and said How long halt ye between two opinions? if the Lord be God follow him: but if Baal, then follow him. And the people answered him not a word.

How long halt ye between two opinions? why do you not make straight paths with your feet? as the phrase is, Heb xii 13. why do you walk so limely and uneasily, being so unsteady in your opinions and practices and doubting whether it is better to worship God or Baal? If the Lord be God, whom you pretend to worship in the calves, 2 Kings x 16, 31 compare Exod xxxiv 4. Follow him, worship him, and him only, and that in such place and manner as he hath commanded you and not by the calves. But if Baal, if Baal can prove himself to be the true God. The people answered him not a word, being convinced of the reasonableness of his proposition, taught by experience that Jehovah had sent this judgment, and that Baal could not remove it which had staggered them in their opinion about Baal, yet not daring to disown Baal, for fear of the displeasure of the king, then present.

22 Then said Elijah unto the people, I, even I only, remain a prophet of the Lord, but Baal's prophets are four hundred and fifty men.

I only remain, to wit, here present, publicly to own and plead the cause of God, for he opposeth himself only to Baal's four hundred and fifty prophets, because they only were present, the prophets of the groves being, it seems, not permitted by Jezebel (through her pride, or obstinacy, or care and kindness to them) to go further. See chap.

xxv. 6. As for the other prophets of the Lord, many of them were slain by Ahab or Jezebel, others banished, or had in caves.

23 Let them therefore give us two bullocks, and let them choose one bullock for themselves, and cut it in pieces, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under; and I will dress the other bullock, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under.

He attempts the decision of this controversy, not by God's word, which was either rejected or despised or grossly neglected by the generality of that people, but by a miracle to which all that had common sense must needs submit. Let them choose one bullock for themselves, which they judge best and fittest for the purpose.

24 And call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the Lord, and the God that answereth by fire, let him be God. And all the people answered and said, ¶ It is well spoken.

That answereth by fire, i. e. that shall consume the sacrifice by fire sent from heaven, which the people knew the true God used to do, as Gen. iv. 4, Judg. vi. 21, xii. 20. All the people, even the Baalites themselves, partly because they could not without great reproach to themselves, and Baal refuse so equal a motion, and partly because they were confident of Baal's power and divinity having probably had some experiments of supernatural and prodigious event, done in the worship of Baal by God's just and wise permission, for the hardening of that apostate and wicked people in their idolatry, as God hath in several ages for the like reason suffered him, wonders to be wrought by the devil, whom they worshipped in and by their idols.

25 And Elijah said unto the prophets of Baal, Choose you one bullock for yourselves, and dress it first, for ye are many, and call on the name of your gods, but put no fire under.

Ye are many, and I am willing to give you the precedence. Thus he did partly because he had first offered, and God had answered by fire, as he knew that he would do. Baal's priests would have been deterred, and in some measure (which would easily be accepted into the common authority, and the favour which they had with the people) would have desisted from making the trial on their part, and partly because the disappointment of the priests of Baal, of which he was well assured, would in a very proper way for the people's more diligent attention to his words and actions, and cause them to enter in the prophet's good success with more admiration and affection, and thus coming last would leave the greater impression and refresh upon their hearts. And thus they accepted because they might think that if Baal did not work first, which they presumed he would, the people would be so confirmed and heightened in their opinion of Baal that they by the king's assistance might murder Elijah before he came to his experiment.

26 And they took the bullock which was given them, and they dressed it, and called on the name of Baal from morning even until noon, saying, O Baal, hearken unto us. But there was no voice, nor any that answered. And they leaped upon the altar which was made.

They took the bullock which was given them, which he gave by them, ver. 25, was now put into their hands by those who had the beasts in their custody till they were taken away for sacrifice. They dressed it, i. e. they cut it in pieces, and laid the parts in or upon the wood. From morning, from the time of the morning sacrifice, which advantage Elijah suffered them to take for their sacrifice upon the altar, as over the altar, which might easily be done, the altar being low, and suddenly made for the present use. Or rather, beside (as the Hebrew (it) oft signifies) the altar, or before it. They used some superstitious, unusual, and disorderly gestures, either pretending to be acted by the spirit of their god, and to be in a kind of holy rage and good ecstasy, or in way of devotion to their god, which they might borrow from the practice of their progenitors, who, amongst other things, used dancing in God's service and presence, as Exod. xv. 20, xxvi. 19, Judg. xxi. 21, 2 Sam. vi. 14. Which was made, Heb. which he made, either first, Elijah; which some think was already made, though the making of it be not mentioned till afterwards, ver. 31, and that it was then designed, by leaping upon his altar to overthrow it. Or rather, secondly, Ahab on their behalf, or any other person, that being only a Hebraism, the third person active being put for the passive verb, as our translators well render it.

27 And it came to pass at noon, that Elijah mocked them, and said, Cry aloud for he is a god, either ¶ he is talking, or he is pursuing, or he is in a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, and must be awaked.

At noon, when they had long tried all means in vain. Elijah mocked them, derided them and their gods, which were indeed and had now proved themselves to be, ridiculous and contemptible things. By this example we see that all jesting is not unlawful, but only that which is unbecometh upon pity and good manners. See on Eph. i. 1. Either he is talking, or he is pursuing, or he is in a journey, he is employed about some other business, and hath not leisure to mind you, for being a god of a small and narrow understanding, he cannot mind two things at once, and you are unwisest and unreasonable to expect it from him.

28 And they cried aloud, and cut themselves after their manner with knives and lancets, till the blood gushed out upon them.

They cried aloud, as if Elijah had spoken the truth, and the god needed rousing. Cut the selves, mauling themselves with their sacrifices, as known by experience, that nothing was more acceptable to them Baal (which was indeed the devil) than human blood, and hoping hereby to move their god to pity and help them. And this indeed was the practice of divers heathens in the worship of their false gods, as is manifest both from Scripture, as Lev. xix. 28, Dent. xix. 1, 1 King. xvi. 28, and from the express testimony of Irenaeus, Irenaeus, Irenaeus, Irenaeus.

29 And it came to pass when the day was past, and they prophesied, if the voice of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that there was another voice, not any to answer, nor any that regarded.

They and he praised, and prayed unto, and worship, then God for the word prophesying is used, 1 Sam. x. xix. 20, &c. 1 Chron. xxv. 2, 3; Matt. xii. 22, 1 Cor. i. 1, xiv. 5, 6. Of the evening sacrifice, Heb. of the sacrifice, which being here opposed to the time of their offering, which was the morning, ver. 26, must needs be meant of the evening sacrifice, of which see 1 Cor. xiv. 19, &c. which is called the sacrifice, by way of eminency, because it was more solemn, and public, and frequenter than the morning sacrifice, of which divers sacrifices may be given. See Exod. xii. 6, Paul. xli. 2, Acts i. 1. Nor any that regarded, Heb. there was no attention, either first, Of their god, who was so far from answering that he did not mind any of their words and actions. Or secondly, Of the people, who were now tired out with so long attention and expectation, and therefore more readily desisted them, and approached to Elijah and his altar, at his call, ver. 30.

30 And Elijah said unto all the people, Come near unto me. And all the people came near unto him. And he repaired the altar of the Lord that was broken down.

Come near unto me, come away from the impudent deceivers to me, and expect from me what consolation you desire. He repaired the altar, which by the people's help was quickly done, the materials being all ready, and very slightly put together, only for the present occasion. The altar of the Lord, which had been built there by some of their ancestors for the offering of sacrifice to the God of Israel, which was frequently done in high places, of which there was none of the best instrument ones. But being for some time neglected it needed repairs. That was broken down, either first by the priest of Baal at that time who leaped upon it to the tent, of which see on ver 26. Or rather, secondly, by some of the Baalites, out of their enmity to the true God whose temple because they could not reach, they showed their malice in destroying his altars, chap xix 11.

31 And Elijah took twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the Lord came, saying, 'Israel shall be thy name'.

He did partly, to renew the covenant between God and all the tribes as Moses did Exod xxiv 1, partly, to show that he prayed and acted in the name and for the service of the God of all the patriarchs and of all the tribe of Israel and for their good, and partly to teach the people that though the tribes were divided as to their civil government they ought all to be united in the worship of the same God and in the same religion. Unto whom the word of the Lord came which Jacob was given in answer by God when he prayed to him and was honoured with the glorious title of Israel which noted his providence with God and men. And I calling upon the true God doubt not of his efficacious in war and if ever you mean to have your prayers granted you must not seek to Baal but to him who is your now and your future Lord and your true and devout worshipper, but unto the God of Jacob and if you would recover the honour which you once conferred upon Jacob and continued a long time to his posterity, you must return to that God from whom you are revolted.

32 And with the stones he built an altar in the name of the Lord and he made a trench about the altar as great as would contain two measures of seed.

With this service of the people who are daily yielded their help and hand to the false altar which though generally forbidden he might do because he did it by the command and suggestion of God who can dispense with his own laws upon urgent and urgent necessity and for a work that great mercy (to which even by God's command the ceremonial law must give place Hos vi 6 Mark vi 27) even for the conversion of the Idolaters, whom it was impossible to bring to the altar of Jerusalem at this time. In the name of the Lord by the authority of God and for his worship. Two measures i.e. two third part of an ephah which shows that the trench was of a competent largeness.

33 And he put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid it on the wood and said, I will pour water with it and 'pour it on the burnt sacrifice and on the wood.

Pour it on the water which they could quickly fetch either from the brook Kishon, or if that was dried up from the sea. I follow what is at the foot of the mountain. See Jer xl 18. Pour it on the burnt sacrifice i.e. on the wood. This he did to make the miracle more glorious and more manifest to him and so more successful.

34 And he said, Do it the second time. And they did it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time. And they did it the third time.

35 And the water ran round about the altar and he filled the trench also with water.

36 And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word.

At the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, which time he chose, that he might unite his prayers with the prayers of the godly Jews at Jerusalem who at that time assembled together to pray, Acts iii 1. That I have done all these things, brought this famine, gathered the people hither and done what I have done, or am doing here. At thy word not in compliance with my own passions, but in obedience to thy command, as thy agent and minister for that action of shutting up heaven, and that of killing the priests of Baal must needs expose him to great envy and reproach, which made this public vindication necessary as it was also effectual, being witnessed from heaven.

37 Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the Lord God, and that thou hast turned their heart back again.

That thou hast turned their heart, that they may feel so powerful and sudden a change in their hearts, that they may know it is thy work, and the effect of thy grace to them, and in them. Or, when thou hast turned, &c., or because thou &c. So the particle van is oft used, and the sense is That they may know thee to be the true God by the effects of thy Divine power, in converting their hearts and that in so miraculous a way, and in answer to my prayer. Back again unto thee, from whom they have revolted.

38 Then the fire of the Lord fell, and consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench.

39 And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces and they said, The Lord, he is the God, the Lord, he is the God.

They fell on their faces in way of acknowledgment and adoration of the true God. He is the God he alone is. Baal is a dull and senseless idol. And they doubtless words to note their abundant satisfaction and assurance of the truth of their assertion.

40 And Elijah said unto them, Take ye the prophets of Baal, let not one of them escape. And they took them and Elijah brought them down to the brook Kishon and slew them there.

Elijah said unto them he takes the opportunity with the people's hearts were warm with the fresh sense of the great miracle. Elijah brought them down to the brook Kishon that their blood might be poured into that river and thence conveyed into the sea and might not defile the holy land. Slew them there Quest. How could Elijah do this seeing he was but a private person? Answer First, He had no doubt the consent of all the heads of the people who were here assembled, and of the king too who did not resist the universal torrent and could not deny that they were impostors and worthy of death, and probably was by the prophet assured of rain when this was done. Secondly, As these idolatrous priests were manifestly in a sentence of death passed upon such by the sovereign Lord of life and death Deut xiii, xvii, so Elijah had sufficient authority to execute it as being a prophet, and an extraordinary minister of God's vengeance against sinners now especially when the magistrate so grossly neglected his duty therein.

41 ¶ And Elijah said unto Ahab, Get thee up, eat and drink, for there is a sound of abundance of rain.

Get thee up from the river, where the king and he had been present at the slaughter of Baal's priests to thy tent, which probably was pitched on the side of Carmel. Let and drink, take comfort, and refresh thyself, for neither the king nor any of the people could have any leisure to eat, being wholly intent upon the decision of the great controvery There is a sound of abundance of rain; the rain is as certainly and speedily coming, as if I did actually see it, or hear the noise which it makes. God's wrath is now appeased, and thou shalt have no cause to repent of this day's work.

12 So Ahab went up to eat and to drink. And Elijah went up to the top of Carmel, and he cast himself down upon the earth, and put his face between his knees.

Elijah went up to the top of Carmel, where he might secretly and ardently pour out his prayers unto God, and whence he might look towards the sea, and discern when the rain was coming. Put his face between his knees, i.e. either sit, or rather kneeled upon his knees, and then cast down his face to the ground between his knees, either in token of profound reverence and humility, or out of heaviness of spirit, which oft disposeth men to uncouth postures which at other times or in other men would be ridiculous. But in them, and in that case is usual and allowed, or that turning away his eyes from all outward objects he might be more intent and earnest upon his work or prayer to God without distraction.

43 And said to his servant, Go up now, look toward the sea. And he went up, and looked, and said, There is nothing. And he said, Go again seven times.

Go up now whilst I continue praying. Look toward the sea, whence clouds and vapours usually arise. Elijah desired to have timely notice of the very first appearance and entrance of rain, not out of envy or ambition, but that Ahab and the people might know that it was obtained from Jehovah by the prophet's prayer, and thereby be confirmed in the true religion. Go again seven times, let us not be dejected for some disappointments, but continue to wait upon God, who will answer me, and that speedily.

11 And at came to pass at the seventh time, that he said Behold, there ariseth a little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand. And he said Go up, say unto Ahab, Prepare thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain stop thee not.

45 And it came to pass in the mean while, that the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain. And Ahab rode, and went to Jezreel.

Not that in Judah Josh. xv. 50, but another city in the border of Issachar and Manasse Josh. xix. 18.

16 And the hand of the Lord was on Elijah, and he guided up his lions, and ran before Ahab to the entrance of Jezreel.

The hand of the Lord was on Elijah. God gave him more than natural and ordinary strength, whereby he was enabled to outrun Ahab's chariot, and that for some miles together. He guided up his lions, that his garments, which were thus long might not hinder him. See 2 Kings iv. 38. 1. It is before Ahab, partly to show how it was to honour and serve the king, if he did not exert himself above or against God, partly that by this humble and self-denying carriage it might appear that what he had done was not from envy, or ambition, or human passion, but only from a just zeal for God's glory, partly that by his presence with the king, and his courtiers who attended upon him, he might animate and oblige them to proceed in the well begun reformation of religion, and partly to demonstrate that he was neither ashamed of nor afraid for, what he had done, though he knew how Jezebel would resent it, but durst venture himself in the midst of his enemies, as being confident of the Divine power and protection.

CHAP XIX

Elijah, threatened by Jezebel, fleeth to Beer-sheba, is comforted by an angel, 1—8. At Mount Horeb, complaining to God, he is strengthened by a special revelation 9—11, is sent to anoint Hazael, Jehu, and Elisha, 15—18. Elisha followeth Elijah, 19—21.

AND Ahab told Jezebel all that Elijah had done, and withal how he had slain the prophets with the sword.

Ahab told Jezebel this for his vindication, and her satisfaction. All the prophets to wit, of Baal, not of the groves, who were not present as may be gathered from chap. xviii. 19, 22, xxii. 6.

2 Then Jezebel sent a messenger unto Elijah saying, So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by tomorrow at this time.

Jezebel sent a messenger unto Elijah, she gives him notice of it beforehand, partly out of the height of her spirit, as seeming to kill him secretly and surreptitiously, and resolving to make him a public sacrifice, partly out of her impatience till she had breathed out her rage, which she could do speedily when it required some time and preparation to seize him, who was now so much esteemed and favoured by all the people, partly because she supposed that he who had the confidence to come thither, (where, it seems, she was at this time) would still have the same confidence to stay there, and be obliged in honour to maintain his ground, and principally from God's all disposing providence, that so he might have an opportunity of escaping. So if the gods do to me and more also, so far was she from being changed by that most evident miracle, that she persists in her former idolatry, and add to it a mad and monstrous confidence, that in spite of God she would destroy his prophet.

3 And when he saw that, he rose and went for his life, and came to Beer-sheba, which belongeth to Judah, and left his servant there.

Went for his life, i.e. to save himself, or, according to his soul or mind, whereby it may be intimated that he did not flee from Jezebel's heat or detection of the Lord, by which he came thither chap. xviii. 16, but because of his own fear and apprehension of danger, for this may seem to be an act of fear, finally, for God had brought him hither at his prayer, and it seem very necessary here to encourage, deter, the king and people to go on to destroy the part of the grove, and to purge out idolatry, and his withdrawal as we see did discourage all the rest, and occasioned their return to idolatry again, and having had on his life and ample experience of God's all sufficiency in protecting him against the king and four hundred and fifty of Baal's priests, and the rage of the people raised against him for the famine, he had little reason to leave the threats of an impatient woman, whom God could cut off in a moment. But this is a man subject to like passions as we are James v. 17, which probably is said with respect to his fear and discontent, mentioned here and ver. 1. And lest he should be exalted above measure (which was also Paul's case, 2 Cor. xii. 7) for his eminent gifts, and glorious works, God saw fit to withdraw his grace, and to leave him to himself, that he might be sensible of his own impotency and sinfulness, and might not dare to take any part of God's honour to himself. Which belongeth to Judah, either, first, to the tribe of Judah, according to the first division for Simeon's part, in which Beer-sheba was, as afterwards taken out of it. Or, secondly, to the kingdom of Judah. Left his servant there, partly that he might abide there in safety, and partly, that he should wait there till his return, partly, because he would not expose him to those perils and hardships which he expected, and partly, because he desired solitude, that he might more freely converse with God.

4 ¶ But he himself went a day's journey into the wilderness, and came and sat down under a juniper tree, and he requested for himself that he might die, and said, It is enough, now, O Lord, take away my life; for I am not better than my fathers

Into the wilderness, the vast wilderness of Arabia. He durst not stay in Judah, though good Jehoshaphat reigned there, because he was allied to Ahab and was a man of an easy temper, whom Ahab might circumvent, and either by force or art seize upon Elijah. For himself, Heb for his life, or his soul that it might be taken away from his body. Or, with his soul as it is Isa. xxvi. 9, i.e. he desired it heartily or fervently. Which he did, not only for his own sake that he might be freed from his great fears and troubles, but especially from his zeal for God's glory, which he saw was and would be dreadfully eclipsed by the blasphemy of the Israelites into idolatry and by Elijah's death if it should be procured by the hands of Jezebel or of the worshippers of Baal, and therefore he wished to die in peace, and by the hand of God. It is enough I have lived long enough for thy service, and am not like to do thee any more service: neither my words nor works are like to do any good upon these unstable and incorrigible people. I am not better than my fathers, that I should continue in life, when other prophets who have gone before me have lost their lives by Jezebel or other persecutors.

5 And as he lay and slept under a juniper tree, behold, then an angel touched him, and said unto him, Arise and eat.

6 And he looked, and, behold, there was a cake baken on the coals and a cruse of water at his head. And he did eat and drink, and laid him down again.

7 And the angel of the Lord came again the second time and touched him and said Arise and eat: because the journey is too great for thee.

8 Above thy strength, now especially when thou art faint, and weary, and fasting.

8 And he arose, and did eat and drink, and went in the strength of that meat forty days and forty nights unto Horeb the mount of God.

In the strength of that meat, God giving that food a greater and more durable virtue than ordinary. Horeb, he wandered thither and thither for forty days till at last he came to Horeb which is the direct road we not above three or four days journey.

9 ¶ And he came thither unto a cave, and lodged there; and, behold, the word of the Lord came to him, and he said unto him, What doest thou here, Elijah?

A first counsel. This is not thy proper place, nor the station in which I set thee, which was in Israel to turn her backsliding people to which end I gave thee my help, and would have proceeded to assist thee further if thou hadst continued here. Nor did I give thee those excellent gifts to be idle in this wilderness, but to employ them for thy people. I warn now thou hast declined and art come hither to thy command, but through thy own cowardly

10 And he said, I have been very jealous for the Lord God of hosts: for the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I even I only, am left, and they seek my life, to take it away.

I have been very, i.e. I have been very zealous for the Lord God of hosts, I have not been wholly given to my vocation, but have executed my office with zeal for God's honour and service, and with the hatred of my own life, and in the midst of this, notwithstanding I was able to endure to see the blasphemy done to thy name by their obstinate idolatry and wickedness. Thrown down thine altars, those which were erected for thy worship in high places, which they had set up because they were to be abolished by thy command, Deut. xii. but out of mere contempt and opposition against thee, and therefore they suffered the altars of Baal to stand. I only am left, to wit of all thy prophets, I mean, which do boldly and publicly plead thy cause, for the rest of thy prophets who are not slain hide themselves, and dare not appear to do thee any service. They seek my life to take it away, I despair of doing them any good, for instead of increasing my testimony, they hunt for my life.

11 And he said, Go forth, and stand upon the mount before the Lord. And, behold, the Lord passed by, and a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the Lord, but the Lord was not in the wind and after the wind an earthquake, but the Lord was not in the earthquake.

The Lord passed by, either, first, by his harbingers, for, as it follows, the Lord was not yet there, or, secondly, himself. And so this is a brief and general description of the thing after which the manner of it is particularly explained. Rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks, whereby by both prepares Elijah to receive this discovery of God with greatest humility, reverence, and godly fear, and signifies his almighty and irresistible power to break the hardest hearts of the Israelites and to bear down all opposition that was or should be made against him in the discharge of his office. The Lord was not in the wind, the Lord did not vouchsafe his special and gracious presence to Elijah in that wind which he confidently expected him, which possibly was, either first, to quench the excessive fervour and passion of Elijah, which mixed itself with his zeal for God, and to make him more mild in his counsel, and more meek and patient in waiting for the conversion of Israel, where he must sooner expect God's presence and the service than in the storm of anger and punishment. Or, secondly, to teach him not to wonder if God did not recompense his terrible adulation at Mount Carmel with the presence of his grace to turn the hearts of the Israelites to himself as he desired, but God be wise and not to be thus easily won.

12 And after the earthquake a fire, but the Lord was not in the fire: and after the fire a still small voice.

Wherein it is implied that God was present, which providently was to insinuate that God would do his work in and for Israel in his own time, not by might or power, but by his own Spirit, which is 6, which moves with a powerful but yet with a sweet and gentle gale.

13 And it was so, when Elijah heard that he wrapped his face in his mantle and went out, and stood in the entering in of the cave. And, behold, there came a voice unto him, and said, What doest thou here, Elijah?

He wrapped his face in his mantle, through horror and dread of God's presence, being sensible that he was neither worthy nor able to endure the sight of God with open face. Compare Gen. xli. 13 with Exod. ii. 6. Stood in the entering in of the cave, which God commanded him to do, and as he was going towards the mouth of the cave, he was frightened and stopped in his course, by the dreadful wind, and earthquake, and fire, and when these were past, he prosecutes his journey, and goes on to the mouth of the cave and there stands still. Or the words may be rendered after (as can is elsewhere used) he was come out, and standing in the mouth of the cave, which may be mentioned as the reason why he covered his face, because now he was at the shelter of the cave. What doest thou here, Elijah? what before he spake by an angel, he now speaks to him when immediately.

14 And he said, I have been very jealous for the Lord God of hosts: because the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I, erow 1 only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away.

15 And the Lord said unto him, Go, return on thy way to the wilderness of Damascus: and when thou comest, anoint Hazael to be king over Syria.

Rebui is the way by which thou comest, for so in part lay the way from Horeb to Damascus. Ancient Hazael to be king over Syria, anoint, either first, Figuratively, appoint or declare him king which was done, 2 Kings viii 12; for this word is oft used of them who were never anointed, with our Psal xlv 7 Isa xlv 1 Jer 1, Zech x 14, Dan ix 21. Or secondly, Properly, which might be done though it be not related. Again, anoint either by itself, or by another, for so he anointed Jehu by Elisha 2 Kings ix 1, 6.

16 And Jehu the son of Nimshi shall thou anoint to be king over Israel: and Elisha the son of Shaphat of Abel-meholah shall thou anoint to be prophet in thy room.

The son of Nimshi, i. e. his grandson, for he was the son of Hophaphat, 2 Kings ix 2, 10. constituted Elisha a prophet by casting his mantle over him here ver 19.

17 And it shall come to pass, that him that escapeth the sword of Hazael shall Jehu slay: and him that escapeth from the sword of Jehu shall Elisha slay.

Here the order of times seems to be perverted, for Jehu was prophet before Jehu or Hazael were kings, and Hazael was king before Jehu. But that is of no moment as to the substance of the thing threatened, which is only this, that one or other of these should infallibly execute God's judgments upon the apostate and idolatrous Israelites. Elisha is said to slay them, either because he slew these forty-two children 2 Kings ii 24 he slew others whom upon like occasions he might destroy, or because he by God's appointment inflicted the future 2 Kings x 31 or rather by the sword which came out of his mouth, Isa xlv 2, Rev i 16. xix 15, 21, by his cutting prophecies and threatenings of God's judgments, the prophet being said to pull down and to destroy what they only declare and predict shall be pulled down &c. He is said to slay them before Jehu was king, 2 Kings viii 18, though his cruelty was much increased afterwards 2 Kings x 32. xii 1, 3, and Jehu did slay the sword of Hazael did not as king Joram himself, and Ahaziah and his two brethren 2 Kings ix 24, 27, x 11 all the near relation of wicked Ahab.

18 Yet I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him.

I have left, or, I have reserved to myself, I have by my grace kept from the common contagion, therefore thou art mistaken to think that thou art left alone, or that the people are universally corrupted. Or I will reserve to myself the slayers last mentioned, and from Jeremias 19. Seven thousand, either definitely so many, or rather indefinitely for many thousands, the number of seven being used for a great number, as Lev xxvi 18, Psa lvi 1, Micah v 5, Zech iii 9, Luke xii 1. For it is altogether improbable that all the Israelites except seven thousand did worship Baal, except Baal be here styled he did put for all their idols, and the calves among others. All the sinners which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him, i. e. all those who have not worshipped Baal, nor professed reverence or subjection to him, which idolaters did to their idols, by bowing the knee, Rom xi 4, compare Rom xiv 11, Phil ii 10 and by kissing them, or by kissing their hand with their mouth to face them, and in respect to them, of which mention is made both in Scripture, as Job xxvi 20, 27, Hos xiii 2, compare Psal ii 12, and in Pliny, Apuleius, and other profane authors. And God chooseth these expressions here, to teach men that it is not sufficient to deny outward veneration of mind and heart to idols, unless they do also forbear all outward significations of worship or reverence to them, and that he will own none for his people that do otherwise.

19 ¶ So he departed thence, and found Elisha the son of Shaphat, who was plowing with twelve yoke of oxen before him, and he with the twelfth, and Elisha passed by him, and cast his mantle upon him.

He with the twelfth, who had twelve ploughs going, whereof eleven were managed by his servants, and the last by himself, according to the simplicity and humility of those ancient times, in which men of good worth and estate submitted themselves to the meanest employments. Cast his mantle upon him, by that ceremony conferring upon him the office of a prophet which God was pleased to accompany with the gifts and graces of his Spirit, wherewith he endowed and qualified him for it. The mantle was the usual habit of the prophets. See 2 Kings i 9; Zech xiii 4. But whether he did also anoint him is uncertain. See the note on ver 16.

20 And he left the oxen, and ran after Elisha, and said, Let me, I pray thee, kiss my father and my mother, and then I will follow thee. And he said unto him, Go back again: for what have I done to thee?

He ran after Elisha, being powerfully moved by God's Spirit to follow Elisha, and wholly to give up himself to his function. And so did not but he said, or yet he said, Let me kiss my father and my mother, i. e. bid them farewell, by the usual ceremony. See Gen xxix 11, xxxi 28, Acts xx 37. Go back again, and take thy leave of them, as thou dost, and the return to me again. What have I done to thee? either first, To hinder thee from performing that office. That employment to which I have called thee doth not require an alienation of thy heart from thy parents, nor the total neglect of them. Or secondly, To make such a demand on thee, that thou shouldst be willing to forsake thy parents and kind, and all and do no only thy liberty to go and bid them farewell, but that thou mayst follow me. Whence comes this marvel, change? It is not from me, who did only throw me into your way; but from a higher power, even from God's Spirit, which hath changed thy heart and consecrated thee to thy prophetic office, which therefore it concerns thee vigorously to execute, and wholly to devote thyself to it.

21 And he returned back from him, and took a yoke of oxen, and slew them, and he did their flesh with the instruments of the oxen, and gave unto the people, and they did eat. Then he arose, and went after Elisha, and ministered unto him.

He returned back from him, from Elisha to his parents, when when he had seen and kissed he returned to the field where Elisha was. With the instruments of the oxen, i. e. with the wood belonging to the plough, &c., to which more was added, a carcass required; but that he burned, to show his total relinquishing of his former employment. Cast unto the people, i. e. he made thereof a feast for his servants who had been ploughing with him, and for him, and his other friends and neighbours who came to take their leave of him. He rebey he showed how willingly and joyfully he forsook all his friends, that he might serve God in that high and honourable employment.

CHAP. XX

Ben-hadad, not content with Ahab's homage, besiegeth Samaria, 1-12. By the direction of a prophet the Syrians are twice beaten, and Ben-hadad's horns are broken, 13-30. The Syrians submit themselves, and Ahab maketh a covenant with Ben-hadad, 31-34. The prophet by a parable reproveth Ahab, and denounceth judgments against him, 35-43.

101 AND Ben-hadad the king of Syria gathered all his host together and there were thirty and two kings with him, and horses and chariots: and he went up and besieged Samaria and warred against it.

Ben-hadad, called Idad by Josephus and Adar by the LXX, and Ador by Jatin, such changes of names being usual in their translations into other languages, and by other authors. Gathered all his host together, to war against Israel, wherein his design was to simplify the conquests which his father had made chap. xv. 20 but God's design was to punish Israel for their apostacy and idolatry. Thirty and two kings such as were in Canaan in Joshua's time, who indeed were no more than governors of cities or small territories. These were either subject or tributary to Ben-hadad or hired by him.

2 And he sent messengers to Ahab king of Israel into the city, and said unto him, Thus saith Ben-hadad,

3 Thy silver and thy gold is mine: thy wives also and thy children, even the goodliest, are mine.

I challenge them as my own and accordingly expect to have them forthwith delivered into my possession, if thou expectest peace with me.

4 And the king of Israel answered and said, My lord, O king, according to thy saying, I am thine, and all that I have.

I do so far comply with thy demand, that I call on thee for my lord and myself for thy vassal and tributary, and will hold my wives, and children and estate as by thy favour and with an acknowledgment. But it is not likely that he would deliver up his wives and children into the hands of a heathen, or that his proud and imperious wife Jezebel would permit him to do so.

5 And the messengers came again and said, Thus speaketh Ben-hadad, saying, Although I have sent unto thee, saying, Thou shalt deliver me thy silver, and thy gold, and thy wives and thy children.

Although I did before demand not only the dominion of thy treasure and wives and children, thou mayst come to understand me, but also the property and actual possession of them, wherein I would then have been contented.

6 Yet I will send my servants unto thee to-morrow about this time, and they shall search thine house and the houses of thy servants: and it shall be, that whatsoever is pleasant in thine eyes, they shall put it in their hand and take it away.

Yet now I do not accept of those terms but together with thy silver treasures I expect all the treasures of thy servants or subjects: nor will I wait till thou deliver them to me, but I will send my servants into the city and they shall have free liberty and power to search out and take away all which they desire, and thus to prevent fraud and delay, and which I will grant thee a peace.

7 Then the king of Israel called all the elders of the land, and said, Mark, I pray you and see how this man seeketh mischief for he sent unto me for my wives, and for my children, and for my silver, and for my gold, and I denied him: not.

The elders of the land whose counsel and concurrence he now desires in his distress. See how this man seeketh mischief, though he pretended peace and a friendly agreement upon these terms proposed: it is apparent by those additional demands that he intends nothing less than our utter ruin. I denied his request, I rejected his demands in the sense before mentioned.

8 And all the elders and all the people said unto him, Hearken not unto him, nor consent.

9 Wherefore he said unto the messengers of Ben-hadad, Tell my lord the king, All that thou didst send for to thy servant at the first I will do, but this thing I may not do. And the messengers departed, and brought him word again.

This thing I may not do, if I would do it, I cannot, because my people will not suffer it.

10 And Ben-hadad sent unto him, and said, The gods do so unto me, and more also, if the dust of Samaria shall suffice for handfuls for all the people that follow me.

If I do not assault thy city with so potent and numerous an army that shall turn all thy city into a heap of dust, and shall be sufficient to carry it all away, though overruled by thee, but one handful of it see the like boast 2 Sam. xiii. 13.

11 And the king of Israel answered and said, Tell him Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off.

Do not triumph before the fight and victory, for the event of war are uncertain.

12 And it came to pass, when Ben-hadad heard this message, as he was drinking he and the kings in the pavilions, that he said unto his servants, Set yourselves in array. And they set themselves in array against the city.

Set yourselves in array, put yourselves and engines in order to make the assault.

13 ¶ And behold, there came a prophet unto Ahab king of Israel saying, Thus saith the Lord, Hast thou seen all this great multitude? behold, I will deliver it into thine hand this day, and thou shalt know that I am the Lord.

There came a prophet, who having had himself bidden now ventures to come to Ahab having this welcome message in his mouth. Thus saith the Lord, God, though for aken and neglected by Ahab, prevents him with his gracious promise of help, partly that Ahab and the idolatrous Israelites might hereby be fully convinced, and you to be left without all excuse, and partly that Ben-hadad's intolerable pride and contempt of God and of his prophets might be repressed and punished, and partly that the remnant of his prophets and people who were involved in the same calamity with the rest of the Israelites might be preserved and delivered. Thou shalt know that I am the Lord and not Baal, because I will deliver thee, which he cannot do.

14 And Ahab said, By whom? And he said Thus saith the Lord, Even by the young men of the princes of the provinces. Then he said, Who shall order the battle? And he answered, Thou.

By the young men of the princes of the provinces, not by old and experienced soldiers, but by those young men, either the sons of the princes and great men of the land, who were generally fled thither for safety, or their private servants that used to attend upon them, who are armed delicately, and seem unfit for the business. He ordered the battle, partly to encourage the young men to fight, and partly, as being in the presence of their princes, and that it might appear that the victory was wholly due to God's gracious and powerful providence, and not to the valour or worthiness of the instruments.

15 Then he numbered the young men of the princes of the provinces, and they were two hundred and thirty two: and after them he numbered all the people, even all the children of Israel, being seven thousand

All the children of Israel, either, 1 All the men, for they only went out to battle; and the rest of the men might be consumed with the sword or famine, or other judgments. Or rather, 2 All the men of war, or all that were fit to go out to war, all except those whom their age, or infirmity, or other sufficient causes excused. Being seven thousand, which number may possibly be noted with respect unto those seven thousand, commended chap xix 18, for whose sakes principally God gave this deliverance

16 And they went out at noon. But Ben-hadad was drinking himself drunk in the pavilions, he and the kings, the thirty and two kings that helped him.

They went out at noon, when they were eating and drinking, and secure from all fear and expectation of an assault

17 And the young men of the princes of the provinces went out first, and Ben-hadad sent out, and they told him, saying, There are men come out of Samaria.

18 And he said, Whether they be come out for peace, take them alive, or whether they be come out for war, take them alive.

He bids them not fight, for he thought they needed not to strike one stroke and that the Israelites could not stand the first brunt 19 So these young men of the princes of the provinces came out of the city, and the army which followed them.

20 And they slew every one his man, and the Syrians fled, and Israel pursued them: and Ben-hadad the king of Syria escaped on an horse with the horsemen.

They slew every one his man, i. e. him who came to fight with him, or to seize upon him as Ben-hadad had commanded. The Syrians fled, being at a disadvantage unexpected and undaunted courage of the Israelites and the attack with a Divine terror

21 And the king of Israel went out, and smote the horses and chariots, and slew the Syrians with great slaughter.

Went out, i. e. proceeded further in his march and fought against them. The horses and chariots, i. e. the men that fight from them or belonged to them. For so horses and chariots are sometimes taken. See on 1 Sam xiv 5

22 ¶ And the prophet came to the king of Israel, and said unto him, Go, strengthen thyself, and mark, and see what thou doest: for at the return of the year the king of Syria will come up against thee.

Mark, and see what thou doest, consider what thou art doing, and see what thou doest, consider what thou art doing, and see what thou doest. At the return of the year, next year, about this time when the season comes of going forth to battle, of which see 2 Sam vi 1, 1 Chron xv 1, 2 Chron xxxvi 10

23 And the servants of the king of Syria said unto him, Their gods are gods of the hills: therefore they were stronger than we: but let us fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they.

The servants of the king of Syria suppose that their gods were no better than the Syrian gods, (which the dulness of the Israelites had given them too great cause to imagine,) and that there were many gods who had each his particular charge and jurisdiction, which was the opinion of all heathen nations that some were gods of the woods, others of the rivers, and others of the mountains, and they fancied these to be the latter, because the land of Canaan was a mountainous land, Deut xii 2, and the great temple of their god at Jerusalem stood upon a hill, and so did Samaria, where they had received their last blow, or because the Israelites did generally chose high places for the worship of their gods. It is observable that they do not impute their ill success to their negligence, and drunkenness and bad conduct, or cowardice, of which they were really guilty, nor to the valour of the Israelites, but to a Divine power which indeed was visible in it. Let us fight against them in the plain, wherein there was not only superstition but policy because the Syrians most excelled the Israelites in horses, which are most serviceable in plain ground.

24 And do this thing, Take the kings away, every man out of his place, and put captains in their rooms.

The kings being of softer education, and less experienced in military matter were less fit for his service, and being many of them but mercenaries, and therefore less concerned in his good success, would be more negligent and cautious in venturing themselves for his good. Captains i. e. experienced soldiers of his own subjects, who will faithfully obey the commands of the general, (to which the kings would not so readily yield) and use their utmost skill and valour for their own interest and advancement

25 And number thee an army, like the army that thou hast lost, horse for horse, and chariot for chariot, and we will fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they. And he hearkened unto their voice, and did so.

26 And it came to pass at the return of the year, that Ben-hadad numbered the Syrians, and went up to Aphek, to fight against Israel.

Not that Aphek in Judah of which Josh xiii 1 vs 53 but that in Asher, of which Josh xiv 30, Judg i 31 thus into which was the great plain of Gahke. And this seems to be one of those cities which Ben-hadad's father had taken from Israel, ver 34. Here also the Syrians might retreat if they should be worsted

27 And the children of Israel were numbered, and were all present, and went against them: and the children of Israel pitched before them like two little flocks of kids, but the Syrians filled the country.

Were all present, i. e. all the forces of the Israelites were here, gathered together to oppose the Syrians, so if those had been conquered all had been lost. Went against them, being persuaded and encouraged so to do, partly to prevent the conclusion of a siege in Samaria, and the waste of all the cities of their country, and partly by the remembrance of their former success, and an expectation of the same success from God again. Pitched before them, probably upon some hilly ground, where they might secure themselves, and watch for advantage against their enemies, which may be the reason why the Syrians durst not assault them before the seventh day, ver 29. Like two little flocks of kids, i. e. few, and weak, and heartless, being also for convenience of fighting and that they might seem to be more than they were divided into two bodies

28 ¶ And there came a man of God, and I spake unto the king of Israel, and said, Thus saith the Lord, Because the Syrians have said, The Lord is God of the hills, but he is not God of the valleys, therefore will I deliver all this great multitude into thine hand, and ye shall know that I am the Lord.

Because the Syrians have said, which he knew either by common report, strengthened by their present choice of a plain ground for the battle, or rather, by revelation from God, who discovered their secret counsels, 2 Kings vi 12. I am the Lord, to wit, the universal Lord of all places, and persons, and things

29 And they pitched one over against the other seven days. And so it was, that in the seventh day the battle was joined and the children of Israel slew of the Syrians an hundred thousand footmen in one day.

30 But the rest fled to Aphek, into the city, and there a wall fell upon twenty and seven thousand of the men that were left. And Ben-hadad fled, and came into the city, into an inner chamber.

The wall, or the walls (the singular number for the plural in which nothing more frequent,) of the city or of some great castle or fort in or near the city, in which they were now fortifying themselves, or of some part of the city where they lay. Which might possibly happen through natural cause, but most probably was effected by the mighty power of God then sending some sudden earthquake or violent storm of wind which threw down the wall or walls upon them, or doing this by the ministry of angels, which cannot be incredible to any man, except to him that denies the truth of all the miracles recorded in the Old and New Testament, which being attested many of them by Jew and heathen at the height of folly and impudence to deny. For if ever miracle was to be wrought, now seems to have been the proper time and season for it, when the blasphemous Syrian denied the sovereignty and infinite power of God, and thereby in came out abused him for his own honour to give a proof of it, and to show that he was the God of the plume as well as of the mountain, and that he could as effectually destroy the next to strongest holds as in the open field, and make the very walls to whose strength they trusted to stand no more the instruments of their ruin. But it may be observed, that it is not said that all the walls were felled by the fall of this wall, but only that the wall fell upon them falling some and wounding no other, as was said before. Nor is it necessary that the wall should fall in every undivided person. But it is a secret to pity the place, if it fell upon the main body of them, for the word in the Hebrew run thus the wall fell upon twenty seven thousand (not of the men that were left, as we render it, but) which were left of that part of the army in that city, either 1. Of the fields as the rest of his army did, which is likely, and particularly noted of him because he was the most eminent person in it and the head of it. Compare the title of Psal. xxviii. Or 2. At and from the noise and report of that terrible fall of the wall or wall, which possibly might be in the outside or suburbs of the city, from whence he fled further into the city into an inner chamber or a chamber within a chamber, where he supposed he might have had till he had an opportunity of making an escape, or of obtaining mercy.

31 ¶ And his servants said unto him Behold now we have heard that the kings of the house of Israel are mortal kings. let us, I pray thee, put sackcloth on our loins, and ropes upon our necks, and go out to the king of Israel, peradventure he will save this life.

Mortal kings more mortal than others, because that religion which they had professed turned them into humanity, and obliged them to show mercy. See 1. then in loins and ropes upon our necks is a testimony of our sorrow for undertaking the war, and that we have justly forfeited our lives for it, which we submit to their mercy.

32 So they girded sackcloth on their loins, and put ropes on their heads, and came to the king of Israel, and said, thy servant Ben-hadad saith, I pray thee, let me live. And he said, Is he yet alive? he is my brother.

I do not only feel pity for him, but honour and love him as my brother.

33 Now the men did diligently observe whether any thing would come to him, and did hastily catch it, and they said, Thy brother Ben-hadad. Then he said, Go ye, bring him. Then Ben-hadad came forth to him; and he caused him to come up into the chariot.

Did hastily catch it, or, they took that word for a good token, and made haste and snatched it (i. e. that word, from him, i. e. from his mouth; they repeated the word again, to try whether the king would own it, or it only dropped casually from him, or made haste to know whether it was from him, i. e. whether he spoke this from his heart, or only in dissimulation or design; for it seemed too good news to be true. Thy brother he, hadad, understand, liveth, for that he inquired after, ver. 32.

34 And Ben-hadad said unto him, The cities, which my father took from thy father, I will restore, and thou shalt make streets for thee in Damascus, as my father made in Samaria. Then said Ahab, I will send thee away with this covenant. So he made a covenant with him, and sent him away.

The cities which my father took from thy father, either, 1. From Baishu, chap. vi. 20, whom he calls Ahab's father, because he was his legal father i. e. his predecessor. Or, 2. From Omri, in whose time it seems, he made a successful invasion into the land of Israel, and took some more of the cities, and Aphek amongst the rest, though he was not elsewhere recorded in Scripture. Thou shalt make streets, or markets &c., places where thou mayest either receive the tribute, which I promise to pay thee, or exercise jurisdiction upon my subjects in case of their refusal, or outlets (as the XXX. render it) men into Damascus, i. e. some strong fort near Damascus, which might curb the kings of Damascus, and keep them from attempting any other invasion into the land of Israel. If, in this covenant, he takes no notice of his blasphemy against God, nor of the vast injuries which his people had suffered from him, but only minds his own advantage and the advantage of his power.

35 ¶ And a certain man of the sons of the prophets said unto his neighbour in the word of the Lord, Smite me, I pray thee. And the man refused to smite him.

Unto his neighbour or brother, another son of the prophets. In the word of the Lord in the name and by the command of God, whereof doubtless he had informed him. Smite me so as to wound me, ver. 37. He speaks what God commanded him, though it was to his own hurt. In which obedience to God he secretly reproached Ahab's disobedience in a sin about matter. And thus the prophet by God's appointment desires, that looking like a wounded soldier he might have the more free access to the king and disciples with him, which it was very hard for a prophet to obtain that sort of men being hateful to Ahab, chap. xxi. 8. and to his courtiers. The man refused to smite him, not out of contempt of God's command, but most probably in tenderness and compassion to his brother.

36 Then said he unto him, Because thou hast not obeyed the voice of the Lord, behold, as soon as thou art departed from me, a lion shall slay thee. And as soon as he was departed from him, a lion found him, and slew him.

If the punishment seem too severe for so small a fault, let it be considered 1. That disobedience to God's express command, especially when it is delivered by a prophet, is a great sin and no less than capital. Deut. xviii. 19. 2. This fault was much worse in a prophet, who very well knew the authority of God's commands, and the way or manner of publishing them. 3. We cannot judge of the case, but rise that man might be guilty of many other heinous sins unknown to us, but known to God, for which he might justly cut him off, which God chose to do upon this occasion, that by the severity of this punishment of a prophet's disobedience, proceeding from pity to his brother he might teach Ahab the greatness of his sin, in sparing him through foolish pity, whom by the laws of religion, and justice and prudence, and common safety, he should have cut off and what punishment he might expect for it

37 Then he found another man, and said, Smite me, I pray thee And the man smote him, so that in smiting he wounded him.

38 So the prophet departed, and waited for the king by the way, and disguised himself with ashes upon his face

That he might sooner gain access to the king and audience from him See on ver 35 With ashes whereby he changed the colour of it Or, with a veil or cloth, or band, (as the Hebrew doctors understand the word,) <sup>whereby</sup> he might seem to have bound up his wound which probably was in his face, for it was to be made in a very conspicuous place that it might be visible to Ahab and others

39 And as the king passed by, he cried unto the king and he said, Thy servant went out into the midst of the battle, and, behold, a man turned aside, and brought a man unto me, and said, Keep this man if by any means he be missing, then shall thy life be for his life, or else thou shalt pay a talent of silver

Thy servant went out into the following relation is not an untruth, but a perible, a usual way of instruction in the eastern parts, and ancient times, and most fit for this occasion, wherein an obscure prophet was to speak to a great king, whose ears were tender, and impatient of a downright reproval and exceeding partial in his own cause who by this utterance is made to condemn himself before he was aware of it, and so forced to receive the prophet's just sentence with more patience and moderation compare 1 Sam xii, xiv I man turned aside my command on superior as the manner of his expression here following showeth Then shall thy life be for his life thou shalt die in his stead, as below ver 12 compare Exod xvi 23

40 And as thy servant was busy here and there, he is gone And the king of Israel said unto him So shall thy judgment be thyself hast decided it

1 e The sentence, or the sentence against thee thou must perform the condition to which thou didst submit either suffer the one or do the other

41 And he hastened, and took the ashes away from his face, and the king of Israel discerned him that he was of the prophets

Further, 1 By his face which was in white to the king as to some of his courtiers there present Or 2 By the change of the manner of his address to him, which now was such as the prophets used

12 And he said unto him, Thus saith the Lord, Because thou hast let go out of thy hand a man whom I appointed to utter destruction, therefore thy life shall go on his life, and thy people for his people

Quest What was the great sin of Ahab in this action for which God so severely punisheth him? Answer The great dishonour hereby done to God in suffering so horrid a blasphemer, ver 23, to go unpunished which was contrary to an express law Lev xxv 16 Object What is this, to Ben-hadad, seeing that law concerned Israelites only?
Here It reached both to them that were born in the land and (as is there expressed) unto strangers that were among them and in their power, which was Ben-hadad's case, for God had delivered him unto Ahab's hand for his blasphemy, as he promised to do, ver 25 by which act of his providence, especially compared with that law, it was most evident that this man was appointed by God to destruction as is here said But Ahab was so far from punishing this blasphemer, that he doth not so much as rebuke him but treats him like a friend and a brother, dismisseth him upon easy terms, and takes his word for the performance, and takes not the least care for the reparation of God's honour, but only for the amplification of his own power Thy people for his people Quest Why were the people punished for Ahab's sin? Answer 1 Because Ahab was punished in the loss of his people 2 The people were punished for their own sins which were many and great, though God took this occasion to inflict it 3

The great injury and mischief was hereby done to his own people, who by this most foolish and wicked act were exposed to all those rapines and slaughters which Ben-hadad either did commit or might have committed against them afterwards, of which consequently Ahab was guilty And it must be considered that all the Israelites were the Lord's peculiar people, nor did their apostasy from God deprive God of his right, and the kings of Israel and Judah had these committed to them, in way of trust, to be governed and protected by them And therefore Ahab for this gross breach of his trust was justly liable, though not to the censures of his people yet to the hand of God, who was his King and Governor

13 And the king of Israel went to his house heavy and displeased, and came to Samaria

Heavy and displeased, not for his sin, but for the sad effects of it upon himself and people, which he might confidently expect having had many experiences that God did not suffer the words of his prophets to fall to the ground

CHAP XXI

Ahab cometh to buy Naboth's vineyard, which is denied him and he is grieved 1 Ahab writeth letters against Naboth, he is condemned of blasphemy, and stoned, 5 11
Ahab possesseth the vineyard, 15 16 Elijah denounceth judgment against Ahab and Jezebel, 17- 26 He repenting
God deferreth the judgment 27 29

AND it came to pass after these things that Na-both the Jezreelite had a vineyard, which was in Jezreel, hard by the palace of Ahab king of Samaria

1 e Ver 7 where one of Ahab's pictures as the other was in Samaria

2 And Ahab spake unto Naboth saying, Give me thy vineyard, that I may have it for a garden of herbs, because it is near unto my house and I will give thee for it a better vineyard than it or, if it seem good to thee, I will give thee the worth of it in money

3 And Naboth said to Ahab, The Lord forbid it me, that I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee

1 e God hath expressly, and for divers weighty reasons, forbidden the alienation of lands from the tribes and families to which they were allotted Lev xvi 15, 23, 26, Numb xxxv 7 Ezek xvi 18 And although these might have been directed till the jubilee yet he durst not submit to the king for that time, because he supposed that if once it came into the king's hand especially to be made a garden of pleasure and dished to his palace neither he nor his posterity could ever recover it again, and so he sought both offend God, and wrong his posterity, which being as a serious man, he durst not do

4 And Ahab came into his house heavy and displeased because of the word which Naboth the Jezreelite had spoken to him for he had said, I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers.
And he laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread

Two good away his face from the light, and company which either then were with him, or might come to him to the wall, as Hezekiah did under a like demon of spirit, Isa. xcvi 2. Would eat no bread, refused to eat meat in his usual time

5 ¶ But Jezebel his wife came to him, and said unto him, Why is thy spirit so sad, that thou eatest no bread?

6 And he said unto her, Because I spake unto Naboth the Jezreelite, and said unto him, Give me thy vineyard for money, or else, if it please thee, I will give thee another vineyard for it: and he answered, I will not give thee my vineyard.

7 And Jezebel his wife said unto him, Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel? arise, and eat bread, and let thine heart be merry: I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite.

Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel? art thou fit to be king that canst put up such affronts to thy subjects, and hast not the courage to use thy absolute power to dispose of them and theirs as seemeth good unto thee?

8 So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal, and sent the letters unto the elders and to the nobles that were in his city, dwelling with Naboth.

Whom she very well knew to be fit for her purpose. In her city i. e. in Jezreel. So she seeks to destroy him with a pretence of justice, and with a little reflection upon Ahab as might be.

9 And she wrote in the letters, saying, Proclaim a fast, and set Naboth on high among the people.

Proclaim a fast to remove all suspicion of hatred or evil design in Ahab, and to bring a good opinion of him amongst his people, as if his afflictions had done him good, and as if he were grown zealous for God's honour, and careful of his people's welfare, and therefore desirous to prevent the further displeasure of God against his city and kingdom, and in order therunto, to inquire into all those in which provoked God against them, and effectually to put them out. Set Naboth on high in a scaffold or some other high place, where malefactors were usually and fittingly placed, that they might be seen, and their defence heard by all the people.

10 And set two men, sons of Belial, before him to bear witness against him, saying, Thou didst blaspheme God and the king: and then carry him out and stone him, that he may die.

Thou didst blaspheme Heb. blow. Blessing is put for cursing and blaspheming as Job 1. 11. 9. so also here, as is apparent, because his blessing God and the King had been no crime. It is a figure called euphemism. God would have blasphemy so much abhorred, that it should not easily and unecessarily be named by it, proper name. Compare Psal. xvi. 4. Carry him out to the place where malefactors were punished, which was out of the city. Lev. xxiv. 23. Josh. vii. 21. Mark. vi. 20. Heb. xiii. 12 partly to show that they were unworthy of all human courts, and abhorred by all the people, and partly because the place where they were killed was thereby ceremonially polluted. See how the proper punishment of blasphemers. Lev. xxiv. 14. 15. That he may die as one that cursed his God and his political father, his king. See Exod. xxi. 17, xxii. 28.

11 And the men of his city, even the elders and the nobles who were the inhabitants in his city, did as Jezebel had sent unto them: and as it was written in the letters which she had sent unto them.

The elders and the nobles i. e. as Jezebel had sent unto them, which is not to be understood of men who had for a long time cast off the fear of God and prostituted their consciences and consciences. It is then king and sold themselves to all manner of wickedness, and could not now make a safe and honourable retreat, and durst not disobey Jezebel's command by whom they knew the king was wholly governed, and who must have taken away their lives in the same manner if they had refused to kill Naboth.

12 They proclaimed a fast, and set Naboth on high among the people.

13 And there came in two men, children of Belial, and sat before him, and the men of Belial witnessed against him, even against Naboth, in the presence of the people, saying, Naboth did blaspheme God and the king. Then they carried him forth out of the city, and stoned him with stones, that he died.

And his sons with him, as may be thought from 2 Kings ix. 26, that so the king might have an undisturbed possession, for which they might pretend those examples, Num. xxi. 32, Josh. vii. 24. But these were examples of extraordinary vengeance, and by special warrant from God, and the law of God was positively contrary to it, Deut. xxiv. 16.

14 Then they sent to Jezebel, saying, Naboth is stoned, and is dead.

They sent to Jezebel, by whom they knew the affairs of the kingdom were managed, and the design contrived.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, when Jezebel heard that Naboth was stoned, and was dead, that Jezebel said to Ahab, Arise, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he refused to give thee for money: for Naboth is not alive, but dead.

Take possession of the vineyard of Naboth, either first, By right of confiscation to repair the injury which he did to the King by blaspheming him. Or secondly, By tyrannical usurpation. Or, thirdly, By right of inheritance, for some say that Ahab was his next kinsman, his sons being dead, which he would more likely, because his land was next to the King's.

16 And it came to pass, when Ahab heard that Naboth was dead, that Ahab rose up to go down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take possession of it.

17 ¶ And the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

18 Arise, go down to meet Ahab king of Israel, which is in Samaria: behold, he is in the vineyard of Naboth, whither he is gone down to possess it.

Which is in Samaria, either who now is there and about to depart thence to Jezreel, or who commonly dwells there. He is in the vineyard or rather he will be, by that time that thou comest, rather than shalt find him there.

19 And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the Lord, Hast thou killed, and also taken possession? And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the Lord, In the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine.

Hast thou killed, and also taken possession? Thou hast murdered an innocent and righteous man, and instead of repenting for it, thou hast added another piece of injustice and violence to it, and art going confidently and cheerfully to reap the fruit of thy wickedness. He scolds Jezebel's lust to Ahab, because Jezebel did it by her connivance and consent, and authority, and for the satisfaction of his morbid appetite.

Quest. How was this prophecy fulfilled, when Ahab's blood was not licked in Jezreel, which was in the tribe of Issachar, but in the pool of Samaria, Chap. xxii. 38, which was in the tribe of Ephraim? Ans. First, This was done, though not in the same individual place, yet in the same general place, i. e. in the territory of Samaria, within which Jezreel was, and in a place of the same nature, a public and common place, for which was both the place of Naboth's execution, and the pool of Samaria. Secondly, This was particularly accomplished in his son Joram, as is affirmed, 2 Kings ix. 25, 26, whose blood is not improperly called Ahab's blood, because children are said to be born of their parents' blood. See John i. 13; Acts xv. 26. Observe These words, thy blood, even mine, show that it is meant of Ahab's person. Anno Trus, the threatening was so directed and designed at first; but afterwards, upon his humiliation, the punishment was transferred from him to his son as is expressed, ver. 29. Object This is said to be fulfilled in Ahab's person, chap. xxii. 38. Answer Either that may be referred to some other prediction or communication not elsewhere mentioned, or rather, it intimates that it was in part and in some sort fulfilled in him, though not so severely and opprobriously, nor with such characters of the curse, as it was in his son, whence he there mentions only the thing, without any regard unto the place here designed. But it may further be observed, that although upon Ahab's humiliation the curse here threatened might seem to be wholly translated from his person to his posterity, yet upon Ahab's return to sin, in the next chapter he brings back the curse upon himself, and so it is no wonder if it be in some sort fulfilled in him also. Thirdly, The Hebrew word, rendered in the place where may be and is by some learned men, otherwise rendered, either thus, instead of this that, that being frequently said to be done in another's place which was only done in his stead, or like as, or, because that. So it doth not design the place, but the cause and reason of this judgment. And in this sense the same word is used Zech. ii. 1.

2 Kings 17 20 And Ahab said to Elijah, 'Hast thou found me, O mine enemy? And he answered, I have found thee because 'thou hast sold thyself to work evil in the sight of the Lord.

2 Kings 17 21 Behold, 'I will bring evil upon thee, and will take away thy posterity, and will cut off from Ahab 'him that pisseth against the wall, and him that is shut up and left in Israel,

Of which see on chap. xv. 10

2 Kings 17 22 And will make thee hot as like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and like the house of Baasha the son of Ahijah, for the provocation wherewith thou hast provoked me to anger, and made Israel to sin

2 Kings 17 23 And 'of Jezebel also spake the Lord, saying, The dogs shall eat Jezebel by the wall of Jezreel

Or by the ditch, or fort, or in the pasture, as it is explained 2 Kings ix. 36, the Hebrew dal here being put for chlek, used there by an analogy of the first Hebrew letter, which is not un-said in the Hebrew tongue

2 Kings 17 24 'Him that dieth of Ahab in the city the dogs shall eat, and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat

2 Kings 17 25 'But there was none like unto Ahab, which did sell himself to work wickedness in the sight of the Lord, whom Jezebel his wife stirred up.

2 Kings 17 26 There was none like unto Ahab, none among all the kings of Israel which had been before him. Whom Jezebel his wife stirred up - this is added to show that temptations to sin are no excuse to the sinner

2 Kings 17 26 And he did very abominably in following idols, according to all things as did the Amorites, whom the Lord cast out before the children of Israel.

The Amorites, i. e. the seven nations of Canaan, all called by this name, as Gen. xv. 16, xviii. 29, Amos ix. 10.

2 Kings 17 27 And it came to pass, when Ahab heard those words, that he rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and went softly

2 Kings 17 28 Slowly and silently, after the manner of mourners, or the who are under a great consternation, and in deep consideration

2 Kings 17 28 And the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

2 Kings 17 29 Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days; but 'in his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house

2 Kings 17 30 Before me, i. e. in my presence, and upon my threatening. But this humiliation or repentance of Ahab's was only external and superficial, arising from the terror of God's judgments, and not sincere and serious, proceeding from the love of God or a true sense of his sin or a solemn purpose of amendment of his life, as appears because all the particulars of his repentance here ver. 27 are external and ritual only. nor is there the least intimation of any confession or fruit of his true repentance as that he restored Naboth's land or reproved his infamous wife, but in the very next chapter you find him return to his former violent humors and threatening the Lord's prophets, &c. The evil, i. e. the judgment threatened with that ver. 19, which was not inflicted upon Ahab with much judgment, but with that particular signature of a God's vengeance, that it was to be done in the same place as it was upon his son Joram - and especially that ver. 21, 22, which was wholly suspended until his son's days

3 And the king of Israel said unto his servants, Know ye that Ramoth in Gilead is ours, and we be still, and take it not out of the hand of the king of Syria?

Is ours, i. e. belongs to us by right, both by God's donation, and designation of it for a city of refuge, Josh. xxi. 38, and by our last agreement with Ben-hadad, 1 Kings xx. 34, which he refuseth to deliver up to us upon our demand.

4 And he said unto Jehoshaphat, Wilt thou go with me to battle to Ramoth-gilead? And Jehoshaphat said to the king of Israel, I am as thou art, my people is thy people, my horses as thy horses.

I will heartily and effectually join with thee and my forces shall be at thy service, as much as thy own.

5 And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, Enquire, I pray thee, at the word of the Lord to day.

By some prophet, that we may know the mind of God in it, and what success we may expect. This was the practice of the godly. See Judg. i. 1, xx. 28, 1 Sam. xiii. 2.

6 Then the king of Israel gathered the prophets together, about four hundred men, and said unto them, Shall I go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, Go up, for the Lord shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

The prophets doubtless were his own false prophet, or the priests of Baal, probably the very four hundred in whom Jehiel preserved from that great slaughter, chap. xxi. 1, who yet gave in their answer in the name of Jehovah not of Baal, either in compliance with Jehoshaphat, or rather by Ahab's direction, that good Jehoshaphat might be deceived by them into a good opinion of the war.

7 And Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the Lord besides, that we might enquire of him?

Besides these who may seem to be such by your opinion, and their own profession, but I desire further satisfaction from some other prophet.

8 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet one man, Micaiah the son of Imlah, by whom we may enquire of the Lord; but I hate him, for he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the king say so.

There is yet one to wit in this place for whom I can speedily send, for there were also other prophets elsewhere in the kingdom as Ithiel, Ilisha, and others, but these were not at hand for the present occasion. Micaiah, not one of the twelve prophets who lived about one hundred and fifty years after this time, but another of that name. He doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil, he is always a messenger of evil tidings, which was true, but no sufficient reason why he should hate him, because Micaiah was purely God's man, and in all his messages, and whatsoever evil he threatened, Ahab's sin it was the cause, and procurer of it. Let not the king say so, do not pronounce evil to our ears, let us neither hate his person nor despise his messages, but fear them, and then do as we see cause.

9 Then the king of Israel called an officer, and said, Hasten hither Micaiah the son of Imlah.

10 And the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah sat each on his throne, having put on their robes in a void place in the entrance of the gate of Samaria, and all the prophets prophesied before them.

Their robes, their royal robes, and emblems of authority. In a void place, in the place of judicature, which was either nigh the gate of the city, and in the front of some void place, where either people stood to hear and see justice administered, or soldiers were placed for the defence of the city in time of war.

11 And Zedekiah the son of Cheneanah made him horns of iron, and he said, Thus saith the Lord, With these shalt thou push the Syrians, until thou have consumed them.

Horns of iron, fit emblems of the power and victory of these two kings. The devil is God's ape, and the false prophets sometimes imitating the true who when they declared God's mind by words, did also ostentatiously confirm it by sensible signs. See Isa. xx. 2, Jer. xxv. 2. Thus saith the Lord, Heb. Jehovah, whose name he pretends to gain the more credit and countenance to his words. See on ver. 7.

12 And all the prophets prophesied so, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper, for the Lord shall deliver it into the king's hand.

13 And the messenger that was gone to call Micaiah spake unto him, saying, Behold now, the words of the prophets declare good unto the king with one mouth: let thy word, I pray thee, be like the word of one of them, and speak that which is good.

This he dares not out of any love to Micaiah (whom he perceives to debase his conscience) but merely out of a desire to gratify the king's humour.

14 And Micaiah said, As the Lord liveth, what the Lord saith unto me, that will I speak.

What answer God shall put into my mind and mouth which it seems was not yet done.

15 So he came to the king. And the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall we forbear? And he answered him, Go and prosper, for the Lord shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

He answered him, not seriously, but ironically, using the very words of the false prophets, in way of derision, as appears first from his omission of that solemn preface, Thus saith the Lord, or This is the word of the Lord, which the proph. is generally used, and which himself useth when he comes to his serious answer, ver. 19. Secondly from Ahab's reply, ver. 16, which shows that he suspected Micaiah's sincerity in that answer, and gathered by his gesture or manner of speaking that he spake only minimally as representing and uttering the false prophets for their answer. See the like ironical passages Gen. iii. 22, Judg. x. 14, 1 Kings xviii. 27, Ezek. xi. 9, Jer. xx. 9, Amos iv. 15, all which expressions are not used to lead men into mistake, but to bring them to the sight of their sin and duty, which may be done sometimes most effectually in this way. So Micaiah's meaning is plainly this, Behold thou dost not seek to know the truth, but only to please thyself, go to the battle, as all thy prophets advise thee, and expect the success which they promise thee, and try the truth of their prediction by thy own costly experience.

16 And the king said unto him, How many times shall I adjure thee that thou tell me nothing but that which is true in the name of the Lord?

How many times shall I adjure thee? I adjure thee again and again that thou give over this mockery, and seriously tell me the mind of God in this matter.

17 And he said, I saw all Israel scattered upon the hills, as sheep that have not a shepherd: and the Lord said, These have no master: let them return every man to his house in peace.

16 In the spirit, or in a vision. Upon the hills, upon the mountains of Gilead, nigh Ramoth; either where they lay encamped by Ahab's order, or to which they fled from the enemy, returning that the safest place. See Matt xxi. 16. 17 As shepherds that have lost a shepherd; as people who have lost their king See Numb xxvii. 17. Isa xi. 11, xiv. 26, 124. xxiv. 23 Every man to his house in peace, discharged from the war, which was fulfilled, ver 36.

18 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, Did I not tell thee that he would prophesy no good concerning me, but evil?

Now thou seest my words verified, and this man showing his hatred by this malignant and treasonable prophecy, and how little heed is to be given to his words which crafty insinuation seems to have had too great an influence upon good Jehoshaphat, otherwise he would never have gone to the battle.

Because thou givest credit to thy false prophets, and distrustest my words as if they were but the suggestions of my own fancy, and hatred of this person I will give thee a distinct and true account of this whole matter in God's name and presence. I saw the Lord, by the eyes of my mind for he could not see the Lord with bodily eyes. The host of heaven i. e. the angels, who are often called God's host or hosts because of their great number, excellent order and constant readiness to attend upon God, and to execute his commands. See Gen ii. 1, Psal ciii. 21, cxlvi. 2. These angels were both good and bad, the one possibly on his right, the other on his left hand. Nor is it strange that the devils are called the host of heaven if you consider first That their original seat was in heaven and men in scripture are often called by the name of the place from whence they came. Secondly That the name of heaven is oft given to all that part of the world which is above the earth, and among the rest of the air as Gen i. 20, vii. 11. viii. 2, xxviii. 25, Deut vii. 11. xi. 11, where the devil's residence and dominion lies 1 ph ii. 2, and that both Micah and his angels, and the dragon and his angels are said to be and to wage war in heaven Rev xii. 7 i. e. either the air or the church. And this place is not to be understood as if Micah had seen with his bodily eyes the Lord and his angels sitting in the third heaven, but that he saw a representation of the Divine presence in the air attended with good and bad angels. Standing by him in the posture of ministers, to receive and execute his commands.

20 And the Lord said, Who shall persuade Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one said on this manner, and another said on that manner.

This is not to be grossly understood as if God did ask and take counsel from his creatures, or were it a loss to find out an expedient to accomplish his own will. did consider several ways and then chose with that which upon debate appeared to be best, all which it is ridiculous to imagine concerning a God of perfect and infinite knowledge, but only to bring down Divine things to our hollow capacities, and to express the various means which God hath to execute his own designs.

21 And there came forth a spirit, and stood before the Lord, and said, I will persuade him.

An evil spirit came out of the knot or company of them standing possibly on the left hand and presented himself before the throne, as having something to say to the Lord.

22 And the Lord said unto him, Wherewith? And he said, I will go forth, and I will be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And he said, I have shall persuade him, and prevail also go forth, and do so.

I will be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets, I will persuade him into the minds and mouths of his prophets. Thou shalt persuade him, and prevail also. I will give them up into thy hands, and blind their minds, and leave them to their own ignorance and wickedness, which will certainly lead them into dreadful mistakes. Go forth and do so, this is not a command, but only a permission, which is oft expressed in the imperative mood; as I Sam xvi. 10, Matt viii. 22; John xxi. 27. I will not hinder thee from tempting them, nor give them grace to withstand their temptation, whereby thou mayst be assured of success.

23 Now therefore, behold, the Lord hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of all these thy prophets, and the Lord hath spoken evil concerning thee.

24 But Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah went near, and smote Micah on the cheek, and said, Which way went the Spirit of the Lord from me to speak unto thee?

I smote the son of Chenaanah, the chief of the false prophets, who was much in the king's favour, upon which he was provoked. Smote Me on the cheek, in way of contempt and scorn, Job xvi. 10, Jer. xx. 2; Lam. iii. 30; Mark xiv. 65. Which way went the Spirit of the Lord, i. e. in what manner went it? I am sure I did not, I then have consulted the Lord and answered in his name and have the same Spirit which thou pretendest to have, and not a lying spirit, I thou dost falsely and maliciously affirm how is it possible that the same Spirit should tell us one thing, and thee the quite contrary?

25 And Micah said, Behold, thou shalt see in that day, when thou shalt go into an inner chamber to hide thyself.

Out of a just fear and expectation of the deserved punishment of a false prophet and of the great author and abettor of these pernicious war and of Ahab's destruction.

26 And the king of Israel said, Take Micah, and carry him back unto Amon the governor of the city, and to Josiah the king's son.

Carry him back, to wit into prison, where it seems he was before shut up, for so the Lord's prophets were used by Ahab. And some think he was the deliverer of that unwholesome men's ship xx. 41, 42.

27 And say, Thus saith the king, Put this fellow in the prison, and feed him with bread of affliction, and with water of affliction, until I come in peace.

28 And Micah said, I will go every course and sparing diet, whereby he may be end supported to endure his torment. See Deut xvi. 3. 2 Chron xxiii. 26, Isa lxxv. 20. Until I come in peace, until I return in triumph, which I doubt not I shall do, in spite of all his malice and suggestions to the contrary, and then I shall call him to an account for all his lies and impudence.

28 And Micah said, If thou return at all in peace, the Lord hath not spoken by me. And he said, Harken, O people, every one of you.

The Lord hath not spoken by me, I acknowledged myself to be an impostor, and to deserve death. He said i. e. Micah the person last named, being assured of the truth of his prophecy calls all the people to be witnesses of it.

29 So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah went up to Ramoth-gilead.

Jehoshaphat, though a good man yet was sadly deceived in this matter, partly because Micah was a person unknown to him, and both he and the other prophets desired him to give their answer in the name of the Lord and secondly And to him to determine the controversy, which either of them could decide, and therefore he was misled if he was overcome by the vast disproportion of the multitude of prophets to one, and by his relation, in love and affection to Ahab, and partly because the war was just and lawful, to over his own rights, which the Syrian king unjustly detained from him.

<sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> 30 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, <sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> "I will disguise myself, and enter into the battle; but put thou on thy robes." And the king of Israel disguised himself and went into the battle.

<sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> I will disguise myself, I put off my imperial habit, that the Syrians may not know me, and direct their main force against me, which they will assuredly endeavour, as knowing that this war proceedeth from me, and is likely to die with me; and that thou shalt see that this man is a false prophet, and I shall have the success which I desire, and expect, notwithstanding all his presages. Thy robes, thy royal robe—which thou mayst do without any danger, because thou art not the object either of the Syrians' rage, or of this false prophecy.

31 But the king of Syria commanded his thirty and two captains that had rule over his chariots, saying, Fight neither with small nor great, save only with the king of Israel.

<sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> His thirty and two captains that had rule over his chariots, and the men that fought from them, or with them, was his whole army. Possibly the chariots and the whole army were distributed into thirty two several parts, and each captain ruled those chariots and soldiers attending upon them, which fell to his share. Save only with the king of Israel—thus he ordered either in policy, truly supposing this to be the best way to put an end to the war; or with design to take him prisoner, that thereby he might wipe out the stain of his own captivity, and recover the honour and advantage which then he lost, or rather by the power and providence of God, which disposeth the hearts of kings as he pleaseth, and inclined them to this course, that they might, though ignorantly, accomplish his word and counsel.

32 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, Surely it is the king of Israel. And they turned aside to fight against him; and Jehoshaphat cried out.

<sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> They turned aside, they drew their force from their several quarters towards Jehoshaphat. Jehoshaphat cried out to the Lord for help, 2 Chron. xviii. 31.

33 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, that they turned back from pursuing him.

<sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> When the captains perceived that it was not the king of Israel, who they easily perceived either by the words uttered to God or them, or by the difference of his shape and countenance from that of Ahab, which probably many of them saw, and knew.

34 And a certain man drew a bow at adventure, and smote the king of Israel between the joints of the harness; wherefore he said unto the driver of his chariot, Turn thine hand, and carry me out of the host: for I am wounded.

<sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> A certain man drew a bow at adventure, and smote the king of Israel between the joints of the harness, wherefore he said unto the driver of his chariot, Turn thine hand, and carry me out of the host: for I am wounded. Heb. in his simplicity—i.e. ignorantly without craft, or choice, or any design, or thought of reaching Ahab. On account of his perfection—i.e. with his perfect estimate of skill, which is mentioned as the reason why it pierced through the joints of his armour. Between the joints of the harness—where the several parts of his armour are joined together, which possibly were not then joined with so much art and closeness as now they are. Out of the host, out of the midst of the host, where the heat of the battle was, and the part of the army. See the note on 2 Chron. xxi.

35 And the battle increased that day, and the king was stayed up in his chariot against the Syrians, and died at even; and the blood ran out of the wound into the midst of the chariot.

<sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> The battle increased, i.e. grew hot and violent. He stayed up, was supported by cordials, or by his servants, that by his presence he might encourage his soldiers to fight more courageously, and that he might see the end of the battle.

36 And there went a proclamation throughout the host about the going down of the sun, saying, Every man to his city, and every man to his own country.

<sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> There went a proclamation, probably, by Jehoshaphat's order, with the consent of the chief captains of Israel, and possibly with the permission of the king of Syria, upon notice of Ahab's death, which was the only thing at which he aimed ver. 31. Every man to his own country—the king as he did, and the battle ended, and therefore every man hath liberty to return to his own house and private occasions.

37 ¶ So the king died, and was brought to Samaria, and they buried the king in Samaria.

38 And one washed the chariot in the pool of Samaria, and the dogs licked up his blood, and they washed his armour, according unto the word of the Lord, which he spake.

<sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> The dogs licked up his blood, together with the water where with it was mixed. According unto the word of the Lord, of which see the note on chap. xxi. 19.

39 Now the rest of the acts of Ahab, and all that he did, and the ivory house which he made, and all the cities that he built, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

<sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> The ivory house. Heb. the house of the tooth or teeth, i.e. of elephants, &c. chap. x. 18. Not that it was made wholly of solid ivory, but because the other materials were covered or intermixed or adorned with ivory. Compare Amos iii. 1.

40 So Ahab slept with his fathers, and Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead.

41 ¶ And Jehoshaphat the son of Asa began to reign over Judah in the fourth year of Ahab king of Israel.

<sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> Who reigned twenty two years, therefore he reigned about eighteen years with Ahab.

42 Jehoshaphat was thirty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and five years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Azubah the daughter of Shilhi.

<sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> He reigned twenty and five years, part by himself, and partly with his sons, whom he took into the fellowship of his kingdom, of which see more on 2 Kings i. 17.

43 And he walked in all the ways of Asa his father, he turned not aside from it, doing that which was right in the eyes of the Lord; nevertheless the high places were not taken away, for the people offered and burnt incense yet in the high places.

<sup>1 Ch. where he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle of Elbron</sup> He walked in all the ways of Asa his father, he took the same care for the government of his kingdom, and especially for the reformation of religion that Asa did, of whom see chap. x. 11. The high places were not taken away—Object it is said, Do not take them away, 2 Chron. xxi. 6. As if he took away those which were erected to idols, of which he seems to speak there, because the high places are then joined with groves, which were generally erected to idols, and not to the true God, as will appear to any one that shall compare all the scriptures where groves are mentioned. He could not take away those which were erected to the true God, of which this place manifestly speaks; as also that parallel place 1 Kings xi. 14, where see the notes. Or he took them away, but not fully, or not in the very beginning, of his reign.

With Ahab first, and then with his son This is noted as a blessing in his government, 2 Chron. xix. 2, and proved of most mischievous consequence to Jehoshaphat's posterity, as we shall see, 2 Kings ix. x

45 Now the rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat, and his might that he shewed, and how he warred, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

See 2 Chron. xx. 36. Or, there were to Jehoshaphat's ships, the ellipsis of the verb substantive and of the preterit, being frequent in the Hebrew language. See under the words, he made ten ships, so joining both texts together and out of both completing the sense. Of Tharshish, either 1. Of the sea, as this word is thought sometimes to be used. Or rather 2. To go to Tharshish (as it is expressed, 2 Chron. xx. 36,) and thence to Ophir as it here follows. See more on 1 Kings x. 22. To Ophir of which see 1 Kings ix. 28. Ezion-geber was in Edom and consequently in Jehoshaphat's territories.

49 Then said Ahaziah the son of Ahab unto Jehoshaphat, Let my servants go with thy servants in the ships. But Jehoshaphat would not Observe, It is said that he did join with Ahaziah herein, 2 Chron. xx. 35, 36. Answer That was before this time, and before the ships were broken, for the breaking of the ships, mentioned here, ver. 48, is noted to be the effect of his sin in joining with Ahaziah, and of the prophecy consequent upon it, 2 Chron. xx. 37. And good Jehoshaphat being warned and chastised by God for this sin should not be persuaded to repeat it; whereby he showed the sincerity of his repentance.

50 ¶ And *Jehoshaphat slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father and Jehoram his son reigned in his stead

51 ¶ Ahaziah the son of Ahab began to reign over Israel in Samaria the seventh year of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, and reigned two years over Israel.

By comparing this verse with ver. 41, it appears that Ahaziah was made king by his father and reigned in conjunction with him, a year or two before Ahab's death, and is long after it, even as Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat was made king by his father in his lifetime, as we shall see hereafter, which possibly was done in compliance with Ahab's desire upon a notice of his daughter to Jehoshaphat's son, and it may be Ahab to induce and encourage him to do so gave him an example of it and made his son his partner in the kingdom. Reigned two years, either after his father's death, or one before it, and another after it.

52 And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the way of his father, and in the way of his mother, and in the way of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

Which clause seems here added to show how little the authority and example of parents or masters is to be valued where it is opposed to the will and word of God.

53 For he served Baal, and worshipped him, and provoked to anger the Lord God of Israel, according to all that his father had done.

The third captain entreateth Elijah, who is carried by an angel, goeth and telleth the king of his death, 13-16. Jehoram succeedeth him 17-18.

THEN Moab rebelled against Israel after the death of Ahab

Moab, which had been subdued by David, 2 Sam. viii. 2, as Edom was, and upon the division of this kingdom into two Moab was adjoined to that of Israel and Edom to that of Judah each to that kingdom upon which it bordered. And when the kingdoms of Israel and Judah were weak and taken to God, they took that opportunity to revolt from him. Moab here and Edom a little after it.

2 And Ahaziah fell down through a lattice in his upper chamber that was in Samaria, and was sick; and he sent messengers, and said unto them, Go, enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron whether I shall recover of this disease.

In his upper chamber, in which the lattice might be left to convey light into the lower room, which it now seems to be absurd in a king's palace, we must not think it was so then, when the world was not arrived to that height of curiosity and art in which now it is. But the words may be, and are by some, rendered, through the battlements (or through the lattice in the battlements) of the roof of the house, where being first walking after the manner, and then standing and looking through and leaning upon this lattice which was grown into a ladder, and he fell down into the court or garden belonging to the house. Baal-zebub, proper, the god of flies in idiom called, because it was falsely supposed to deliver those people from flies, which were both vexatious and harmful to them as Jupiter and Hercules were called by a like name among the Greeks for the same reason. And it is evident, both from sacred and profane histories, that the idol gods, being consulted by the heathens delinquents through God's permission and just judgment gave them answers though they were generally observed, even by the heathens themselves, to be dark and doubtful.

3 But the angel of the Lord said to Elijah the Tishbite. Arise go up to meet the messengers of the king of Samaria, and say unto them, Is it not because there is not a God in Israel that ye go to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron?

Is it not because there is not a God in Israel? Do I then not by this utter cast contempt upon the God of Israel as if he were either ignorant of the event of thy disease, or unable to give thee any relief, and as if Baal-zebub had more skill and power than he?

4 Now therefore thus saith the Lord, Thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die. And Elijah departed.

Now therefore, for this was a very heavy crime to deny the pollution of God and to transfer them to an idol. See Lev. xix. 12. xx. 6. 27. Dent. xxi. 10. Elijah departed the messengers not being to approach him as suspecting him to be more than man because he knew the secret message which the king directed to them in his bedchamber.

5 And when the messengers turned back unto him, he said unto them, Why are ye now turned back?

Before ye have been at Ekron, which he easily knew by their quick return.

6 And they said unto him. There came a man up to meet us, and said unto us, Go, turn again unto the king that sent you, and say unto him, Thus saith the Lord, Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that thou sendest to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron? therefore thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

7 And he said unto them. What manner of man was he? which came up to meet you, and told you these words?

8 And they answered him. He was a hairy man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins. And he said. It is Elijah the Tishbite.

An hairy man, called 1. As to his body, the hair of his head, and beard, him, though he had a long and spread over much of his face. Or rather 2. As to his outward garment, which was rough and hairy, such as were sometimes worn by eminent persons in Greece in ancient times, and were the proper habit of the prophets. See Isa. xxi. 2. Zech. xiii. 1. Matt. iii. 4. He said of. Hath a garment of leather about his loins. As for the Baptist also had, Matt. di. 4. that 1. As to his outward habit he might represent Elias, in whose spirit he knew he came.

9 Then the king sent unto him a captain of fifty with his fifty. And he went up to him up, behold he sat on the top of an hill. And he spake unto him, Thou man of God, the king hath said, Come down.

Thou man of God, so he calls him in way of scorn and contempt q. d. Thou that vauntest as if thou wast more than a mere man. The king hath said, Come down; the king commands thee to come to him, which if thou refusest, I am here to carry thee to him by force.

10 And Elijah answered and said to the captain of fifty, If I be a man of God, then let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And there came down fire from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

Elijah's desire did not proceed from a carnal and malicious passion, but from a pure zeal to vindicate God's name and honour which was so horribly abused, and from the motion of God's Spirit was evident from God's miraculous answer to his desire. And therefore Christ doth not condemn this fact of Elias, but only reproves his disciples for their perverse imitation of it from another spirit and principle, and in a more unreasonable time, Luke ix. 51, 55.

11 Again also he sent unto him another captain of fifty with his fifty. And he answered and said unto him, O man of God, thus hath the king said. Come down quickly.

Wherein he discovers more petulance and impudence than the former and shows how little he was moved or affrighted by the former example.

12 And Elijah answered and said unto them, If I be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And the fire of God came down from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

13 And he sent again a captain of the third fifty with his fifty. And the third captain of fifty cut up, and came and fell on his knees before Elijah, and besought him, and said unto him, O man of God, I pray thee, let my life, and the life of these fifty thy servants, be precious in thy sight.

Let on his knees and besought him. (xvi.) with both hands, reverent to his person and a belief of his power and dread of God's judgments.

14 Behold there came fire down from heaven, and burnt up the two captains of the former fifties with their fifties: therefore let my life now be precious in thy sight.

15 And the angel of the Lord said unto Elijah, Go down with him, be not afraid of him. And he arose, and went down with him unto the king.

Not fearing the power of the king nor of Jezebel nor of all their forces, wherein he gives an eminent example of his faith and obedience, and witness of his growth in grace since that time that he fled for fear of Jezebel, 1 Kings xix. 13.

16 And he said unto him, Thus saith the Lord, Inasmuch as thou hast sent messengers to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron, is it not because there is no God in Israel to enquire of his word? therefore thou shalt not come down off that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

And he said unto him, to his very face. Nor durst the king lay hands upon him, being daunted with the prophet's presence, and great courage and confidence, and affrighted by the late dreadful evidence of his power with God and over men, and withal struck with a Divine and extraordinary terror.

17 So he died according to the word of the Lord which Elijah had spoken. And Jehoram reigned in his stead in the second year of Jehoram the son of Je-

of the kingdom of Judah

Jehoshaphat king of Judah, because he had no son

Jehoram, Ahaziah's brother, chap in 1, for he had no son to succeed him, as it here follows. In the second year of Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat other passages of Scripture seem to clash with this, as that Ahaziah, who reigned but two years, began his reign in Jehoshaphat's twentieth year, 1 Kings xxii. 51, and therefore this Jehoram must begin his reign in Jehoshaphat's nineteenth year; and therefore before the reign of Jehoram Jehoshaphat's son, and that Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat began to reign in the fifth year of Joram Ahab's son, 2 Kings xix. 16. Answer These difficulties are easily resolved, by this consideration, that it was a usual practice among kings in former ages, to make their sons sometime their co-royals and deputies in the administration of the kingdom, and sometimes formally kings in conjunction with them, and whilst they lived, whereof there are instances both in profane history, among the Persians, Greeks, and Romans, and in the sacred Scripture, as in David 1 Chron. xiii. 1, xxix. 22, in Uzziah 2 Chron. xxvi. 21 and (to come close to the point) in Jehoshaphat 2 Kings viii. 16, who in his twentieth year, when he went to Ashdod and with him to Ramoth Gilead, appointed his son Jehoram his viceroy, and (in case of his death) his successor. In the second year from that time, when Jehoram was made vice king in his father's stead, and at once the Jehoram, Ahab's son, began to reign, and in the fifth year of the reign of this Joram son of Ahab which was about the twenty fourth year of Jehoshaphat's reign, Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat was formally made king of Judah, together with his father, so that Jehoshaphat lived and was king of Judah also. And so all the place is clear. To which some add, that this verse, on the part of it where the difficulty consists, is wanting in some ancient copies and is omitted by the LXX interpreters, which is far more prudent and pious to grant than up in such chronological difficulties to question the truth and divinity of the Holy Scriptures.

15 Now the rest of the acts of Ahaziah, which he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

CHAP II

Elijah, taking his leave of Elisha with his mantle divided, Jordan, 1-4, and granting Elisha his request in a chariot, is taken up by a fiery chariot into heaven. 5-11 Elisha, dividing Jordan with Elijah's mantle, is acknowledged his successor. 12-18 He with salt healeth the waters at Jericho 19-22 Children mock him, he curseth them, and they are devoured by two bears. 23-25

AND it came to pass, when the Lord would take up Elijah into heaven by a whirlwind, that Elisha went with Elisha from Gilgal.

2 And Elisha said unto Elisha, Tarry here, I pray thee, for the Lord hath sent me to Beth-el. And Elisha said unto him, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they went down to Beth-el.

Elisha said unto Elisha, this he desires either 1 That he being left alone, might better prepare him off for his great charge. Or, 2 Out of his humility and modesty, he desired no witnesses of his glorious removal and of time and glory from it. Or, 3 Out of reluctance to Elisha, that he might not be overwhelmed with grief at so sad a sight. Or, 4 That he might try his love, and what his desire to accompany him, in being in his company to see God's honour, and the church's good (which Elisha sought above all things,) that there should be witnesses of so glorious a translation. The Lord hath sent me to Beth-el, which was truth, but not the whole truth, for he was to go a far longer journey. But he was first to go to Beth-el, as also to Jericho, to the schools of the prophets there, that he might comfort and strengthen their hearts in God's work, and give them his last and dying counsel.

3 And the sons of the prophets that were at Beth-el came forth to Elisha; and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Lord will take away thy master from thy head to day? And he said, Yea, I know it: hold ye your peace.

The Lord will take away thy master. This was revealed to some of the sons of the prophets, and by them to the whole college. I fear thy head, Heb. from above thy head; which phrase may respect, either 1 The manner of sitting in schools, where the scholar sat at his master's feet. Dent. xxviii. 3, Acts xiii. 3. Or, 2 The manner of Elijah's translation, which was to be by a power sent from heaven, to take him up thither. Hold ye your peace, do not aggravate my grief, nor divert me with any unreasonable discourses, that I may digest my sorrow, and prepare myself for so great a stroke, and diligently attend all my master's steps, lest he be snatched away from me whilst I am talking with you, and that I may beg and obtain some great blessing from him before his departure.

4 And Elisha said unto him, Elisha, tarry here, I pray thee, for the Lord hath sent me to Jericho. And he said, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they came to Jericho.

5 And the sons of the prophets that were at Jericho came to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Lord will take away thy master from thy head to day? And he answered, Yea, I know it: hold ye your peace.

6 And Elisha said unto him, Tarry, I pray thee, here, for the Lord hath sent me to Jordan. And he said, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And they two went on.

7 And fifty men of the sons of the prophets went and stood by the view of a fall, and they two stood by Jordan.

stood by the view, to observe this prophecy of Elisha's translation to heaven, which they expected every moment, now when he had taken his last farewell of all the prophets, and when they did need to be kept from not so much to study their own curiosity, as that they might be witnesses of it to others.

8 And Elisha took his mantle, and wrapped it together, and smote the waters, and they were divided hither and thither, so that they two went over on dry ground.

9 And it came to pass, when they were gone over, that Elisha said unto Elisha, Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee. And Elisha said, I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me.

Elisha, 1 Double to what is in thee, which it seems not probable that he had confidence either to ask, or to expect. Or rather, 2 Double to what the rest of the sons of the prophets may receive at thy request upon this occasion. He alludes to the double portion of the inheritance, Dent. xxi. 17. But though Elisha desired more, yet God gave him more than he desired or expected, and he came to have had a greater portion of the prophetic and miraculous gifts of God's Spirit than the others.

10 And he said, Thou hast asked a hard thing; nevertheless, if thou see me when I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee, but if not, it shall not be so.

A hard thing, i.e. a rare and surprising blessing, which I cannot promise thee, which only God can give, and he given it only when and to whom he pleaseth. If not, it shall not be so: this sign he proposed not without the insight and direction of God's Spirit, that hereby he might engage him more earnestly to wait, and more fervently to pray, for this mercy.

11 And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that, behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder, and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven.

A chariot of fire and horses of fire, a bright cloud formed into such a likeness managed by holy and blessed angels sent from heaven to conduct him thither into heaven; into the third heaven, being in the way so transformed and changed as might make him meet to be admitted into those blessed mansions.

12 ¶ And Elisha saw it, and he cried, My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof. And he saw him no more: and he took hold of his own clothes, and rent them in two pieces.

My father, my father, so he calls him for his fatherly affection to him, and for his fatherly authority which by his office he had over him, in which respect the scholars of the prophets are called their sons, as 1 Kings xx. 35. The chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof, who by thy example, and counsel, and prayers and power with God, didst move for the defence and preservation of Israel than all their chariots and horses or other warlike provisions. This expression alludes to the form of chariots and horses which he had seen.

13 He took up also the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and went back, and stood by the bank of Jordan.

God considering it for Elisha's comfort and the strengthening of his faith as a pledge that together with Elijah's mantle, his office and spirit should rest upon him.

14 And he took the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and smote the waters, and said, Where is the Lord God of Elijah? and when he also had smitten the waters, they parted hither and thither, and Elisha went over.

Where is the Lord God of Elijah? who at Elijah's request divided these waters, and is able to do it again, and hath given me his spirit and office, and therefore I humbly beg and confidently expect his assistance in this matter. They parted, but these words after [Where is the God of Elijah?] are by many rendered otherwise, and that agreeably to the Hebrew, even himself? or even the same? (which words they join with the former as a emphatical addition or repetition which is usual in fervent prayers. But they may be rendered without an interrogation, thus, Surely he is, to wit, he is present, and ready to help me. Or, Surely he is the same, to wit, to me, that he was to Elijah, is able and willing to work for me as for Elijah. Then the following words they render as they are in the Hebrew, and he smote the waters, and it was divided. By which repetition it may seem that he smote it twice, and that at the first smiting the success did not answer his desire and expectation, which God so ordered, partly to keep him in a modest and humble sense of his own insufficiency, that he might not be puffed up with the great gifts which he had in a received; compare 2 Cor. xii. 7, and partly to stir him up to a more lively exercise of faith and prayer which followed God's denial or suspension of his help, as it is here expressed, which also was attended with desire and anxiety.

15 And when the sons of the prophets which were to sit with him at Jericho saw him, they said, The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha. And they came to meet him, and bowed themselves to the ground before him.

Or, as it is in the Hebrew, and the sons of the prophets who lived in Jericho and his quarters, and were near the place where they stood at a convenient distance to observe the event, ver. 7. They said, Heb. and they said, either by revelation, or rather, by the visible effects of it which they saw. They bowed themselves to the ground, thereby testifying their reverence and subjection to him as Elijah's successor, and their master and teacher.

16 ¶ And they said unto him, Behold, now, there be with thy servants fifty strong men, let them go, we pray thee, and seek thy master. lest peradventure the Spirit of the Lord hath taken him up, and cast him upon some mountain, or into some valley. And he said, Ye shall not send.

Strong men, able to take such a journey. They thought, either, 1. That God had not finally taken him away from them, but only for a time, compare 1 Kings xviii. 12, which they heartily desired, and therefore easily believed, or that God had only taken away his soul, and that his body was cast down into some place, which they desired to seek, that they might give it an honourable burial.

17 And when they urged him till he was ashamed, he said, Send. They sent therefore fifty men, and they sought three days, but found him not.

Will he was ashamed, i. e. to wit, to deny them any longer, lest they should think his denial proceeded from neglect of his master, or a contempt of the sons of the prophets, or a secret content he took in his master's loss, that he might have his honour and power. Or, till they were ashamed, because he did so oft and so obstinately deny their request.

18 And when they came again to him (for he turned at Jericho,) he said unto them, Did I not say unto you, Go not?

19 ¶ And the men of the city said unto Elisha, Behold, I pray thee, the situation of this city is pleasant, as my lord seeth; but the water is naught, and the ground is barren.

Either it was so originally, at least as to that part of the city where the college of the prophets was, for it is not necessary to understand this of the whole territory, or it became so from the curse of God inflicted upon it, either when Joshua first took it, or afterwards when Hiel rebuilt it. However, upon the prophet's curse it grew exceeding fruitful and therefore is commended for its fertility by later writers.

20 And he said, Bring me a new earse, and put salt therein. And they brought it to him.

A new earse, partly that there might be no ground of suspicion that the cure was wrought by any natural means of any thing which was or had been in the earse before, but only by God's power, and partly that there might be no legal pollution in it which might offend God, and hinder his miraculous operation by it. Put salt therein, a most improper remedy, for salt naturally makes waters brackish and lands barren. Herobry therefore he would show that this was effected solely by the Divine power, which could work either without means, or against them.

21 And he went forth unto the spring of the waters, and cast the salt in there, and said, Thus saith the Lord, I have healed these waters, there shall not be from thence any more death, or barren land.

Not the salt in there, which was in itself idle and ineffectual, considering both the quality of salt, and the small quantity of it, and the place where it was put, the fountain, which quickly works out any thing which is put in it, see Lev. xi. 36, but was only used as a sign of God's presence and power, which did the thing, compare Exod.

xv. 25. 2 Kings ii. 41. 17. 6. Any more words, i.e. curse or danger, as death is oft used. (1st Cor. xi. 22.) to curse or threaten, by speaking of it as formerly.

22 So the waters were healed unto this day, according to the saying of Elisha which he spake.

23 ¶ And he went up from thence unto Beth-el; and as he was going up by the way, there came forth little children out of the city, and mocked him, and said unto him, Go up, thou bald head; go up, thou bald head.

He went up from thence unto Beth-el, to the other school or college of prophets, to inform them of Elisha's translation and his succession into the same office, and to direct, and comfort, and establish them, as he saw occasion. Little children, i.e. children, or young men, as this Hebrew word signifies, as Gen xxii 3, 12, xh 12, 2 Chron xii 7, Isa. xl. 6. It is more than probable they were old enough to discern between good and evil as their expression sheweth. Out of the city, Beth-el, which was the mother city of idolatry, 1 Kings xii 28, 29; Hos ii 15, v 8, where the prophets plained themselves, that they might bear witness against it, and dissuade the people from it though, it seems they had but small success there. Mocked him, with great obstinacy and vehemency as the conjugation of the Hebrew verb signifies, denoting both his person and ministry, and that from a profane contempt of the true religion, and a passionate love to that idolatry which they knew he opposed. Go up, go up into heaven whither thou pretendest thy Elisha is gone. Who didst not thou accompany thy friend and master to heaven. (As that the same Spirit would take thee up also that thou mightst not trouble us nor our Israel as Elisha did.) Thou bald head, so they mock his natural infirmity, which is a great sin. Go up, thou bald head, the repetition shows that he witness and earnestness, that it was no and ten nor rash slip of their tongue, but a scorn proceeding from a total impetu and hatred of God and his prophets.

24 And he turned back, and looked on them, and cursed them in the name of the Lord. And there came forth two she-bears out of the wood, and tare forty and two children of them.

Cursed them, nor was this punishment too great for the offence, if it be considered that these children were grown up to some maturity, (see on ver. 23,) that their mocking proceeded from a great malignity of mind against God, that they mocked not only a man and an ancient man, whose very age commanded reverence and a prophet, but even God himself, and that most admirable and glorious work of God, the assumption of Elisha into heaven which makes it in some degree resemble the sin against the Holy Ghost, that they might be guilty of many other heinous crimes, which God and the prophet knew, and were guilty of idolatry, which by God's law deserved death: that the idolatrous parents were punished in their children, and that if any of these children were more innocent and ignorant of what they said, God might have mercy upon their souls, and then this death was not a mere but a real blessing to them, that they were taken away from that wicked and idolatrous education, which was most likely to expose them not only to temporal, but to eternal destruction. In the name of the Lord, not from a carnal or unchristian passion, but by the motion of God's Spirit and by God's command and commission, as appears by God's concurrence with him, which God did partly for the terror and caution of all other idolaters and profane persons, who abounded in that place, partly to vindicate the honour and maintain the authority of his prophets, and particularly of Elisha, now especially in the beginning of his sacred ministry. And thus did begotten a confidence in him, that he durst venture to go into Beth-el after this was done, and such a terror in the Beth-elites that they durst not avenge themselves of him. Two she-bears, possibly robbed of their whelps, and therefore more fierce, Prov xvi 12, Hos xii 8; but certainly used by an extraordinary fury, which God raised in them for this purpose. Forty and two children, this Hebrew word signifies not only young children, but those also who are grown up to maturity, as Gen xxxii. 22, xxxiv. 4, xxxvii. 30, Ruth i. 5.

25 And he went from thence to mount Carmel, and from thence he returned to Samaria.

He went from thence, partly, to decrease the fury of the people of Beth-el; partly, that he might retire himself from men, and converse more freely with God, and so to himself more for the discharge of his employment; and partly, that he might visit the sons of the prophets who lived in that place, or near it. He returned to Samaria, in the direction of God's Spirit, for the service which he did, chap. iii. 11, &c.

CHAP. III.

Jehoram followeth the sin of Jeroboam, he, with Jehoshaphat and the king of Edom, goeth to battle against Moab. They, in distress for water, obtain it by magic, and a promise of victory. The Moabites, deceived by the colour of the water, coming to spoil, are overcome. The king of Moab, by sacrificing his eldest son, raises the siege, 26, 27.

NOW Jehoram the son of Ahab began to reign over Israel in Samaria the eighteenth year of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, and reigned twelve years.

The eighteenth year of Jehoshaphat. Quest How can this be true when Ahaziah, Jehoram's predecessor, who reigned two years, began his reign in Jehoshaphat's seventeenth year, 1 Kings xxii 51? Answer Either Ahaziah reigned the greatest part of two years, in wit of the seventeenth and eighteenth years of Jehoshaphat (parts of years being oft called years in the computation of times, both in Scripture and other authors,) and Jehoram began his reign towards the end of his eighteenth year, or Ahaziah reigned part of this two years with his father, and the rest after him.

2 And he wrought evil in the sight of the Lord, but not like his father, <sup>4 Heb. as his</sup> like his mother, for he put away the <sup>1 Kings</sup> furniture of Baal <sup>16, 21, 22</sup> that his father had made.

He put away the image of Baal, not from any principle of conscience (for that would have reached the calves also), but either because he was startled at the decided judgments of God inflicted upon his father's idolatry, or because he needed the help to subvert the Moabites, which he knew Baal could not do, or to gratify Jehoshaphat, whose help he meant to crave, with whom he knew he should never obtain without this, and for this reason, it seems Jezebel was willing to connive at it, as a trick of state.

3 Nevertheless he cleaved unto the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, which made Israel to sin, he departed not therefrom.

The sins of Jeroboam, i.e. the worship of the calves, which all the kings of Israel kept up as a wall of partition between their subjects and those of Judah. Thus he shows that his religion was overruled by his interest and policy.

4 ¶ And Mesha king of Moab was a sheepmaster, and rendered unto the king of Israel an hundred thousand <sup>4 Heb. 100,000</sup> lambs, and an hundred thousand rams, with the wool.

1 sheepmaster, a man of great wealth, (which is shewn thus and places consisted much in cattle,) which enriched and emboldened him to rebel against his sovereign lord.

5 But it came to pass, when Ahab <sup>1 Kings</sup> was dead, that the king of Moab rebelled against the king of Israel.

See of this chap. i. 1. It is here reported to make way for the following story. Ahaziah did not attempt the recovery of Moab either because he was a man of a low spirit and courage, or because his sickness, or the shortness of his reign, gave not opportunity for it.

6 ¶ And king Jehoram went out of Samaria the same time, and numbered all Israel.

Out of Samaria, to some place appointed for the rendezvous of his people. All Israel, to wit, such as were fit for war

7 And he went and sent to Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, saying, The king of Moab hath rebelled against me: wilt thou go with me against Moab to battle? And he said, I will go up: I am as thou art, my people as thy people, and my horses as thy horses.

Of which see 1 Kings xxii 4. He joins with him in this war partly because the war was very just in itself, and convenient for Jehoshaphat both in the general, that rebels and revolters should be chastised and suppressed: but the example should press into his dominions, and the Edomites should be heartily encouraged to revolt from him, as they did from his son: and in particular, that the Moabites should be humbled, who had with others invaded his land before this time: 2 Chron xx 1, and might do so again if they were not brought low, for which a fair opportunity was now offered to him, and partly because Jehoram had reformed some things, and Jehoshaphat hoped by this means to engage him to proceed further in that work.

8 And he said, Which way shall we go up? And he answered, The way through the wilderness of Edom.

He said, either Jehoshaphat, or rather Jehoram, for the following answer may seem to be Jehoshaphat's. The way through the wilderness of Edom, which though it was much the longer way, yet they thought it best, partly to secure the king or victory, of Edom, of whom they might have some suspicion from that passage: 2 Chron xx 22, and to carry both him and his soldiers along with them into the wilderness to get them further, and to prevent them from making war of division against Judah, whilst Jehoshaphat was on foot against Moab, and partly that they might afflict Moab on their weak side, and where they least expected them: God also thus disposed their hearts to make way for the following miracle.

9 So the king of Israel went, and the king of Judah, and they fetched a compass of seven days' journey: and there was no water for the host, and for the cattle that followed them.

The king of Edom, for the victory under Jehoshaphat: 1 Kings xxii 17 here called king, either because he was so called and accounted by his own people, or because that word is sometimes used for any prince or chief ruler: See Deut xxxiii 1, Judg xiii 1, 1 Sam 25 1. They fetched a compass, because they made a great army which could move but slowly, and they fetched a greater compass than was usual, for some advantage which they expected by it. There was no water, a frequent want in those hot and desert places, and now as it seems increased by the extraordinary heat and dryness of the season.

10 And the king of Israel said, Alas! that the Lord hath called these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab!

So he chides the calamity upon God, and not upon himself, who is guilty of the time and opportunity of it.

11 But Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the Lord, that we may enquire of the Lord by him? And one of the king of Israel's vaunts answered and said, Here is Elisha the son of Shaphat, which poureth water on the hands of Elijah.

As there was not a prophet of the Lord, who should have a led before, when they first undertook the expedition, as he did in a like case, 1 Kings xviii 1, and for that respect he now suffers, but better late than never. His affliction brings him to the remembrance of his former sin and present duty. Which poureth water on the hands of Elijah, i.e. who was his servant; this being an office of a servant, and this office was then necessary to Israel.

ites, because of the frequent wars which were required.

12 And Jehoshaphat said, The word of the Lord is with him. So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat and the king of Edom went down to him.

The word of the Lord is with him, we may imagine the mind of God by him, for he is a true prophet, which Jehoshaphat might easily understand, because being a good man, and a great favourer of the Lord's prophets, he would diligently inquire and many persons would be ready to inform him, of all things of that nature, and, amongst others, of Elijah's calling of Elisha by casting his prophetic mantle over him, 1 Kings xix 19, and of Elijah's translation, and Elisha's substitution in his place, and of the proof of it, 2 Kings ii 8, 11. Went down to him, to his tent, which was either in the camp or not far from it, for he went along with the army by the impulse of God's Spirit for that very occasion. They did not send for him, but went to him, that by giving him this honour they might more effectually engage him to give them his utmost assistance: and because they had heard that he was a man of a rugged temper and carriage, who therefore was to be sweetened, and so disposed to pity and relieve them.

13 And Elisha said unto the king of Israel, What have I to do with thee? get thee to the prophets of thy father, and to the prophets of thy mother. And the king of Israel and unto him, Nay, for the Lord hath called these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab.

What have I to do with thee? I desire to have no discourse or commerce with thee. Get thee to the prophets of thy father, and to the prophets of thy mother, i.e. to the calves, which thou didst thy father's example do to worship, and to the Baals, which thou didst yet worship by thy perjury, and to which thy heart is yet inclined, though thou hast shewed one of his signs for policy's sake. Get thee to the prophets of thy father, and to the prophets of thy mother, who are thou worshippist in thy perjury, how help thee in this distress? Nay, I pronounce these false prophets and Baals, and will seek to none but God for help. Thou hast no respect for me, yet pity this innocent king of Edom and good Jehoshaphat, who are involved in the same danger with myself.

14 And Elisha said, As the Lord of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, surely, were it not that I regard the presence of Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee.

Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, whom I reverence and love for his virtue and piety.

15 But now bring me a minstrel. And it came to pass when the minstrel played, that the hand of the Lord came upon him.

A minstrel, one that can sing and play upon a musical instrument. This he requires, that his mind, which had been disturbed and inflamed with holy anger at the sight of work, which he might be composed and cheered, and united with his heart, and that he might be excited to the more fervent prayer to God, and joyfully praising him, whereby he was prepared to receive the prophetic inspiration. For although prophecy be the gift of God, yet men might do some thing to hinder or further the reception of it, for which cause Paul bids Christians study to get the gift of prophecy, 1 Cor xiv 1. And for this very end the colleges of the prophets were created, wherein the sons of the prophets did use divers means to procure this gift, which also they did sometime receive, as we see 2 Kings ii 7, 5, and amongst other means, they used instruments of music to exhilarate their spirits, &c. 1 Sam x 5. Of the great power of music upon the affections, see the notes on 1 Sam xvi 16. The hand of the Lord, is the Spirit of prophecy, so called, to note that it was not from Elisha's temper of body or mind, that it was no natural nor acquired virtue.

inherent in him, but a singular gift of God, given to whom and when he pleased. This phrase is used also Ezek 1. 1, ch. 14, 22; Vul. 1 16 And he said, Thus saith the Lord, <sup>ch. 4. 2</sup> Make this valley full of ditches.

Which may receive the water, and hold it for the use of men and beasts.

17 For thus saith the Lord, Ye shall not see wind, neither shall ye see rain, yet that valley shall be filled with water, that ye may drink, both ye, and your cattle, and your beasts.

<sup>10</sup> It shall not see wind, any of those winds which commonly produce rain. And seeing is here put for perceiving or feeling, one sense for another, or for all as Gen 31. 1, compare A. L. in 12, Exod 22. 16 and elsewhere.

18 And this is but a light thing in the sight of the Lord: he will deliver the Moabites also into your hand.

This is but a small favour in comparison of what he intends to you for Jehoshaphat's sake. He will give you more than you ask or expect. For they were so weakened and discouraged with the great drought, that they had no hopes of proceeding in the offensive war, and thought it sufficient, if it were possible, to defend themselves from the Moabites, ver. 13.

19 And ye shall smite every fenced city, and every choice city, and shall fall every good tree, and stop all wells of water, and fmar every good piece of land with stones.

This is either, first, A command, and then the last clause is an exception from that law, Deut 20. 19, which was delivered by a prophet might be obeyed. And if his command seem severe, it must be considered that the Moabites were a very wicked people, perfidious, cruel, and liable enemies to God's people upon all occasions, and now in a state of rebellion. Or either secondly, A prediction of their success, that they should have so full and complete a victory, that they should be able to do all which was expressed.

20 And it came to pass in the morning when the meat offering was offered, that, behold, there came water by the way of Edom, and the country was filled with water.

When the meat offering was offered, i. e. the morning sacrifice, of which Exod 29. 18, 19 which doubtless was attended with the solemn prayers of God's people as the evening sacrifice unquestionably was. Yet in 1 there being the same reason for substance for both times. At this time Elisha joined his prayers with the prayers of God's people especially those at Jerusalem as Elisha had done at a like time 1 Kings 18. 18 and this time God chose to answer his and their prayers and to work this miracle, that thereby he might determine the contest between the Israelites and the Jews, about the place and manner of worship, and give a public testimony from his own for the Jews, and against the Israelites. There came water, miraculously produced out of so dry rock or even on the earth. By the way of Edom, from the country which was towards them.

21 ¶ And when all the Moabites heard that the kings were come up to fight against them, they gathered all that were able to put on armour, and upward, and stood in the border.

<sup>10</sup> Put on armour, Heb. to gird on a sword, i. e. a military cord, to which the sword was fastened. <sup>11</sup> In the border, or, in that border, to wit of their country which was towards Edom which way they understood the kings came. Here they stood probably to defend the passages into their country.

22 And they rose up early in the morning, and the sun shone upon the water, and the Moabites saw the water on the other side as red as blood.

Because, as the morning sun, which meeting with the vapours that arose from the earth, and shining through them upon the water, gave it a reddish tincture. God also so ordered things, that their senses and faculties were disturbed, or the air so disposed, that it might, from of this colour. And they might easily mistake this for blood, because they knew that that ground was generally dry, and without any trenches or streams of water, now especially in this dry season there being no noise of wind and rain ver. 17. And they might justly think that the three kings being divided in their religion and interests, and discontented for want of water, might fall into discussions, and heats and mutual slaughters, of which they had a late example, 2 Chron 21. 24, 25.

23 And they said, This is blood, the kings are surely slain, and they have smitten one another now therefore, Moab, to the spoil.

They were so highly confident, that they send no scouts, but march thither with their whole army and that in great disorder, wherein there was also a divine hand, strengthening them in their mistakes, and hardening them to their destruction.

24 And when they came to the camp of Israel, the Israelites rose up and smote the Moabites, so that they fled before them: but they went forward smiting the Moabites, even in their country.

They pursued them to their own country, and entered it with and after them, the passes which before the Moabites defended, being now open for them.

25 And they beat down the cities, and on every good piece of land cast every man his stone, and filled it, and they stopped all the wells of water, and felled all the good trees: only in Kir-haraseth left they the stones thereof, howbeit the slingers went about it, and smote it.

<sup>10</sup> Every man his stone, the stones which happily had been with great care and pains picked out of the land, and laid in heaps after the manner, they disposed again, and slew the people, who should have ch. 1 then again. Kir-haraseth was the royal and strong city of the Moabites Isa 16. 7. 11 into which the remnant of the Moabites were gathered, where also their king was with them. The stones thereof, the walls and buildings of this city only were left, other cities and in a manner their whole country, being utterly destroyed. The slingers, either, first, such as threw small stones against those that stood upon the walls to defend it, or rather, secondly, such as hung great stones against the walls to break them down, according to the manner of those times. Smote it, i. e. made breaches in the walls, by which they might enter into the city and take it.

26 ¶ And when the king of Moab saw that the battle was too sore for him, he took with him seven hundred men that drew swords, to break through even unto the king of Edom: but they could not.

That being unable to defend the city longer he sought make an escape, which he chose to do on the king of Edom's quarter, because he thought either that his was the weakest side, or that he would more willingly suffer him to escape, because he was not so hearty in the war as the rest, but only forced to it, and he might hereafter have some occasion of the king of Moab to join with him, as before he had 2 Chron 22. 22.

27 Then he took his eldest son that should have reigned in his stead, and offered him for a burnt offering upon the wall. And there was great indignation against Israel: and they departed from him, and returned to their own land.

His eldest son, either first, The king of Edom's son, whom in this expedition he took, and then sacrificed. Com, pare Amos ii. 1. But, first That place speaks of the king, not of the king's son, and of the burning of his bones. Not of the offering of a living man for a burnt offering. Secondly, This would not have made the besiegers to raise their siege, but to have followed it more warmly to revenge so barbarous an action. Thirdly, The following clause, that should have reigned in his stead agrees not so well to the Edomites, whose king was only Ichosaphat's vicar, and therefore his son had no right to succeed him, as it doth to the Moabites whose king was revolted from Israel, and intended to keep that kingdom to himself and children. Or rather, secondly, His own son, whom he sacrificed, partly to obtain the favour of his god, according to the manner of the Phœnicians and other people in grievous and public calamities, whereof we have manifest testimonies both in Scripture as Paul cvi. 37, Jerk. xx. 31, and in heathen authors, as Porphyrius, Plutarch and others, and partly to oblige the Israelites to quit the siege out of compassion, or as despatching to conquer (at least without greater loss of men than it was worth) him who was resolved to defend himself and city to the utmost extremity. Offered him for a burnt-offering upon the wall, that the besiegers might see it and be moved by it. Great indignation against Israel, or, great trouble or repentance upon Israel, i. e. the Jewish king and people (who was the first cause of the war, and had brought the rest into confederacy with him) were greatly afflicted and grieved for this barbarous action and resolved to prosecute the war no further, and so withdrew their forces, as also did their allies and returned to their several homes, which they were the more willing to do, because the kingdom and country of Moab were so ruined, both as to their men and cities or villages, and lands, that they were all secure of any great annoyance from him.

CHAP. IV.

Elisha multiplieth the widow's oil, 1—7. He is tolged by a Shunammite woman, who is barren, he promiseth her a son, which is born 8. 11, death, and is raised by Elisha, 18—37. A Gileadite healeth the deadly pottage, 38. 11, and feedeth one hundred men with twenty loaves and ears of corn 12—41.

NOW there cried a certain woman of the wives of the sons of the prophets unto Elisha, saying, Thy servant my husband is dead, and thou knowest that thy servant did fear the Lord: and the creditor is come to take unto him my two sons to be bondmen.

Let sons of the prophets, though they were wholly devoted to sacred employment, were not excluded from marriage, no more than the priests and Levites. Thy servant did fear the Lord, his poverty therefore was not procured by his idleness or prodigality, or rather wickedness, but by his piety, because he would not comply with the king's way of worshipping, and therefore lost all worldly advantages. To be bondmen, either to use them as his slaves, or to sell them to others according to the law, of which see Exod. xxi. 2, Lev. xxi. 3. Isai. l. 1. Matt. xviii. 25.

2 And Elisha said unto her, What shall I do for thee? tell me, what hast thou in the house? And she said, I have handmaid hath not any thing in the house save a pot of oil.

What shall I do for thee? how shall I relieve thee, who am myself poor? What hast thou in the house, which may contribute to the payment of thy debts, or, at least, to the satisfaction of thy creditors who may purchase deal favourably with thee through my mediation? Save a pot of oil, which was useful for other things about the service of God, and health, or delight, or ornament, and other uses of men. See Judg. ix. 9.

3 Then he said Go borrow thee vessels abroad of all thy neighbours, even empty vessels: for now will I crownd thee with them.

4 And when thou art come in, thou shalt shut the door upon thee and upon thy sons, and shalt pour out into all those vessels, and thou shalt set aside that which is full.

Shut the door upon thee, partly, that none may hinder thee from minding thy work of filling and removing the vessels, which will require attention and diligence; partly, that thou alone mayst enjoy the benefit of it; partly, lest any of thy creditors should break in upon thee, and seize upon thy borrowed vessels before they are filled; partly, that thy mind being freed from distraction, may be wholly employed in prayer and praising of God, and partly, that it may be manifest that this is the work of God alone. Pour out, out of the pot, in which God multiplied the oil from time to time.

5 So she went from him, and shut the door upon her and upon her sons, who brought the vessels to her, and she poured out.

6 And it came to pass, when the vessels were full, that she said unto her son, Bring me yet a vessel. And he said unto her, There is not a vessel more. And the oil stayed.

Unto her son, to one of them, for she had two, ver. 1. The oil stayed to teach us, that we should not waste any of God's good creatures, and that God would not work miracles unnecessarily.

7 Then she came and told the man of God. And he said, Go, sell the oil, and pay thy debt, and live thou and thy children of the rest.

Let us do justice to others, and then take care of thyself and children.

8 ¶ And it fell on a day, that Elisha passed to Shunem, where was a great woman, and she constrained him to eat bread. And so it was, that as oft as he passed by, he turned in thither to eat bread.

To Shunem, a city in Issachar near Mount Carmel, Josh. xix. 17, 18. whether the prophet frequently went. Was a great woman, for estate, or birth and quality. See Gen. xxiv. 31, 1 Sam. xvi. 2. She constrained him by her importunate desire. To eat bread, to take his repast there.

9 And she said unto her husband, Behold now, I perceive that this is an holy man of God, which passeth by us continually.

An holy man of God, a prophet as Judg. xiii. 6, and that of eminent holiness, by our kindness to whom we shall procure a blessing to our lives.

10 Let us make a little chamber, I pray thee, on the wall, and let us set for him there a bed, and a table, and a stool, and a candlestick: and it shall be, when he cometh to us, that he shall turn in thither.

Let us make a little chamber on the wall, that he may be free from the noise of family business, and enjoy that privacy which, I perceive, he desires for his prayers and meditations. He will not be troublesome or chargeable to us, he cares not for rich furniture or costly entertainment, and is content with bare necessities.

11 And it fell on a day, that he came thither, and he turned into the chamber, and lay there.

12 And he said to Gehazi his servant, Call this Shunammite. And when he had called her, she stood before him.

Before the prophet, in the door of his chamber, as it is said ver. 16. The relation seems to be a little perplexed, but may be thus conceived. It is in this verse recorded, in general, that the prophet sent Gehazi to call her, and that he came to him upon that call, then follows a particular description of the whole business, with all the circumstances, first, of the message with which Gehazi was sent when he went to call her, and of her answer to that message, ver. 14, and of Gehazi's conjecture thereupon, ver. 14.

and then of her coming to the prophet at his call, which is there repeated to make way for the following passages

13 And he said unto him, Say now unto her, Behold, thou hast been careful for us with all this care, what is to be done for thee? wouldst thou be spoken for to the king, or to the captain of the host? And she answered, I dwell among mine own people.

What is to be done for thee? wherewith shall I recompense all thy care and kindness to me and my servant? to the king, or to the captain of the host, with whom he justly had great power for his eminent service, chap. iii. I dwell among mine own people, I live in love and peace among my kindred and friends, nor have I any cause to complain of them, or to seek relief from higher powers.

14 And he said, What then is to be done for her? And Gehazi answered, Verily she hath no child, and her husband is old.

What then is to be done for her? hast thou observed any thing which she wants or desires? I or the prophet kept himself much in his chamber, whilst Gehazi went more freely about the house, as his occasions led him.

15 And he said, Call her. And when he had called her, she stood in the door.

Out of reverence humility and modesty waiting till he came to her, or called her further in to him.

16 And he said, About this season, according to the time of life, thou shalt embrace a son. And she said, Nay, my lord, thou man of God, do not lie unto thine handmaid.

According to the time of life, of which phrase see on Gen. xviii. 10. Do not lie unto thine handmaid, do not deceive me with vain hopes. She could not believe it for joy, and supposed the prophet might say this either for her trial, or from his own private judgment and affection, and not by warrant from God.

17 And the woman conceived, and bare a son at that season that Elisha had said unto her, according to the time of life.

18 ¶ And when the child was grown, it fell on a day, that he went out to his father to the reapers.

19 And he said unto his father, My head, my head. And he said to a lad, Carry him to his mother.

His head was grievously pained, which possibly came from the heat of the harvest season, to which he was exposed in the field.

20 And when he had taken him, and brought him to his mother, he sat on her knees till noon, and then died.

21 And she went up, and laid him on the bed of the man of God, and shut the door upon him, and went out.

Shut the door upon him, partly in hopes that this might contribute something to the child's resuscitation to life. He having in all probability had an account of the like miracle done by Elijah I Kings xv. 21, and partly that she might for the present conceal the death of the child, which if it had been known, would have filled her husband with grief and hindered her journey, and opened the mouths of the enemies of God and his prophets to blasphemy, whereas she had a confidence put into her by God, that this prophet could and would restore her son.

22 And she called unto her husband, and said, Send me, I pray thee, one of the young men, and one of the asses, that I may run to the man of God, and come again.

23 And he said, Wherefore wilt thou go to him to day? it is neither new moon nor sabbath. And she said, It shall be well.

New moon and sabbath were the chief and usual times in which they resorted to the prophets for instruction, for which he supposed she now went, not suspecting but that the child was well by this time. It shall be well, my going will not be troublesome to him, nor prejudicial to thee or me. Hitherto, peace be to thee, farewell, or, be contented, let me go.

24 Then she saddled an ass, and said to her servant, Drive, and go forward, slack not thy riding for me, except I bid thee.

25 So she went and came unto the man of God to mount Carmel. And it came to pass, when the man of God saw her afar off, that he said to Gehazi his servant, Behold, yonder is that Shunammite.

26 Run now, I pray thee, to meet her, and say unto her, Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband? is it well with the child? And she answered, It is well.

So it was in some respects, because it was the will of a wise and good God, and therefore best for her. Or, it shall be well, though the child be dead, I doubt not by God's blessing upon thy endeavours it shall live again, and do well. But he answers ambiguously, and briefly too, that she might sooner come to the prophet, and more fully open her mind to him.

27 And when she came to the man of God to the hill, she caught him by the feet. But Gehazi came near to thrust her away. And the man of God said, Let her alone, for her soul is vexed within her; and the Lord hath hid it from me, and hath not told me.

She caught him by the feet, she fell at his feet, and touched him as a most humble and earnest suppliant. Compare I Sam. xxi. 21, Matt. xxviii. 9. Withal, she intimated, what she durst not presume to express in words that she desired him to go along with her. Gehazi came near to thrust her away, judging this posture to be unfit for her, and offensive to his master. Let her alone, for her soul is vexed within her, disturb her not for this unbecoming posture is a sign of some extraordinary grief. The Lord hath hid it from me and hath not told me, whereby he signifies that what he knew or did was not by any virtue inherent and abiding in him, but only from God, who revealed to him only what it was when he pleased. Compare 2 Sam. vii. 1.

28 Then she said, Did I desire a son of my lord? did I not say, Do not deceive me?

This child was not given to me upon my immoderate desire, for which I might have justly been thus chastised, I desired it Gen. xxx. 1 compared with xxxv. 18, but was freely promised to me by thee in God's name, and from his special grace and favour, and therefore I trust with thee did I pray for it, and God design it as a blessing, and not as an affliction as now it proves, unless thou dost obtain the child for me a second time, which I know thou canst do, and I humbly beg thee to do. Do not deceive me, with vain hopes of a comfort that I should never have? And I had been much happier if I had never had it, than to lose it so quickly. Therefore thou art in some measure concerned to revive my dead hopes, and to continue to me the great blessing which thou hast procured.

29 Then he said to Gehazi, Gird up thy loins, and take my staff in thine hand, and go thy way; if thou meet any man, salute him not; and if any salute thee, answer him not again, and lay my staff upon the face of the child.

Gird up thy loins, tie up thy long garments about thy loins for expedition. See I Kings xviii. 46. Make no delays nor stops by the way, neither by words nor actions, but go with all possible speed. Compare Luke x 4. He requires this haste, that the miracle might be done secretly and speedily, before the child's death was divulged, which might cause many inconveniences. See on ver 21. I lay my staff upon the face of the child, for God can work a miracle by the most unlikely and contemptible means, as he did by a rod, Exod xiv 16, and a mantle, 2 Kings ii 8.

30 And the mother of the child said, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And he arose, and followed her.

I will not leave thee until thou goest home with me. For she had no great confidence in Gehazi nor was her faith so strong, as to think that the prophet could work so great a miracle at this distance, and by his staff, which possibly was one reason why this did no good. Compare Matt ix 18, xii 58, xvi 20.

31 And Gehazi passed on before them, and laid the staff upon the face of the child, but there was neither voice, nor hearing. Wherefore he went again to meet him, and told him, saying, The child is not awaked.

Neither voice nor hearing, i. e. neither speech nor sense, nor any sign of life, to wit, in the child, which disappointment might proceed from hence, that Elisha having changed his mind and yielded to her importunity to go with her did alter his course and not join his fervent prayers with Gehazi's action, but reserved them till he came thither. Not awaked, i. e. not revived, death being oft and fitly compared to a sleep, as Psal lxxvi 5. Dan xii 2 because of the resurrection which will at due time follow it and here followed speedily which makes the expression most proper in this place.

32 And when Elisha was come into the house, behold, the child was dead, and laid upon his bed.

33 He went in therefore, and shut the door upon them twain, and prayed unto the Lord.

Upon them twain, upon himself and the dead child, that he might pray to God without distraction and might more freely use all those gifts and means which he thought fit.

34 And he went up, and lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands: and he stretched himself upon the child, and the flesh of the child waxed warm.

He went up and lay upon the child, and although some ceremonial uncleanness might seem to be contracted by the touch of this dead body, yet that was justly to give place to a moral duty and to an action of so great piety and charity as this was especially when done by a prophet and by the instinct of God's Spirit who can dispense with his own laws. His mouth upon his mouth &c., one part upon another successively for the disproportion of the bodies would not permit it to be done together. Compare 1 Kings xvii 21. Act xxi 10. The flesh of the child waxed warm, not by any external heat which could not be transmitted to the child's body by such slight touches of the prophet's body, but by a moral heat proceeding from a principle of life, which was gradually infused into the child, and by degrees, vivified all the parts of his body.

35 Then he returned, and walked in the house to and fro, and went up, and stretched himself upon him, and the child sneezed seven times, and the child opened his eyes.

He walked in the house to and fro, he changeth his postures for his own necessity, to mount and walked to and fro exercising his mind in prayer to God and faith, for the accomplishment of this work. He sat up and stretched himself upon him; repeating his former actions to teach us not to be discouraged in our prayers, if we be not speedily answered, but to wait with patience, and continue, and be instant in prayer, till we obtain what we seek for. The child opened his eyes, so the work begun in the former verse is here perfected. Although miracles were for the most part done in an instant, yet sometimes they were done by degrees, as here, and 1 Kings xviii 44 45, Mark viii 21 25.

36 And he called Gehazi, and said, Call this Shunammite. So he called her. And when she was come in unto him, he said, Take up thy son.

Come in unto him. Heb. come to him, to wit, to the door of his chamber, where probably he met her with this joyful message.

37 Then she went in, and fell at his feet, and bowed herself to the ground, and took up her son, and went out.

She went in, into his chamber, and, after she had done him honour, to the bed where the child lay, whence she took him and went her way.

38 ¶ And Flisha came again to Gilgal, and there was a dearth in the land, and the sons of the prophets were sitting before him: and he said unto his servant, Set on the great pot, and seethe pottage for the sons of the prophets.

Flisha came again to Gilgal, where he came with Elijah chap ii 1, where was a school of the prophets, whom he designed to comfort concerning the present dearth and their other discouragements and to confirm in the profession and practice of religion and to instruct in the duties of the present season. Sitting before him at his feet, as scholars to be taught by him. See chap ii 3, Acts xxi 3. Seethe pottage, he provides no delicious meats, but mere necessaries to teach them the contempt of worldly delights.

39 And one went out into the field to gather herbs, and found a wild vine, and gathered thereof wild gourds his lap full, and came and shred them into the pot of pottage: for they knew them not.

A wild vine, a plant called coliquand da, whose gourds or leaves resemble the leaves of a vine, and are very bitter and pernicious to the eater.

40 So they poured out for the men to eat. And it came to pass, as they were eating of the pottage, that they cried out, and said, O thou man of God, there is death in the pot. And they could not eat thereof.

There is death in the pot, i. e. some deadly thing, which they gathered from its excessive bitterness, by which probably some of them might discern what it was.

41 But he said, Then bring meal. And he cast it into the pot, and he said, Pour out for the people, that they may eat. And there was no harm in the pot.

He cast it into the pot, together with the pottage which they had taken out of it. There was no harm in the pot, for meal took away that hurtful quality, not by its natural power which could do little in so short a time, but by the supernatural blessing of God upon it.

42 ¶ And there came a man from Baal-shalisha, and brought the man of God bread of the firstfruits, twenty loaves of barley, and full ears of corn in the husk thereof. And he said, Give unto the people, that they may eat.

Bread of the first fruits, which were the priest's dues Numb xviii 12, but these, and probably the rest of the priest's dues were usually brought by the pious Israelites according to their ability and opportunity, to the Lord's prophets, partly because they did a great part of the priest's office, and partly because they were not permitted to carry them to Jerusalem, and they might reasonably think that their circumstances, being extraordinary, would warrant their giving of them to extraordinary persons, and that those ceremonial institutions ought to give place to the greater [w]as of necessity and mercy to the Lord's prophets. And this passage seems to be noted here, not only on occasion of the following miracle, but also that by this one instance we might understand how so many schools of the prophets were supported. Twenty loaves, small loaves, as appears, both because one man brought them all so far, and because otherwise there had been no miracle here. Give unto the people, to wit, the sons of the prophets, who were then presented with him, ver. 38.

43 And his servitor said, 'What, should I set this before an hundred men?'
He said again, Give the people, that they may eat for thus saith the Lord 'They shall eat, and shall leave thereof'

44 So he set it before them, and they did eat, and left thereof, according to the word of the Lord

CHAP V

Naaman, by his captive maid's report, goeth to Elisha to be cured of his leprosy, 1-9 Elisha sends him a command to wash in Jordan he is angry, and disdaineth it his servants' advice he doth it, and is healed 10 11
He returneth with gifts to Elisha, who refuseth them he departs 15-19 Gehazi, Elisha's servant abusing his master's name unto Naaman taketh gifts from him is smitten with leprosy 20-27

NOW Naaman, captain of the host of the king of Syria, was a great man with his master, and ||honourable, because by him the Lord had given ||deliverance unto Syria he was also a mighty man in valour, but he was a leper

A great man with his master, in great power and favour with the king of Syria Honourable, highly esteemed both for his qualities, and success. By him the Lord had || deliverance unto Syria which expression he useth partly to mind the Israelites that all the hurt they had from the Syrians was from the Lord, who used them as his rod and gave them the successes against Israel which is recorded and partly to check that proud conceit which he was working, and afterwards more fully discovered it self in the Israelitish nation as it came, and providence, and goodness of God were wholly confined to themselves and not imparted to any other people

2 And the Syrians had gone out by companies, and had brought away captive out of the land of Israel a little maid and she waited on Naaman's wife

Come out by companies, making roads up to the land of Israel to rob and plunder after the manner of those times.
See 1 Sam xxx 8, 2 Kings xiii 21 xxiv 2 She waited on, Heb was before, i e stood before her, or ministered to her Compare Deut. i 38

3 And she said unto her mistress,
Would God my lord were with the prophet that is in Samaria for he would recover him of his leprosy

In Samaria, either first, In the kingdom of Samaria Or secondly, In the city of Samaria where he was when he was taken, or where he commonly resided though he went to other places, as need required He would recover him of his leprosy, or, take him away (as this Hebrew verb is used, Gen xxx. 23, Zeph i 2) from his leprosy, i e take away his leprosy from him

4 And one went in, and told his lord, saying, Thus and thus said the maid that is of the land of Israel

One of Naaman's servants hearing this, went in and told it to Naaman, and he to the king of Syria which implied Or, And he went in, &c, i e Naaman, mentioned ver 1, hearing this from his wife, told it to the king of Syria, as the next words intimate

5 And the king of Syria said, Go to, go, and I will send a letter unto the king of Israel And he departed and took with him ten talents of silver, and six thousand pieces of gold, and ten changes of raiment

The king of Israel, Jehoram the son of Shab chap iii 1
I will send a letter unto the king of Israel desiring him to obtain this favour from the prophet Ten talents of silver, and six thousand pieces of gold, partly for the charges of his journey, and partly for presents to the prophet, or others, as he saw fit

6 And he brought the letter to the king of Israel, saying, Now when this letter is come unto thee, behold, I have therewith sent Naaman my servant to thee, that thou mayest recover him of his leprosy

I e Procure his recovery by the means of Elisha, ver 3, i, whom thou mayst command to use his utmost skill and power herein

7 And it came to pass, when the king of Israel had read the letter, that he rent his clothes, and said, Am I God, to kill and to make alive that this man doth send unto me to recover a man of his leprosy? wherefore consider, I pray you, and see how he seeketh a quarrel against me

He rent his clothes either in detestation of his blasphemy in giving God's perfection to him, or rather, for grief arising from a suspicion and fear that the Syrian made this only a pretence for the war which he designed against him Am I God to kill and to make alive? he expressed it thus because leprosy is a kind of degree of death Numb xii 12 and he thought it as impossible to cure it as to raise the dead See how he seeketh a quarrel against me for not doing what he requires which he knows impossible for me to do

8 ¶ And it was so when Elisha the man of God had heard that the king of Israel had rent his clothes that he sent to the king, saying, Wherefore hast thou rent thy clothes? let him come now to me and he shall know that there is a prophet in Israel

Elisha was not so much moved with Elisha either because the suddenness of the news made him forget it or because he hated him and so not to beg any thing from him Where fore hast thou rent thy clothes? there was no just occasion for the doing so

9 So Naaman came with his horses and with his chariot, and stood at the door of the house of Elisha

Waiting for Elisha's coming to him

10 And Elisha sent a messenger unto him saying, Go and wash in Jordan seven times, and thy flesh shall come again to thee, and thou shalt be clean

Elisha sent a messenger, partly, to try and examine Naa-man's faith and obedience partly, for the honour of his rulership and ministry that it might appear he sought not his own glory and profit in his miraculous performances, but only God's honour, and the good of men, and partly, for the discovery of the almighty power of God that could by such slight means cure so desperate a disease Thy flesh shall come again, which was in great part consumed by the leprosy See Numb xii 12

11 But Naaman was wroth, and went away, and said, Behold, ¶ I thought, He will surely come out to me, and stand, and call on the name of the Lord his

<sup>Heb. more up and down.</sup> God, and strike his hand over the place, and recover the leper

Naaman was wroth, supposing himself despised and mocked by the prophet. Herein he gives an example of the perverseness of mankind who are apt to prefer their own fancies before God's appointments. Over the place, over or upon the affected part where the leprosy is without which it seemed to him ridiculous to expect a cure.

<sup>Heb. Amma</sup> 12 Are not <sup>Heb. Amma</sup> Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel? may I not wash in them, and be clean? So he turned and went away in a rage.

Is there not as great a virtue in them to this purpose? But he should have considered that the cure was not to be wrought by the water, but by the power of God who might use what means and methods of cure he pleased.

13 And his servants came near, and spake unto him, and said, My father, if the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldest thou not have done it? how much rather then, when he saith to thee, Wash, and be clean?

My father, or, our father, so they call him both to show their reverence and affection to him, and to mitigate his exasperated mind.

14 Then went he down, and dipped himself seven times in Jordan, according to the saying of the man of God: and his flesh came again like unto the flesh of a little child, and he was clean.

15 ¶ And he returned to the man of God, he and all his company, and came, and stood before him: and he said, Behold now I know that there is no God in all the earth, but in Israel: now therefore, I pray thee, take a blessing of thy servant.

He returned to the man of God to give him thanks, and a recompence for his great kindness. Thou hast seen that there is no God in all the earth but in Israel by this wonderful work I am fully convinced that the God of Israel is the only true God, and that other gods are but impotent idols. I blessing a thankful acknowledgment. See on Gen. xxxiii. 11.

16 But he said, As the Lord liveth, before whom I stand, I will receive none. And he urged him to take it, but he refused.

Not that he thought it simply unbecoming to receive gifts or presents, which he did receive from others chap. iv. 32, but because of the special circumstance of the present case, this being much for the honour of the true God and religion that the Syrians should see the generous piety, and charity and goodness of his ministers and servants, and how much they despised all that worldly wealth and glory which the priests and prophets of the Gentiles so greedily sought after, and that hee by Naaman might be much confirmed in that good opinion which he had embraced, and others might be brought to love and follow it.

17 And Naaman said, Shall there not then I pray thee, be given to thy servant two mules' burden of earth? for thy servant will henceforth offer neither burnt offering nor sacrifice unto other gods, but unto the Lord.

Two mules' burden of earth i. e. where with I may make an altar of earth as was used by Ex. xxv. 24. He desires the earth of this land because he thought it more holy and acceptable to God, and proper for service, or because he would by this token profess and declare his conjunction with the Israelites in the worship of God, and constantly put himself in mind of his obligation to stick at God from whose hand this was taken. And as he might have have taken this earth without asking any leave, yet he rather decares it from the prophet's gift, as believing that he who had put so great a virtue into the waters of Israel, could put as much into the earth of Israel, and make it as useful and beneficial to him in a better way. And these thoughts, though extravagant and groundless, yet were excusable in a heathen and a novice, who was not yet thoroughly instructed in the true religion.

18 In this thing the Lord pardon thy servant, that when my master goeth into the house of Rimmon to worship there, and he leaneth on my hand, and I bow myself in the house of Rimmon when I bow down myself in the house of Rimmon, the Lord pardon thy servant in this thing.

Rimmon, a Syrian idol, called here by the LXX. Remphan and Acts vii. 43, Remphan. On my hand, or, arm as that word sometimes signifies, both in Scripture and other authors, or, shoulder, upon which the king leaned, either for state or for support. Compare chap. vii. 2. When I bow down myself in the house of Rimmon, not in honour to the idol which I do hate, it shall there, openly renounce, but only in compliance with the king's infirmity and convenience, who cannot well how it I stand upright. The Lord pardon thy servant in this thing because there seemed to be an appearance of evil in this action, though done with an honest mind he desired the prophet's prayers that God would not charge it upon him as idolatry, nor be displeased with him for that practice.

19 And he said unto him, Go in peace. So he departed from him <sup>Heb. a little piece of ground as Gen. 14: 16</sup> in peace.

Go in peace these words may contain an answer, either first to his last petition ver. 18, and so the sense may be this. Be not too solicitous about this matter, go, and the peaceable spirit of God go along with thee. So the prophet both prays to God to bless and direct him in this and all other things, and intimates that God would do so. Or secondly to the former ver. 17, I trouble not thyself about any of our earth but on to thy own land, and I wish thee from God and doubt not but God will give thee, peace, i. e. his favour and other blessings which are oft continued on this word if thou dost persist in this religion which thou hast now received. Or rather this is only a farewell salutation, wherewith the prophet dismisseth him without any further answer to his requests or instruction about his doubt, which he forbore by the motion of God's Spirit, which sometimes gives and sometimes denies instructions to persons or people, as he thinks fit. See Acts xvi. 6, 7. And the prophet by the Spirit's direction might forbear to give him particular answers, partly because these matters were not of such importance as to concern the essence or foundation of religion, and partly because he was yet but a novice and not able to be in all truths, which was for a time the condition of the apostles. John xvi. 12, nor fit to be pressed to the practice of the hardest duties which Christ himself thought not convenient for his disciples, Matt. ix. 17.

¶ 17 And therefore he it present accepts of his protestation of the true, and his renunciation of the false religion, and of this declaration, that what he did in the temple of Rimmon should not now be (as he had formerly intended and practised) a religious action towards the idol, but only a civil respect to his master. And what was necessary for him to know further about the lawfulness or unlawfulness of that action, the prophet might take another and a more convenient time to inform him.

20 ¶ But Gehazi, the servant of Elisha the man of God said, Behold, my master hath spared Naaman this Syrian, in not receiving at his hands that which he brought: but, as the Lord liveth, I will run after him, and take somewhat of him.

Naaman this Syrian, a stranger and one of that nation who are the implacable enemies of God's people, whom the reforming my master should not have had so much regard to as to the Lord's prophets, who better deserved and more needed the money which he offered than Naaman himself did As the Lord liveth, he swears, that he might have some pretence for the action to which he had bound himself by his oath, not considering that to swear to do any wicked action is so far from excusing it, that it makes it much worse.

21 So Gehazi followed after Naaman.

And when Naaman saw him running after him, he lighted down from the chariot to meet him, and said, Is all well?

He lighted down from the chariot to meet him, thereby testifying his great respect to the prophet his master.

22 And he said, All is well. My master hath sent me, saying, Behold, even now there be come to me from mount Ephraim two young men of the sons of the prophets: give them I pray thee, a talent of silver, and two changes of garments.

This was a very unlikely story, but Naaman was not willing to question it: but glad of the opportunity of showing his gratitude to the prophet.

23 And Naaman said, Be content, take two talents. And he urged him, and bound two talents of silver in two bags, with two changes of garments, and laid them upon two of his servants, and they bare them before him.

He urged him, who at first refused it upon a pretence of modesty and obedience to his master's command.

24 And when he came to the tower, he took them from their hand, and bestowed them in the house: and he let the men go, and they departed.

The tower, a city and a high place which he chose for that purpose, and where possibly he had and kept other things which he had got by such like frauds and artifice. He let the men go before they came within sight of his master.

25 But he went in, and stood before his master. And Elisha said unto him, Whence comest thou, Gehazi? And he said, Thy servant went for no whit.

26 And he said unto him, Went not mine heart with thee, when the man turned again from his chariot to meet thee? Is it a time to receive money, and to receive garments, and olivets, and vineyards, and sheep, and oxen, and menservants, and maid-servants?

Went not mine heart with thee did not his mind become enlightened by God's Spirit discern what thou saidst and didst? Is it a time? Was this a time for this return? I had but mildly and obsequiously refused his gifts for great reasons, of which see on ver. 16, and now thou hast given him cause to think that I was a cursed and wicked impostor who vain-gloriously refused in public what I unwarily and greedily desired, and sought only a better place and opportunity to take: and that all our religion is but in appearance: and that the God who owns such a vile wretch for his prophet, as thou hast represented me to him is unworthy and righteous as we pretend. Garments, and olive yards, &c. which Gehazi intended to purchase with this money, and therefore the prophet came to them to inform him that he exactly knew by Divine inspiration, not only Gehazi's outward actions, but even his most secret intentions.

27 The leprosy therefore of Naaman shall cleave unto thee, and unto thy seed for ever. And he went out from his presence a leper as white as snow.

And unto thy seed for ever is a long time, generations, or for a long time as that word is usually, and as may be thought by comparing this with Exod. xxi. 7, xxiv. 7. He went out from his presence, being so daunted with the severity of his guilt, and shame, and miserie, and banished from the company of others by God's law, Lev. xiii. and xiv. A leper as white as snow, which is the worst kind of leprosy, and noted by physicians to be incurable. See Exod. iv. 6, Numb. xii. 10, 2 Chron. xxi. 19, 20. Nor was this punishment too severe for Gehazi's wickedness, which was great and various, horrid covetousness, which is idolatry, the profanation of God's name by a wicked oath, downright theft, deliberate and impudent lying, and that to a prophet, which was in a manner a lying to the Holy Ghost, like theirs, Acts v. 3, a desperate contempt of God's omniscience, justice, and holiness, a horrible reproach fastened upon the prophet, and his religion, and a malicious scandal given to Naaman and all other Syrians that might hear of it.

CHAP. VI.

Elisha, giving leave to the young prophets to enlarge their dwellings, convert iron to swim, 1-7. He speaketh the king of Syria's counsel, 8-12, who sendeth Syrians to apprehend him: he is preserved by angels: they are smitten with blindness, are brought into Samaria, and dismissed in peace, 13-23. Samaria is besieged, and brought to such extreme want and famine, that women eat their own children, 24-29. The king sendeth to slay Elisha, 30-33.

AND the sons of the prophets said unto Elisha, Behold now, the place where we dwell with thee is too strait for us.

The sons of the prophets, either at Beth-el, or Jericho; or rather at Gilgal, as may seem from its nearness to the river of Jordan, ver. 2. With thee, on, before thy face, i. e. under thy inspection and direction, where thou dost frequently dwell with us. Or to thy face, which may be joined with the following words, and so the sense may be thus, It is apparent to thy view that this place is too strait for us: Is too strait for us, the number of the prophets increasing by the gracious providence of God, and by the ministry and miracles of Elisha and Elisha.

2 Let us go, we pray thee, unto Jordan, and take thence every man a beam, and let us make us a place there, where we may dwell. And he answered, Go ye.

Unto Jordan i. e. to the woods near Jordan, which were near to them. See on ver. 1. A beam, i. e. a piece of timber for the building. Hence it may be gathered that although the sons of the prophets principally devoted themselves to religious exercise, such as prayer, and praising of God, and the studying of God's word, and instructing of others, and waiting for Divine revelations, yet they did sometimes employ themselves about manual arts, which now they might be forced to, through the iniquity of the times.

3 And one said, Be content, I pray thee, and go with thy servants. And he answered, I will go.

4 So he went with them. And when they came to Jordan, they cut down wood.

5 But as one was felling a beam, the ax head fell into the water: and he cried, and said, Alas, master! for it was borrowed.

The ax head fell into the water, the iron fell from the wood. Alas, master! for it was borrowed he was the most concerned party because he was now forced to be idle and useless to them in the common work, and partly because it was his friend's loss, who now was likely to suffer for his kindness, and as justice obliged him to restore it, so his poverty disabled him from it.

6 And the man of God said, Where fell it? And he shewed him the place. And he cut down a stick, and cast it in thither, and the iron did swim.

7 Therefore said he, Take it up to thee. And he put out his hand, and took it.

8 ¶ Then the king of Syria warred against Israel, and took counsel with his servants, saying, In such and such a place <sup>10r, recumpling</sup> shall be my camp

Further I will send my forces, to surprise some place, or to lie in ambush where the king or his people were to pass, ver 9

9 And the man of God sent unto the king of Israel, saying, Beware that thou pass not such a place, for thither the Syrians are come down

10 And the king of Israel sent to the place which the man of God told him and warned him of, and saved himself there, not once nor twice

Sent to the place either spies to try whether the prophet spake truth, or rather, soldiers to secure the place and passage designed. Saved himself, either his person when he was to pass that way, or his people, or places of importance. Not once nor twice but much more frequently 11 Therefore the heart of the king of Syria was sore troubled for this thing, and he called his servants, and said unto them, Will ye not shew me which of us is for the king of Israel?

12 And one of his servants said, ¶ None, my lord, O king, but Elisha, the prophet that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel the words that thou speakest in thy bed-chamber

13 ¶ And he said, Go and spy where he is, that I may send and fetch him. And it was told him, saying, Behold, he <sup>10m, 17</sup> is in Dothan

That I may send and fetch him, for though I cannot conceal my designs from him yet I may possibly take him by force, his power being, I doubt not, much inferior to his knowledge. Dothan a city near Shechem, Gen xxxv 17 and not far from Samaria

14 Therefore sent he thither horses, and chariots, and a great host, and they came by night, and compassed the city about

15 And when the servant of the man of God was risen early, and gone forth, behold, in host compassed the city both with horses and chariots. And his servant said unto him, Alas, my master! how shall we do?

The servant having been with him but a little time even since Gehazi's dismission had not yet seen any experiments of his great power, or if he had, he might easily be shaken upon a great and sudden a danger. Gone forth, either out of the gates of the city, where he might see them, or out of his house into the streets of the city, where he might learn thus by the common fame and tumult of the people

16 And he answered, Fear not for they that be with us are more than they that be with them

17 And Elisha prayed, and said, Lord, I pray thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man, and he saw, and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha

That he may see, that by some visible appearance he may see the invisible guard of angels which compass and defend us. Chariots of fire, which is useful both for defence to those that are surrounded by it, and offence to the enemies who shall attempt to break through it. Round about Elisha either the mountain was round about the city, and therefore round about Elisha, who was within it, or he saw in a vision Elisha upon the mountain encompassed with fiery horses and chariots

18 And when they came down to him, Elisha prayed unto the Lord, and said, Smite this people, I pray thee, with blindness. And he smote them with blindness according to the word of Elisha

When they came down to him, either in the city, into which they easily got admission, when they declared that the only end of their coming was to take Elisha, or in the field without the city, whither he went to meet them. He smote them with blindness, not with a total blindness, that they could see nothing for then they would not have followed him, but with a partial blindness, that they could not distinctly discern the man they sought, which might be by some alteration made by God in their brain, or in the air. See the notes on Gen xix 11

19 ¶ And Elisha said unto them, This is not the way, neither is this the city, to wit where I follow me, and I will bring you to the man whom ye seek. But he led them to Samaria

This is not the way, neither is this the city, to wit where you will find the man for whom you seek, which was very true, because he was now come out of the city, and if they had gone on in that way into the city, they had found that Elisha was gone thence. There is indeed some ambiguity in his speech and an intension to deceive them, which hath ever been esteemed lawful in the state of war, as appears from the use of stratagems. I will bring you to the man whom ye seek, and so he did though not in such manner as they expected and desired. He led them to Samaria, which seemed to them to be some small and ordinary city, then seems to be still deluded by a Divine operation

20 And it came to pass, when they were come into Samaria, that Elisha said, Lord, open the eyes of these men, that they may see. And the Lord opened their eyes, and they saw, and, behold, they were in the midst of Samaria

21 And the king of Israel said unto Elisha, when he saw them, My father, shall I smite them? shall I smite them?

Elisha had doubtless set notice of his intentions to the king of Israel that he might accordingly prepare himself. My father, now he gives him this title of reverence and affection, because of great and present benefit he received from him, though otherwise he hated him, and would not hearken to his counsels. Shall I smite them? the repetition of the question shows his great desire to smite them, and that with utter destruction

22 And he answered, Thou shalt not smite them, wouldest thou smite those whom thou hast taken captive with thy sword and with thy bow? set bread and water before them, that they may eat and drink, and go to their master

It is against the laws of humanity, and custom of war to kill captives though thou thyself hast taken them with thy own sword and bow, which may seem to give thee some colour of right to destroy them, but much more unworthy will it be in cold blood to kill those, whom not thy arms but God's miraculous providence, hath put into thy hands. Set bread and water before them, i.e. give them meat and drink which may refresh and strengthen them for their journey, which was an action of singular pity and charity, in doing good to their enemies, which was much to the honour of the true religion, and of no less prudence that hereby the hearts of the Syrians might be both mollified towards the Israelites, and afraid to oppose that people who had such an invincible Protector

23 And he prepared great provision for them, and when they had eaten and drunk, he sent them away, and they went to their master. So

He sent them away, refreshed, but disarmed, as is most probable. The bands of Syria came no more, either 1. In such a manner, to wit, in small bands, or companies, which might be entrapped, as these had been, but then next attempt was by an open and solemn war, and a conjunction of all their forces, which they still ridiculously concerted would be too hard for the king, and prophet and God of Israel, notwithstanding their multiplied experiences to the contrary. Or, 2 For some considerable time, until the terror of these examples was got out of their minds.

He whom Ahab wickedly and foolishly spared, 1 Kings xv 42 who now comes to requite Ahab's kindness, and to fulfil that Divine prediction. Ben-hadad was a name very frequent among the kings of Syria, 1 Kings xv 18 &c., 2 Kings xiii 3, 24 if not common to them all. See Jer xlix 27, Amos i 4

25 And there was a great famine in Samaria and, behold, they besieged it, until ass's head was sold for fourscore pieces of silver, and the fourth part of a cab of doves dung for five pieces of silver

Pieces of silver supposed to be shckels, and the common shckel being valued at fifty pence of English money, this amounts to five pounds, a vast price especially for that which had on it so little meat and that unwholesome and unclean by law Lev xi 3, though necessity might seem to excuse their violation of that law. A cab, a measure containing twenty four eggs. Doves dung, which they used not for fire (for he is speaking here only of the scarcity of food,) but for food, which if it seem incredible, it must be considered first, That famine hath constrained people to eat things as improper and unfit for nourishment as this is dry leather and man's dung as is implied Isa xxxv 12 and affirmed by grave historians. Secondly That some creatures do usually eat the dung of others. Thirdly That doves' dung though it be better than ordinary might in some respects be fitter for nourishment than other as being made of the best and purest grains and having some moisture in it &c. Fourthly That this Hebrew word being of an obscure and doubtful signification and nowhere else used may be and is by learned men otherwise rendered and understood, either, first, of the corn which is found in the crops of doves, or, secondly, of the ruins and other remains of crops of doves, or rather, thirdly, of a sort of cheese or curd, which in the Arabic language (which is near akin to the Hebrew, and from which many words are explained) is called doves' dung, for this was a food much in use amongst the poorer Israelites and was by all esteemed a very coarse food and therefore fit to be pined with an ass's head, and a cab was the usual measure of all sorts of grains and fruits of that sort.

26 And as the king of Israel was passing by upon the wall, there cried a woman unto him, saying, Help, my lord, O king

Passing by upon the wall, to give necessary order for the defence of the city against assaults and to see if the several guards were watchful and diligent and if his directions were executed, and to observe the motions of the enemy.

<sup>1 Or, Let not the LORD see thee</sup> 27 And he said, ¶ If the LORD do not help thee, whence shall I help thee? out of the barnfloor, or out of the winepress?

If the Lord do not help thee, or let not God help thee as some both ancient and late interpreters render the words. So they are words of impatience and rage, and a formal curse, wishing that God would not help her, as he could not, as Josephus amongst others, understand it, which agrees too well with the character of the man, an infidel, and an idolater, and a wicked man and at this time in a great rage, as appears from ver 31. Or they may be rendered thus, No, (as this Hebrew participle is sometimes used, as Job xx 17; Psal cxviii 5, xli 2, l 3, Prov iii 3, 25, xxxi 4,) let the Lord help thee. So it may be taken, either, first, As a direction. No; do not cry to me but to God, for help God help thee, for I cannot. Or rather secondly, As a profane scoff. No, come not to me but go to him to whom Elisha directs you, pray to the Lord you see how ready he is to help you by his suffering you to come to this extremity, wait upon God for relief as Elisha adviseth me, but I will wait no longer for him ver 33, and I will take a course with Elisha for thus abusing both me and my people with vain hopes. Or thus The Lord (on whom thou sittest thou and I are commanded to wait for help) will not help thee, as he could easily do and would do, if he were so good as Elisha pretends whence then shall I help thee? Out of the barn-floor, or out of the wine press? Dost thou ask of me corn or wine which I want for myself?

28 And the king said unto her, What aileth thee? And she answered, This woman said unto me, Give thy son, that we may eat him to day, and we will eat my son to morrow

29 So we boiled my son, and did eat him and I said unto her on the next day, Give thy son, that we may eat him and she hath hid her son

We boiled my son and did eat him, a dreadful judgment, threatened to them in case of their apostasy, Dent xxviii 56 57 in which they were now deeply plunged. Compare 1 Pet x 10. She hath hid her son, either that she might eat him alone, or rather that she might save him from death her bowels yearning towards him and her hunger being in great measure satisfied.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, when the king heard the words of the woman, that he rent his clothes, and he passed by upon the wall, and the people looked, and, behold, he had sackcloth within upon his flesh

He rent his clothes, partly in grief for such a horrid fact and partly through indignation at the prophet ver 31. The people were in great numbers upon the wall either to defend the city or rather to seek relief from the soldiers, for when provisions the king doubtless took special care, as it was necessary for the preservation of the place. Within upon his flesh, under his inner garments, in token of his sorrow and with a pretence of humiliation which he would show by outward signs as his father Ahab had done not without some advantage to himself, 1 Kings xxi 27 -29

31 Then he said, ¶ God do so and more also to me, if the head of Elisha the son of Shaphan shall stand on him this day

If I do not see my day take his head and life. This wretched and partial piece overlooks his own great and various sins, and, amongst others his obstinate cleaving to the idolatry of the calves, and the whoredoms and witcheries of his mother Jezebel 2 Kings x 24, and the wickedness of his people, which was the true and proper cause of this and all their calamities, and lays the blame of all upon Elisha, either supposing that he who had the spirit of Elijah resting upon him, had brought this famine by his prayers, as Elisha had formerly done 1 Kings xxi 1, or because he had encouraged them to withstand the Syrians, by promising them help from God in due time; or because he would not, by his intercession to God and the working of a miracle, deliver them from these calamities, as he easily could have done. But he did not consider that the prophet could not work what miracles and when they pleased but only as far as God saw fit whose time was not yet come other what it was Elisha's interest as well as theirs to be freed from this distress.

32 But Elisha sat in his house, and the elders sat with him, and the king sent a man from before him but ere the messenger came to him, he said to the elders, See ye how this son of a murderer hath sent to take away mine head?

In his house, in the house where he lodged, for he had no house of his own, having forsaken it when he followed Elijah, 1 Kings xix 20, 21. The elders, so they might be called, either first from their age, or rather secondly, from their office, which was either ecclesiastical or civil, so they were either the sons of the prophets, or rather, some godly men who were then in some power and office, either in the court or army or city, as may seem probable from what he requires of them. And though Jehoram was a wicked king, and most of his officers probably like himself, yet there were some of them, whom Elisha's holy life and powerful ministry, and glorious miracles and the great and public benefits procured by him, had won to God, and to the true religion at least to the profession of it, among which Jehu might be one, and these were here sitting with him, either to receive comfort and counsel from him in this distressed time, or rather to solicit him to use his power with God for their relief, which accordingly he doth, and in compliance with them, not out of any fear of the king (from which he very well knew by frequent experience and certain assurance, that God both could and would deliver him) he gives the following answer, chap vii 1. I am from before him, or, one of them who stood before his face, one of his guard, or some other officer to take away his head, as it follows. He said to the elders, being admonished by God of his danger. This son of a murderer, the genuine son of that wicked Ahab the murderer of the Lord's prophets, 1 Kings xxi 1, xxi 9, whose son he is not by birth only, but also by his manners and bloody disposition. Compare John viii 44. This expression may seem very harsh and unfit, nor is it to be drawn into maturation by others, but it must be considered that he was an extraordinary prophet, entrusted with a power in some sort superior to that of Jehoram, and had authority to control and rebuke him in the name of the King of kings. To take away mine head, to kill me before he hear what I have to say. Hold him fast, not the king but the messenger who was first mentioned, that he may not break in upon me, and take away my life before the king comes. Is not the sound of his master's feet behind him? you shall not need to hold him long for the king is just at his heels, coming, as is probable, either to recall his rash and furious sentence, or at least to debate the matter with the prophet, and to procure relief.

33 And while he yet talked with them, behold, the messenger came down unto him: and he said, Behold, this evil is of the Lord, what should I wait for the Lord any longer?

Into him, to wit, to the door where also we see to understand that he was held fast, that he could not come to the prophet till the king came, as the prophet had commanded them to do. He said, either first the messenger, in the king's name and words. Or secondly, the king himself, who though not here named may be presumed to be present both by the prophet's prediction of his speedy coming, and by the presence of the lord on whose hand the king leaned, chap vii 23. This evil, this dreadful famine, which is now so extreme that women are forced to eat their own children. Is of the Lord, he hath inflicted it, and (for aught that I see) he will not remove it. Thus he lays all the blame upon God, not, as he ought, upon his own and his mother's wickedness, which provoked God who doth not willingly afflict to send this heavy judgment upon him. What should I wait for the Lord any longer? thou biddest me wait upon thee for help, but I perceive I may wait long enough before thy assistance comes, I am weary with waiting, I can wait no longer.

CHAP VII

Elisha propheseth incredible plagues in Samaria, and the death of a great lord, who is not but the prophecy 1, 2. Four lepers visit the camp of the Syrians and bring tidings of their flight, being hustled away by God, 3—11.

The king sendeth spies, who confirm this report, and he spoileth their tents Great plenty. The lord on whose hand the king leaned is trodden upon by the people, and dieth, 12—20.

THE LORD said, Hear ye the word of the Lord. Thus saith the Lord, To-morrow about this time shall a measure of fine flour be sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, in the gate of Samaria.

Elisha said, either to the messenger, to be reported to the king, or rather to the king, being then come to him, as it is expressed, ver 18. and to his counsellors, who were come with him, ver 2. Thus saith the Lord, the Lord whom you have so highly offended, and at present despise and refuse to wait upon, of his own mere grace and bounty hath sent you the glad tidings of your deliverance. A measure, Heb. seah, a measure containing 6 ephas, or 112 egg shells, or about a peck and a pottle of our measure. He sold for a shekel, compare this with chap vi 25.

2 ¶ Then a lord on whose hand the king leaned answered the man of God, and said, Behold, if the Lord would make windows in heaven, might this thing be? And he said, Behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt not eat thereof.

On whose hand the king leaned, when he walked. See chap vi 18. If the Lord would make windows, through which he could run down corn as once he did manna. Shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt not eat thereof, a just punishment for such contemptuous unbelief, whereby he made not only the prophet but even God himself, (to whose name it was evident Elisha said and did this and other things,) a liar.

3 ¶ And there were four leprous men at the entering in of the gate: and they said one to another, Why sit we here until we die?

At the entering in of the gate, to wit, of the city, out of which the Jews were shut by virtue of God's curse, Lev xiii 46, xiv 3. either the dwelling place of the lepers was near the gate, or they were come very near the gate, for fear of the Syrians.

4 If we say, we will enter into the city, then the famine is in the city, and we shall die there: and if we sit still here we die also. Now therefore come, and let us fall unto the host of the Syrians: if they save us alive we shall live, and if they kill us we shall but die.

5 And they rose up in the twilight, to go into the camp of the Syrians: and when they were come to the uttermost part of the camp of Syria, behold, there was no man there.

In the twilight, in the evening twilight, as appears from ver 9 12.

6 ¶ I or the Lord had made the host of the Syrians to hear a noise of chariots, and a noise of horses, even the noise of a great host: and they said one to another, Lo, the king of Israel hath hired against us the kings of the Hittites, and the kings of the Egyptians, to come upon us.

To hear a noise, either in the air, or rather, in their ears, as the wise the Samaritans had heard it. The Hittites, under which name (as elsewhere under the name of Amorites) he seems to understand all or any of the people of Chanaan. For though the great number of that people were destroyed, yet very many of them were spared, and many of them upon Joshua's coming fled away, some to more remote parts, (which that famous and ancient inscription upon a pillar in Africa testifies,) and others to the lands bordering upon Chanaan, where by reason of the scarcity of inhabitants there was in that age room enough for them, and there they served themselves, and grew numerous and powerful, and hid (after their ancient and constant manner) kings over them. The kings also of Syria or Sodon may be here included. The kings of the Egyptians, by which they may understand either the king of Egypt, the plural number being put for the singular as it is elsewhere, or the princes and governors of the several nomes or provinces in Egypt, such being oft called kings in scripture.

7 Wherefore they arose and fled in the twilight, and left their tents, and their horses, and then assayed even the camp as it was, and fled for their life.

To save their lives, which they feared to be in such present and extreme danger that they durst not stay to take away any of their goods, but every man fled the next way before him.

8 And when these lepers came to the uttermost part of the camp, they went into one tent, and did eat and drink and carried thence silver and gold, and raiment, and went and hid it, and came again, and entered into another tent, and carried thence also, and went and hid it.

9 Then they said one to another, We do not well: this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace: if we tarry till the morning light, some mischief will come upon us: now therefore come, that we may go and tell the king's household.

We do not well, not well for our brethren whom we should pity and help, nor well for ourselves: for we may suffer for this neglect, either from the Syrians who may be lurking about, or from our king and people, or from God's immediate hand.

10 So they came and called unto the porter of the city: and they told them, saying, We came to the camp of the Syrians, and, behold, there was no man there, neither voice of man, but horses tied, and asses tied, and the tents as they were.

They told them to wit, the porter and his company.

11 And he called the porters, and they told it to the king's house within.

The porters either his fellow porters of the city, or rather the porters or guards of the gate of the king's house.

12 ¶ And the king arose in the night, and said unto his servants, I will now show you what the Syrians have done to us: They know that we be hungry, therefore are they gone out of the camp to hide themselves in the field, saying, When they come out of the city, we shall catch them alive, and get into the city.

13 And one of his servants answered and said, Let some take, I pray thee, five of the horses that remain, which are left in the city, (behold, they are as all the multitude of Israel that are left in it: behold, I say, they are even as all the multitude of the Israelites that are consumed) and let us send and see.

So the sense is, We may well venture these horses, though we have no more, because both they and we are ready to perish through hunger, and therefore let us use them whilst we may for our common good, or to make the discovery. But the repetition of the phrase seems to imply something more emphatical and more urgent than the saving of four or five horses, for which it is not probable they would be so much concerned in their circumstances. The words therefore may be rendered thus, Behold, they are of a truth (the Hebrew prefix capitulum being not here a note of similitude, as the other translations make it, and as it is commonly used, but an affirmation of the truth and certainly of the things, as it is taken Numb. xi. 1; Dent. ix. 10, Hos. iv. 1; v. 10, John. i. 11) all the multitude of the horses of Israel that are left in it (to wit in the city), behold, I say, they are even as all the multitude of the horses of the Israelites which (i. e. which multitude) are consumed: i. e. reduced to this small number, all consumed except these five. And thus the vulgar Latin, and some others, understood it. And this was indeed a memorable passage, and worthy of a double behold, to show what mischief the famine had done both upon men and beasts, and to what a low ebb the king of Israel was come that all his troops of horses to which he had trusted, were shrunk to so small a number.

14 They took therefore two chariot horses, and the king sent after the host of the Syrians, saying, Go and see.

Two chariot horses, or two chariots of horses, or rather, two chariot horses, as divers render the words: i. e. horses which belonged to the king's chariots. For single horses seem much more proper for this service than chariots and horses. And whereas it was moved by the king's servant, that all the five horses should be sent, it seems it was thought by the king and others that two were sufficient for that purpose.

15 And they went after them unto Jordan, and, lo, all the way was full of garments and vessels, which the Syrians had cast away in their haste. And the messengers returned, and told the king.

In their haste, or, in their fear, or, in desperation, where-with God struck them.

16 And the people went out, and spoiled the tents of the Syrians. So a measure of fine flour was sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, according to the word of the Lord.

17 ¶ And the king appointed the lord on whose hand he leaned to have the charge of the gate: and the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died, as the man of God had said: whereupon the king came down to.

To have the charge of the gate, duty to prevent tumults and disorders and mischiefs among the people, and partly to take order about the shutting of the gates if need were, as if the Syrians should happen to return upon them.

18 And it came to pass as the man of God had spoken to the king, saying, Two measures of barley for a shekel, and a measure of fine flour for a shekel, shall be to-morrow about this time in the gate of Samaria.

19 And that lord answered the man of God, and said, Now, behold, if the Lord should make windows in heaven, might such a thing be? And he said, Behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt not eat the bread.

20 And so it fell out unto him: for the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died.

CHAP. VIII.

The Shunammite hiring, by Ilisha's advice, left his hand because of the famine, returned home, and had her whole estate restored to her for Ilisha's sake. 1-6. He cometh to Damascus. Ben-hadad is sick, and sendeth Hazael to him with presents. Ilisha foretelleth Ben-hadad's violent death, and Hazael's cruel reign with tears. Hazael's answer: he killeth his master, and willeth him. 7-15. Jezebel's wicked reign in Judah. Jehon and Iabnah revolt, 16-23. He doth, and the which his son succeedeth him: his wicked reign: he entertaineth friendship with Joram king of Israel, 24-29.

ch. 4. 14. THEN spake Elisha unto the woman, "whose son he had restored to life, saying, Arise, and go thou and thine household, and sojourn wheresoever thou canst sojourn for the Lord hath called for a famine, and it shall also come upon the land seven years.

Then this particle of time may be understood either particularly and definitely of the time next following the former history, or more generally and indefinitely (as it is frequently used) of the time in which Elisha and thus Shunammite woman lived. Possibly this might happen before the history of Naaman chap. v, or at least before the siege of Samaria chap. vi. but this is not certain. Unto the woman expressing his gratitude for her former kindnesses by taking special care for her preservation. Wherever thou canst sojourn, in any convenient place out of the land of Israel. Hath called for a famine i. e. hath appointed to bring a famine of a great severity of provisions. This expression intimates that all afflictions are sent by God and come at his call or command. Seven years a double time to the former famine under Elijah James i. 17 which is but just and reasonable, because they were still continuing, and incorrigible under all the severe and succeeding judgments of God, and under the powerful ministry of Elisha who confirmed his doctrine by glorious miracles. See Lev. xxi. 21, 24, 28.

2 And the woman arose, and did after the saying of the man of God: and she went with her household, and sojourned in the land of the Philistines seven years.

Either because that was near her land, and dwelling which she thought she might have in eye to when occasion required, or because there was more plenty than in Judah, or because she knew that her going to dwell in Judah would be very displeasing to the king of Israel whose favour she was like to need hereafter. Nor was there now that danger of idolatry from the Philistines as there had been formerly, because their power and influence was now grown unequalled, and probably many of the Jews and Israelites lived among them. And this land though depending upon Israel was free from this famine, that it might appear that this was a special judgment of God upon the Israelites for their idolatry, and for their impotencies under all the means of grace which now they plentifully enjoyed by Elisha and many other prophets, which the Philistines not enjoying, their sin was much less, and therefore their present condition was better.

ch. 8. 5. 3 And it came to pass at the seven years' end, that the woman returned out of the land of the Philistines: and she went forth to cry unto the king for her house and for her land.

Which had been forsaken by her, were possessed by her kindred, or others, who had obtained them from the king, and now intended to keep the possession of them.

ch. 8. 27. 4 And the king talked with Gehazi the servant of the man of God, saying, Tell me, I pray thee, all the great things that Elisha hath done.

Quest. How could he kin speak with Gehazi who was a leper? Answer. Either the king might speak with him at a convenient distance it is usual for others to discourse with lepers as 2 Kings vi. 28. Matt. vii. 2 Luke xvi. 12 or his leprosy might be of the kind which was not infectious, or, if his leprosy was such as made him yet to be unclean, the king's great cure is not easily prevailed with him to break a ceremonial law who made no scruple of violating God's moral law.

ch. 8. 27. 5 And it came to pass, as he was telling the king how he had restored a dead body to life, that, behold the woman, whose son he had restored to life, cried to the king for her house and for her land. And Gehazi said, My lord, O'king, this is the woman, and this is her son, whom Elisha restored to life.

The woman was by God's wonderful and gracious providence brought thither in the most advantageous season.

6 And when the king asked the woman, she told him. So the king appointed unto her a certain officer, saying, Restore all that was hers, and all the fruits of the field since the day that she left the land, even until now.

The king asked the woman concerning the truth of Gehazi's relation.

7 ¶ And Elisha came to Damascus, and Ben-hadad the king of Syria was sick, and it was told him, saying, The man of God is come hither.

To Damascus, either to the city, or rather to the kingdom of Damascus by comparing ver. 9, as Samaria, which properly was the name of the city is sometimes the name of the kingdom, of which see on 1 Kings xiii. 32. Either he came by the special direction of the Spirit, and under God's protection upon the errand here following.

8 And the king said unto Hazael, Take a present in thine hand, and go, meet the man of God, and enquire of the Lord by him, saying, Shall I recover of this disease? 1 Kings 1: 15, 16
2 Sam. 8: 1
1 Kin. 16: 3
ch. 5: 2
ch. 1: 2

Take a present in thine hand, by which he thought to purchase his favour, and the healing of his disease.

9 So Hazael went to meet him, and took a present with him, even of every good thing of Damascus, forty camels' burden, and came and stood before him, and said, Thy son Ben-hadad king of Syria hath sent me to thee, saying, Shall I recover of this disease? 1 Heb. in his hand

Forty camels' burden. Hazael carried the more noble present, I suppose, is his master did to get some interest in the prophet and advantage to himself by it. Whether the prophet received it or not is not here mentioned, but it is most probable he did not from his former practice, chap. v. and because the reasons which then swayed him were still of the same force. Son Ben-hadad he who before persecuted him as an enemy, chap. vi. 13, 14, now in his extremity honours him like a father.

10 And Elisha said unto him, Go, say unto him, Thou mayest certainly recover: howbeit the Lord hath showed me that he shall surely die.

Here is no contradiction, for the first words contain an answer to Ben-hadad's question, ver. 8. Shall I recover of this disease? To which the answer is, Thou mayest or shalt recover, i. e. notwithstanding thy disease which is not mortal, and shall not take away thy life. The latter words contain the prophet's explanation of or addition to that answer, which is that he should die, not by the power of his disease, but by some other cause. But it is observable that in the Hebrew text it is so, the adverb which signifies not, which though most affirm to be put for to the pronoun signifying to him, yet others take it as it lies, and translate the words thus, Say, Thou shalt not recover, for the Lord hath showed me that he shall surely die. Or according to the former reading the first words may be taken interrogatively, Say unto him, Shall thou indeed recover? (as thou dost flatter thyself) no, (which negation is implied in the very question and gathered from the following words,) for the Lord hath showed me that he shall surely die.

11 And he settled his countenance steadfastly, until he was ashamed, and the man of God wept.

He settled his countenance steadfastly, the prophet fixed his eyes upon Hazael. Until he was ashamed, either till the prophet was ashamed to look any longer upon him, or till Hazael was ashamed, as apprehending that the prophet suspected or discerned something extraordinary and of an evil and shameful nature in him. The Hebrew words are ambiguous, and may indifferently be referred to either of them, but they seem more properly to belong to Hazael, because it follows, by way of disjunction, the man of God <sup>1</sup> accept

12 And Hazael said, Why weepeth my lord? And he answered, Because I know <sup>1</sup> the evil that thou wilt do unto the children of Israel their strong holds wilt thou set on fire, and their young men wilt thou slay with the sword, and wilt dash their children, and rip up their women with child

So here was a double cause of his grief and tears the evil of sin in Hazael, and the evil of suffering upon Israel

13 And Hazael said, But what, is this servant a dog, that he should do this great thing? And Elisha answered, The Lord hath showed me that thou shalt be king over Syria

Is thy servant a dog? either so vile and unworthy as this expression is used 2 Sam viii 8, ix 8, or so impudent, for which dogs are noted for so fierce and barbarous and inhuman Compare Psal cxvi 20 Thou shalt be king over Syria and when thou shalt have power in thy hand, thou wilt discover that bloody disposition and that hatred against God's people which now lies hid from others and possibly from thyself, and therefore with the kingdom thou wilt inherit their cruel disposition

14 So he departed from Elisha, and came to his master, who said to him, What said Elisha to thee? And he answered, He told me that thou shouldst surely recover

He repeats the prophet's answer by halves that by his master's secrets he might have the better opportunity to execute his treasurable design

15 And it came to pass on the morrow, that he took a thick cloth, and dipped it in water, and spread it on his face, so that he died and Hazael reigned in his stead

Spread it on his face, pretending it may be, to cool his immoderate heat with it but it is more closely, that he choked him therewith, by which artifice his death seemed to be natural, there being no signs of a violent death upon his body And this he more boldly did upon the prophet's prediction made in a word of the son of the prophet Hazael reigned in his stead, having the favour of the people and of the men of war

16 ¶ And in the fifth year of Joram the son of Ahab king of Israel, Jehoshaphat being then king of Judah, Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah began to reign

Jehoram was first made king or viceroy by his father divers years before this time to wit at his expedition to Hamoth-gilead as was noted before, which dominion of his ended at his father's return But now Jehoshaphat being not far from his death and having divers sons, and having some competition and dissension among them, made Jehoram king the second time as David did so Joram upon the like occasion 1 Chron xxiv 22 which is the thing here related But of this see more in the notes on Kings i. 17, in 1

17 ¶ Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem

Part with his father, and part by himself alone

18 And he walked in the way of the kings of Israel as did the house of Ahab for the daughter of Ahab was his wife and he did evil in the sight of the Lord

He walked in the way of the kings of Israel, after his father's death The daughter of Ahab, Athaliah, ver. 26 This unequal marriage, though it is thought possibly designed it as a mean of uniting the two kingdoms under one head and in the true religion here and elsewhere noted as the cause both of the great wickedness of his posterity, and of those sore calamities which befall them

19 Yet the Lord would not destroy Judah for David his servant's sake, as he promised him to give him always light, and to his children

They Heb. all days, until the coming of the Messiah as it is elsewhere limited and explained for so long and not longer this succession might seem necessary for the making good of God's promise and covenant made with David But when the Messiah was once come there was no more need of any succession and the sceptre might and did without any interruption depart from Judah and from all the succeeding branches of David's family, because the Messiah was to hold the kingdom for ever in his own person though not in so gross a way as the carnal Jews imagined but in a spiritual manner Ahaziah is a son and successor Of this phrase, see on 1 Kings xi. 36

20 ¶ In his days Edom revolted from under the hand of Judah, and made a king over themselves

From under the hand of Judah, under which they had been from David's time, 2 Sam viii 14 Compare 1 Kings xxi 47

21 So Joram went over to Zair, and all the chariots with him and he rose by night, and smote the Edomites which compassed him about, and the captains of the chariots and the people fled into their tents

The common soldiers of the Edomites, herein following, the example of their captains

22 ¶ Yet Edom revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day Then Labanah revolted at the same time

Edom revolted, for though for a while given them a defeat yet it may seem to have been a great slaughter, but only a putting them to flight and before they might easily rally again And Joram did not pursue the victory because he was recalled by the revolt of his own subjects which had taken the occasion of his absence, and probably feared that others would follow their example, if they had the like occasion Labanah a considerable city in Judah belonging to the priests, Josh xv 12, xvi 13 Why Labanah revolted, see 2 Chron x. 10, 11 It is probable it returned to their obedience because those words, unto this day which are added to the former clause, are omitted here

23 And the rest of the acts of Joram, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

Of which see on 1 Kings xiv 19

24 And Joram slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David and Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead

25 ¶ In the twelfth year of Joram the son of Ahab king of Israel did Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah begin to reign

In the twelfth year of Joram. Object It was in the twelfth year of Joram chap ix 29 Answer Either first He began to reign in the confines of Joram's eleventh and twelfth year, in the very end of his eleventh year, or toward the beginning of the twelfth, whence it is differently ascribed to the one or the other Or, secondly The twelfth year of Ahaziah did concur with the latter half of Joram's eleventh year, and the former half of his twelfth year and if he could not be said to begin to reign in both of these years, yet he might unquestionably be said to reign in both of them, and the Hebrew word, both here and chap ix 29, properly signifies he reigned, and not he began to reign, as it is translated. Or, thirdly, Ahaziah began to reign with his father, and during his life, according to the late examples both in Judah and Israel there being also special occasion for it, by reason of Joram's cruel and long sickness, 2 Chron xxi 18, &c., and this was in Joram's seventh year and then his father died, and he began his single reign in Joram's twelfth year. Ahaziah, called also Jehoahaz, 2 Chron xxi 17, and Azariah, 2 Chron xxii 6.

26 Two and twenty years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Athaliah, the daughter of Omri king of Israel.

How this agrees with 2 Chron xxii 2 see on that place. The daughter of Omri, i. e. his granddaughter. See above on ver 18.

27 And he walked in the way of the house of Ahab, and did evil in the sight of the Lord, as did the house of Ahab, for he was the son in law of the house of Ahab.

He was the proper son of Athaliah daughter of Ahab, and the grand son in law of Ahab, because his father was Ahab's son in law, ver 18.

28 And he went with Joram the son of Ahab to the war against Hazael king of Syria in Ramoth-gilead, and the Syrians wounded Joram.

29 And king Joram went back to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds which the Syrians had given him at Ramoth, when he fought against Hazael king of Syria. And Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down to see Joram the son of Ahab in Jezreel, because he was sick.

The same place with Ramoth, or Ramoth-gilead.

CHAP. IX.

Hisha sendeth a young prophet with instructions to anoint Jehu king over Israel, whom he chargeth to destroy the house of Ahab, and flee. 1-10. Jehu is made king by the soldiers. 11-14. Joram in the field of Naboth. 15-26. Jehoshaphat king of Judah. 27-29. causes him to be thrown out of a window, who is decaying by dogs. 30-37.

AND Hisha the prophet called one of the children of the prophets, and said unto him, Gird up thy loins and take this box of oil in thine hand, and go to Ramoth-gilead.

Gird up thy loins, for haste to take this opportunity when the king of Israel and Judah were both absent chap viii 29, and Jehu as it seems was left in chief command.

3 And when thou comest thither, look out these Jehu the son of Nimsi, and go in, and make him arise up from among his brethren, and carry him to an inner chamber, Partly that the work may not be hindered, and partly for the security of thy companion. See ver 1.

3 Then take the box of oil, and pour it on his head and say, Thus saith the Lord, I have anointed thee king over Israel. Then open the door, and flee, and tarry not.

I have anointed thee king over Israel. This was not his whole message, but the rest of it particularly declared ver 7-10, and is to be understood here.

4 ¶ So the young man, even the young man the prophet, went to Ramoth-gilead.

Which is here noted as an eminent act of obedience, whereby he run into a manifest hazard of his life.

5 And when he came, behold, the captains of the host were sitting, and he said, I have an errand to thee, O captain. And Jehu said, Unto which of all us? And he said, To thee, O captain.

6 And he arose, and went into the house, and he poured the oil on his head, and said unto him, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, I have anointed thee king over the people of the Lord, even over Israel.

Into the house, i. e. into an inner chamber in the house, ver 2. He poured the oil on his head, thereby in God's name setting him into the actual possession of the kingdom. I or if Elijah did before this time anoint him, as some think, from 1 Kings xix 16 that unction did only confer a remote right to the kingdom as Samuel's unction did to David, 1 Sam xvi 13. Though others think Elijah did perform that command by Elisha, to whom he left it in charge, and Elisha waited God's time and command for the actual execution of it, which he received at this time.

7 And thou shalt smite the house of Ahab thy master, that I may avenge the blood of my servants the prophets, and the blood of all the servants of the Lord, at the hand of Jezebel.

Smite, i. e. kill and destroy, is that word is used, Gen viii 21 and elsewhere. Thy master, thy former lord and king.

8 For the whole house of Ahab shall perish, and I will cut off from Ahab him that proeth against the wall, and him that is shut up and left in Israel.

9 And I will make the house of Ahab like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and I like the house of Baasha the son of Ahijah.

10 And the dogs shall eat Jezebel in the portion of Jezreel, and there shall be none to bury her. And he opened the door and fled.

In the portion of Jezreel, in that part of land in or near the city which belonged to Naboth.

11 ¶ Then Jehu came forth to the servants of his lord, and one said unto him, Is all well? wherefore camest thou in idleness to thee? And he said unto them, Ye know the man, and his communication.

To the servants of his lord, to the rest of the commanders and officers there present. Is all well? is not this unlucky messenger come with some ill tidings? If therefore came this mad fellow? they perceived him to be a prophet by his habit and gestures and manner of speech. And these profane soldiers esteemed the Lord's prophets madmen, partly because of their neglect of themselves and contempt of all worldly wealth and honour which the wise men of this world so greedily seek and of their strange and unchristian manner of living, partly because of their holy exercise which they devoted themselves, which they esteemed nothing but a religious frenzy, and partly, because of those unusual and seemingly ridiculous gestures and actions which the prophets sometimes used in raptures of spirit in the fervour of devotion. Compare Jer xxix 26, John x 20, Acts xxvi 24. Ye know the man, and his communication, you rightly guess that he was a madman, and so it appears by his discourse with me, which was, after the manner of that sort of men, vain and impertinent, to tell me of my sins or of my duty or such things as are not worth my speaking, or your hearing.

12 And they said, It is false, tell us now.

And he said, Thus and thus spake he to me, saying, Thus saith the Lord, I have anointed thee king over Israel.

It is false there is something extraordinary and of great importance in his message as we plainly perceive by his calling thee into an inner chamber by his great expedition, and by his gesture and carriage. Tell us now his contentment of the thing made them more gladly to know it.

13 Then they hasted, and took every man his garment, and put it under him on the top of the stairs, and blew with trumpets, saying, Jehu is king.

Then they hasted, being well pleased with the thing, partly, from the advantage which hereby they expected, partly, from that desire of change which is in most men's natures, and principally, by God's providence, turning their hearts to Jehu. Took every man his garment and put it under him, a ceremony used in the eastern part to signify superiority, in token of great reverence to his person that they would not have his feet to touch the ground, and that they put themselves and their concerns under his feet, and into his disposal. See on Matt. xxi. 7. On the top of the stairs, in some high and eminent place, whence he might be seen and owned by all the soldiers, who were called together upon this great occasion.

14 So Jehu the son of Hoshaphat the son of Nimshi conspired against Joram. (Now Joram had kept Ramoth-gilead, he and all Israel, because of Hazael king of Syria.)

Joram had kept Ramoth-gilead, which interpreters conclude to have been taken by Joram before this time, though the taking of it be not mentioned. First they gathered a first from the mention of the inner chamber, ver. 2. and of the top of the stairs here, secondly from ver. 13. Let none go forth out of the city. But these arguments seem not to be cogent. Not the former, because there might be some suburbs or outbuildings belonging to the city or not far from it, which the Israelites might have in their possession. Not the latter, as we shall there see. And that was taken why should all Israel be there to help it for which a strongarrison was sufficient? The word, therefore, may be otherwise rendered, exactly according to the Hebrew. For he had kept or did keep (to wit, by his army left there) or put quarters on laid siege, or to that so the prince's body of used) Ramoth-gilead. And therefore he had all Israel, i. e. all the military force of Israel with him, that he might both maintain the siege and withal oppose Hazael who sought to relieve it.

15 But king Joram was returned to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds which the Syrians had given him, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria. And Jehu said, If it be your minds, then let none go forth nor escape out of the city to go to tell it in Jezreel.

When he fought with Hazael, when he came with an army, either to retake the city taken by him, or to raise the siege. Out of the city, or from the city, either from within the city, or from before it, from the camp or army. To go to tell it in Jezreel, that we might surprise him, and so more easily subdue him.

16 So Jehu rode in a chariot, and went to Jezreel, for Joram lay there. And Ahaziah king of Judah was come down to see Joram.

Went to Jezreel accompanied with the horsemen of his army.

17 And there stood a watchman on the tower in Jezreel, and he spied the company of Jehu as he came, and said, I see a company. And Joram said, Take an horseman, and send to meet them, and let him say, Is it peace?

Inquire who it is comes, and if he come upon peaceable terms. For he feared, lest either the Syrians had prevailed there, or some sedition or rebellion was raised against him; which the example of Laban, and his own guilty conscience, made him fear.

18 So there went one on horseback to meet him, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu said, What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me. And the watchman told, saying, The messenger came to them, but he cometh not again.

What hast thou to do with peace? what right hast thou, or thy master that sent thee, to peace?

19 Then he sent out a second on horseback, which came to them, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu answered, What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me.

20 And the watchman told, saying, He came even unto them, and cometh not again, and the driving is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nimshi, for he driveth furiously.

As his temper is hasty and fierce, so is his march.

21 And Joram said, Make ready. And his chariot was made ready. And Joram king of Israel and Ahaziah king of Judah went out, each in his chariot, and they went out against Jehu, and met him in the portion of Naboth the Jezreelite.

Against Jehu as to meet Jehu, to know his intentions, and by his presence to repress any seditious inclinations which might be in Jehu or his followers. In the portion of Naboth the Jezreelite, in that field which formerly belonged to Naboth, upon which was enclosed by Ahab and made a garden.

22 And it came to pass, when Joram saw Jehu, that he said, Is it peace, Jehu? And he answered, What peace, so long as the whoredoms of thy mother Jezabel and her witchcrafts are so many?

Is it peace? doth she come to me with a peaceable mind, or in a way of hostility. For now when I was young, he began to suspect some wickedness which God had from him before to justify him to destruction. What peace? what cause hast thou to expect peace, when thou hast so long abetted and doest still abet and allow thy mother in her abominable practices. The whoredoms of thy mother Jezabel are her witchcrafts, which are to be understood, either, 1. of her spiritual whoredom, which is idolatry, being oft compassed with corporal sex, ver. 20. and witchcraft there was oft practiced by idolaters. Or rather, mystically and spiritually of her idolatry, which is oft called whoredom, because it is a departing from God to whom we are all tied by many obligations, and witchcraft either because it doth so powerfully bewitch and deceive men's minds, or because it is a manifest entering into covenant with the devil. For idolatry being her chief sin, and the cause of all the rest, it seems improbable that Jehu would omit that in the indictment which he drew against her. Her intentions met Joram's but his mother's sins, partly because they were more notorious and infamous, partly, because they were the principal cause why God inflicted, and he was come to execute, these judgments, partly because by his commission he had made them his own, and partly, because he could find no gross and odious matter wherewith to charge him except about the worship of the calves, which he forbore to mention, both lest it should lose his interest amongst his officers and soldiers, who were devoted to that worship, and because he himself intended to keep it up.

23 And Joram turned his hand, and fled, and said to Ahaziah, There is treachery, O Ahaziah. Joram turned his hands, either that that with he might turn the reins of the chariot or that by this motion he might direct his charioters to turn from Jehu.

24 And Jahu drew a bow with his full strength, and smote Jehoram between his arms, and the arrow went out at his heart, and he sunk down in his chariot

Between his arms, between his shoulders, when he was turned or turning back, the chariot being probably open behind, as many times they were

25 Then said Jehu to Bidkar his captain, Take up, and cast him in the portion of the field of Naboth the Jezebelite for remember how that, when I and thou rook together after Ahab his father, 'the Lord laid this burden upon him,

When I and thou rode together after Ahab his father, which might be when Ahab went in his chariot attended with his nobles or chief officers, (of which there were two,) to take a formal and solemn possession of Naboth's land, for then the prophet Elijah met him and denounced this judgment against him, 1 Kings xxi. 17 &c. This burden is a prophetic prophecy, for such are oft and truly called burdens, as Jer xxi. xv. 1. Jer xxiii 33, 34. Nah i. 1.

20 Surely I have seen yesterday the blood of Naboth, and the blood of his sons, saith the Lord, and "I will requite thee in this plat, saith the Lord. Now therefore take and cast him into the plat of ground, according to the word of the LORD.

The blood of his sons who, as it seems, were killed by their father by Israel's advice to make the best use of the vineyard more sure to Abish though it be not mentioned in its proper place, I Kings xxi 13. I do not intend to bring in such fragments of history as would writers who have neglected in their history these matters. Thus we read of the earthquake in the day of the Amorite which was first recorded in his story in the Book of the Kings or Chronicle. Although in it we be charged with taking away the lives of his men because he took away the necessary supports of the throne, It will requite thee in this plat of which see the notes on I Kings xxi 19. Cast him into the plat of ground, where he shall be buried, and be a prey to the dogs or fowls, according to the prediction I Kings xxi 21.

27 ¶ But when Ahaziah the king of Judah saw this, he fled by the way of the garden house And Jehu followed after him and said, Smite him also in the chariot And they did so at the going up to Gath, which is by Ibleam And he fled to Megiddo, and died there

30 ¶ And when Jehu was come to Jezreel Jezebel heard of it, and she painted her face, and tired her head, and looked out at a window

Father hoping that by her majestic dress and carriage she might strike Jehu or his followers with such an awe, that they should not offer any injury to her person, or rather because perceiving her case to be desperate, and that she could not live, was resolved to die with honour and glory.

And as John entered in at the gate, she said, "Had Zimri peace, who slew his master?" + 1 Kings 16, 27-28

At the gate of the king's palace Had Zimri peace, who 'slept in his master's chamber? remember that thy brother traitor Zimri had not every short enjoyment of the benefit of his treason, it was quickly and severely punished for it by my faithful Omri 1 Kings vii 2, 16 and do thou expect the same from some of thy posterity

31 And he lifted up his face to the window, and said, Who is on my side? who? And there looked out to him two or three cannuchs.

I or such used to attend upon queens in their chambers

33 And he said, Throw her down. So they threw her down, and some of her blood was sprinkled on the wall, and on the horses, and he trampled her under foot;

They throw her down; being infernal creatures, they quickly comply with John's command, sacrificing her life to save their own.

34 And when he was come in, he did eat and drank, and said, Go, see now this cursed woman, and bury her: for she is a king's daughter.

Thus he suddenly commanded rather because he had forgot the charge given him above, ver. 19, or because that having done his own business, he was careless of God's work and the fulfilling of his threatening, For she is a king's daughter see 1 Kings vii. 31. He doth not say because she was a king's wife, lest he should seem to show any respect to that wicked and cursed house of Ahab which God had devoted to annihilation and utter destruction.

35 And they went to bury her but they found no more of her than the scull, and the feet, and the palms of her hands

36 Wherefore they came again, and told him. And he said, This is the word of the Lord which he spake by his servant Elyan the Tishbite, saying, In the portion of Jezebel shall dogs eat the flesh of Jezebel:

This is the work of the Lord - this strange providence brings that to his mind which he had forgotten, or did not regard.

And the carcase of Jezebel shall be cast out of the dung upon the face of the field in the portion of Jezreel; so that they shall not say, This is Jezebel.

These words are not extant in the place where this prophecy is first mentioned, 1 Kings xxi 23, but are here added, either by Jehu, by way of explanation and amplification, or rather, because Elijah spoke them though they are not there recorded as being for the substance of them contained in the former words, it being usual to insert some passages in following writings which had been omitted in the former.

CHAP. X.

Jehu by his letters causeth seventy of Ahab's sons to be slain the fact is avenged by Elijah's prophecy 1-11 the forty-two of king Ahab's brethren, 12-14 by subtlety he slayeth all the priests and prophets of Ahab, breaketh down his images and temple, 18-24 He followeth the sin of Jeroboam, 20-31 Hazael oppresseth Israel Jezebel succedeth Jehu, 32-36

AND Ahab had seventy sons in Samaria. And Jehu wrote letters, and sent to Samaria, unto the rulers of Jezreel, to the elders, and to them that brought up Ahab's children, saying,

Ahab had seventy sons, either first, properly sons by carnal wives, or rather, secondly, grandsons are comprehended, who are oft called sons, and grandfathers fathers in Scripture. In Samaria, rather because they were bred up there, that being the chief city of the kingdom, or because upon the tidings of Jezebel's slaughter they fled thither, or were by their friends conveyed from several parts thither, as to the strongest place, in which it may seem by their message they intended to defend themselves and Ahab's children, and to set up one as king in Jezebel's stead, or rather because they were left there by Jezebel when he went to Ramoth-gad, that if the Syrians had prevailed against him, they might have safety in that very strong and great city, and he by their means succour from it. Unto the rulers of Jezreel, Heb. the princes of Jezreel, i.e. great persons and officers of the court, which then was and had been for some time at Jezreel, who either had fled thither with Ahab's sons upon the news of Jehu's actions and successes, or rather had been sent by Jezebel with his sons to Samaria to take care of them there. To the elders, either by age or rather by office, the rulers or senators of Samaria. To them that brought up Ahab's children, that had a more particular care of the several children under the inspection of the princes or rulers here mentioned.

2 Now as soon as this letter cometh to you, seeing your master's sons are with you, and there are with you chariots and horses, fenced city also, and armour,

3 Look ye out the best and meetest of your master's sons, and set him on his father's throne and fight for your master's house.

Thus he speaks, either because he had some notice of their intentions thus to do, or to make trial of them whether they would do so, or would be true to him and his designs, or to signify to them his intentions of fighting against them if they did so, but by the terror he had he might bring them to a compliance with him.

4 But they were exceedingly afraid, and said, Behold, two kings stood not before him: how then shall we stand?

All their power and interest either in Jezreel or in the army before of Ramoth-gad could not hinder him from executing his design from killing the two kings, and from invading one of their kingdoms. It is true, he surprised the kings, which a little weakens their argument, but fear and self-love made them easily yield to it.

5 And he that was over the house, and he that was over the city, the elders also, and the bringers up of the children, sent to Jehu, saying, We are thy servants, and will do all that thou shalt bid us, we will not make any king do thou tell us which is good in thine eyes.

He that was over the house, the chief governor of the king's palace or castle there. He that was over the city, the chief magistrate or military governor. He that was over the city, that thou shalt bid us, they in the no delays or conditions but submit all to his mercy.

6 Then he wrote a letter the second time to them, saying, If ye be mine, and if ye will hearken unto my voice, take ye the heads of the men your master's sons, and come to me to Jezreel by to morrow this time. Now the king's sons, being seventy persons, were with the great men of the city, which brought them up.

Then he wrote a letter thus Jezebel is requested for her letter directed in like manner to the elders of Naboth's city, whereby his life was wickedly taken away, 1 Kings xxi 8. And it is probable that some of these elders were concerned in that very business, which makes the judgment of God more remarkable. Take ye the heads of the men, which word seems to imply that some of them were grown up, who doubtless trod in their parents' steps, and those that were younger were justly cut off for their parents' sin, of which see on 1 Kings xx 5. But x 9.

7 And it came to pass when the letter came to them, that they took the king's sons, and slew seventy persons, and put their heads in baskets, and sent him them to Jezreel.

Seventy persons. Jehu justly required this, because the sovereign and most righteous Lord of all men's lives commanded it. But the Samaritans wickedly obeyed it, because they destroyed persons in a just manner innocent merely out of slavish fear and without any knowledge of or regard to God's command.

8 And there came a messenger, and told him, saying, They have brought the heads of the king's sons. And he said, I lay ye them in two heaps at the entering in of the gate until the morning.

At the entering in of the gate, the place of judgment to signify that this was an act of justice and of God's righteousness, and the place of great discourse, where people were wont of the city and came into it and whether they resorted for judgment and other occasions, that all men might behold this dreadful spectacle of Divine vengeance upon Ahab's family, and thereby might justly by Jehu's cause and proceedings.

9 And it came to pass in the morning, that he went out, and stood, and said to all the people, Ye be righteous: behold, I conspired against my master, and slew him: but who slew all these?

To all the people, either first, To the promiscuous multitude met there to gaze upon this sad and strange spectacle. So the second is, Be not ye troubled nor frighted with this unusual and dismal occurrence, if ye think be unwise in the actions, I do here publicly declare against you as ambitious and innocent, do not think that I or any vengeance from God or men for it, if there be any guilt, it is in me, and in those who cut off the head of the second. To those who cut off and brought to him the heads of the seventy persons did both, and were here present as witnesses, and to them he laid the burden of all the people, or by all the people he meant all those who brought the heads and were there waiting for Jehu, according to his order. So the people in particular, to this purpose. You are righteous in your own eyes, and you look upon me as a traitor, and rebel and murderer, because I have risen against and slain my master, which I acknowledge I have done. But if I am guilty you are not innocent, and therefore cannot accuse me, for I have killed one but you a great number. His explanation seems probable, only the Hebrew word have being generally used of the common people, they seem not so fitly to agree to the rules and great men who had brought the heads, and that expression to all the people implies that Jehu did not direct his speech to some particular persons, but to the whole body of the people then present whom he clears from all blame, and to whom he appeals as witnesses between him and the captives.

10 Know now that there shall fall unto the earth nothing of the word of the Lord, which the Lord spake concerning the house of Ahab, for the Lord hath done that which he spake. <sup>10</sup> By his servant Elisha.

But the truth is, neither I nor they are to be blamed, nor you that assisted and encouraged me heretofore, for this is not mine work but God's and done by his command. He mentions Elisha rather than Elisha, partly because Elisha was now dead and therefore his name and memory were more sacred than Elisha's who was yet alive, this being the common humour and folly of mankind to value and honour those that are dead, whom they contemned whilst they lived, and partly because Elisha's prophecy was known and public and famous, when Elisha's was delivered in a corner, and that not from his own mouth but by one of the sons of the prophet.

11 So Jehu slew all that remained of the house of Ahab in Jezreel, and all his great men, and his kinsfolks, and his priests, until he left him none remaining.

These great men whom he had destroyed and made great in wealth or honour and quality, who had been partner with him in his sins, and who were likely to be accused of his death. His priests his domestic priests which had waited upon Ahab and Jezreel in their idolatrous services and were led of the king's table. Compare 1 Kings xviii 19. Of his own effect of title that word is sometimes used of which see 2 Sam xiii 18 compared with 1 Chron xviii 17. Of his These were included in his great men mentioned before. Isaiah Yet may they well be mentioned apart as a distinct and the most eminent sort of them. He left him none remaining to wit in that place and kingdom, for he did leave some of the royal seed of Judah chap xii 2.

12 ¶ And he arose and departed, and came to Samaria. And as he was at the shearing house in the way.

Where they used to shear sheep, and then to feast after them. 1 Sam xvi 20 2 Sam xvi 25. Or this may be the name of a place. Both-hel'd of the shepherds or both-hel'd of the.

13 ¶ Jehu met with the brethren of Ahaziah king of Judah and said, Who are ye? And they answered, We are the brethren of Ahaziah and we go down to salute the children of the king and the children of the queen.

The brethren as they so, for they were killed before. 2 Chron xxi 17 18 his brethren's sons, as they are called 2 Chron xxiii 8 9 his brothers of his near kinsmen, such being oft called brothers in Scripture. Gen xiii 8.

14 And he said, Take them alive. And they took them alive and slew them at the pit of the shearing house, even two and forty men, neither left he any of them.

They took them alive as they so, partly in compliance with God's command, chap x, for these were of the house of Ahab by the name of their father, and partly that they might not have any foundation of Israel in right of their grandmother, as they might well have done, if God had not given it to Jehu, nor revenge the deaths of their near relations. At the pit of the shearing house where he intended to bury them.

15 ¶ And when he was departed thence, he lighted on Jehonadab the son of Rechab coming to meet him, and he saluted him, and said to him, Is thine heart right, as my heart is with thy heart? And Jehonadab answered, It is. If it be, give me thine hand. And he gave him his hand, and he took him up to him into the chariot.

Jehonadab the son of Rechab, a Kenite, 1 Chron. ii, 55, and a man of singular prudence and piety, as appears from this history, and from Jer xxxv 6. Coming to meet him to congratulate with him for the destruction of that wicked family, and to encourage and advise him to proceed in fulfilling the will of God revealed to him. He saluted him, Jehu saluted Jehonadab. Is thine heart right, as my heart is with thy heart? dost thou heartily approve of and affect me and my present proceedings, as my heart doth as sincerely cleave to thee as thine own heart doth? Give me thine hand, as a sign of friendship and consent. See Gal ii 9. These may be the words either of Jehu, and so here is an ellipsis. If it be for And Jehu said, If it be Compare 1 Kings xxii 14. Or, 2 Of Jehonadab, who has just said. It is added, If it be, as if thine heart be with mine, is thou savest it is quite thine hand. But thus the ellipsis is larger than the former. And it seems not so decent as proper for Jehonadab a stranger and subject, to speak thus to the king, as for the king to say so to him.

16 And he said, Come with me, and see my zeal for the Lord. So they made him ride in his chariot.

My zeal for the Lord, i.e. for the vindication of his honour and quelling and for the execution of his command. Do not believe my words, but mine actions, which thine eyes shall behold. Then Jehu's servants opened the door of his chariot and lifted up Jehonadab into it.

17 And when he came to Samaria, he slew all that remained unto Ahab in Samaria, till he had destroyed him, according to the saying of the Lord, which he spake to Elisha.

That remained unto Ahab, either all his household or rather all his kindred and relations, though more remote from him.

18 ¶ And Jehu gathered all the people together, and said unto them, Ahab served Baal a little, but Jehu shall serve him much.

Jehu gathered all the people together, by their representatives their elders or rulers, as was usual, to whom he imparted his mind, and they being generally corrupt and miservers, and such as had no sense of religion in them, did not oppose his resolution, but seemed to comply with it. Jehu shall serve him much, as if he had said, My quarrel is only with Ahab's family, and not with Baal, which my actions shall manifest, which words being manifestly false and spoken with a design to deceive, cannot be excused from sin though they were uttered with a pious intention, this being an unmovable principle, that we must not do the least evil of sin, that the greatest good may come from it. And if Jehonadab did concur with Jehu here in it was a human infirmity.

19 Now therefore call unto me all the prophets of Baal, all his servants, and all his priests, let none be wanting for I have a great sacrifice to do to Baal, whosoever shall be wanting, he shall not live. But Jehu did it in subtlety, to the intent that he might destroy the worshippers of Baal.

All his servants, either, 1 All his ministers of whom there may seem to have been several sorts, whereof two are ners distinctly mentioned, his prophets and priests, and the rest of the inferior sort may be comprehended under this general title of servants, because they were to attend upon the others in their sacred ministrations. And these being once destroyed, Jehu rightly concluded that the rest would fall of course. And this also may seem to be favoured by ver 22, wherein vestments were brought forth for all these worshippers of Baal, which were not commonly used by the people in the worship either of God or of Baal, but only by the priests or ministers. Or, 2 All his worshippers, as the same word is translated in the close of this verse. Quest How could all these be contained in one house of Baal? Answer Well enough, for the number of Baal's worshippers had been vastly diminished by the ministry of Elijah and Elisha, and the rest of the prophets; and by Joram's neglect and disuse of that worship. For the generality of the Israelites had too much knowledge to have any real and religious respect to such senseless idols. Only they practised it in compliance with the humour of the king and queen, and for worldly or wicked ends, and the more when the king deserted it, they generally forsook it, some few silly and besotted persons excepted, who are here gathered together. Besides, this house or temple of Baal might be very large and capacious, and probably so, because it was the chief of that sort as being in the king's city, and nigh his palace, and for the use of the king and queen, and the whole court, and for great and high solemnities. Moreover, as the name of the house or temple of God at Jerusalem signifies not only the principal building, but all the other buildings and courts belonging to it in which all the worshippers stood when they worshipped, so it might be here, and so there was great authority for all the worshippers of Baal which can reasonably be thought to have been at this time in all Israel. I have a great sacrifice to do to Baal, I will offer to him a noble and acceptable sacrifice, not of sheep, or oxen &c. as they understood it, but of his own beloved priests and prophets, and servants as he meant it. In subtilty, with another design that he might both certainly discover and utterly destroy them all without any further trouble or delay of edition or tumult in his kingdom.

20 And Jehu said, Proclaim a solemn assembly for Baal. And they proclaimed it.

Proclaim Heb sanctify. Prepare yourselves and all things necessary for this solemn day and service and feast, which I intend to keep.

21 And Jehu sent through all Israel, and all the worshippers of Baal came, so that there was not a man left that came not. And they came into the house of Baal, and the house of Baal was full from one end to another.

There was not a man left that came not, and I believe they thought Jehu was serious and sincere in his professions, it being natural and usual for men to be ready to believe what they wish to be true. And for the prophets which Jehu destroyed before, ver 11 they might think that was done only because of their noisiness and railing against him and his family. Or 2 For fear of their lives, for their death was threatened to all that refused him, ver 19 which concerning Jehu's fierce and bloody temper they knew. When would he execute, whereas if they did come there was more than a possibility of the sparing of their lives, for Jehu was known to be indifferent and unconcerned in matters of religion, one they had served him when his prince Joram lived, and did so, and forsook it when the new prince Joram died, and therefore it was doubtful whether Jehu had not in good earnest turned to his first love, to the religion which he had formerly embraced, and only deferred in complacency to others. Or 3 By God's good providence, leaving their minds and inclining them to come to come to their own destruction. Into the house, i.e. the temple.

22 And he said unto him that was over the vestry, Bring forth vestments for all the worshippers of Baal. And he brought them forth vestments.

Vestments, sacred garments, such as were used by the priests and others of the Lord's ministry in God's worship, and from thence the devil borrowed this custom in his worship.

23 And Jehu went, and Jehonadab the son of Rechab, into the house of Baal and said unto the worshippers of Baal, Search, and look that there be here with you none of the servants of the Lord, but the worshippers of Baal only.

The Baalites possibly did not know Jehonadab, and therefore suspected nothing, or if any of the more crafty sort suspected any thing, it was now too late to amend their error. I look that there be here with you none of the servants of the Lord, because their presence will offend Baal and deride or pollute his worship, whence profane persons have been oft excluded from solemn acts of worship, both by Jews and heathens. So this did not raise their suspicion.

24 And when they went in to offer sacrifices and burnt offerings, Jehu appointed fourscore men without, and said, If any of the men whom I have brought into your hands escape, he that letteth him go, his life shall be for the life of him.

When they went in, when some in the name of the rest went to the altar to offer sacrifices. Jehu appointed fourscore men, to greater numbers being doubtless in readiness to assist them in case of any opposition.

25 And it came to pass as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt offering, that Jehu said to the guard and to the captains, Com in, and slay them, let none come forth. And they smote them with the edge of the sword, and the guard and the captains cast them out, and went to the city of the house of Baal.

As soon as Jehu, i.e. the chief priest of Baal, see 2 Chron xxvi 17. Made an end of offering the burnt offering, so that he suffered them to proceed, either because till then they were not come into the house, because having taken care in the very act of gross idolatry, their destruction was more urgent and reasonable. To the guard, and to the captains, i.e. to the fourscore men and their officers. Com in, and slay them, their duty was out of the city. But that was not proper work for the guard, nor could they so soon have done it, nor would they stay to do it when they were out on horse to other work, nor indeed was it necessary to have them, because they intended to pull down the house and to lay them in its ruins, and turn it into a draught house, as it follows. This word therefore is used may be joined with the next, and both rendered, they went hastily and courageously, properly, they flung themselves out (hephel for Isthaphel which is common and in the Hebrew language) and out. The like expression is used Psal vi 12, hasted, I have pushed myself on, or flung myself, i.e. went with great haste, and in the Greek text Mark iv 72, to the effect of the house of Baal, either, 1 To some city near to Samaria where another remarkable temple of Baal was erected. But this seems not to agree with the context, there being but one house or temple of Baal mentioned both in the foregoing and following verses. Or rather 2 To some buildings belonging to this house of Baal, which may be here called the city, either for some particular person now and then, or because they were very numerous and capacious. For as there were divers chambers and rooms built without the temple, belonging to it, for the use of the priests and Levites, &c., so it may properly be conceived that this famous temple of Baal had many such buildings in some of which the priests of Baal or of the groves, whereof there were great numbers belonging to the king's court, 1 Kings xxi 19, prided in their number, and others of them might be for divers uses belonging to the house and service of Baal. And in all these buildings the guard might go, and that hastily, to surprise and kill those inferior ministers of Baal, who were there employed in preparing things for the sacrifices which were to be offered, or in other services belonging to that house, or that solemnity

26 And they brought forth the images out of the house of Baal, and burned them

Heb 21, 1 r the collection of the images, or each of them

27 And they brake down the image of Baal, and brake down the house of Baal, and made it a draught house unto this day

The image of Baal, the chief image, which they worshipped more than the rest. Brake down the house of Baal, and the like they did with the rest of the houses of Baal in Israel, as may be gathered both from the nature and reason of the thing and from ver. 28

28 Thus Jehu destroyed Baal out of Israel

29 ¶ Howbeit from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, Jehu departed not from after them, to wit, the golden calves that were in Beth-el, and that were in Dan

Jehu departed not from after them, herein he discovers his hypocrisy, that he follows God as far as his interest would permit, namely, in destroying the house of Ahab and the worship of Baal, but no further, for he still resolves to keep up the worship of the calves, partly that he should disoblige and irritate his own nobles and subject, who had been long married, and were he vitally affected to it, and partly lest he should open a door for his people to return to their obedience to the house of David. And yet in and toly is the more excusable both because he durst not trust that God with the keeping of his kingdom of whose power, and faithfulness, and kindness to him he had such ample experience in his giving him the kingdom, and because he had so great and uncontrollable a power in the matters of religion, having first pretended and seemed to set up the worship of Baal with all his might, and then destroying it with no less vehemency, none daring to smother against him in either case, and because the house of David, and kingdom of Judah his competitor, now weak, and was likely to be in a feeble and declining condition, and much more likely to fall into his hand, than that his kingdom should come into theirs.

30 And the Lord said unto Jehu, Because thou hast done well in executing that which is right in mine eyes, and hast done unto the house of Ahab according to all that was in mine heart, thy children of the fourth generation shall sit on the throne of Israel

The Lord said unto Jehu, by some prophet as above chap. ix. 6. Executing that which is right in mine eyes, yet in point and so far as is here expressed, these actions were good and right though his heart was not so. Thy children of the fourth generation shall sit on the throne of Israel, and so they did, namely, Jehoahaz below ver. 35, Joash chap. xii. 10, Jeroboam, chap. xiv. 24, and Zachariah, chap. xv. 8.

31 But Jehu took no heed to walk in the law of the Lord God of Israel with all his heart, for he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, which made Israel to sin

With all his heart, i. e. he wanted three necessary operations, care or heartiness, universality, and sincerity. He departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, his resolved continuance in one sin, which is justly alleged as an argument of his false heart in all his other actions.

32 ¶ In those days the Lord began to cut Israel short, and Hazael smote them in all the coasts of Israel

In those days, in the time of Jehu's life and reign, as may be gathered by comparing ver. 34. In ver. 34, smote them either to diminish the number of the people, by cutting them off, or to straiten their borders. In all the coasts of Israel, i. e. in their borders, or the uttermost part of their land beyond Jordan, as it is explained, ver. 34. And at this time possibly he cut off those cruelities mentioned chap. viii. 12.

33 From Jordan eastward, all the land of Gilead, the Gadites, and the Reubenites, and the Manassites, from Arcoer, which is by the river Arnon, even Gilead and Bashan

From Jordan eastward, to wit, from the land of Canaan

34 Now the rest of the acts of Jehu, and all that he did, and all his might, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

35 And Jehu slept with his fathers, and they buried him in Samaria. And Jehoahaz his son reigned in his stead

36 And the time that Jehu reigned over Israel in Samaria was twenty and eight years

CHAP. XI

Athaliah destroyeth all the royal family, only Jeosiah escapeth, is his six years, in the house of God, 1-4. Jehoahaz giving order to the captains, in the seventh year smothereth him king 1-12. Athaliah is slain 13-16. The covenant is renewed between God the king and the people, and Baal's worship is destroyed, the king is set on his throne 17-21.

AND when Athaliah the mother of Jehoahaz saw that her son was dead, she arose and destroyed all the seed royal

1. e. All of the royal family left after those slain, ver. 2. Chron. xxi. 2. 1. e. 1. 2. Kings x. 13, 14, excepting the next six months and explains it. Thus she did partly out of rage at the extinction of her family, resolving that David's family should not outlive hers, partly from ambition and desire of rule, for which many persons had destroyed their nearest relations, partly from the zeal which she had for idolatry, and the worship of Baal, which she intended to establish, to which she knew the house of David were implacable enemies, and partly, in her own defence, that she might secure herself from Jehu's fury, who was commanded by God, and resolved in his cruelty to destroy all the branches of Ahab's family, whereof she was one, chap. xii. 18, 26, for had she not done this she suspected that either the king or people of Judah would have delivered her up to Jehu upon his demand. Possibly those whom she slew were Joash's children by another wife, of which see on the next verse. And thus was the fruit of Jehoahaz's marrying his son to a daughter of that idolatrous and wicked house of Ahab, even the extinction of all his posterity but one. And this dreadful judgment God permitted and inflicted upon him and his, to show how much he abhors all such sinful and unequal alliances.

2 But Jeosheba, the daughter of king Joram, sister of Athaliah, took Joash the son of Athaliah, and stole him from among the king's sons which were slain, and they hid him, even him and his nurse, in the bedchamber from Athaliah, so that he was not slain.

Jeosheba called Jehoshebeah, 2 Chron. xxi. 11. The daughter of king Joram, to wit, by another wife, and not by this Athaliah, for it is not likely Jehosheba, who married her 2 Chron. xxi. 11, would have married one of the wicked and cursed house except he were married very young, and therein overruled by his parents. Joash the son of Athaliah, either, 1. His adopted and legal son, who was to succeed him, though he was of another house, and of Nathan's family, as many think, such persons being sometimes called the sons of their predecessors, as we shall see hereafter. Or rather, 2 His proper and natural son; for not only he, but the rest who were slain, are here called the king's (i. e. Joram's) sons. From among the king's sons which were slain, either, 1 From amidst of the carcases, where this infant was laid, and supposed by her to be killed though it was not quite dead, either through the compassion or continuance of the instruments of this execution, or by some other artifice which his nurse used. Or, 2 Out of that apartment of the palace which was allotted for the king's children. They had him, Jehoshaphat and her husband Jehoram. In the bed-chamber, which was in the house of the Lord, as is affirmed in the next verse. So that it was one of those chambers adjoining on near to the temple, which were for the uses of the priests and Levites, and for them only; which made it more proper for this purpose.

3 And he was with her hid in the house of the Lord six years. And Athaliah did reign over the land.

Either Athaliah thought they were all dead, or if she suspected that Josiah was preserved, she thought an infant could do her no great harm, and that she could so well assure the kingdom to herself within a few years that she need not fear any such weak competitor. For she was willing to smother up the business, lest if she had made a strict and diligent search for it, the people should thereby learn that there was yet a son of David's family left, and so be ungovernable under her government, and desirous of a change. Athaliah did reign over the land, which she had an opportunity to do because she was not only the late king's wife, but also was probably made queen regent upon Joram's young to Ramoth-gilead.

4 ¶ And the seventh year Jehoram sent and fetched the rulers over hundreds, with the captains and the guard, and brought them to him into the house of the Lord, and made a covenant with them, and took an oath of them in the house of the Lord, and shewed them the king's son.

If the actions of Athaliah's reign strange and memorable, was not only very evil, but there were divers peculiar things in it, as, that Athaliah was a more usurper having no pretence of right to the crown, and one of that wicked line which God had particularly, and by name, devoted to destruction; that Athaliah's wife was nearer allied and had more right to the crown, than Athaliah; that the crown of Judah was by Divine appointment appropriated to the sons of David, and therefore the right of the crown was inherently in him whom Jehoram set up, which made her usurpation could not exclude that Jehoram was not a mere private person, but the husband of the king's son, and probably the high priest to whom it belonged in great part to see the laws of God executed; that Jehoram did not act alone in the business, but had the consent and concurrence of the chief rulers, both civil and ecclesiastical, and besides all this, that it is conceived that he had a special revelation of God's Spirit, or the direction and encouragement of the prophets of that time. So that this action cannot be drawn into a precedent for succeeding princes and for other kingdoms. The rulers over hundreds, of whom Exod. xxv. 20. Of these there were five, which are named 2 Chron. xxiii. 1. And these were either, 1 Civil or military officers. But then such small officers could not have stood him in much stead. And why did he not rather engage captains of thousands, or greater persons, whom doubtless he might easily have brought into this conspiracy? Or rather, 2 Priests or Levites of eminency as their work sheweth, ver. 5—7, 2 Chron. xxiii. 1, 4, and their disunion from the captains and guard. The captains, or princes, or nobles, or commanders, such as he knew were weary of her idolatrous and tyrannical government, and faithful to their king. The guard, possibly those who had been the former king's guard, who had been displaced by Athaliah, as persons whose fidelity she suspected. Into the house of the Lord, i. e. into the courts of that house which oft come under the name of the house, or temple of the Lord, for in the house none, but the priests or Levites might enter.

Made a covenant with them, to restore the king to his kingdom, and religion to its purity. Took an oath of them, for their secrecy and fidelity in the present design.

5 And he commanded them saying, This is the thing that ye shall do. A third part of you that enter in on the sabbath shall even be keepers of the watch of the king's house:

A third part of you, either, 1 A third part of you (i. e. of the whole number, including those that come in and those that go out on the sabbath,) even they that enter in on the sabbath, and so the two other third parts were to consist of those that went out on the sabbath as some gather from ver. 6, 7. Or rather, 2 A third part only of those that enter in on the sabbath, who seem to be plainly divided into three thirds here and ver. 6, as those that went forth on the sabbath are expressly distributed into two parts, ver. 7. That enter in on the sabbath, i. e. that come into the temple on the sabbath day. For the understanding of this matter, you must know that the Levites were, in and from David's time distributed into twenty-four courses, which were to do the work of the temple successively, and by turns, each course consisting of about a thousand men for his week; of which see 1 Chron. xxiii, xxiv. The watch of the king's house, either, 1 Of that bed-chamber where the king now was. But it is unlikely and without example, either that one bed-chamber of the temple, or any part of it, should be called the king's house. And besides the king's person is never used by other persons, ver. 7. Or rather, 2 Of that part which ledeth to the king's palace, which Athaliah now possessed, and whence they might expect opposition.

6 And a third part shall be at the gate of Sur, and a third part at the gate behind the guard, so shall ye keep the watch of the house, that it be not broken down. <sup>from breaking up</sup> If the gate of Sur, the chief gate of the temple, called the high gate 2 Kings xv. 35 and the foundation gate 2 Chron. xxiii. 5 and the east gate Jer. xix. 2, and the middle gate Jer. xxxix. 3 and the gate of the entrance Ezek. xl. 15. Behind the guard, either, 1 The king's guard; or, 2 The guard of the temple, for on a guard there was, and a captain of the guard called the captain of the temple, Act. vi. 1, v. 24. This guard was in the south side, and as some think is that which is called the door or the threshold gate 2 Chron. xxiii. 4. So that's been the watch of the house, that it be not broken down, i. e. so as to shall guard all the gates or entrances into the house or temple of God, that neither Athaliah nor any of her soldiers may break into the temple, and defile it, or destroy it, as she will doubtless endeavour to do. Or, and ye shall keep the watch of the house, i. e. the watch of the king's person, who think this was the name of a house not far from the temple, in which or against which, they were to keep a guard.

7 And two parts of all you that go forth on the sabbath, even they shall keep the watch of the house of the Lord about the king.

You that go forth on the sabbath, i. e. who having finished their course and work should have gone home, but were detained, 2 Chron. xxiii. 8. They shall keep the watch of the house of the Lord about the king, whilst the rest guard the doors and entrances into the temple, these shall have a special care of the king's person, part on his right, and part on his left hand.

8 And ye shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand, and he that cometh within the ranges, let him be slain, and be ye with the king as he goeth out and as he cometh in.

When you have set your watches, and guards all the rest of you shall draw near to the king to preserve his royal person from all assaults and danger. The ranges or fences, i. e. the walls wherewith the courts of the temple were environed, see ver. 15. Or your ranks or orders. If any of Athaliah's guards shall attempt to break in upon you, or within your bounds. Be ye with the king as he goeth out and as he cometh in; whether the king shall go out of the temple, to offend or subdue his enemies, or retire hither to defend himself, do you always accompany him

9 * And the captains over the hundreds did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest commanded: and they took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that should go out on the sabbath, and came to Jehoiada the priest.

10 And to the captains over hundreds did the priest give king David's spears and shields, that were in the temple of the Lord.

Spears and shields offensive and defensive weapons, which he gave to the captains both for themselves, and for all their soldiers, for they all came into the temple unarmed to prevent suspicion. These are called David's, either because they were such as he had taken from his enemies, which he had dedicated to God, and laid up in the temple as monuments of God's goodness to him, see 1 Sam. xvi. 9, 2 Sam. viii. 7, 11, 1 Kings vii. 51, or because David had made a sacred armour in the temple, whence arms might be taken upon extraordinary occasions, for the defence of the temple or city of God.

11 And the guard stood, every man with his weapons in his hand, round about the king, from the right corner of the temple to the left corner of the temple, along by the altar and the temple.

From the right corner of the temple to the left corner of the temple, from the south east to the north east side, by the altar, the altar of burnt-offerings, which was by the great and eastern gate of the temple. And the temple was by and towards the other parts of the temple, which they defended on all sides.

12 And he brought forth the king's son, and put the crown upon him, and gave him the testimony, and they made him king, and anointed him: and they clipped their hands and said, God save the king.

The testimony i.e. the book of the law which he put into the king's hand to mind him of his duty at his entrance upon his kingdom, which was to read and write out that holy book Deut. xxxii. 18 and to govern him (1) and his kingdom by it, the law of God being frequently and most properly called a testimony, a Test. xxxiii. 2, xxxv. 12, Isai. viii. 16, 20, see also Deut. vi. 17, 20. 2 Kings xxxiii. 1, because it is a witness of God's will and man's duty. Anointed him, as they used to do in doubtful cases, when there was any competition or question about the crown as now there was.

13 ¶ And when Athaliah heard the noise of the guard and of the people, she came to the people into the temple of the Lord.

The noise of the people who came thither upon the hearing of the noise and tidings of what was done. She came to the people to know into the cause of that great noise being hitherto kept in deep silence, partly because it was managed with so much secrecy and in the temple and partly because the people universally hated her and wished her downfall. In the temple of the Lord, i.e. into the courts, which by Jehoiada's direction she was permitted to enter though contrary to his general order, ver. 5. that so he might draw her into his net.

14 And when she looked, behold, the king stood by a pillar as the manner was, and the princes and the trumpeters by the king, and all the people of the land rejoiced and blew with trumpets, and Athaliah rent her clothes, and cried, Treason, Treason.

25, 10

By a pillar, possibly by one of the two famous pillars of the temple, of which see 1 Kings vii. 21, high unto which the throne was erected. If it be said, that none but priests might come thither, I answer, ordinarily they might not, but the king being a sacred person, especially upon such extraordinary occasions, might be there. Or, upon a scaffold, possibly that brazen scaffold which Solomon erected, 2 Chron. vi. 13, and left there for such purposes. See 2 Kings xxiii. 3.

15 But Jehoiada the priest commanded the captains of the hundreds, the officers of the host, and said unto them, Have her forth without the ranges, and him that followeth her kill with the sword. For the priest had said, Let her not be slain in the house of the Lord.

The officers of the host, of these companies of Levites, who are elsewhere called the Lord's host and now were the king's host. Without the ranges, of which see above, ver. 8. If she will not go out of them of her own accord force her out of them. Him that followeth her, if any of the people come hither upon this occasion, shall stand up for her help. In the house of the Lord, i.e. in the court of the temple, lest it be polluted with her blood.

16 And they laid hands on her, and she went by the way by the which the horses came into the king's house: and there was she slain.

They laid hands on her or, they gave her space or room to wit to, go out of the court of the temple, and did not keep her within it as they could have done. Or they up pointed hands for her, they ordered two bands of the Levites to follow her and kill her. In the way by the which the horses came into the king's house, by the great and public road in which horses and chariots went to the palace. There was she slain in an ignominious place and manner as her mother Jezebel had been.

17 ¶ And Jehoiada made a covenant between the Lord and the king and the people, that they should be the Lord's people: between the king also and the people.

Between the Lord and the king and the people, a sacred covenant whereby he solemnly engaged both the king and people as it here follows, that they should be the Lord's people, i.e. that they should renounce and root out all idolatry and set up and maintain God's true worship. Compare 2 Kings xxiii. 10. Between the king also and the people, this was a civil covenant whereby the king engaged himself to rule them justly and in the fear of God, and the people obliged themselves to defend and obey him. Compare 2 Sam. vii. 3.

18 And all the people of the land went into the house of Baal and brake it down: his altars and his images brake they in pieces thoroughly, and slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars. And the priest appointed officers over the house of the Lord.

He slew Mattan to which possibly he fled for refuge, or rather he was brought thither as a fit sacrifice to his God (1) or, he was the house of the Lord, of which see more particularly 2 Chron. xxiii. 18, 19.

19 And he took the rulers over hundreds, and the captains, and the guard, and all the people of the land, and they brought down the king from the house of the Lord, and came by the way of the gate of the guard to the king's house. And he sat on the throne of the kings.

By the way of the gate of the guard, i.e. by the gate of the royal palace where the king's guard stood.

20 And all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was in quiet, and they slew Athaliah with the sword beside the king's house.

IN the seventh year of Jahu *Jehoash began to reign, and forty years reigned he in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Zibiah of Beer-sheba.

2 And Jehoash did that which was right in the sight of the Lord all his days wherein Jehonada the priest instructed him.

To wit, for the matter of it though not with an honest and sincere mind, but only by the influence of his good tutor and restorer, as the words here following plainly imply.

2 Kings
12. 14

3 But the high places were not taken away the people still sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places.

The people were so fondly and strangely addicted to the high places that the foregoing kings though men of ripe years, and great power and courage, and finally settled in their thrones could not take them away, and therefore it is not strange if Jehonada could not now remove them when the king was very young and tender, and not well settled in his kingdom, and when the people were more corrupt and disorderly through Athaliah's administration. Sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places to God.

1 ¶ And Jehoash said to the priests, *All the money of the  $\frac{1}{2}$  dedicated things that is brought into the house of the Lord even the money of every one that passeth the account, the money that every man is set at, and all the money that  $\frac{1}{2}$  cometh into any man's heart to bring into the house of the Lord,*

Remembering that he owed his preservation and restoration to the temple and that he was made by God the guardian of his temple and worship, and that he had vowed himself to be so, Jehoash now takes care to repair it. All the money of the deducted things the money he offered for the general designation of the money the people whereof here follow. Or rather, secondly, A special branch of it the money which had been either formerly or lately vowed or dedicated to the use and service of God and of his house either by the former king, of which see 1 Chron. 28, and compare 1 Kings vii. 1, v. 15, 2 Kings vii. 18, 2 Chron. xi. 18, or by this king or his people. That is brought or rather, that shall be brought for though the people might vow to bring it thither in convenient time yet it is not likely they would bring much money during the tyrannical and idolatrous reign of Athaliah, or if they did, that Athaliah would not seize it for her own use. The money of every one that passeth the account i. e. the half shekel which was paid for every one that was numbered from twenty years old and upward, of which the very same phrase is used Exod. xxx. 13, compare 2 Chron. xxiv. 5, 6, 9. The money that every man is set at Heb. the money of souls or persons, according to his temper i. e. the money which every man that had vowed his person to God paid according to the rate which the priest put upon him, of which see Lev. xxvii. 2 & c. All the money that cometh into any man's heart, all that which he freely offered. See Exod. xvi. 2, xxxv. 5.

5 Let the priests take it to them, every man of his acquaintance and let them repair the breaches of the house, wheresoever any breach shall be found.

Let the priests take it to them, let them go abroad through all the parts of the land, as they have acquaintance and interest, and gather up the money, and bring it to Jerusalem. Wheresoever any breach shall be found either through decay, or by ill accidents, or by the malice of Athaliah or her relations, of which see 2 Chron. xxiv. 7.

6 But it was so, that in the three and twentieth year of king Jehoash the priests had not repaired the breaches of the house.

Either because the people were generally corrupt and backward to the worship of God, especially where it cost them anything, or because the persons employed in making the collections were negligent, or untasteful, perverting the money received to their own uses, as may seem probable from the contrary character of other persons of whom it is noted that they will faithfully below, ver. 15, or because the people did not like this way of collection, and had no good opinion of the collectors' faithfulness.

7 ¶ Then king Jehoash called for Jehonada the priest, and the other priests, and said unto them, Why repair ye not the breaches of the house? now therefore receive no more money of your acquaintance, but deliver it for the breaches of the house.

8 And the priests consented to receive no more money of the people, neither to repair the breaches of the house.

Not to take the charge of that work which the king had committed unto them, but freely to resign it to whom the king should appoint.

9 But Jehonada the priest took a chest, and bored a hole in the bul of it, and set it beside the altar, on the right side, as one cometh into the house of the Lord, and the priests that kept the door put therein all the money that was brought into the house of the Lord.

Jehonada the priest by the king's order, 2 Chron. xxiv. 5. This is the altar in the priests' court. Object. It was placed without at the gate of the house of the Lord 2 Chron. xxiv. 8. Answer. Either first, It was first placed by the altar and afterwards the altar moved to the gate of the court for the people's greater satisfaction, that they might come thither and put in their money with their own hands. Or, secondly, That place 2 Chron. speaks of the gate of the altar, i. e. the court, which might be the gate of the altar, or the court. Or thirdly, It was placed near the entrance into the priests' court which was over against the altar, and not far from it, so as the people standing in their own court might either put their money into it, or see when the priests put it in. The priests that kept the door, the door of the priests' court which, together with the temple and all its utensils, was committed to the charge of the priest and Levites Numb. xiii. 4, 1 Chron. ix. 26, &c.

10 And it was so, when they saw that there was much money in the chest, that the king's scribe and the high priest came up, and they put up in bags, and told the money that was found in the house of the Lord.

The king's scribe who kept an exact account hereof in writing. See 2 Kings xiv. 2, xxii. 3.

11 And they gave the money, being told, into the hands of them that did the work, that had the oversight of the house of the Lord, and they laid it out to the carpenters and builders, that wrought upon the house of the Lord.

Them that did the work that had the oversight of the house of the Lord, who were chosen out of the people, not without a refection upon the priests for their neglect or unfaithfulness

12 And to masons, and hewers of stone, and to buy timber and hewed stone to repair the breaches of the house of the Lord, and for all that was laid out for the house to repair it

And for all other things which were necessary for the reparation of the house

13 Howbeit there were not made for the house of the Lord bowls of silver, snuffers, basons, trumpets, any vessels of gold, or vessels of silver, of the money that was brought into the house of the Lord

There were not made to wit, until all the breaches of the house were repaired, but when that was done, they laid it out for these things as is noted 2 Chron xxiv 14

14 But they gave that to the workmen, and repaired therewith the house of the Lord

15 Moreover they reckoned not with the men, into whose hand they delivered the money to be bestowed on workmen for they dealt faithfully

For they perceived by many experiments that they were faithful

16 The trespass money and sin money was not brought into the house of the Lord "it was the priests'

It was not employed towards the reparation of the house, because as it follows, it was the priests' it was given to them for their private use and maintenance. Quest If this money was weighty how could the money of them that passed the account or the money that every man was set at be thus employed as they were ver 1 for these also may seem to have been the priests' Ans They were not up prebent to the priests but for the service of the tabernacle of the camp that was set out of the temple 1 Sam xxx 11 or for the Lord 1 Chr xxv 2 9 14 25

17 Then Hazael king of Syria went up, and fought against Gath, and took it and Hazael set his face to go up to Jerusalem

Then in this king's days when Jehoash was dead and Jeroboam revolted from God of which see 2 Chron xxv 17, & Gath, once a city of the Philistines, but taken by David, 1 Chron xiv 1 and now a part of the kingdom of Judah, set his face to directed his march and led his forces. Or undertook in good earnest. So the same phrase is used 2 Chron xx 1 Jer xvi 10, Ezek xxxv 2

18 And Jehoash king of Judah took all the hallowed things that Jehoshaphat, and Jehoram and Abaziah his fathers, kings of Judah, had dedicated, and his own hallowed things, and all the gold that was found in the treasures of the house of the Lord and in the king's house, and sent it to Hazael king of Syria and he went away from Jerusalem

Took all the hallowed things that necessity of saving his kingdom and people by the means which otherwise might seem to excuse the act was brought upon himself by his apostasy from God. See 1 Kings xv 18 19 And the rest of the acts of Joash, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

20 And the servants arose, and made a conspiracy, and slew Jehoash in the house of Millo, which goeth down to Sila

Made a conspiracy, of which see 2 Chron xxiv 25 In the house of Millo, either in the temple and famous place in Jerusalem called Millo, of which see 2 Sam. v. 9, 1 Kings ix 15, 24, xi 27, into which he possibly retired for his security, being afraid even of his own subjects and servants, or in some other place called by the same name, for some resemblance it had with it. Which goeth down to Sila, i. e. which standeth upon the descent to Sila, or upon that descending causeway which leadeth from Millo to the king's house. Some refer this to Joash, and render the phrase thus, they slew him at or near the house of Millo, descending, or as he was going down to Sila, to escape their hands

21 For Jozachar the son of Shimeath, and Jehoabab the son of Shomer, his servants, smote him, and he died, and they buried him with his fathers in the city of David and Amaziah his son reigned in his stead

Jozachar, called also Zabab, 2 Chron xxiv 26 Shomer called Shimeath, 2 Chron xxiv 26, except Shomer be the father's name, and Shimeath the mother's. With his fathers, i. e. in the same city, but not in the same royal sepulchre, 2 Chron xxiv 25

CHAP XIII

Jehoahaz king of Israel followeth the sin of Jeroboam, is oppressed by Hazael, and relieved by prayer, 1-9 Joash his son succeedeth him in the kingdom, and in his idolatry 10-13 Elisha prophesieth to loath three victories over the Syrians and death Joash's lamentation 14-19 4 year after the Moabites invading the land a dead man being cast into Elisha's sepulchre is restored to life 20-21 Hazael's death and loath recureth the cities which had been taken from his father 22-25

IN the three and twentieth year of Joash the son of Abaziah king of Judah Jehoahaz the son of Jehoash began to reign over Israel in Syria, and reigned seven years

He began to reign in the third year of Joash king of Judah, which is put for began to reign, 2 Kings i. xvi 15, 25, xii 1

2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord and followed the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat which made Israel to sin he departed not therefrom

3 And the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he delivered them into the hand of Hazael king of Syria, and into the hand of Ben-hadad the son of Hazael, all their days

Or rather all his days as it is explained, ver 22 4 And Jehoahaz besought the Lord, and the Lord hearkened unto him for he saw the oppression of Israel, because the king of Syria oppressed them

The Lord hearkened unto him not for his sake for he regards not the prayers of the wicked and impotent Psal lxxvi 18 Prov i 28, xi 5, but for other reasons expressed below ver 24 He saw, i. e. he observed it with care and compassion The oppression of Israel, his chosen and once beloved people He now helps them, because of his former and ancient kindness to them The king of Syria oppressed them, to wit very cruelly as it is expressed ver 7 So that he helped them not for their own sakes but because of the rage of their enemies, and their blasphemy which doubtless accompanied it See Deut xxxii 27, Psal xli 4

5 And the Lord gave Israel a saviour, so that they went out from under the hand of the Syrians and the children of Israel dwelt in their tents, as beforetime

A answer; either Elisha, below, ver 14, or rather, Jehoahaz, the son of this Jehonah, below, ver 25, and Jeroboam his son, 2 Kings vii 25. In their tents, as beforetime, in peace and security not only in their strong cities but even in their tents in the fields

6 Nevertheless they departed not from the sins of the house of Jeroboam, who made Israel sin, but †walked therein. †and there †remained the grove also in Samaria)

Which Ahab had planted for the worship of Baal, 1 Kings xvi 32, and which should have been destroyed, Deut vii 5.

7 Neither did he leave of the people to Jehoahaz but fifty horsemen, and ten chariots, and ten thousand footmen, for the king of Syria had destroyed them, <sup>g</sup>and had made them like the dust by threshing

Neither did he i.e. the king of Syria ver 1 with which this verse is to be joined, ver 5 and 6 being put within a parenthesis, as it is in our translation. But this verse may be translated otherwise, Although he (rather the king of Syria, ver 1 or the Lord, ver 5 to whom judgments are oft ascribed, even when wicked men are the instruments of executing it) had not left, &c. And so it may be joined with the next foregoing verse as a great aggravation of their impiety and obstinate continuance in their idolatry, notwithstanding such terrible judgments which in all reason should have driven them from it. Leave of the people i.e. of his army or men of war as the following words come. Had made them like the dust by threshing, i.e. had broken and ground them to dust or powder as the corn is many times broken by threshing.

8 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jehoahaz and all that he did, and his might, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

His might, for though his success was not good he showed much power, valour and courage, which is noted to intimate that the Israelites were not conquered because of the baseness and cowardice of their king, but merely for the righteous and dreadful judgment of God who was now resolved to reckon with them for their filthy apostasy.

9 And Jehoahaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in Samaria, and †Joash his son reigned in his stead.

10 ¶ In the thirty and seventh year of Joash king of Judah began Jehoahaz the son of Jehoahaz to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned sixteen years.

By which, compared with ver 1 it may be gathered that Jehoahaz had two or three years before his death made his son Jehoahaz king with him, which is very probable, because he was perpetually in the state of war, and consequently in danger of an untimely death, and because he was a man of valour as is implied here, ver 12, and declare 2 Chron xxv.

11 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, he departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel sin but he walked therein

12 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Joash, and all that he did, and his might who re- with he fought against Hazael king of Judah, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

13 And Joash slept with his fathers, and Jeroboam sat upon his throne, and Joash was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel

14 ¶ Now Elisha was fallen sick of his sickness whereof he died. And Joash the king of Israel came down unto him, and wept over his face, and said, O my father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof.

He wept over his face, not for any true love and respect to him, for then he would have followed his counsel, in forsaking the calves, and returning to the Lord, but for his own and the kingdom's insupportable loss in him. The chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof ver 2 Kings ii, 12

15 And Elisha said unto him, Take bow and arrows. And he took unto him bow and arrows

16 And he said to the king of Israel, Put thine hand upon the bow. And he put his hand upon it, and Elisha put his hands upon the king's hands

17 And he said, Open the window eastward. And he opened it. Then Elisha said, Shoot. And he shot. And he said, The arrow of the Lord's deliverance, and the arrow of deliverance from Syria? for thou shalt smite the Syria men at Aphek, till thou have consumed them

To smite rather towards Syria which lay north eastward from the land of Israel, or towards the Leucities land beyond Jordan, which lay eastward from Chemun, and which was now possessed by the Syrians. Either way this arrow is shot against the Syrians as a token what God intended to do against them. In Aphek, not in the city but in the territory of it where it seems there was a great battle to be fought between the Israelites and Syria. Of Aphek see 1 Sam ix 4 xxix 1 1 Kings ix 30 though it is possible there might be several cities of that name. Or as in Aphek i.e. in a hill unto them as they were smitten in the city and territory of Aphek i.e. utterly destroy them, see 1 Sam xxv 20 29 of the particle as being off under a smother as hath been formerly and frequently proved. Till thou have consumed them i.e. the Syrians not all that people but their armies, or at least that which was to be at Aphek where a dreadful battle was to be fought. Or if this be meant of all the Syrian armies that so he understood conditionally if he did not hinder his unbelief or neglect he might have done in the following verse.

18 And he said, Take the arrows. And he took them. And he said unto the king of Israel, Smite upon the ground. And he smote thrice, and stayed.

Smite upon the ground the former way, intended victory of Israel was to do but the number of the victories.

19 And the man of God was wroth with him, and said, Thou shouldst have smitten five or six times, then hadst thou smitten Syria till thou hadst consumed it: whereas now thou shalt smite Syria but thrice.

Quæst Whence was Jehoahaz's fault, or why was the prophet angry with him? Answer The prophet himself did not yet know how many victories Jehoahaz should obtain against the Syrians but God had signified to him that he should learn that by the number of the king's strokes. And he was angry with him, not simply because he smote only thrice, but because he his unbelief and idolatry he provoked God so to overcome his heart and hand that he should smite but thrice which was a token that God would also do no further although he smiting but thrice might proceed either from his unbelief or negligence. For by the former sign, and the prophet's comment upon it he might clearly perceive that this also was intended as a sign of his success against the Syrians, and the return he ought to have done it frequently and vehemently.

20 ¶ And Elisha died, and they buried him. And the bands of the Moabites invaded the land at the coming of the year thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife and there passed by a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trod down the thistle

11 Kings 4, 22

By the thistle, a low and contemptible yet troublesome shrub he understands Amaziah and by the cedar himself whom he intimates to be far stronger than he, and out of his reach Give thy daughter to my son to wife, let us make a match, i. e. let us fight, only he expresseth this bloody work in a civil manner as Amaziah had done, ver 8, and as Abner did, 2 Sam y 11 Or let thy kingdom and mine be united under one king, as formerly they were and let us decide it by a pitched battle whether thou or I shall be that king Or, as some expound it, by affirming that it was great arrogance and presumption for him to desire a friendly league or affinity with him he leaves him to guess how intolerable it was that he should undertake to wage war against him Trod down the thistle and with no less ease shall my soldiers tread down thee and thy father

10 Thou hast indeed snatched Idom and thine heart hath lifted thee up glory of this and tarry at home for why shouldst thou meddle to thy hurt, that thou shouldst fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100

Glory of this content thyself with that glory and success and let not thine ambition betray thee to ruin

11 But Amaziah would not hear Therefore Jehoash king of Israel went up and he and Amaziah king of Judah looked one another in the face at Bethshemesh, which belongeth to Judah

10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100

Amaziah would not hear because God blinded him and led him to his destruction for his abominable and idolatrous idolatry 2 Chron xxx 20 Jehoash returned to the kingdom of Judah carrying the war into his enemy's country Which belongeth to Judah which is added to distinguish from that Bethshemesh in Issachar and other in Naphtali Josh viii 22

12 And Judah was put to the wars before Israel and they fled every man to their tents

10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100

Being unsatisfied in the round and manner of the quarrel and discouraged by their king's idolatry and nation's God with a spirit of fear

13 And Jehoash king of Israel took Amaziah king of Judah the son of Jehoash the son of Ahaziah at Bethshemesh, and came to Jerusalem, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem from the gate of Ephraim unto the corner gate, four hundred cubits

10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100

Came to Jerusalem commanding entrance in Amaziah's camp and with his consent which he did not have The gate of Ephraim, which is to Ephraim Two hundred cubits which was done partly in secret and partly openly that he might recover and retake it if they should attempt to remove the war

14 And he took all the gold and silver, and all the vessels that were found in the house of the Lord and in the treasures of the king's house, and hostages, and returned to Samaria

10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100

Hostages, to assure their payable tribute towards him Returned to Samaria he did not keep Jerusalem, nor seek to gain the possession and dominion of that kingdom, partly because he thought he could not keep it considering the difficulty he found in keeping his own from such potent and warlike enemies as the Syrians were, and the great affection which all Judah bore to David's house, and partly because God so inclined his heart that he might do good has promise to David and his family

15 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jehoash which he did, and his might, and how he fought with Amaziah king of Judah, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

16 And Jehoash slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel, and Jeroboam his son reigned in his stead

17 ¶ And Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah lived after the death of Jehoash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel fifteen years

18 And the rest of the acts of Amaziah, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

19 Now they made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem and he fled to Ephraim but they sent after him to Ephraim and slew him there

They were the people of the princes and chief men among them possibly those whose sons he had delivered up as hostages to Jehoash, with the connivance, if not approbation of the people, as appears because the design was carried on openly and boldly and irresistibly as the following word show Ephraim a strong city in Judah, beyond the Jordan's, of which see Josh x 31 xv 39, 2 Kings xvi 5 They sent after him, either secret murderers or rather bands of soldiers for this rebellion was carried on by secret hand and open force Compute 2 Kings xii 20 xv 10 14

20 And they brought him on horses and he was buried at Jerusalem with his fathers in the city of David

On horses, with horses, to wit, in a chariot 21 ¶ And all the people of Judah took Amaziah, which was sixteen years old, and made him king instead of his father Amaziah

When they did either in opposition to the conspirators, or to show their affection to the king David's son that inquiry was only personal against Amaziah whom they looked upon as the author of all their calamities They Azor it is called Ephraim 2 Kings xv 30 2 Chron xxxvi 1 Ephraim was famous for the same thing for substance, that God's help and the God's strength

22 He built Ephraim, and restored it to Judah, so that the king slept with his fathers

He built Ephraim repaired and fortified it, for it was built before Deut ii 8 Restored it to Judah, from whom it had revolted with the rest of Idom, in which land there place was up to the Red Sea The king, i. e. his father Amaziah who did not perfect his conquest of Idom, but left some work for his son

23 ¶ In the fifteenth year of Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel began to reign in Samaria, and reigned forty and one years

24 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord he departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin

25 He restored the coast of Israel from the entering of Hamath unto the sea of the plain, according to the word of the Lord God of Israel, which he spoke by the hand of his servant Jonah the son of Amittai, the prophet, who was of Gath-hepher

10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100

The entering of Hamath was the northern border of the kingdom of Israel, Numb xii 21 xxxiv 5 into the sea of the plain, i. e. unto the Dead Sea which once was a goodly plain, Gen xii 10, which was their southern border Jonah, or Jonas, one of the small prophets, though this prophesy of his is not recorded there, and therefore it is remembered here

26 I or the Lord saw the affliction of Israel, that it was very bitter for there was not any shut up, nor any left, nor any helper for Israel

It was very bitter whereby he was moved to pity and help them though they were an unworthy people There was not any shut up nor any left see of this phrase on Deut xxxii 30, I Kings xiv 10, xxi 21

27 And the Lord said not that he would blot out the name of Israel from under heaven but he saved them by the hand of Jeroboam the son of Joash

The Lord said not, i. e. not yet, he had not yet declared this as afterwards he did by the succeeding prophets, though not in those words See Hos 1 5, 6, 9

28 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, and all that he did, and his might, how he waried and how he recovered Damascus, and Hamath, which he belonged to Judah, for Israel, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

Damascus and Hamath were cities of Syria but were taken from the Syrians by David and Solomon 2 S m vii 6, 2 Chron viii 3 and probably by them incorporated with and added to the possession of them which tribe to which from that time they belonged but afterwards they were retaken by the Syrians and were now recovered by this Jeroboam

29 And Jeroboam slept with his fathers, even with the kings of Israel and Zachariah his son reigned in his stead

CHAP. XV.

Azariah his good reign but is smothered with leprosy, and death, 1-7 Zachariah reigneth ill, is slain by Shallum, who reigneth a month, and is slain by Menahem 8-15 He is strengthened by Pul king of Assyria Pekahiah his son succeedeth him, 16-22 He is slain by Ithobaal 23-26 Ithobaal the Israelites is carried down captive to Assyria by Tiglath pileser 27-29 He slew Zachariah 30-38 Ithobaal's son succeedeth him Ithobaal's good reign over Judah 39-48

IN the twenty and seventh year of Jeroboam king of Israel began Azariah son of Amaziah king of Judah to reign

Quest How can this be true seeing Azariah the father of this Azariah reigned only till the fifteenth year of Jeroboam's reign chap xiv 2 23 Azariah This might be either first, Because Jeroboam was made king by and reigned with his father eleven or twelve years and afterwards reigned alone, and so this is a twofold beginning of his kingdom, by the former this was his twenty seventh year and by the latter his thirtieth year Or secondly Because there was an interregnum, or eleven or twelve years in the kingdom of Judah either through the prevalence of that nation which cut off Azariah the father and kept the son out of his kingdom, or because Azariah was very young when his father was slain and the people were not agreed to restore him to his right till the twentieth year chap xiv 21, 2 Chron xxxi 1 And yet so soon as he was of age to reign, in which he was excluded from the exercise of his regal office, some think to be included in those fifty two years which are here ascribed to Azariah's reign, ver 2, which may well be doubted. Azariah, called also Uzziah here, ver 13, 30 began Azariah to reign, solely and fully to exercise his regal power

2 Sixteen years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned two and fifty years in Jerusalem And his mother's name was Jecholiah of Jerusalem

Besides the sixteen years of his minority last mentioned

3 And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, according to all that his father Amaziah had done,

i. e. In the same manner, unsincerely, and but for a time

4 Save that the high places were not removed the people sacrificed and burnt incense still on the high places

Save that, understand this as howbeit, chap xiv 4

5 ¶ And the Lord smote the king, so that he was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a several house And Iotham the king's son was over the house, judging the people of the land

He was a leper, the cause whereof see 2 Chron xxxi 16 Dwelt in a several house, separated from conversation with others by virtue of that law, Lev xiii 16, which being the law of the king of kings, bound kings no less than subjects Over the house judging the people of the land i. e. he governed the king's court and whole kingdom in his name and in his consent

6 And the rest of the acts of Azariah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

7 So Azariah slept with his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in the city of David, and Iotham his son reigned in his stead

8 ¶ In the thirty and eighth year of Azariah king of Judah did Zachariah the son of Jeroboam reign over Israel in Samaria six months

The thirty and eighth year of Azariah, of which see the note on ver 2 9 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, as his fathers had done he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat who made Israel to sin.

10 And Shallum the son of Tabesh conspired against him, and smote him before the people, and slew him, and reigned in his stead

Shallum the son of Tabesh, one of his chief captains Before the people openly and impudently, which he presumed to do either because he remembered that the promise of the kingdom made to Jehu was confined to the fourth generation, chap x 30, which he observed to be now expired, or because he perceived that the people were generally disaffected to their king and favourable to his attempt

11 And the rest of the acts of Zachariah, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel

12 This was the word of the Lord which he spake unto Jehu, saying, Thy sons shall sit on the throne of Israel unto the fourth generation And so it came to pass

13 ¶ Shallum the son of Tabesh began to reign in the nine and thirtieth year of Uzziah king of Judah, and he reigned a full month in Samaria

14 For Menahem the son of Gadi went up from <sup>1</sup>Tirzah, and came to Samaria, and smote Shallum the son of Jabesh in Samaria, and slew him, and reigned in his stead

15 And the rest of the acts of Shallum, and his conspiracy which he made, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel

16 ¶ Then Menahem smote <sup>1</sup>Tiphsah, and all that were therein, and the coasts thereof from Tirzah because they opened not to him, therefore he smote it and all the women therein that were with child he ripped up

Tiphsah, either that Tiphsah mentioned I Kings iv 24 or another city of that name. The coasts thereof from Tirzah, i. e. all the people dwelling between Tirzah and Tiphsah. Because they opened not to him, because they refused to open the gates of their city to him and to submit to him as conqueror. The women he ripped up, that by this example of severity he might affright all the rest of the people into obedience

17 In the nine and thirtieth year of Azariah king of Judah began Menahem the son of Gadi to reign over Israel, and reigned ten years in Samaria

18 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord: he departed not all his days from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin

19 And Pul the king of Assyria came against the land and Menahem gave Pul a thousand talents of silver, that his hand might be with him to confirm the kingdom in his hand

Pul the king of Assyria called by another name Pul belshazzar, who by the help of Arbaces the Median conquered Sardanapalus the last monarch of Assyria and transferred the kingdom to Chaldees and was the first King of Babylon and Assyria. Arbaces the founder of the Median and Persian. Against the land i. e. to the west of Israel. The context shows Menahem gave a great sum of money to the king to secure his aid. That his hand might be with him, to confirm the kingdom in his hand that he might assist him against all that did or should oppose him. By which it appears that his cruelty to Tiphsah was not from establishing him, as he expected, that it weakened and endangered him so far, that he was forced to call in a foreign prince to his aid

20 And Menahem exacted the money of Israel, even of all the mighty men of wealth, of each man fifty shekels of silver, to give to the king of Assyria. So the king of Assyria turned back and stayed not there in the land

Of each man i. e. of each of those worthies. Israelites. But as each of these were not equally wealthy, so it is not probable that he taxed them equally. Others therefore render For each man, i. e. for every Assyrian soldier, which interpretation is favoured by the placing of the words in the Hebrew text, which differs from that in our translation

21 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Menahem, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

22 And Menahem slept with his fathers, and Pekahiah his son reigned in his stead

23 ¶ In the fifth year of Azariah king of Judah Pekahiah the son of Menahem began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned two years

24 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

25 But Pekah the son of Remaliah, a captain of his, conspired against him, and smote him in Samaria, in the palace of the king's house, with Argob and Ariehs and with him fifty men of the Gileadites and he killed him, and reigned in his room

Argob and Ariehs might be either Pekah's partners in this treason, or the king's counters or officers who were now slain with him. Fifty men of the Gileadites, who assisted him in the execution of his treason

26 And the rest of the acts of Pekahiah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel

27 ¶ In the two and fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah Pekah the son of Remaliah began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned twenty years

28 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

29 In the days of Pekah king of Israel came Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and took Ijon, and Abel-beth-maacah, and Imoth, and Kedesh, and Hazor, and Gilead, and Galilee, all the land of Naphtali and carried them captive to Assyria

Tiglath-pileser or Tibhath-pileser, 2 Chron xxviii 20, called in another author Phulose or Phul a son the son of that Pul or Phul who, ver 19 Shalmaneser, of which see I Kings xv 20. Ijon, a city of Ephraim, Josh xvi 6. Abel-beth-maacah, two cities of Naphtali, Josh xii 22, xiv 30. Gilead, all the land beyond Jordan which was higher to the Assyrians than the rest. Galilee to wit the Upper Galilee, as may be gathered from the following word all (i. e. even all) of Naphtali, which seem to be added by way of explanation or restriction, to show what Gilead he meant even Upper, in which Naphtali did not fall. See the notes on I

30 And Hoshea the son of Elah made a conspiracy against Pekah the son of Remaliah, and smote him and slew him, and reigned in his stead, in the twentieth year of Itham the son of Uzzi

Smote him and slew him, which he did not only effect, because the people were enraged against Pekah the man who by his murder of king Pekahiah the son of Menahem, whom the Assyrian monarch set up and favoured and by his unnecessary war with Ahaz, had brought the Assyrians upon them, and caused the loss of one half of that kingdom. In the twentieth year of Iotham the son of Uzziah. How could this be, when Iotham reigned only sixteen years below ver 32. Uzziah. The meaning is that he began his reign in the twentieth year after the beginning of Itham's reign, or, which is the same thing, in the fourteenth year of Ahaz, son of Iotham, as appears from chap xv 2. But the sacred writer, having not yet made mention of Ahaz, thought it more proper to number Hoshea's years by Iotham, of whom he had spoken, than by Ahaz. Besides, Iotham did reign divers years in his father's life, so might Ahaz in Iotham's life, and Iotham might live divers years (which it is needless here to inquire) reign upon the administration of the kingdom wholly unto Ahaz, lived some years before his death, and therefore might be said to reign but sixteen years though he lived longer

31 And the rest of the acts of Pekah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel

32 ¶ In the second year of Pekah the son of Remaliah king of Israel began to Jerusalem to worship, and yet, the measure of the Israelites' sins being now full, vengeance comes upon them without remedy compare 2 Kings xxiii 26

3 ¶ Against him came up <sup>considered</sup> Shalmaneser king of Assyria, and Hoshea became his servant, and gave him presents

Shalmaneser, the son or successor of Tiglath-pileser. The ancient Hebrew writers make him the same with Sennacherib who eight years after the time invaded the kingdom of Judah, see chap xxvii 10, 13, it being very frequent in the eastern parts for one man to be called by several names, especially by the people of several countries. Jo ephus affirms that he met with his name in the Annals of the Tyrians which were extant in his days. He came against him either because he denied the tribute which he had promised to pay, or that he might make him tributary gave him presents, swore fealty to him, and engaged to pay him a tribute

4 And the king of Assyria found conspiracy in Hoshea for he had sent messengers to So king of Egypt, and brought him present to the king of Assyria, as he had done year by year therefore the king of Assyria shut him up, and bound him in prison

So king of Egypt, by heathen writers called Suet or Sathus, that by his assistance he might shake off the yoke of the king of Assyria, who now was and for many years had been the king of Egypt's rival see 2 Kings xviii 21, for xxxviii 5. Shut him up and bound him in prison to wit, after he had come up against him and taken him with him, the particular relation whereof follows

5 ¶ Then the king of Assyria came up throughout all the land and went up to Samaria, and besieged it three years

6 ¶ In the ninth year of Hoshea the king of Assyria took Samaria, and carried Israel away into Assyria, and placed them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes

This is added to distinguish this place from the former which was either in Assyria or in the mountainous and a scrubbed parts of Media. Hither he carried them partly to replenish his own country and partly because the places were at so great a distance from Canaan that they would cut off all hopes and thoughts of returning to their own country

7 For so it was, that the children of Israel had sinned against the Lord their God, which had brought them up out of the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and had served other gods,

8 And walked in the statutes of the heathen whom the Lord cast out from before the children of Israel, and of the kings of Israel, which they had made

In the statutes of the heathen i.e. according to the laws and customs of the heathen in the worship of their Baals and other of the gods. Which they had made i.e. which the kings of Israel had ordained concerning the worship of the calves, and when they were going up to Jerusalem to worship

9 And the children of Israel did secretly those things that were not right against the Lord their God, and they built them high places in all their cities, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city

Things that were not right i.e. in the Lord thus being true, 1. To their idols and other abominable practices which they worshipped to own before others compare Jer. xlii 19. 2. To the worship of calves, and so the words are otherwise understood, and it is agreeably to the Hebrew text, they cloaked, or disguised, or covered things that were not right against, or before, or towards the Lord, i.e. they covered their idolatrous worship of the calves with fair pretences of necessity, the two kingdoms being now divided, and at enmity, and of their honest intention of serving the true God, and retaining the substance of the Jewish religion, from which they alleged that they differed only in circumstances of worship. From the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city, in all parts and places, both in cities and in the country; yea, in the most uninhabited and neglected parts, where few or none dwell beside the watchmen who are left there in towers, to preserve the cattle and fruits of the earth, or to give notice of the approach of enemies.

10 And they set them up images and groves in every high hill, and under every green tree

11 And there they burnt incense in all the high places, as did the heathen whom the Lord carried away before them, and wrought wicked things to provoke the Lord to anger

As did the heathen, not only to the Lord, which was practiced and tolerated sometimes in the kingdom of Judah, but also to the idols or Bials of the heathen. Whom the Lord carried away before them for the same sins, by whose example they should have taken warning. To provoke the Lord to anger i.e. in despite and contempt of God, and his authority and commands as the next verse shows

12 For they served idols, whereof the Lord had said unto them, Ye shall not do this thing

13 Yet the Lord testified against Israel, and against Judah by all the prophets, and by all the seers, saying, Turn ye from your evil ways, and keep my commandments and my statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers and which I sent to you by my servants the prophets

Testified against Israel, disowned, and gave testimony against their false worship which they would fasten upon him and against all their impieties. By all the prophets and by all the seers, to whom he declared his mind by revelation by revelations and visions and by whom he published it to our bearing witness from heaven to their doctrine by comment and glorious miracles. According to all the law which I commanded your fathers whereby he accuses them of perversity that they observed only those laws of God which they might slyly keep and lived in the constant breach of others, which their kings forbade them to observe

14 Notwithstanding they would not hear, but hardened their necks, like to the neck of their fathers, that did not believe in the Lord their God

Hardened their necks i.e. refused to submit their neck to the yoke of God's precepts, a metaphor from stubbornness that in men necks harden or stiff, and will not bow to the yoke see on Deut. xxxi 27

15 And they rejected his statutes, and his covenant that he made with their fathers and his testimonies which he testified against them, and they followed vanity, and became vain, and went after the heathen that were round about them, concerning whom the Lord had charged them, that they should not do like them

They followed vanity i.e. idols, not so called, because of their nothingness, impotency, and unprofitableness, and to show the folly and madness of idolaters. Became vain, by the long worship of idols, they were made like the nations, foolish, and so foolish creatures

Beth-el, and taught them how they should fear the Lord.

1. The manner of God's worship is it expressed in Israel, as may be gathered from the origin of this people, who was in Israel's history, and from the place of its residence, Beth-el a place of worship for the worship of the calves, and from the manner of their making priests by this man's ordination ver. 32.

20 Howbeit every nation made gods of their own, and put them in the houses of the high places which the Samaritans had made, every nation in their cities wherein they dwelt.

Made gods of their own or worshipped, (as that verb is conjugated) which see Exod xxxv 35, i.e. those whom they worshipped in the places from whence they came whose names here follow. The Samaritans i.e. the former people or inhabitants not of the city, but of the kingdom of Samaria.

21 And the men of "Babylon" made Succoth-benoth, and the men of Cuth made Nergal, and the men of Hamath made Asnath.

22 And the Avites made Nibhaz and Tartak, and the Sepharvites burnt their children in fire to Adrammelech and Anammelech, the gods of Sepharvaim.

23 So they feared the Lord, and made unto themselves of the lowest of them priests of the high places which sacrificed for them in the houses of the high places.

Of the lowest of the priests of the high places see the note on I Kings xii 31. Which sacrificed for them to worship the true God for a time the worship of their own gods they needed no instruction and would not permit a second and another religion to manifest therein.

24 They feared the Lord, and served their own gods after the manner of the nations whom they carried away from them.

25 By fear of the Lord they worshipped God externally in that way which the Israelites used. Served then on a mode. The manner of the nations whom they carried away from them. These words belong either 1. To both the foregoing chapters, and to the Israelites, and then the sense is they had in the steps of their predecessors the Israelites (who in one of their several tribes are both here and elsewhere mentioned) who did many of them worship both God and their carved and bad gods. Or 2. To the last branch only, but then the words must be otherwise rendered. They carried away from them the manner of the nations whom they brought in carried them on from whence they (the new inhabitants) were brought, i.e. each of them served a god of the country or place whence he was brought as is related above, ver. 31. But these authors could not so properly be said to be carried away or to be carried away captive, (as this Hebrew word signifies) as the Israelites, and therefore the former interpretation seems more proper.

26 Unto this day they do after the former manner, they fear not the Lord, neither do they after their statutes, or after their ordinances, or after the law and commandment which the Lord commanded the children of Jacob, whom he named Israel.

Unto this day they do i.e. the Samaritans whose religion he hath here at length described and to the description whereof he hath referred. The following verses are a dissertation which the prophet takes an occasion to compare them with. He saith and to aggravate the sins of the Israelites which he doth ver. 35 &c. and then returns to the principal subject.

subjects of this whole discourse: and of whom he uniquely speaks, ver. 35, and thence to ver. 41, of which also the last word of ver. 33 are to be understood, and from thence he takes an occasion to return to his train of business to relate and aggravate the sins of Israel, and thereby to justify his severe proceedings against them to all the world. So the sense of the place is this, As the Israelites before their captivity gave their obnoxious an ill example in serving the Lord and Baal together, so, or after their former manner they do unto this day, in the land of their captivity. They fear not the Lord, though they pretended to fear and serve both the Lord and idols, yet in truth they did not, and do not fear or worship the Lord, but their own calves or other vain inventions, and God will not accept that mongrel and false worship, which they pretend to give to the true God. Or this may intimate that the Israelites were worse than their successors, because these feared the Lord and idols too; but they did quite cast off the fear and worship of God in their captivity, and wholly degenerate into heathenish idolatry. Their statutes i.e. God's law delivered to their fathers, and to them, as their inheritance, Psal cxix 111. This is alleged as an evidence that they did not fear the Lord, whatsoever they pretended because they lived in the constant breach of his statute. The children of Jacob i.e. themselves, the name put for the pronoun, which is usual among the Hebrews. Israel i.e. name signifying his special interest in God and power with him which was given to him, not only for himself but to his posterity also whom God frequently bore in with that name. And by this great favour he bestowed on them.

27 With whom the Lord had made a covenant and charged them saying, Ye shall not fear other gods, nor bow yourselves to them, nor serve them, nor sacrifice to them.

The Lord's commandment may produce a great effect upon the conduct of the following. See Gen xvi 1 Exod xix 12 xxv 7.

28 But the Lord, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt with great power and stretched out arm against them, shall ye fear, and him shall ye do worship, and to him shall ye do sacrifice.

29 And the statutes, and the ordinances, and the law and the commandment, which he wrote for you, ye shall observe to do for evermore, and ye shall not fear other gods.

30 And the covenant that I have made with you, ye shall not forget, neither shall ye fear other gods.

31 But the Lord your God ye shall fear, and he shall deliver you out of the hand of all your enemies.

The Lord your God i.e. God alone, as the whole context shows. He shall deliver you out of the hand of all your enemies, and therefore you have no need of need to go to other gods for relief.

32 Howbeit they did not hearken, but they did after their former manner.

33 So these nations feared the Lord, and served their graven images, both their children, and their children's children, as did their fathers, so do they unto this day.

So i.e. in the manner and after their example. These nations, who came in their stead.

CHAP. XVIII.

Hezekiah king of Judah his good reign. he is not afraid of the king of Assyria, and covenants with the Philistines 1-6. Sennacherib carried away captive by Shalmaneser king of Assyria.

Assyria for their sin, 9-12 Sennacherib made H Judah, and Hezekiah payeth him tribute, 13-16 Rabshakoh sent by Sennacherib, seeketh Hezekiah, blasphemeth God, and stirreth up the people to mutiny, which is told the king, 17-37

178 NOW it came to pass in the third year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, that Hezekiah the son of Ahaz king of Judah began to reign

In the third year, in the third of those nine years mentioned chap. xiii. 1, of which see there. See below
ver. 10

2 Twenty and five years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Abi, the daughter of Zachariah

Twenty and five years old was he when he began to reign.
How is this credible? For then Ahaz, who lived but six and thirty years, chap. xvi. 2, must be at Hezekiah at the eleventh year of his age. Anse 1 There are some like instances mentioned by credible authors, which the every man will not deny who are so ready to quarrel with the Holy Scriptures for such matters. 2 This being the confessed custom of sacred and other writers in the numbering of years, sometimes to omit and some times to add those which are imperfect or unfinished, and so Ahaz might be more than twenty years old when he began to reign, and a few years older when he died. And on the other side Hezekiah was at the beginning of his reign but only four and twenty years old complete, and he entered into his five and twentieth year. And thus Ahaz may be betwix thirteen and fourteen years old when he got Hezekiah, which is not at all strange especially in that nation to which God had promised a singular degree of long life.
For that house of David, to which God had made community of such great promises. 3 It is not in itself strange that thirty six years for these sixteen years which he reigned chap. xvi. 2, may be computed not from the beginning of his reign, when he reigned with his father to which is this notice on chap. xv. 30, which was in the twentieth year of his age, but from the beginning of his reign alone. 4 Some affirm that Hezekiah was not the third but only the second son of Ahaz. In proof of this is given in Scripture to such purpose, 1 Chron. in 16 compared with 2 Kings xv. 17. Mat. x.
12 compared with 1 Chron. 29. and 1 Kings xv. 1.
1 Chron. 29. 1. Heb. x. 21. and 1 Chron. 29. 1. 1 Chron. 29. 1.
xvi. 17. Luke 1. 23. Any of these arguments is impossible to any man of common probability, and the second books, whose Divine authority is not to be denied by any God and man, are but the fiction of fables and in the arts, which were formerly used, but now are sufficient, it is absurd to say that the resolution cannot be found because it is not yet found because it is made that many doubts be. In a Scripture and in the arts, which were formerly used, but now have been cleared in later times, and therefore may justly expect the resolution of other difficulties which be thought not yet fully explained. the xv. ch. 21.
xxix. 1

3 And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord according to all that David his father did

4 ¶ He removed the high places, and broke the images, and cut down the groves, and brake in pieces the brasen serpent that Moses had made for us to those days the children of Israel did burn incense to it, and he called it Nehushtan

He removed the high places, i. e. the most of them or such as the people most frequented, for all were not taken away.
chap. xxiii. 13, 14. And he attempted to do, notwithstanding the people's great and constant affliction to them, partly because he had more zeal and courage than his predecessors, and partly because the dreadful judgments of God upon the kingdom of Israel for their apostasy and idolatry had made the people of Judah more pliable to the commands of God and of their good king. The brazen serpent that Moses had made by God's command to be a ordinance or mean for the conveyance of God's blessing to the people, which the people had been hitherto kept as a monument of God's mercy, but being now commonly abused to superstition was destroyed. The children of Israel did burn incense to it, not doubtless as to a god, but only as to an instrument and token of God's mercy, by and through which their adoration was directed to God, and given to that only for God's sake. He called it Nehushtan, i. e. he said, This serpent, however formerly honoured, and used by God as a sign of his grace, yet now it is nothing but a piece of brass, which can do you neither good nor hurt, and therefore is no fit object for your worship.

5 He trusted in the Lord God of Israel, so that after him was none like him among all the kings of Judah, nor any that were before him

¶ He trusted in the Lord God of Israel without calling to foreign and heathenish succours to establish or help him, which his father Ahaz did chap. xvi. 7, Isa. vii, and before him Asa 1 Kings xv. 18-19 with reflection upon whom this seems to be noted. Nor any that were before him to wit of the Kings of Judah only, for David and Solomon were but sons of David. Object The like is said of Josiah, chap. xxiii. 23. here I wish of them excelled the other in several qualities or actions. Hezekiah in this that he fell up in the work with great expedition even in the beginning of his reign which Josiah did not chap. xxiii. 1, and with a less resolution, undertook to do that which none of his predecessors durst do even to remove the high places, wherein Josiah did only follow his example, chap. xxiii.

6 For he clave to the Lord, and departed not from following him, but kept his commandments, which the Lord commanded Moses

¶ Departed not from following him, in the general course of his life and especially in the matter of God's worship

7 And the Lord was with him, and he prospered whithersoever he went forth, and he rebelled against the king of Assyria, and served him not

¶ He was with him, i. e. he was with him to which his father had never submitted chap. xvi. 2, and he was with him to which he was independent, which God was with him to the house of David which Ahaz could not approve that to his own time. And Hezekiah's case is far much from that of Zedekiah, who is blamed for rebellion against the Lord, of Babylon because he had covenanted to him by solemn oath and covenant, whereas he could not do Ahaz, and because he broke the covenant, which he himself had made, and because God had actually given the dominion of his own land and people to the King of Babylon, and commanded both Zedekiah and his people to submit to him. And whereas Hezekiah's rebellion is said to be that word implies only a defection from that subject on which had been professed and performed a covenant, which on him may be justly done, and sometimes may not, and therefore that word doth not necessarily prove the action to be a sin. And these words, he rebelled, &c. are explained by the next following word, and he served him not. And that it was not a sin in him to rebel is most probable, because God did own and sustain his rebellion, and did not at all reprove him for it, but only which he sent to him by Isaiah about this matter chap.
xv. 20. &c. nor afterwards, though he did particularly reprove him for that which might seem a less fault for his vanity and ostentation, 2 Chron. xxx. 2, 26. For which reason, I have offended, see on ver. 14

8 ¶ He smote the Philistines, even unto Gaza, and the borders thereof, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city

¶ He smote the Philistines and recovered from them what his father had lost, 2 Chron. xxxii. 18. and more from their clothes rent, and told him the words of Bala-shakeli

CHAP. XIX.

Hezekiah acquainted Israhel the 1st shot with the bla phemy of

And it came to pass, when king Hec-kiah heard of that he rent his clothes, and covered himself with sack cloth, and went into the house of the Lord.

2 And he sent Phinnee, which was over the household, and Shabna the scribe, and the elders of the priests, covered with sackcloth, to <sup>1</sup>Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz

3 And they said unto him, Thus saith Heczekiah, Thus say ye a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and of blasphemy: for the children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth.

1 day of trouble and of rebuke rather than 3 From God wherein God rebukes and chastens us only. Or rather 2 From the Assyrian who reviles and reproacheth us for his business here to complain not of God but of the Assyrian. We are like a poor cripple who cannot extremity and having no strength left to please to bring forth himself into the world. We have been ed to deliver ourselves from the Assyrian yoke and let carried on that work to some man's use and we do not brought it to itself but now we have no more strength unless thou assist us. We have begun a new nation and are hindered by this insolent Assyrian in bringing it to perfection. See 2 Chron. xxxii. 1.

It may be the Lord thy God will hurl all the word of Rabshakeh, whom the king of Assyria has sent with thee to reproach the living God: and will improve the word, which the Lord thy God hath heard: wherefore lift up thy prayer for the remnant that are left

It may be, he speaks doubtfully. For he has not yet heard the Lord will not deliver them all up yet. As yet he thinks that he and his people have lived. But sometimes he is not a word out of his mouth but of good hope. (Num. xxi. 34 Josh. xiv. 12) For I said thy God to whom the Lord is a great precious. It is thine God because he has not yet to have forsaken and rejected them, and they have not designs of forsaking all their interest in him. He for I said and show by his actions that he hath heard them with great indignation. For I said thy God words of rather ill report him (an ellipsis of the pronoun which is frequent in the Hebrew) for I said thy God as the Sept. and Arabic and Chaldean render it. For I said thy God for the remnant thou he mentions is an enemy to stir up wrath to pray and to move them's enmities towards it. But these were but a millionth part of the children of God people of whom ten tribes were a whole. And the kingdom of Judah which had been greatly weakened and depopulated in the day of Ahab, and now lately by the Assyrian (xxi. 13)

5 So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah

And Is. 1. 1. said unto them, Thus shall ye say to your master. Thus saith the Lord, Be not afraid of the words which thou hast heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.

7 Behold, I will send a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumour, and shall return to his own land, and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.

I will send a blast upon him I feel a wind, a storm of tempest, by which man's God's judgments are oft called forth a violent and sudden, and terrible stroke; namely that remarkable destruction of his race of which ver 33 Although the place may be rendered thus, I will put a spirit within him so that he shall hear a rumour, and return, &c. For by spirit is many times understood an imagination, or illumination or affection in which sense we read of the spirit of fear 2 Tim 1 7, of the spirit of jealousy, Num 5 11 of the spirit of slumber Rom 8 8 Or, a spirit against (for so the Hb is) proposition both is oft used as hath been noted before) him, of whom this word is the same used in Judg 23 1 Sam 11 25 1 Kings 22 23, but is also given to man's soul Job 34 10 Eccles 10 7 which is a spiritual substance, as the angels are And this interpretation seems most agreeable to the design of this verse which is in brief to represent all the judgments of God which were to befall him and which are related in the following history and therefore all the other parts of the being continued in the following branches of the verse, in making 2 I think ver 9 in these words he shall hear a rumour, his intention to know him, and to return thence ver 10 de 7, at the next word, it seems most probable that the effect of all the judgments to wit the destruction of 150000 soldiers in verse 15 is intended of him but expressed in the first branch of the verse and the spirit here is the same thing which is denoted an angel, this first word being there used to limit and explain the former which is a new word of doubtful application

8. So Re-hel returned and found the king of Assyria's army against Libnah for he had heard that he was departed from Jericho.

He then charged led to the Kyōto road and recounted to us and to advance with him, which was further to be done. Leaving behind him the army under the other commanders mentioned in entry 17, as is most probable from the other statements, he set out to follow on, which would have been very unsuitable in this stage, but he was forced. He then departed from Echizen, not being able to take it.

9 And <sup>10</sup>when he heard say of Tirhakah king of Ethiopia Behold he is <sup>11</sup>come out to fight against thee he sent messengers unto Hezekiah saying

As for Thopos Heb. of Cush i.e. under 1. Of Arabia as that word is not commonly met with, which see the notes collected by my Tham Synops. upon 1. Arab. viii. 1. Or rather 2. Of Ethiopia beyond Egypt. Nor was there any need that he should defer his passage through Egypt which is objected against this opinion by a very learned man because the Egyptians (against whom *Sp*er. Semuchabai war) it is better to send as Herodotus and Heros relate and the Ethiopians were contraries in this expedition as Joseph expressly affirms who lived above 1600 years in the time when this was done that we and the Jews were more likely to understand it

10 Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah saying Let not thy God 'in whom thou trusted deceive thee saying, Jerusalem shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria

11 Behold, thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands by destroying them utterly: and shalt thou be delivered?

No, certainly never expect it such questions oft imply a denial is Gen xviii 17

12 <sup>will</sup> have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed, as Gozan, and Haran, and of Mount Carmel, which may seem to be another inaccessible place, like Lebanon. Or, into his forest, and his fruitful field, for Carmel, though properly it was a pleasant and fruitful mountain in the tribe of Issachar of which see Josh. xii 22, yet it is often used to signify, my fruitful place, as is manifest from Isa. xlii 15, xvi 10, Jer. ii 7. And thus all the parts of the land are here enumerated, the mountains, the cities, the woods, and the fruitful fields. Or, his fruitful forest to wit Jerusalem, which is thought by many interpreters to be called a forest, for xxi 11, Isaac xx 46 a name which agrees well enough to cities, where buildings are very numerous, and close, and high, like trees in a forest. And if Jerusalem might be called a forest, it might well be called Hezekiah's Carmel, or fruitful place, because his chief strength and treasure, and fruit was now in it, and this last word may seem to be added here to intimate that this was not like other forests, unsuitable and barren. And so both this and the foregoing words are under stood of the same place even of Jerusalem, the last branch being joined to the former by way of apposition, into the lodging of his beds the forest of his Carmel or his fruitful forest, there being no more words in the Hebrew text.

21 I have digged and drunk strange waters, and with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of besieged places.

Strange waters, such as were never discovered nor used by others. And therefore all this ends accounts to deprive me of water for my army. 2 Chron. xxxiii 3, trouble and trouble. With the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of besieged places, and as I can furnish my army with water digged out of the city by their labour, and my art, so I can deprive my enemy of their water, and can dry up their rivers, and that with the sole of my feet, i. e. with the march of my vast and numerous army, which will easily do this either by marching through them, and each enemy put away with them, or by digging every one a little of them, or by their pen-making many new channels, and drawing the water of the rivers into them. Cyrus closed up Euphrates, and they lay at Babylon.

22 Hast thou not heard long ago how I have done it, and of ancient times that I have formed it? now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldst be to lay waste fenced cities into ruinous heaps.

Hast thou not long since declared that which some of thy plagues could and did teach thee, that thou art a superior and powerful God by whose decree and providence all the wars and calamities were sent and ordered, whose more instrument thou art so that thou hast no cause for the event of things. This work is mine more than thine, thou art in the margin of our Bibles. Past thou not heard long ago it is to put thee in remembrance I have a right to constitute, purchased or adorned for all these ways as this Hebr. is very used) it (either Jerusalem which he now threatened, or rather the Jewish nation which he endeavoured to root out, the relative pronoun being put without the antecedent, which is to be gathered out of the context, of which I have formerly given instances) long ago, and for ever, in ancient times, i. e. didst thou not hear what I did to thy people many ages since that I carried them out of Egypt in spite of Pharaoh, and all his host, and through the Red Sea, where I overthrew the Egyptians, and through the vast howling wilderness, and then brought them into this land by a strong hand, by which I destroyed all their enemies and planted them in the land? By which it may be understood how dear the people are to me, and how easily I could destroy thee before them, if I saw it fit to do at the places which thou hast taken, and the conquests which thou hast made here, are not to be imputed to thy valour and numbers but unto my providence, who for wise and just reasons have given thee up into thy hands, as it here follows. This may seem to be the truest sense, because the victorious prince and people were much more likely to have the things of what

God did for the Israelites in Egypt, and at the Red Sea, and in Canaan, the fame of which was spread in all parts, than to hear of or be instructed in the doctrine of God's particular providence in the government of several nations and all their councils and actions of state and war. For though the Assyrian was indeed the rod in God's hand, &c. Isa. x 5, yet he did not so understand it, nor was God in all his thoughts, but he minded only the enlargement of his own empire by the destruction of other kingdoms, as it there follows, ver. 7, 13—15.

Now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldst be to lay waste fenced cities into ruinous heaps. This translation seems better to agree both with the foregoing branch of this verse, and with the following verse, than the other interpretative translation in the margin, and the plain sense seems to be this. Great things I have done for this people which thou canst not be ignorant of, but now I have changed my course towards them, resolved to punish them severely for their sins, and therefore now I have brought it to pass, i. e. I have so disposed of things by my providence, that thou shouldst be a great and victorious prince, and that thou shouldst employ thy forces against them to do my work upon them, that thou shouldst be (to wit, a person) raised up and fitted and strengthened for this very purpose, to lay waste fenced cities (and to turn them) into ruinous heaps, i. e. that thou shouldst be so successful as thou hast hitherto been first against the kingdom of Israel, and now against Judah.

23 Therefore their inhabitants were of small power, they were dismayed and confounded, they were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb, as the grass on the house tops, and as corn blasted before it be grown up.

These be words I declared thee with my commission, I told thee how thy spirit and courage, and thy army, thy people of Israel and Judah, and other places which thou hast conquered, as the grass of the field, which we see quickly fading, and ready to be cut, and my hand which offers violence to thee, shall be better than thine, and all their designs and hopes were disappointed before they could come to my perfection or success.

27 But I know thy pride, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage against me.

Though thou dost not know me, yet I thoroughly know thee, and all thy designs and courses. Thy secret and subtle contrivances in the plot of thy rebellion, thy own kingdom and court, and the contrivance of thy designs abroad, what thou intendest, I thoroughly know, and with what success or further thoughts thou comest in or returnest to thy own land. For the plot compare Deut. xxxii 2, Paul xxxiii 2. And thy rage against me, i. e. against my servant Hezekiah and my people against whom he was engaged, because they would not deliver up Jerusalem to him, which he demanded. Things are frequently said to be done against God which are only done against his people, because of that near union and relation which is between them. See Zech. ii 8, Acts. iv 5. But the words may well be rendered, and thy rage is with me, or before me, as the Syrian hath it, or, is manifest to me, as the Chaldee renders it. And so this branch of the verse answers to the former, I know, &c. and it is before me.

28 Because thy rage against me, and thy tumult is come up into mine ears, therefore I will put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.

Thy tumult, i. e. the tumultuous noise, thy clamours and blasphemies which Rabshakeh in thy name belched forth against me with a loud voice, chap. xviii 28. My hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, a metaphor for wild and furious beasts, that must be thus managed. I will turn then begin by the way by which thou comest: I will cause thee to return to thy home with shame and loss.

29 And thou shalt be "a sign unto thee, Ye shall eat this year such things as grow of themselves, and in the second year that which springeth of the same, and in the third year sow ye, and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruits thereof."

A sign unto thee, to wit of the certain accomplishment of the promises here made to thee, that Zion should triumph over this insulting enemy ver 21, that God would not only preserve the city from his present fury ver 31 but also that God would bless his people with a durable prosperity, and a happy increase, ver 30, 31. And thus it is not only a sign of a short deliverance, which would be past before this sign was fulfilled (though there are no traces of such signs as followed the thing done as I said in 12 ver 11) but of a future mercy, which was to continue long after that sign. And this sign was the more necessary because otherwise Heriah and his people had cause to fear that the Assyrians would be greatly enraged for their shameful repulse, and the debaution of their army, and would quickly recruit their army, and return against them with far greater force and violence. But some think that Sennacherib, when he heard of Tirhakah's march, sent him of which ver 9, went with his army to meet him, and overthrew him, and the Egyptian who was joined with him, as was noted before, and presented his victory by forwarding them into Egypt and Ethiopia, in the conquest of which he spent two years, in which space the people did such things as grow of themselves, and in the third year returned to Jerusalem, intending to besiege it. It is true, it is said, and so the sign went before the thing (which may be objected against the truth of this relation) ver 9, and when he heard of Tirhakah, he sent messengers to Hezekiah, pretending as if he would fight with him, and so it is not said that he did so, it is set down what he did with Tirhakah because the content of the sacred writer was only to write the history of the Jewish nation, not of others, but only with respect to them. To the king of Egypt was an excellent sign for we are not generally considering the wise and happy which the Assyrians had made in the land, and that the Jews had been forced to enter into their strong hold, and consequently to make of their city a strong and a queen, and yet this year they should have sufficient provocation of security of the earth, which the Assyrians left in the second year, which probability was the year of their return, when they much in others was to be promoted, and thus it brought forth a double effect, to wit, to the relief of their souls, and to the planting of vineyards, and the fruits thereof, you shall see by the next chapter upon us, but you shall not yet finish your studies.

30 * And of the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall yet again take root downward, and bear fruit upward.

Shall increase as I multiply greatly, a metaphor from plants. Compare Job xxv 19.

31 I or out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and they that escape out of mount Zion. *the zeal of the Lord of hosts shall do this.

A remnant, that handful of Jews, here were gathered together and shut up in Jerusalem shall go out to their several habitations, and by the way shall sing a cease exceedingly. They that escape out of Mount Zion, the same thing expressed in other words, which is usual in the Hebrew language. The zeal of the Lord of hosts shall do this, although when you reflect upon yourselves, and consider either your present fewness and weakness, or your great unworthiness, this may seem to be great folly, for to expect or believe, yet God will do it from the zeal which he hath, both for his own name, to vindicate it from the blasphemous reproach of the Assyrians, and for the good of his unwearied people.

32 Therefore thus saith the Lord concerning the king of Assyria, He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shield, nor cast a bank against it.

Which was true, though he sent Rab-shakeh and others with a great host against Jerusalem in chap xxv 17 either because that host went away with Rab-shakeh to Libnah above, ver 28; or rather, because that army did not form a close siege against it but only marched towards it and disposed themselves so as to block it up at some distance, possibly waiting till the king of Assyria had taken Libnah and Lachish (which they presumed he would speedily do) and should come up with the rest of his forces, which they intended to fill more vigorously to their work.

33 By the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city, saith the Lord.

Where is he expected to deliver the kingdom of Judah at once, and then to proceed further, and to conquer Egypt or other neighbouring countries, and as it is said of him, and concert on this very time and design. Isa x 7, to cut off the tower of the high fort, shall meet with so, and a discomfited and rebuke here, that he shall make haste to return with shame to his own country.

34 For I will deliver this city, to save you, and it for mine own sake, and for my servants' sake, and David's sake.

For as political and covenant sake made with David, so for the stability and eternity of his kingdom. See 1 Kin x 13 14.

35 And it came to pass that night, that the angel of the Lord went out, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians, an hundred fourscore and five thousand: and when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses.

That night, either 1. In the night following that morning of the people to Hezekiah, or 2. In that famous night when the angel of the Lord smote the Assyrians, it was done in this manner. For in his vision, he saw a great multitude of the Assyrians, that they were taken by the sword, and he saw them all slain. So the camp, with great precision, on other sudden, and I stroke. The angel of the Lord, either before, or in some of the places of the camp, where they were encamped.

36 So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at Nineveh.

God, or 1. Sennacherib, not in mercy but in wrath, raising his more dreadful and shameful death by the hands of his own children.

37 And it came to pass, as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god; that Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons smote him with the sword, and they escaped into the land of Ararat. And Ashurbaniddan his son reigned in his stead.

The land of Ararat was a place most fit for their purpose, because it was near to that part of Assyria and was very mountainous and inaccessible by arms, and the people most stout and warlike, and constant enemies to the Assyrians. Asurbaniddan, who was great successor of his new colony in Samaria, 12 ver 2, leaving it seems to Hezekiah, he will improve the last great advantage to disturb his new conquests there.

Hezekiah receiving a message of death, by prayer hath his life lengthened, for seven times in quoth backward 1. 11. The king of Babylon's embassy has come, Hezekiah with letters and a present, he sheweth the call his treasures, 12-15; whereupon Isaiah foretelleth him the Persian captivity, he doeth, and Monarch is long, 16-21.

so dispose of the light of the sun, by interposing clouds, or other things, so that the shadow should fall only upon those things, and in that manner is also directed it. And whereas the sun is said to have gone down that may be spoken according to appearance, as other passages of Scripture are understood, as when the moon is called out of the great lights Gen. 1, though it be less than some of the stars, and when the sun is said to go down Jer. xv. 9, and to be turned into darkness, Joel ii. 31. Or secondly The sun itself went back, and the shadow with it. This may seem most probable first, By comparison, this with Josh. x. 13, where the sun itself stood still. Secondly Because it is said the sun itself returned Isa. xxxviii. 8, for which here mentions the shadow only because the miracle was not so easily discovered in the sun as in the shadow of a dial. And though the sun may be elsewhere taken in trop. yet will the improper signification be necessary to be proposed and ought to be preferred before it. Thirdly Because this miracle was noted by the Babylonians who having understood that it was done for Hezekiah's sake, went to inquire into the truth and manner of it 2 Chron. xxxiii. 31. Object If this had been done the Hebrews themselves and astronomers would have taken notice of it which we do not find that they did. Answer So it is most probable they did. Though these books be not now extant, which is not strange, this being recorded and observed not only by some of the first and ancient writers in Jewry, but also by the Jews themselves, the first and father of the church in Babylon being long after this time. And yet it is observed that there are some intimations of these things left (though) mixed with fables, as many true histories are, as what the poets fabled of Jupiter's making the night twice as long as it should have been that he in the enjoyments of love. Whether the sun or shadow went backward suddenly or gradually and in the same time in which it had gone down is a question of no great moment, the manner being as determined by the fact of the thing which Hezekiah made use of to keep his place. This did he mention because the truth of the matter might be better and more discovered thereby. It had possibly been visible out of the king's chamber, or at least being near to it, and the degrees being most distinct and conspicuous in this dial, but the other things were diminished by all other dials.

12 ¶ At that time Beredach bala dan, the son of Baladan King of Babylon, sent letters and a present unto Hezekiah for he had heard that Hezekiah had been sick.

20 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and all his might and how he made a pool, and a conduit, and brought water into the city, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

21 And Hezekiah slept with his fathers and Manassah his son reigned in his stead

CHAP XXI

Manassah's idolatry 1-9 Judgments prophesied against Judah 10-15 Manassah shed innocent blood, death 16-18 When he son succeedeth him and is slain by his servants who are slain by the people Josiah has him made king 19-26

MANASSAH was twelve years old when he began to reign, and reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hephzibah.

Reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem in which time the years of his imprisonment are comprehended. 2 Chron xxxiii 11

2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, after the abominations of the heathen whom the Lord cast out before the children of Israel.

Did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, partly, 1. the instigation of the wicked prince of Judah who in Hezekiah's time we correct from a stable into a mother and row when then latter were finished on by Hezekiah. 2. of break forth into open heathenism and a ruin of the king's tender years with their wicked counsel and principally by his own vicious inclination.

3 For he built up again the high places which Hezekiah his father had destroyed, and he reared up altars for Baal, and made a grove as did Ahab king of Israel and worshipped all the host of heaven and served them.

The host of heaven the stars which the Gentiles had turned into gods. See on Deut iv 19

4 And he built altars in the house of the Lord of which the Lord said, In Jerusalem will I put my name.

In the house of the Lord i. e. in the temple built in the holy place. For this is testified from the corner of the house. 1. The house which I put my name that place I have particularly consecrated to my worship and honour which made it the greater impurity and impiety, and made it to alienate it from God and to dedicate it or impure it to especially the temple to the service of idols which God abhorreth.

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the Lord.

The one of the priests the other of the people, 1 King vi 36

6 And he made his son pass through the fire and observed times, and used enchantments and dealt with familiar spirits and wizards he wrought much wickedness to the sight of the Lord, to provoke him to anger.

Made his son pass through the fire at which see the notes on 1 Chron xxi 2 and 2 Kings xxi. Observed times i. e. lucky or unlucky days or seasons or the dispatch of business according to the superstitious practice of the heathens. See 1st in 7 see also 1 Cor xiv 20, Deut xxvii 10, 11

7 And he set a graven image of the grove that he had made in the house, of which the Lord said to David, and to Solomon his son, In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever.

He set a graven image of the grove, either, first, The image of that Baal which was worshipped in the grove. Or secondly, A representation of the grove, as may seem by comparing chap xxiii 6. Or thirdly, The graven image of Asherah, a god or goddess so called, possibly the same called elsewhere Asharoah. See Judg vi 25, 28, 2 Kings xxiii 6, 2 Chron xv 16.

8 Neither will I make the feet of Israel move any more out of the land which I gave their fathers, only if they will observe to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my servant Moses commanded them.

More any more out of the land, they shall no more be carried captives into a strange land, as it had happened before.

9 But they hearkened not and Manassah seduced them to do more evil than did the nations whom the Lord destroyed before the children of Israel.

Partly because they were not contented with those idols which the Canaanites worshipped but either themselves invented or they borrowed from other nations many new ones and kinds of idolatry, and partly because as their idol was far more clean than the images to God infinitely better and better helps and aided it against idolatry much stronger than the Canaanites had, so that it was though the same in kind was unprofitably worse in respect of these things and generations.

10 And the Lord spake by his servants the prophets saying,

11 Because Manassah king of Judah hath done these abominations, and hath done wickedly above all that the Amorites did, which were before him, and hath made Judah also to sin with his idols.

More all that the Amorites and i. e. the Canaanitish nations. All so called from one eminent part of them. See on Gen xv 16. Hath made Judah also to sin with his idols by his example encouragement counsel authority and command.

12 Therefore thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Behold, I am bringing such evil upon Jerusalem and Judah, that whosoever heareth of it, both his ears shall tingle.

By the great commotion which such terrible reports shall cause in the hearts and heads of the hearers. See 1 Sam iii 11 Jer xix 3

13 And I will stretch over Jerusalem the line of Samaria, and the plummet of the house of Ahab and I will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it and turning it upside down.

Jerusalem shall have the same measure and lot, i. e. the same judgments, which Samaria had. The line is oft put for one's lot or portion, as Psal xvi 6, 2 Cor x 16 because men's portions or possessions are used to be measured by lines, Psal lxxviii 55, Amos vii 17. Or it is a metaphor from workmen who mark out by lines what part of the building they would have thrown down, and what they would have stand. See Isa xxxiv 11, Lam ii 8, Amos vii 7-8, Zech i 16. Or it is an allusion to that fact of David who destroyed the Moabites by a measuring line. 2 Sam vii 2. Wiping it and turning it upside down i. e. men do with a dish that hath been used, first with the empty it of all that is in it, then thoroughly cleanse and wipe it, and lastly turn it upside down that nothing may remain in it: so will I deal with Jerusalem, thoroughly empty and purge it from all its wicked inhabitants, and that so as to cut off all hopes of restitution.

14 And I will forsake the remnant of mine inheritance, and deliver them into the hand of their enemies, and they shall become a prey and a spoil to all their enemies.

The remnant of mine inheritance is the kingdom of Judah, the only remainder of all the tribes of Israel, which I did once choose for my inheritance: but now, notwithstanding that privilege, will utterly reject and forsake them.

15 Because they have done that which was evil in my sight, and have provoked me to anger, since the day their fathers came forth out of Egypt, even unto this day.

This sort judgment, though it was chiefly inflicted for the sins of Manasseh and his generation, yet had respect unto all their former sins, the guilt whereof was upon this occasion revived. See Exodus xxxiii 34.

16 Moreover Manasseh shed much blood very much, till he had filled Jerusalem from one end to another, beside his sin wherewith he made Judah to sin in doing that which was evil in the sight of the Lord.

Innocent blood, the blood of the innocent, either of cons men who either repudiated sinful practices, or refused to comply with his wicked commands, and who, beside his sin, i. e. his idolatry, which is elsewhere called evil and corruption, and here sin, by a variety of names, which is the more considerable, because it is here compared with horrid cruelty, and implied to be worse than it, and more abominable in God's sight, because it doth more directly and immediately strike at the life and purity of the Divine Majesty, by respect unto which it is more to be measured. And the expression doth here in opposition to the press of cruel times, when who look upon it lightly as a small matter, or a trifle of the mind as the fruit of a good intention, and as a necessary proceeding from a good principle.

17 Now the rest of the acts of Manasseh, and all that he did, and his sin that he sinned, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

18 And Manasseh slept with his fathers, and was buried in the garden of his own house, in the garden of Uzza, and Amion his son reigned in his stead.

In the garden of his own house, i. e. the sepulchre of the kings, either by the people, or by the king, who judged him unworthy of that honour, or that he had no choice and command as a lasting testimony, that he more rejected love and abhorrence of himself for his former crime. In the garden of Uzza, or, of king Uzza, who perhaps had recharged it.

19 Amion was twenty and two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned two years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Meshullam, the daughter of Haraz of Bethel.

20 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, as his father Manasseh did.

21 And he walked in all the way that his father walked in, and served the idols that his father served, and worshipped them.

22 And he forsook the Lord God of his fathers, and walked not in the way of the Lord.

23 And the servants of Amion conspired against him, and slew the king in his own house.

24 And the people of the land slew all them that had conspired against king Amion, and the people of the land made Josiah his son king in his stead.

25 Now the rest of the acts of Amion which he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

26 And he was buried in his sepulchre in the garden of Uzza, and Josiah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP XXII

Each's good reason, his will for the repair of the temple. 1-7. H. Bush found a box of the fat, the anointing oil, and the precious incense of the Lord, 8-11. See Jeremiah the destruction of Jerusalem, but not in Jeremiah's time, 12-20.

1 JOSIAH was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned thirty and one years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jedidah, the daughter of Adnah of Bethsai.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, and walked in all the way of David his father, and turned not aside to the right hand or to the left.

3 And it came to pass in the eighteenth year of king Josiah, that the king sent Shaphan the son of Azbub, the son of Meshullam the scribe, to the house of the Lord, saying,

In the eighteenth year, i. e. the year of the destruction of the temple, as it is expressed 2 Chron xxxiv 38. Josiah did before the king. 2 Chron xxxiv 1 & c. i. e. the king's reign.

4 Go up to Hilkiah the high priest, that he may sum the silver which is brought into the house of the Lord, which the keepers of the door have gathered for the people.

But he was not to take in exact account how much, and then deposit it in the treasury. The keepers of the door were priests of Levite, appointed to that charge. 2 Chron xxxiv 11. xxvii 12.

5 And let them deliver it into the hand of the doers of the work, that have the oversight of the house of the Lord, and let them give it to the doers of the work which is in the house of the Lord, to repair the breaches of the house.

The oversight of the house of the Lord, i. e. the oversight of the workmen, which also was Levites. 2 Chron xxxiv 12.

6 Unto carpenters, and builders, and masons, and to buy timber and hewn stone to repair the house.

Either hewed or cut out of the quarries, to be hewed and fitted to the building.

7 Howbeit, there was no reckoning made with them of the money that was delivered into their hand, because they dealt faithfully.

i. e. Because it was found by experience that they dealt erected by the gates of the city here mentioned, unto the honour of their tutelary gods, which after the manner of the heathen they owned for the protectors of their city and habitations. In the entering in of the gate of Joshua the governor of the city this circumstance is noted to show Josiah's great zeal and impartiality, in rooting out all monuments of idolatry, without any respect unto those great persons who were concerned in them, or affected to them.

9 Nevertheless the priests of the high places came not up to the altar of the Lord in Jerusalem, but they did eat of the unleavened bread among their brethren.

The priests of the high places which worshipped the true God there came not up to the altar of the Lord in Jerusalem, they were not suffered to come thither to the exercise of their priestly function, as a just punishment for the corruption of God's worship and the transgression of so plain and positive a law of God, Deut. xii. 11, which was much worse in them, who had more knowledge to discern God's mind therein and more obligations to observe it, and to engage others to the observation of it. Compare Ezek. xlv. 10. Of the unleavened bread etc. of the most offerings allotted to the priests, wherein there was to be no leaven Lev. ii. 4, 5, 10, 11, and consequently of other provisions belonging to the priests, which by a synecdoche are contained under this one kind. Thus then spiritual blindness puts them into the very same pit which corporal blindness brought them, Lev. xxi. 17 &c. And thus he multiplies their punishment, he shut them out from spiritual services, but allows them natural and necessary provisions.

10 And he defiled Topheth, which is in the valley of the children of Hinnom, that no man might make his son or his daughter to pass through the fire to Moloch.

In the valley of the children of Hinnom, of which Jer. xv. 3, xxi. 30, Jer. vii. 1, xxi. 6, 11, to pass through the fire to Moloch. See on Lev. xxi. 21. Deut. xxi. 10.

11 And he took away the horses that the kings of Judah had given to the sun at the entering in of the house of the Lord, by the chamber of Nathan-melech the chamberlain, which was in the suburbs, and burned the chariots of the sun with fire.

The horses, either 1 The carved or gilded horses to which were joined yoked chariots in which there might be the picture of the sun which the heathens used to represent in this manner. Or rather, 2 Living horses, for 1. Sun is the eastern nations used to consecrate to the sun, to signify the swiftness of his motion. 2 These horses are mentioned apart from the chariots, and are said to be given to the sun, who has not said of the chariots, and to be taken away when the chariots were burnt &c. and a certain place is here allotted to the horses, not to the chariots. At the sun, and to be sacrificed to the sun, or to draw those chariots in which the kings or some other men then stood, and by the appointment, went forth every morning to worship the sun, &c. for both these were the customs of the Ammonites and Persians, as Xenophon testifies. At the entrance of the house of the Lord etc. by the gate of the outward court of the temple for the courts are oft contained under the name of the house or temple. The chamberlain, or officer to whom the care of these horses was committed in the suburbs either 1 Of the city of David, or rather of the temple, in certain outward buildings belonging to the temple, and the uses thereof. See Ezek. xlv. 2. Heb. a place near the temple called also Parson. 1 Chron. xxi. 13 thought it be not now known either where it was, or why it was so called. The chariots of the sun which were made for the honour and worship of the sun, as was before expressed.

12 And the altars that were on the top of the upper chamber of Ahaz, which the kings of Judah had made, and the altars which Manasseh had made in the two courts of the house of the Lord, did the king beat down, and brake them down from thence, and cast the dust of them into the brook Kidron.

On the top of the upper chamber of Ahaz, i. e. upon the roof of the king's house. They were so mad upon their idols that they were not content with all their public high places and altars but made others upon their house tops for the worship of the heavenly bodies. See Jer. xix. 13, Zeph. i. 5. Which Manasseh had made. Quest. How could this be, when Manasseh had taken them away before, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 15? Answer. Either these altars were not so fully destroyed as they should have been the foundations of them being left through the neglect of the officers appointed to do that work upon which Amos built his new altars, or if they were wholly rooted out, Amos's new altars are called by his father's name, because they were built by his example, and in the very same place where his father's altars were, as the wells which Isaac digged in the same place where Abraham had digged them before, were therefore called by their ancient names, Gen. xxvi. 18. See more on the next verse. In the two courts, the priests and the people's. See chap. xxi. 5. Cast the dust of them into the brook Kidron, partly to show his detestation of them, and partly to abolish the very remembrance of them as far as he could.

13 And the high places that were before Jerusalem, which were on the right hand of the mount of corruption, which Solomon the king of Israel had builded for Ashtoroth the goddess of the Zidonians, and for Chemosh the abomination of the Moabites, and for Milcom the abomination of the children of Ammon, did the king defile.

The mount of corruption i. e. the Mount of Olives, 1 Kings xi. 7 here called the mount of corruption, for the grove idolatry there practised, which is oft expressed by the name of corruption. See 1 Sam. xxxii. 7, Deut. xxxii. 17. The Hebrew is in constant allusion between marah a thing and mar both corruption as there is between Lech and Beth-aven Hos. iv. 15. Which Solomon had builded, not the same individual altars, which doubtless either Solomon upon his repentance or one of his good predecessors had taken away long before this time. The other altar built by Manasseh or Amos which because erected by Solomon's example and for the same use, and in the same place are called by his name. This brand burnt by the Holy Ghost upon his name and memory as a just punishment of that abominable practice and a warning to deter others from the like. For Ashtoroth of which and the rest see on 1 Kings xi. 7-7. The abomination i. e. the idol so called because it was abominable, and made them abominable to God.

14 And he brake in pieces the images, and cut down the groves, and filled their places with the bones of men.

Of the idolatrous priests, which he caused to be taken out of their graves, ver. 18.

15 Moreover the altar that was at Beth-el, and the high place which Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, had made, both that altar and the high place he brake down, and burned the high place, and stamped it small to powder, and burned the grove.

The altar that was at Beth-el. Quest. How could he rightly do this, seeing Beth-el was a part of the kingdom of Israel, not of Judah? Answer. Either first, this city was now under the kingdom of Judah to which it was added by Abijah long since. 2 Chron. xiii 19 Or, secondly, He did this by virtue of that ancient right which David and his posterity had to the kingdom of Israel, which though suspended for a time by God's grant of the ten tribes to Jeroboam, and the succeeding kings of Israel, yet these being all extinct, it might seem to return to him at least so far as to pluck up idolatry out of the land of Israel, as he had opportunity, and especially out of those parts of it which bordered upon Judah. Or, thirdly, The king of Babylon having engaged in a war with the Assyrian, Hezekiah's great enemy, and having thereupon occasion for Hezekiah's friendship, did (as some suppose) enlarge his dominion, and give him some power over the kingdom of Israel at least as to matters of religion, which may seem not improbable from 2 Chron. xxx 1—6 And the same power seems to have been continued, and some kind of league made, between the king of Babylon and Manasseh, (who thereupon was restored to his kingdom, 2 Chron. xxxiii 13) and after him Josiah who therefore was so zealous in his quarrel against the king of Egypt, 2 Chron. xxxv 20 &c. Or, fourthly, He did it in pursuance of God's prediction concerning this action 1 Kings xii 2, which (in a matter so good and so agreeable to God's will and word, as the extirpation of idolatry unquestionably was) had the force of a warrant or command upon him to do it, as God's prediction of the conversion of the Gentiles by the Messias was a command to his apostles to preach to them Acts xiii 17 The high place, which seems to have been some little temple or house erected for that worship, or for the priests attending upon it.

46 And as Josiah turned himself, he spied the sepulchres that were there in the mount, and sent and took the bones out of the sepulchres, and burned them upon the altar, and polluted it, according to the word of the Lord which the man of God proclaimed, who proclaimed these words.

As Josiah turned himself Josiah's care and zeal was so great that he would not trust his officers with these things, but would see them done with his own eyes. Which the man of God proclaimed three hundred years before it was done.

17 Then he said, What title is that that I see? And the men of the city told him, It is the sepulchre of the man of God, which came from Judah and proclaimed these things that thou hast done against the altar of Beth-el.

What title is that that I see? It was the manner then as now it is, to set up little pillars or stones by or upon the graves of the higher sort of men upon which the name of the person and some remarkable passages relating to him, were engraven.

18 And he said, Let him alone. Let no man move his bones. So they let his bones alone, with the bones of the prophet that came out of Samaria.

Which were now mixed together. Samaria, the place of his birth or former abode, though now he were in Beth-el 1 Kings xvi 11.

19 And all the houses also of the high places that were in the cities of Samaria, which the kings of Israel had made to provoke the LORD to anger, Josiah took away, and did to them according to all the acts that he had done in Beth-el.

By what authority he did this, see on ver. 15.

20 And he slew all the priests of the high places that were there upon the altars, and burned men's bones upon them, and returned to Jerusalem.

The priests of the high places, either, 1 The priests which Jeroboam had made of the meanest of the people, whom he slew, both for their presumptuous usurpation of that sanctified office, which of itself was punishable with death by God's law, Numb. iii 10 and for their idolatry. Or rather, 2 The priests of Baalim, by comparing this verse with the former, where speaking of the same high places, he doth not say, which Jeroboam made, as is usual when he speaks of the high places of the calves, but, which the other kings of Israel made, who were divers of them worshippers of Baal, and by considering the parallel place 2 Chron. xxxiv 4, where it is said, they brake down the altars of Baalim, &c. By this relation it appears, and from the nature of the thing, and common practice in like cases it is more than probable, that after the departure of the king of Assyria, divers of the Israelites who had retired to other parts and kept themselves out of the conqueror's hands, returned together with their priests to their own land, and to the old trade of worshipping idols, to whom, peradventure, they ascribed this their deliverance from that judgment which Jehovah had brought upon them. That were there upon the altars, according to that famous prophecy, 1 Kings xiii 1, 2.

21 And the king commanded all the people, saying, Keep the passover unto the Lord your God, as it is written in the book of this covenant.

Keep the passover having abolished false worship, he now endeavours to set up the true worship of the true God. In this book of the covenant, in this book which I have found, wherein is contained the covenant made between God and Israel and the terms of it.

22 Surely there was not holden such a passover from the days of the judges that judged Israel, nor in all the days of the kings of Israel, nor of the kings of Judah.

Such a passover was celebrated with such solemn care and great preparation and numerous sacrifices 2 Chron. xxxv 7—9 and universal joy of all good men which was much the greater because of their remembrance of the former wicked and miserable times under Manasseh and Amon and the good hopes they now had of the happy establishment of their nation and the true religion, and of the prevention of God's judgment, denounced against them. From the days of the judges, or, from the days of Samuel, the last of the judges, as it is expressed 1 Chron. xxi 18. Some of the kings had taken such care to prepare themselves, the priest and people, and accurately to observe all the rules and diligently to purge out all uncleanness and to renew their covenant with God, so solemnly as Josiah now did.

23 But in the eighteenth year of king Josiah wherein this passover was holden to the Lord in Jerusalem.

24 Moreover the workers with familiar spirits, and the wizards, and the images, and the idols, and all the abominations that were spied in the land of Judah and in Jerusalem, did Josiah put away, that he might perform the words of the law which were written in the book that Hilkiah the priest found in the house of the Lord.

The wizards, of which see Gen. Lev. xix 31, xx 27, Numb. xxi 5, Deut. xviii 11. The images, and the idols, and all the abominations, three words noting the same thing to show that all the instruments and monuments of idolatry were destroyed, as God had commanded. That were spied, i. e. all that were discovered, not only such as were in the place and state of worship, but such as their priests or zealots had removed, and endeavoured to hide and secure.

25 And like unto him was there no king before him, that turned to the Lord with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his might, according to all the law of Moses, neither after him arose there any like him

The unto him there was no law before him to wit for his diligent study in God's law, and his exact and unswerving industry, and for his rooting out of idolaters and all kinds and appearances of idolatry not only in Judah, but in Israel also, and in the establishment of the true religion in all his dominions, and in the conforming of his own life and his people's too (as far as he could) to the holy law of God, though Hezekiah might excel him in some other particulars of which therefore the like is said above chap xxiii.

26 ¶ Notwithstanding the Lord turned not from the fierceness of his great wrath, where with his anger was kindled against Judah, because of all the provocations that Manasseh had provoked him withal

The Lord turned not from the fierceness of his great wrath, because though the king was most hearty in his repentance, and acceptable to God, as we said before, and therefore the judgment was delayed for his time, yet the people were generally corrupt and secretly verse from Josiah's pious and excellent reformation, and inclined to their old lusts and idols, as appears from the complaints of the prophets, especially Jeremiah and Zephaniah against them, and by the following history, wherein we see that as soon as ever Josiah was come, his children, and the princes, and the people suddenly and greedily returned to their former abominations. Because of all the provocations that Manasseh had provoked him withal, the sons of Manasse and of the men of his generation who complied and concurred with him in his idolatrous and cruel practices chap xxiv 3-4 were justly punished in this generation, partly, because of God's sovereign right of punishing sinners (such as these unquestionably were) when and upon what occasion he sees fit, partly, because of that just warning and declaration of God, that he would visit the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and principally, because these men had never sincerely repented of their ownership of their father's sins, but their hearts full hardened after them, which though not yet seen by men was manifest to God, who therefore pronounced this terrible sentence upon them.

27 And the Lord said, I will remove Judah also out of my sight as I have removed Israel, and will cast off this city Jerusalem which I have chosen, and the house of which I said, "My name shall be there"

To wit upon the conditions in sundry places expressed which they broke, and therefore God justly made them to know his breach of promise as he threaten Numb xvi 34.

28 Now the rest of the acts of Josiah and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

29 ¶ In his days Pharaoh-nechoh king of Egypt went up against the king of Assyria to the river Euphrates, and king Josiah went against him, and he slew him at Megiddo, when he had seen him

Pharaoh-nechoh called Neco by Herodotus who makes mention of this fight wherein as he saith Neco conquered the Syrians in Maradatha. The king of Assyria is the king of Babylon, who having formerly rebelled against the Assyrian his lord, had now conquered him, as appears by the course of the sacred, and the concurrence of profane history, and therefore is here and elsewhere called the Assyrian, and the king of Assyria because now he was the head of that monarchy to the river Euphrates against Carchemish by which river it was expressed 2 Chron xxxi 20, which the Assyrian had taken from the Syrians Isa x 9, Pharaoh's confederates who before sendeth forces against the Assyrian that he might with help therein, and secure himself. Josiah went against him either to defend his own country from Pharaoh's incursions, or to assist the king of Babylon, with whom he seems to have been in league, as was noted before. He slew him, i.e. gave him his death's wound there, though he died not till he came to Jerusalem, 2 Chron xxxi 23, 24. When he had seen him, i.e. when he fought with him, or in the first onset. Thus fighting is called a looking in the face, 2 Kings xiv 8.

30 ¶ And his servants carried him in a chariot dead from Megiddo, and brought him to Jerusalem, and buried him in his own sepulchre. And the people of the land took Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, and anointed him, and made him king in his father's stead

Dead, i.e. mortally wounded, as in the former verse, and as we commonly say of a sick man past hopes of recovery that he is a dead man compare Gen xx 3. Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, who was younger than Jehoakim by comparing ver 31 with 36, yet preferred by the people before the elder brother, either because Jehoakim refused the kingdom for fear of Pharaoh, whom he knew he should hereby provoke, or because Jehoahaz was the more stout and valiant prince, whence he is called a lion, 1 Zek xix 3 though indeed he showed his courage more against his people than his enemies, but they judged that he was most able and willing to defend them against the conquering army. Anointed him, as they used to do in such extraordinary cases, because this was a troublesome time and he was not the right heir to the crown, and therefore needed this solemn rite of confirmation, which Solomon had in the same circumstances.

31 ¶ Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Ibsuah

32 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, according to all that his fathers had done

His grandparents Manasse and Amon. He restored that idolatry which his father had destroyed, partly to gratify the generality of the people, who had made him king, and who were inclined to their old superstitions, as in Josiah's time as was observed before, though restrain from the outward acts by him, and partly to sweeten the king of Egypt who possibly was a zealous idolater, by his compliance with him in the worship of idols.

33 And Pharaoh-nechoh put him in bonds at Riblah in the land of Hamath, that he might not reign in Jerusalem, and put the land to a tribute of an hundred talents of silver and a talent of gold

Pharaoh-nechoh put him in bands, either because he presumed to take the kingdom without his leave and consent, or because he renewed the war against Pharaoh as some affirm, and by him was conquered and taken prisoner Riblah, in eminent city in Syria, of which see Numb xxxiv 11, 2 Kings xv 6, where Pharaoh now was to crush or make good his conquests, whether Jehoahaz was bound to receive his sentence. That he might not reign, or because he had reigned, i.e. taken the kingdom without right, and without his leave. Or according to the other reading, in the beginning of his reign, the word reigning being commonly used for beginning to reign, when he was scarce warm in his throne. A tribute, to wit, a yearly tribute, whereby they should acknowledge him to be their superior, and for which he would be their protector when they needed his help.

34 And Pharaoh-nechoh made Eliakim the son of Josiah king in the room of Josiah his father, and turned his name to Jehoakim, and took Jehoahaz away, and he came to Egypt and died there

He took the son of Josiah, whom he perceived to be of a more mild and peaceable disposition. Turned his name to Jehohakim, because the giving of names was accounted an act and sign of dominion which the reformat party did to their children, and conquerors to their vassals or tributaries. Compare chap. xxiv. 17, Dan. i. 7. Thou Jehoshaphat away, partly as a punishment for him, and partly that he might give no disturbance to his brother.

35 And Jchoukimi gave <sup>h</sup>the silver and the gold to Pharaoh, but he taxed the land to give the money according to the commandment of Pharaoh he exacted the silver and the gold of the people <sup>o</sup>of the land, of every one according to his taxation, to give it unto Pharaoh-nechoh

36 ¶ Jehoiakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign: and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Zebudah, the daughter of Pedaiah of Rumah.

When he began to reign either, 1. When he began to reign alone and with full power or after Jehoshaphat's death till which the people would not disown him whom they had appointed king which was esteemed a great tie. 2 Sam. xix. 10. nor own or accept Jehoram as their king but only as his brother's vicar, though Pharaoh had by violence forced him upon them. And so Jehoshaphat might be his elder brother and the same who is called Jehoram and is first mentioned, as the eldest son, 1 Chron. in 15 though he may be placed first not in regard of his birth but of his dignity the crown he first put upon his head. Or 2. When he was first set up by Pharaoh and so this was the older brother, though by popular violence put by his right successor. 30

37 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his fathers had done.

By idolatry the oppression of his people and the persecution of the prophets, and other good men Jer xxv 21 Ezek xix 5-7

СИЛА XXIV

Jehonahim first subdued by Nebuchadnezzar as a punishment in honor to his own name. Jehonahim has son as king in his stead 1-6. His civil war finally a spoils of his captivity by the king of Babylon 8-16. He maketh / his king the strength of his to the destruction of Judah. 17-20

IN those days Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon came up, and Jehoiakin became his servant three years; then he turned and rebelled against him.

In his days, i. e. in Jehonkian's reign in the third of the third year, Din 1 1 or the beginning of his fourth year, saw 1 Nebuchadnezzar the son of Nabopolassar who quite subdued the Assyrian first his lord and then his country, for, and made himself absolute monarch of all those parts of the world. Came up, to wit against Jehonkian his friend and confederate of Phuu-hu whose race, he had lately conquered, Jir xlv 2 He turned and rebelled against him, by the instigation of the Egyptian who threatened him if he did not rebel, and promised him his utmost assistance if he did

2<sup>d</sup> And the Lord sent against him bands of the Chaldees, and bands of the Syrians, and bands of the Moabites, and bands of the children of Ammon, and sent them against Judah to destroy it, according to the word of the Lord, which he spake by his servants the prophets.

Nebuchadnezzar's army was made up of several nations, who were willing to fight under the banner of such a puissant and victorious emperor.

3 Surely at the commandment of the Lord came this upon Judah, to remove them out of his sight, "for the sins of Manasseh, according to all that he did,"

For the sins of Manasseh, properly and directly for their own sins, and occasionally for the sins of Manasseh, which had never been charged upon them if they had not made them their own by their impenitence for them, and repentance of them.

4 And also for the innocent blood ch 21 18 that he shed for he filled Jerusalem with innocent blood, which the Lord would not pardon

Let the innocent blood to wit, of those prophets and saints who either reproved or would not comply with his idolatrous worship

5 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah ?

6 So Jehonim slept with his fathers and Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead

Ichouakim called also Ieconiah, 1 Chron iii 16, (as Ichouakim also was by comparing this with Matt i 11,) and in way of contempt Coniah, Jer xxii 21.

7 And the king of Egypt came not again any more out of his land for the king of Babylon had taken from the river of Egypt unto the river Euphrates all that pertained to the king of Egypt

The king of Egypt came not again, to wit in this king's days, nor until Zedekiah's time Jer xxxvii 6, 7, nor to any purpose. He could not now come out, to protect the king of Judah being so able to defend his own kingdom.

8 ¶ Jehoachim was eighteen years old when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem three months. And his mother's name was Nechushta, the daughter of Ephraim of Jerusalem.

Just as I told you true, in his eighth year he began to reign with his father who made him king, with him and with other kings of Israel and Judah had done in the like time of it and he in his eighteenth year he reigned alone. 2 He is called a son of eight years when he began to reign. 2 Chron xxxv 9 because this was the eighth year of his captivity in the Babylonian captivity, or bondage, for which both he and his father had been put to death. It began in the fourth year of Jehoahaz as it is after 1 Kings 13, and continued all his reign, which he began in his captivity, 2 Chron 36, and so the first year of Jehoahaz was the eighth year of that captivity. And thus certain that the years of kings mentioned in Scripture are not always accounted from the beginning of their age, but from some other remarkable time or thing that is when a man is a slave, is called the son of one year. 1 Sam viii 1 of which see my notes there, and Abner his son his father lived only forty years, 2 Chron xxi 20) is called a son of forty and two years when he began to reign. 2 Chron xxv 2, because that was the forty and second year of the reign of Omri's family, as most think

And it is not so strange if the years of this King be computed, not from his birth but from the beginning of so great and famous a change of the Jewish affairs, as this captivity made, this being the usual way of the Romans and Greeks and other more ancient and eastern nations to compute the times from the great changes and revolutions happening among them. And that this was the practice of the Jews in the computation of these very times, is evident from the use of it in the Prophecy of Lactiel, chap. 1. 2, which was the fifth year of Jehoiachin's captivity, and chap. xxix. 21, in the twelfth year of our captivity, and chap. xl. 1, in the twenty fifth year of our captivity.

3. To all this might be added, that some here acknowledge an error of the scribe and affirm, that in the first and best copies, in 2 Chron xxxvi 9, it was not eight, but eighteen, which they gather from hence because those two ancient and venerable translators the Syriac and Arabic, read there, as it is here, was eighteen years old which, they say, they would never have presumed to do, if they had not so read it in those Hebrew copies out of which they drew their translation, or in some of them.

He reigned in Jerusalem three months and ten days, which are added, 2 Chron xxxvi 9. But such small sums are frequently omitted in great numbers. See on Gen xi 13, 1 Kings xvi 8.

9 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, according to all that his father had done.

10 ¶ At that time the servants of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up against Jerusalem, and the city was besieged.

Either 1 Because the people had made Jehoiachin king without his consent. Or 2 Because he had some notice, or at least a suspicion of his intentions to rebel against him, and to join with Egypt against him, as Zedekiah his successor did. But whatsoever was the second and immediate cause of it the chief cause was God's commandment or the direction of his providence, as it was said, ver 3.

11 And Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came against the city, and his servants did besiege it.

12 And Jehoiachin the king of Judah went out to the king of Babylon, he and his mother, and his servants, and his princes, and his officers, and the king of Babylon took him in the eighth year of his reign.

Went out to the king of Babylon i. e. yielded up himself and the city into his hand, and this by the counsel of Jeremiah as to his own good. Of his reign i. e. of Nebuchadnezzar's reign, as appears by comparing this with chap xxx 5 and because Jehoiachin reigned not half a year.

13 And he carried out thence all the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house, and cut in pieces all the vessels of gold which Solomon king of Israel had made in the temple of the Lord, as the Lord had said.

Cut in pieces, or rather, took away, as this word is where signifies, or cut off to wit, from the temple. For why should they cut in pieces those vessels which might conveniently be carried away? And that they were not cut in pieces, but reserved whole is manifest from Ezra i 7, Dan v 23. All the vessels of gold i. e. the most and choicest of them by comparing this with chap xxi 11. Which Solomon king of Israel had made, so he expresseth it, either, first, Because these vessels were made by the godly kings of Judah instead of those which Solomon made, and so they go by his name, as the ship of the Argonauts was still reputed the same ship though it was from time to time repaired with new materials, until nothing of the old was left. Or secondly, Because though the city and temple had been rifled gone thrice once, both by the kings of Egypt and Israel and by the wicked kings of Judah yet these golden vessels were preserved from them either by the care of the priests, who hid them out of the way, or by the clemency of the conquerors and the reverence which they bore to such sacred instruments, or by the special providence of God disposing their hearts to leave them. Or if they had been taken away by any of these kings, they might afterwards be recovered by the entreaty or at the cost of the godly kings of Judah.

14 And he carried away all Jerusalem, and all the princes, and all the mighty men of valour, even ten thousand captives, and all the craft-men and smiths none remained, save the poorest sort of the people of the land.

All Jerusalem, i. e. the inhabitants of Jerusalem, not simply all, but the best and most considerable part, as the following words explain and restrain it. Ten thousand captives, which are more particularly reckoned up, ver 16 where there are seven thousand mighty men, and a thousand smiths, and those mentioned ver 15 make up the other two thousand. All the craftsmen and smiths, which might furnish them with new arms, and thereby gave him fresh trouble.

15 And he carried away Jehoiachin to Babylon, and the king's mother, and the king's wives, and his officers, and the mighty of the land, those carried he into captivity from Jerusalem to Babylon.

16 And all the men of might, even seven thousand, and craftsmen and smiths a thousand, all that were strong and apt for war, even them the king of Babylon brought captive to Babylon.

17 ¶ And the king of Babylon made Mattaniah his father's brother king in his stead, and changed his name to Zedekiah.

That he might admonish him of (what this name signifies) the justice of God which had so severely punished Jehoiachin for his rebellion, and would no less certainly overtake him if he should be guilty of the same rebellion and perfidiousness of which his predecessor was guilty.

18 Zedekiah was twenty and one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Nubiah.

19 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, according to all that Jehoiachin had done.

20 For through the anger of the Lord it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, until he had cast them out from his presence, that Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

Thus the people's sins were the true cause why God sent them wicked kings, whom he suffered to do wickedly, that they might bring the long deserved and threatened punishments upon themselves and their people.

CHAP XXV

Jerusalem is besieged. Zedekiah taken, his sons slain, and his eyes put out, 1-7. Nebuzar-adan burneth Jerusalem, and the temple, breaketh down the wall of the city, carryeth the remnant, except a few poor labourers, into captivity and much treasure. 8-17. Slayeth the nobles. 18-21. Gedaliah is made governor of Judah he is slain. The rest flee into Egypt, 22-26. But menuchadan slew Gedaliah in his court, 27-30.

AND it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his host, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it, and they built forts against it round about.

To chastise Zedekiah for his rebellion and perjury, 2 Chron xxxvi 13. They built forts against it round about, partly to keep all supplies of men or provisions from entering into the city, and partly that from thence they might shoot darts or arrows, or stones into the city. See Jer li 4, Ezek. iv 2, xvi 17.

2 And the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah

3 And on the ninth day of the fourth month the famine prevailed in the city, and there was no bread for the people of the land

The fourth month, which word is easily understood, by comparing this and the first verse, and Jer xxix 2, in which it is expressed "For the people of the land," &c. for the common sort of people, who flocked thither from all parts, upon the approach of the Babylonian army, but only for the great men and soldiers. See of the grievousness of this famine, Lam iv 10, Ezek i 10 12

4 ¶ And the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled by night by the way of the gate between two walls, which is by the king's garden (now the Chaldees were against the city round about) and the king went the way toward the plain

The city was broken up by the Chaldeans who broke and entered the gate, Jer xxix 3. The men of war fled, which word is fully supplied out of the parallel place Jer xxxix 4, or out of the following verb, went away. Between two walls, between the outward and inward wall of the city, by a private way having the advantage of the darkness of the night, and possibly of some vault under the ground. The king this word also is necessarily to be understood partly by its singular, which agrees not with the men of war, and partly out of the next verse where it is expressed "Toward the plain of Jericho" as it follows

5 And the army of the Chaldees pursued after the king, and overtook him in the plains of Jericho, and all his army were scattered from him

6 So they took the king and brought him up to the king of Babylon to Riblah, and they gave judgment upon him

To Riblah of which see above chap xxiii 33 and below vi 21 where Nebuchadnezzar said that he might be supplied by the besiegers with meat and military provisions as then occasions required, and have means to Chaldeans to prevent or suppress any communications which might happen there in the time of his absence. They gave judgment upon him, the king's officers appointed the sentence (examined his cause, and passed the following sentence against him)

7 And they slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him with fetters of brass, and carried him to Babylon

Thus two prophecies were fulfilled which seemed contrary one to the other that he should go to Babylon Jer xxxix 5, xxxiv 3, and that he should never see Babylon, which seems a contradiction, because Zedekiah the false prophet could not reconcile he concluded both were false and that Jeremiah was a false prophet, and it seems Zedekiah the king might stumble at this difficulty

8 ¶ And in the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month which is the nineteenth year of king Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, came Nebuzar-adan, captain of the guard, a servant of the king of Babylon, unto Jerusalem

On the seventh day of the month. Quest How doth this agree with Jer li 12, where he is said to come thither on the tenth day? Answer Either he came to Jerusalem on the seventh day, and burnt the temple on the tenth day, or this sacred writer speaks of the day of his departure from Riblah towards Jerusalem and Jeremiah speaks of his coming to Jerusalem, which was about three days journey from Riblah

9 And he burnt the house of the Lord, and the king's house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, and every great man's house burnt he with fire.

He burnt the house of the Lord, which had now stood about four hundred and fifty years

10 And all the army of the Chaldees, that were with the captain of the guard brake down the walls of Jerusalem round about

11 Now the rest of the people that were left in the city, and the fugitives that fell away to the king of Babylon, with the remnant of the multitude, did Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carry away

The people that were left in the city, whom neither the sword nor famine had destroyed, who were eight hundred and thirty two persons, Jer li 29, being numbers and traders of that city for it is likely that there were very many more of the country people who were fled thither, who were left with others of their brethren to manure the land as it here follows. The remnant of the multitude, to wit of the inhabitants of the country

12 But the captain of the guard left of the poor of the land to be vinedressers and husbandmen

13 And the pillars of brass that were in the house of the Lord, and the bases, and the brasen sea that was in the house of the Lord, did the Chaldees break in pieces, and carried the brass of them to Babylon

The pillars of brass, the carriage whereof to Babylon was foretold, Jer xxvii 19, 22

14 And the pots, and the shovels, and the snuffers, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith they ministered, took they away

The shovels of these and the following words, see on Exod xxvii 1 Kings vii vii

15 And the firepans, and the bowls, and such things as were of gold in gold and of silver, in silver, the captain of the guard took away

16 The two pillars, one sea, and the bases which Solomon had made for the house of the Lord, the brass of all these vessels was without weight

17 The height of the one pillar was eighteen cubits, and the chapter upon it was brass, and the height of the chapter three cubits, and the wreathen work, and pomegranates upon the chapter round about, all of brass and like unto these had the second pillar with wreathen work

18 ¶ And the captain of the guard took Seraiah the chief priest, and Zephaniah the second priest, and the three keepers of the door

Seraiah the chief priest, the high priest, grandson of that Hilkiah, of whom chap xxii 4, and father of Jehozadak, who, as it seems, was taken with his father, and when his father was slain ver 21, he was carried away to Babylon, as it is noted, 1 Chron vi 14, 15. Zephaniah the second priest, who was the high priest's deputy, when he was hindered from the execution of his office see on Numb iii. 32, 2 Sam viii 17, 2 Kings xxiii 1

19 And out of the city he took an officer that was set over the men of war, and five men of them that were in the king's presence, which were found in the city, and the principal scribe of the host, which mustered the people of the land, and threescore men of the people of the land that were found in the city

*Of them that were in the king's presence, 10 of them who constantly attended upon the king's person. See I Kings x 8, Psal. 111. Ofset These were seven Jer. li 25. Anno Either five were first taken and two after them, or two of the seven were of an inferior rank, who therefore are here omitted. Threescore men of the people of the land, who had been most forward or active in the rebellion.*

20 And Nebuzar-adan captain of the guard took these, and brought them to the king of Babylon to Riblah

21 And the king of Babylon smote them and slew them at Riblah in the land of Hamath. So Judah was carried away out of their land

22 ¶ And as for the people that remained in the land of Judah whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had left, even over them he made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan ruler

A righteous and good man, and a friend to the prophet Jeremiah, Jer. xxxvi 24

23 And when all the captains of the armies, they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah governor, there came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan the son of Cereah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth the Netophathite, and Jazaniah the son of a Machathite, they and their men

The captains of the army which escaped away when Zedekiah was taken. See above, ver. 4.

24 And Gedaliah swore to them and to their men, and said unto them Fear not to be the servants of the Chaldees: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you

Swore to them and to their men, as used them by his promise and oath that they, doing what he required, should be kept from the evils which they feared. Thus he might safely swear, because he had not only the king of Babylon's promise and interest too, but also God's promise for their indemnity, delivered by Jeremiah

25 But it came to pass in the seventh month that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, of the seed of royal, came, and ten men with him, and smote Gedaliah, that he died, and the Jews and the Chaldees that were with him at Mizpah

*The seed royal, and therefore moved with envy, to see so mean a person advanced into their place. See this history more fully described, Jer. xli. Ten men, to wit, ten captains or officers, and under each of them many soldiers, otherwise the attempt was ridiculous.*

26 And all the people, both small and great, and the captains of the armies, arose, and came to Egypt for they were afraid of the Chaldees

27 ¶ And it came to pass in the seven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, that Evil-merodach king of Babylon in the year that he began to reign did lift up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah out of prison,

On the seven and twentieth day or on the twenty fifth day as it is Jer. li 31. For then the decree was made which was executed upon the twenty seventh day.

28 And he spake kindly to him, and set his throne above the throne of the kings that were with him in Babylon,

It seems though the power of these kings was taken away yet some honour and respect was given to him, even in the place of their captivity, and to Jehoiachin more than to any of the rest.

29 And changed his prison garments: and he did eat bread continually before him all the days of his life

In his presence and at his table, the following allowance being given to him for the maintenance of his family and royal dignity. Compare 2 Sam. ix 10.

30 And his allowance was a continual allowance given him of the king, a daily rate for every day, all the days of his life

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES

THE ARGUMENT

THESE BOOKS of the CHRONICLES are not the same which are so called, I Kings xiv 19, and elsewhere, (because some passages said to be there mentioned are not found here) but other books, and written by other persons, and for other ends. Yet this same writer took out of the books such historical passages as were most useful or necessary. They were written after the Babylonish captivity: it appears from 2 Chron. xxxvi 20, &c., by Ezra, as may be gathered not only from the same words used in the place now quoted, and in the beginning of that book which goeth under the name of Ezra, but also from some other passages which we may observe hereafter, and from the exactness and diligence here used in making catalogues of persons and families which also is used in the Book of Ezra. If one or two passages seem to be of a later date, those were added by some other prophets, there being some few such additional passages in the Books of Moses. The chief design of these books is to complete the history of the kings of Judah, and to gather up the fragments of buried history which were omitted in the Books of Samuel and Kings, and to explain some passages there mentioned, and to give an exact account of the genealogies which (though ignorant or inconsiderate persons may think trivial and useless) was a work of great necessity, to preserve the distinction of the tribes and families, that so it might appear that Christ came of that nation and tribe, and family, of which he was to be born. And this account having been hitherto neglected is most reasonably mentioned in these books, because this was to be in a manner the last part of the sacred and canonical history of the Old Testament, and therefore the fittest place to record those genealogies upon which the truth and authority of the New Testament in some sort depends. And whereas many things in these genealogies to us are obscure and doubtful, they were not so to the Hebrews, and all the persons here named were known to them by those very particular and exact genealogies, which they kept in their several families and in public records, from whence this sacred penman, by the direction of God's Spirit, took those things which were of most importance.

CHAP. I.

Adam's line to Noah, 1—4. Noah's posterity, by Japheth 5—7, by Ham 8—16, by Shem to Abraham, 17—27. His posterity, by Ishmael 28—31. by Keturah and Isaac, 32—34. His posterity by Esau the kings and dukes of Adam, 35—51.

ADAM, *Sheth, Enosh,

1 e Adam begat Sheth, and so in the following particulars. For brevity sake he only mentions their names, but the rest is easily understood out of the former books and from the nature of the thing, and from some following passages where the sense is completed.

2 Kenan, Mahalaleel, Jered,

3 Enoch, Methuselah, Lamech,

4 Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

Initially he mentions only one son, but here he names and treats of Noah's three sons, partly because they were all the founders of the new world and partly because the accomplishment of Noah's famous prophecy (Gen ix 25—27, could not otherwise appear, but by the account of their several posterities.

5 ¶ The sons of Japheth, Gomer, and Magog, and Madai, and Javan, and Tubal, and Meshech, and Thiras.

6 And the sons of Gomer, Aschenaz, and Riphath, and Togarmah.

Riphath or Diphath, for those two Hebrew letters which are used to our D and R being very like, are oft confounded and exchanged, as ver 7, 11, 16, 50.

7 And the sons of Javan, Thusheth, and Thushish, Kittim, and Dodanum.

8 ¶ The sons of Ham, Cush and Mizraim, Put, and Canaan.

9 And the sons of Cush, Seba, and Havilah, and Sabta, and Raamah, and Sabtechai. And the sons of Raamah, Sheba, and Dedan.

10 And Cush begat Nimrod: he began to be mighty upon the earth.

11 And Mizraim begat Ludim, and Ananim, and Lehabim, and Naphtulim, 12 And Pharusim, and Casluhim, (of whom came the Philistines,) and Caphtorim.

Of whom came the Philistines, of which see the notes on Gen x 14.

13 And Canaan begat Zidon his first-born, and Heth,

14 The Jebusite also, and the Amorit, and the Girgashite,

The Jebusite, the people so called. So the names which follow until ver 17, are not the names of particular persons, but of people or nations. And all these descended from Canaan, though some of them were afterwards extinct or confounded with others of their brethren by cohabitation or mutual marriages, whereby they lost their names, which is the reason why they are no more mentioned, at least under these names.

15 And the Hivite, and the Arkite, and the Sinite,

16 And the Arvadite, and the Zemarite, and the Hamathite.

17 ¶ The sons of *Shem, Elam, and Aasshur, and Arphaxad, and Iud, and Aram, and Uz, and Hul, and Gether, and Meshech.

The sons of Shem, either the name of sons is so taken here as to include grandsons who are called sons (Gen xxix 5, 2 Sam xix 24) or these words, the children of Shem are understood and inserted before 1/2, out of Gen x 23, where they are expressed.

18 And Arphaxad begat Shelah, and Shelah begat Eber.

Arphaxad begat Shelah, either immediately or mediately by his son Cainan who is expressed Luke iii 35, of which God assisting I shall speak in its proper place.

19 And unto Eber were born two sons: the name of the one was Peleg, because in his days the earth was divided: and his brother's name was Joktan.

The earth was divided in their languages and habitation, of which see Gen xi 7.

20 And Joktan begat Almodad, and Shaleph, and Hazarmaveth, and Jerah, 21 Hadoram also, and Uz, and Diklah,

22 And Ebal, and Abimael, and Sheba, Ebal, or Obal as it is Gen x 28 such proper names being oft differently written according to the difference of times, and people, and writers.

23 And Ophir, and Havilah, and Jobab. All these were the sons of Joktan.

24 ¶ Shem, Arphaxad, Shelah, Arphaxad having given a brief and general account of the original of the world and the people, it be now returns to a more large and particular account, the genealogy of Shem from whom the Jews were descended.

25 Eber, Peleg, Reu,

26 Serug, Nahor, Terah,

27 Abram, the same is Abraham.

28 The sons of Abraham, Isaac, and Ishmael.

29 ¶ These are their generations. The firstborn of Ishmael, Nebaioth, then Kedur, and Adbeel, and Mibsam, 30 Mishm, and Dumah, Massa, Hadad, and Tema.

31 Uthur, Niphush, and Kedemah. These are the sons of Ishmael.

32 ¶ Now the sons of Keturah, Abraham's concubine: she bare Zimran, and Jokshan, and Midian, and Midian, and Ishbak, and Shuah. And the sons of Jokshan, Sheba, and Dedan.

33 And the sons of Midian, Ephah, and Ephraim, and Henoah, and Abida, and Eldaah. All these are the sons of Keturah.

34 And Abraham begat Isaac. The sons of Isaac, Esau and Israel.

35 ¶ The sons of Esau, Eliphaz, Reuel, and Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah.

36 The sons of Eliphaz, Teman, and Omar, Zephi, and Gatam, Kenaz, and Timna, and Amalek.

Timna there is another Timna, the concubine of Eliphaaz, Gen xxxvi 12, but this was one of his sons though called by the same name, there being some names common both to men and women in the Hebrew and in other languages.

37 The sons of Reuel, Nahath, Zerah, Shammah, and Mizzah

38 And the sons of Seir, Lotan, and Shobal, and Zibcon, and Anah, and Dishon, and Izai, and Dishan

The sons of Seir, one of another nation prince of the Horims, whose genealogy is here described, because of that affinity which was contracted between his and Esau's posterity, and those who were not united and incorporated with them were destroyed by them. See Deut ii 12

39 And the sons of Lotan, Hori, and Homam, and Timna was Lotan's sister

40 The sons of Shobal, Ahan, and Manahath, and Ebal, Shephi, and Onam And the sons of Zibcon, Anah, and Anah

41 The sons of Anah, Dishon And the sons of Dishon, Amram, and Ishban, and Ithran, and Cheran

42 The sons of Ezer, Bilhan, and Zavan, and Jakan The sons of Dishan, Uz, and Aran

43 ¶ Now these are the kings that reigned in the land of Edom before any king reigned over the children of Israel, Bela the son of Beor and the name of his city was Dinhabah

Of this and the following verses, see on Gen xxxvi 3 &c, whence this whole relation is taken

44 And when Bela was dead, Jobab the son of Zerah of Bozrah reigned in his stead

45 And when Jobab was dead, Hushim of the land of the Temanites reigned in his stead

46 And when Hushim was dead, Hadad the son of Bedad which smote Midian in the field of Moab, reigned in his stead and the name of his city was Avith

47 And when Hadad was dead, Samlah of Masrekah reigned in his stead

48 And when Samlah was dead, Shaul of Rehoboth by the river reigned in his stead

49 And when Shaul was dead, Baa-hanan the son of Achbor reigned in his stead

50 And when Baa-hanan was dead, Hadad reigned in his stead and the name of his city was Pat, and his wife's name was Melitabel, the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mezahab

51 ¶ Hadad died also And the dukes of Edom were, duke Timnah, duke Ahi, duke Jetheth, 52 Duke Abolibanah, duke Elah, duke Pinon,

53 Duke Kenaz, duke Teman, duke Mibzar,

54 Duke Magdiel, duke Iram These are the dukes of Edom.

THESE are the sons of Israel, Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun,

2 Dan, Joseph, and Benjamin, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher

3 ¶ The sons of Judah; Er, and Onan, and Shelah which three were born unto him of the daughter of Shua the Canaanitess And Er, the firstborn of Judah, was evil in the sight of the Lord, and he slew him

He puts Judah first, because the best part of the right of the first-born, to wit, the dominion, was conferred upon him, Gen xlix 8, and because the Messiah was to come out of his loins

4 And Tamar his daughter in law bare him Pharez and Zerah All the sons of Judah were five

5 The sons of Pharez, Hezron, and Hamul

6 And the sons of Zerah, Zimri, and Ethan, and Ifeman, and Calcol, and Data five of them in all

If these be the same who are mentioned as the sons of Mahol, 1 Kings ix 31, either the same man had two names Zerah and Mahol, as was usual among the Hebrews, or one of these was his immediate father, and the other then grandfather

7 And the sons of Carim, Achar the troubler of Israel, who transgressed in the thing 'accursed'

Carim is here mentioned because he was the son of Zimri who is also called abhi Josh vii 1 tehar, called Achan Josh vii 1 and here tehar with a little variation for greater significance for tehar signifies a troubler

8 And the sons of Ithim, Azariah

9 The sons also of Hezron, that were born unto him, Irahmeel, and Ram, and Chelubai

10 And Ram begat Ammadab, and Ammadab begat Nahshon, prince of the children of Judah

11 And Nahshon begat Salma, and Salma begat Boaz, 12 And Boaz begat Obed, and Obed begat Jesse,

13 ¶ And Jesse begat his firstborn Eliab, and Abinadab the second, and Shumma the third,

Eliab, called also Lulu 1 Chron xxv 18, unless that was another person, and the word brother be taken more largely for a kinsman, as it is frequently used

14 Nethaneel the fourth, Raddai the fifth,

15 Ozem the sixth, David the seventh

For though he had eight sons, 1 Sam xvi 10, one of them either died presently after that time, or is neglected for some reason now unknown, as others are See the notes on Matt i 8, 9

16 Whose sisters were Zeruah, and Abigail And the sons of Zeruah, Abishai, and Joab, and Asahel, three

17 And Abigail bare Amasa and the father of Amasa was Jether the Ish-meelite

The Ishmeelite, by birth or habitation, but by profession an Israelite, 2 Sam xvii 25, where see my notes

18 ¶ And Caleb the son of Hezron begat children of Azubah his wife, and of Jerioth her sons are these; Jeshar, and Shobab, and Ardon,

CHAP II

The sons of Israel, of Judah by Tamar the children of Jesse, 1—17 Of Caleb the son of Jephon, of him by the daughter of Maarah, 18—21 Of Irahmeel 25—33 Of Shoshan, 34—41. Another by me of Caleb's posterity, 42—49 Of Caleb the son of Hur, 50—

Not that Caleb, Numb xiii 6, for he was the son of Jephunneh, of whom he speaks, chap iv 15, but another Caleb. Her sons, i. e. the sons, either, 1. Of Jerioth, she being last mentioned, or rather, 2. Of Azubah, who is by way of distinction called his wife, when Jerioth probably was only his concubine, and, as it may seem, barren, and therefore upon Azubah's death he married another wife, ver 19. And those other sons of this Caleb, mentioned below ver 42, are his sons by some other wife distinct from all these.

19 And when Azubah was dead, Caleb took unto him <sup>ver 20.</sup> Ephrath, which bare him Hur.

20 And Hur begat Uri, and Uri begat <sup>q. ex. 31. 2.</sup> Bezaleel.

21 ¶ And afterward Hezron went in to the daughter of Machur the father of Gilead, whom he married when he <sup>ver 27. 1.</sup> <sup>12th book.</sup> was three score years old, and she bare him Segub.

Went in, i. e. lay with her, as that phrase is commonly used, as Gen iv 1 vi 4. The father of Gilead, of a man so called. Or if Gilead be the name of that known country, father is put for head or governor as it is used 1 Sam xxiv 11, 2 Kings v 13 xvi 7, Isa xxii 21, or for protector or curator as father is used Job xxix 16, Jer ii 27, Lam v 3, this man being a man of noble valour, and the great champion in those parts. Whom he married, Heb and he took her to wit to wife. Or after he had taken her for so the participle can be used as hath been formerly noted. When he was three score years old, Heb and he was to wit, when he went in unto her or when he married her.

22 And Segub begat Jair, who had three and twenty cities in the land of Gilead.

Which he had, though he was of the tribe of Judah as here we see because he married a daughter of Manassah, Numb xxxi 29 whence he is called a son of Manassah, Numb xxxii 11, Deut. in 14 and because being a man of great courage, he joined himself with that half tribe in subduing Gilead where he acted so valiantly and successfully that he had twenty three cities or great towns given to him to possess or dispose of or rather, to rule over them and have some authority from them as a king is said to have his kingdom although he hath not the property of all the lands and houses in it.

23 ¶ And he took Geshur, and Aram, with the towns of Iur, from them, with Kenath, and the towns thereof, <sup>4th Num. 3.</sup> <sup>41. Thut. d.</sup> <sup>14. to b.</sup> <sup>13. 10.</sup> even three score cities. All these belonged to the sons of Machur the father of Gilead.

And he took or, for he had taken. So that the reason why he had so great a territory and jurisdiction given to him Geshur and Aram, two cities or great towns so called. With the towns of Iur, i. e. with those twenty three cities which he is said to have ver 22. From them i. e. from the former inhabitants, which is easily understood. With Kenath, which was taken by Nobah, one of Jair's commanders, sent by him to take it, as may be gathered fr Numb xxxii 41, 42. To the sons of Machur, partly to his own sons, and partly to his son-in-law Iur, who by reason of that dear affection which was betwixt them and his forsaking his own tribe and kindred to fight for them and to dwell with them, is here reckoned as his own son.

24 And after that Hezron was dead in Caleb-ephraiah, then Abiah Hezron's wife bare him Ashur the father of Tekoa.

Caleb-ephraiah, a place then so called by a conjunction of the names of the man and his wife, afterwards supposed to be called Bethlehem Ephraiah. Others translate the words thus, When Caleb took Ephraiah. So it is an ellipsis of the verb, which is here to be understood out of ver 19, where it is expressed. Abiah bare him Ashur, after the father's death. The father of Tekoa, a known place, 2 Sam xiv 2, 4, Jer vi 1, Amos i 1, whose father he is called, because he was either the progenitor of the people inhabiting there, or their prince and ruler, or the builder of the city.

25 ¶ And the sons of Jerahmeel the firstborn of Hezron were, Ram the firstborn, and Bunah, and Oren, and Ozem, and Ahijah.

Or, of (the pr. fr. men being oft understood) Ahijah, his wife so called, as may seem probable from the next verse, where he mentions another wife.

26 Jerahmeel had also another wife, whose name was Atarah she was the mother of Onam.

27 And the sons of Ram the firstborn of Jerahmeel were, Manaz, and Jamin, and Iker.

28 And the sons of Onam were, Shammai, and Jada. And the sons of Shammai, Nadab, and Abishur.

29 And the name of the wife of Abishur was Abihail, and she bare him Ahban, and Molad.

30 And the sons of Nadab, Seled, and Appaim, but Seled died without children.

31 And the sons of Appaim, Ishi. And the sons of Ishi, Sheshan. And the children of Sheshan, Ahlai.

The sons of Appaim an expression oft used, both afterwards in this verse and elsewhere, and in profane authors too where there is but one son. It is an enallage of the number which is frequent in the Hebrew.

32 And the sons of Jada the brother of Shammai, Jether and Jonathan, and Jether died without children.

33 And the sons of Jonathan, Peleth, and Zaza. These were the sons of Jerahmeel.

34 ¶ Now Sheshan had no sons, but daughters. And Sheshan had a servant, an Egyptian, whose name was Jarha.

Sheshan had no sons to wit living when he died, his son Ahlai ver 31 dying before him, unless Ahlai was the name of Jarha, here.

35 And Sheshan gave his daughter to Jarha his servant to wife, and she bare him Attai.

36 And Attai begat Nathan. And Nathan begat Zabad, <sup>ver 11. 41.</sup>

37 And Zabad begat Ephlal, and Ephlal begat Obed, 38 And Obed begat Jehu, and Jehu begat Azariah.

39 And Azariah begat Helez, and Helez begat Eleasah, 40 And Eleasah begat Sisamai, and Sisamai begat Shallum, 41 And Shallum begat Jekamiah, and Jekamiah begat Ishama.

42 ¶ Now the sons of Caleb the brother of Jerahmeel were, Mesha his firstborn, which was the father of Zaph, and the sons of Meshah the father of Hebron.

The sons of Caleb, to wit, of that Caleb mentioned ver 18 as appears by comparing that verse with ver 24. And these are his sons by another and his third wife. See on ver 18. Zaph, the name either of a man or of a place of which see Josh xv 21, 55, and then father is to be understood here, as ver 23, 24. The father of Hebron, not the place so called, but a man, as is evident, because his sons here follow.

43 And the sons of Hebron, Korah, and Tapuah, and Rekem, and Shema.

44 And Shema begat Rimam the father of Jorkoam, and Rekem begat Shammai.

45 And the son of Shammai was Maon, and Maon was the father of Bethzur.

A place in Judah, Josh xv 58. See on ver 23.

46 And Iphah, Caleb's concubine, bare Haran, and Moza, and Gazez and Haru begat Gazez.

47 And the sons of Jahdu, Regeim, and Jotham, and Gesham, and Pelat, and Ephah, and Shaaph.

The sons of Jahdu the son of Gazez last mentioned, which is implied because he follows next after him in the genealogy. Or the sons of Moza, whose name might be changed into Jahdu for some reason now unknown.

48 Maachah, Caleb's concubine, bare Sheber, and Tirhanah.

49 She bare also Shaaph the father of Madmannah, Sheva the father of Machbenah and the father of Gibeon and the daughter of Caleb was Achsa.

Madmannah this and divers other following names are the names of places in Judah, and father is meant as ver 23, 24.

50 ¶ These were the sons of Caleb the son of Hur, the firstborn of Ephraim, Shobal the father of Kirjath-jearim, 51 Salma the father of Beth-lehem, Haraph the father of Beth-gader.

Salma the father of Beth-lehem, to wit in part for Boiz descended from another Salmon who was the son of Nishon ver 11. Haraph the father of Beth-gader called also Penur the father of Gidon, chap iv 1.

52 And Shobal the father of Kirjath-jearim had sons, ¶ Harohi, and ¶ half of the Manahethites.

Harohi, which may signify an overseer a prophet or teacher, or ruler but here is a proper name as appears from chap iv 2 where he is called Haruah with no great variation in the Hebrew.

53 And the families of Kirjath-jearim, the Ithrites, and the Puhites, and the Shumathites, and the Mishites, of them came the Zarahathites, and the Eshtaulites.

The families of Kirjath-jearim, or in Kirjath-jearim all which descended from Shobal ver 50. Of them are of the family of the Mishites last mentioned. The Eshtaulites the inhabitants of two places called Zorah and Eshtaul, Josh xv 35.

54 The sons of Salma, Beth-lehem, and the Netophathites, ¶ Anoth, the house of Joab and half of the Manahethites, the Zorites.

The sons of Salma, of that Salma mentioned ver 51. Beth-lehem, the inhabitants of Beth-lehem. Harohi, the name of a person or people. The house of Joab, the progenitors of Joab's family. Half of the Manahethites, the other half being mentioned ver 52. Zorites for to wit, the Zorites.

55 And the families of the scribes which dwell at Jabez, the Tirathites, the Shimeathites, and Suchathites. These are the Kenites that came of Heman, the father of the house of Rechab.

The scribes, either civil who were public notaries who wrote and signed legal instruments, or ecclesiastical. And these were either Levites, or Samaritans, or rather Kenites, and are here mentioned not as if they were of the tribe of Judah, but because they dwell upon the land and probably were allied to them by marriage and so in a manner incorporated with them. Who were not without doubt men of war. For the other Tirathites and Suchathites seem to insinuate that they were descendants of Judah, which they were not, but this translation only signifies their cohabitation with them, for which cause they are here named with them. At Jabez, a place in Judah, so named probably from that famous Jabez of the tribe, chap iv 9.

The Kenites that came of Heman, who dwell in Judah, Judg i 16. Thus they are distinguished from the other branch of the Kenites, who dwell in the tribe of Manasseh, Judg iv 11.

CHAP III

The sons of David, 1—9 His line to Zedekiah, 10—16 The successors of Jeroniah, 17—21

NOW these were the sons of David, which were born unto him in Hebron, the first-born Amnon, of Ahinoam the Jezreelitess, the second ¶ Daniel, of Abigail the Carmelitess.

The Jezreelitess, of that Jezreel in Judah, Josh xv 56, not of that in Manasseh, Josh xvii 16. The Carmelitess, so called because she was the wife of Nabai, who dwelt in Carmel 1 Sam xxv 2, which was in Judah Josh xv 55.

2 The third, Absalom the son of Maachah the daughter of Talmai king of Geshur, the fourth, Adonijah the son of Haggith.

3 The fifth, Shephatiah of Abital the sixth, Ithream by Eglah his wife.

Which title belongs either to all the foregoing women or rather, as the singular number sheweth, to Eglah only, last mentioned who possibly may be so called because she was his first and therefore most proper wife though her son was born after all the rest before mentioned and therefore both she and her son are put in the sixth place, the wives being here named only for the sons sakes. See more on 2 Sam iii 5.

4 These six were born unto him in Hebron, and there he reigned seven years and six months and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty and three years.

5 And these were born unto him in Jerusalem ¶ Shimea, and Shobab, and Nathan and Solomon, four, of ¶ Bathsheba the daughter of ¶ Ammiel.

Four, all David's children by her is the text positively affirms, and therefore Solomon is called her only son, 2 Sam xv 3 because she loved him as if he had been so. Bathsheba called also Bath, 2 Sam xi 3. See on 2 Sam xi 3.

6 Ithai also, and ¶ Elshama, and Eliphelet.

And he had two other sons called by the same names ver 8 but they were by differing wives and probably they were then distinguished by some additional clause or title which is here omitted, because it was now needless for us to know it or the two first were dead before the two second were born and therefore the names of the deceased were given to the latter to preserve their memory.

7 And Nogah, and Nepheg, and Japhia, 8 And Elishama, and ¶ Thada, and Eliphelet nine.

Object. There are but seven mentioned 2 Sam v 14 & Answe. Two of them are omitted there, because they died very early or were inglorious or died without issue, and here we have all the sons of David, as it here follows, ver 9, which clause is not added, 2 Sam v.

9 These were all the sons of David, beside the sons of the concubines, and Tamar their sister.

10 ¶ And Solomon's son was Rehoboam, ¶ Abia his son, Asa his son, Jehoshaphat his son, 11 Joiam his son, ¶ Ahaziah his son, Joash his son,

12 Amariah his son, ¶ Azariah his son, Jotham his son,

13 Ahaz his son, Hezekiah his son, Manasseh his son,

14 Amon his son, Josiah his son
 15 And the sons of Josiah were, the first-born Johanan, the second Jehoiakim, the third Zedekiah, the fourth Shallum

Of whom, at least under that name, there is no mention in the history of the reign of Josiah's sons, 2 Kings xxiv. xiv. But in Jer xxv 11, there is mention of Shallum the son of Josiah king of Judah, which reigned instead of Josiah his father; which most conceive to be the same who is otherwise called Jehoahaz 2 Kings xxiv. And this seems most probable, 1 From that phrase, he reigned instead of Josiah, which implies that he immediately succeeded his father, otherwise he would have been said to have reigned instead of his brother as Zedekiah is said to reign instead of Jehoiachin, 2 Kings xxiv. 17 because he was his next successor 2 From the order of this sermon or discourse of Jeremiah, which was directed to Zedekiah and his servants, and people, as appears by Jer xli 1, 2, 11 xlii 1, 2 whom he admonished by the examples of the kings his predecessors, and of the sentence of God concerning each of them, and that in order as they reigned 1 Of Shallum ver 11 &c 2 Of Jehoiakim ver 18, &c 3 Of Jehonah, ver 24 &c Therefore Shallum is the same with Jehoahaz who was the first king after Josiah 2 Kings xxiv. 30 3 From the nature of that prophecy, Jer xxv 11 12 which he utters to Jehoahaz, who was carried captive not so far as Babylon but only to Egypt every near country whence the people hoped that he would speedily and easily return, or be re-established in his throne by the king of Egypt in opposition to the king of Babylon 4 Because Jehoahaz was one of Josiah's younger sons as appears by comparing 2 Kings xxiv. 31, 36 And thus Shallum is here called his fourth son

16 And the sons of Jehoiakim Jehonah his son, Zedekiah his son

Not his natural son for he was his uncle 2 Kings xxv. 17 but his legal son, or his successor upon whom the son's right was devolved by virtue of that law, Num. xxviii. 10, and therefore it is not strange if he have the name of son with it See the notes on Luke iii. Or this was an error Zedekiah because it is improbable and without example, that one and the same man should be twice mentioned in the same genealogy as the son of two several parents

17 ¶ And the sons of Jeconiah Assir, Salathiel his son,

Of Jeconiah, Assir or of Jeconiah the captive, or prisoner, which is added to show that he begat his son when he was captive in Babylon as it is noted, Matt i 12 whether he was carried captive, 2 Kings xxv. 19 Object It is said of this Jeconiah, Jer xxv. 30, Write this man childless Anno So he is called, because he was an unhappy prince and had no son that succeeded him in the throne as the next words explain it See more on that place Salathiel his son, either his legal or his natural son, of which see the notes on Jer xxv. 30, Matt i 12 Luke iii. 27

18 Malchiram also, and Pedajah, and Shenagair, Jeconiah, Hoshanah, and Nedabiah

Malchiram also, and Pedajah the sense of such a list is short and imperfect as is frequent in the Hebrew language, and something is here understood as the sons also of Salathiel were Malchiram and Pedajah, &c as they gather from hence, that the same Zerubbabel is called the son of Pedajah, ver 19, and the son (i.e. the grandson) of Salathiel, Matt i 12 Or Malchiram and the rest here named were the sons of Jeconiah, and they are differing Zerubbabel which are mentioned here, ver 19, Matt i 12, Luke iii. 27 of which see the notes on those places

19 And the sons of Pedajah were Zerubbabel, and Shimei, and the sons of Zerubbabel, Meshullam, and Hananiah, and Shelomith their sister

i.e. Sister to the two last named sons of Zerubbabel (to wit, by both parents, and therefore named before the other five, ver 20, who were her brethren by the father, but not by the mother

20 And Hashubah, and Ohel, and Berechiah, and Haadiah, Jushabhesed, five.

Either of Zerubbabel or of Meshullam as is gathered from hence, that the sons of Hananiah (brother to Meshullam ver 19) are named ver 21 and therefore the five ver 20 are presumed to be the sons of Meshullam But that is no necessary inference, for Meshullam possibly had no sons and therefore he passeth from him to Hananiah, ver 21

21 And the sons of Hananiah, Pelatiah, and Jesai, the sons of Rephaim, the sons of Arim, the sons of Obadiah, the sons of Shechaniah

All these men both parents and their sons here blended together, are mentioned as the sons of Hananiah, and branches of the royal stock

22 And the sons of Shechaniah, She-mariah, and the sons of Shemariah, Otni, and Pelekiah, and Igeal, and Bariah, and Neariah, and Shaphat, six

To wit including the father But the Hebrew word shesha which is rendered six, may be the proper name of one of the sons of Shemariah, who may be so called, because he was the sixth son

23 And the sons of Neariah, Elhornai, and Hezekiah, and Azikam, three

The sons of Neariah, who none is here mentioned above his elder brethren probably died without issue

24 And the sons of Elhornai were, Hothai, and Iharib, and Pelatiah, and Akkub, and Johanan, and Dalai, and Anani, seven 1287, 1288, 1289, 1290, 1291, 1292, 1293, 1294, 1295, 1296, 1297, 1298, 1299, 1300, 1301, 1302, 1303, 1304, 1305, 1306, 1307, 1308, 1309, 1310, 1311, 1312, 1313, 1314, 1315, 1316, 1317, 1318, 1319, and Temoni, and Haahashtari. These were the sons of Naarah.

7 And the sons of Helah were, Zereth, and Jizoar, and Chanan.

Understand here, and Coz out of the beginning of the following verse. The like ellipses we have in the end of ver 13, and of chap vii 18.

8 And Coz begat Anub, and Zobebah, and the families of Ahirhel the son of Harum.

9 ¶ And Jabez was more honourable than his brethren, and his mother called his name Jabez, saying, Because I bare him with sorrow.

Jabez, one of the fathers of the families of Ahirhel last mentioned. More honourable than his brethren, for courage, and especially for true and fervent piety, expressed in the following petition.

10 And Jabez called on the God of Israel, saying, Oh that thou wouldest bless me indeed, and enlarge my coast, and that thine hand might be with me, and that thou wouldest keep me from evil, that it may not grieve me. And God granted him that which he requested.

Jabez called on the God of Israel when he was undertaking some great and dangerous service. Oh that thou wouldest bless me indeed! I trust not to my own or people's valour but only to thy blessing and help. Enlarge my coast drive out these wicked and cursed Canaanites whom thou hast commanded us to root out, and therefore I justly beg and expect thy blessing in the execution of thy command. That thine hand might be with me to protect and strengthen me against my adversaries. That thou wouldest keep me from evil, or work with (for so the Hebrew phrase is sometimes used, as Cant 1 2 in 9 Isa 57 5) and I will so restrain and govern it. That it may not grieve me, that it may not oppress and overcome me which will be very grievous to me. The consequent put for the antecedent, and more is understood than is expressed. He useth this expression in allusion to his name which signifies grief. O Lord let me not have that grief which my name implies, and which my sin deserves.

11 ¶ And Chelub the brother of Shuah begat Mehu, which was the father of Eshton.

12 And Eshton begat Bith-rapha, and Paseah, and Telunnah the father of Hinnish. These are the men of Rechab.

From these we sprung the present inhabitants of Rechab a town not elsewhere mentioned.

13 And the sons of Kenaz, Othniel, and Seraiah, and the sons of Othniel, Hathi.

Kenaz, the son either of Chelub, ver 11 or of his son Eshton ver 12 and the father of Jephunneh, and consequently Caleb's grandfather ver 15, whence Caleb is called a Kenazite Numb xxvii 12 Hathi, understand, and Menothai out of ver 11. See above on ver 7.

14 And Menothai begat Ophrah, and Seraiah begat Joab the father of the valley of Beth-shimon, for they were craftsmen.

The father of the valley is of the inhabitants of the valley.

15 And the sons of Caleb the son of Jephunneh, Jui, Ithab, and Naam, and the sons of Ithab, even Kenaz.

Another Kenaz, differing from that Kenaz ver 13. Or his name might be Uknaz.

16 And the sons of Jehaleleel, Ziph, and Zaphah, Triah, and Asarel.

Jehaleleel, the son of Kenaz or Uknaz last mentioned.

17 And the sons of Ezra were, Jether, and Mered, and Ephraim, and Jalon: and she bare Miriam, and Shammai, and Ishbah the father of Eshtemoa.

Ezra, the son of Asareel last named. She bare; she, i. e. Bithiah, bare unto Mered, as may seem by comparing this with ver 18.

18 And his wife Jehudiah bare Jered, the father of Gedor, and Heber the father of Socho, and Jekuthiel the father of Zanoah. And these are the sons of Bithiah the daughter of Pharaoh, which Mered took.

His wife, either Ezra's wife, or rather, another wife of Mered Jehudiah, or, the Jewess, so called to distinguish her from his Egyptian wife here following. These are the sons, to wit, Miriam, and the rest following, ver 17. The daughter of Pharaoh, either, 1. Of Pharaoh king of Egypt, for Mered might be a person of great estate and quality, or this might be only Pharaoh's illegitimate daughter. Or, 2. Of some other Egyptian or Israelite called by that name, which might easily happen upon divers occasions.

19 And the sons of her wife Hodiah the sister of Naham, the father of Keilah the Garmite, and Eshtemoa the Maachathite.

Hodiah, his third wife. 20 And the sons of Shimon were, Amnon, and Rimmon, Ben-hanan, and Tilon. And the sons of Ishi were, Zoloth, and Ben-zoheth.

Shimon, another son of the father of Keilah, mentioned ver 19. Ishi, son of Tilon last mentioned.

21 ¶ The sons of Shelah the son of Judah were, Er the father of Lecah, and Uralah the father of Marshah, and the families of the house of them that wrought fine linen, of the house of Ashbiah.

Having treated of the posterity of Judah by Pharez and by Zerah, he now comes to his progeny by Shelah, of whom see Gen xxxviii.

22 And Jokim, and the men of Cizeba, and Joash, and Saraph, who had the dominion in Moab, and Jashub-lechem. And these are ancient things.

Who had the dominion in Moab, which they ruled in the name and for the use and service of the kings of Judah to whom Moab was subject from David's time. Or, who had possessions in Moab, or, who married wives in Moab. These are ancient things, the sense is either, 1. These persons and things were in ancient times and therefore it is not strange if now they be so little known. But that might have been with equal truth said of divers other parts of this account. Or rather, 2. But those blessed times and things are long since past and gone. Our ancestors then had the dominion over the heathen but then degenerate posterity are now slaves to them in Chaldaea, Persia, &c., where they are employed as potters or gardeners, or in other servile works.

23 These were the potters, and those that dwelt among plants and hedges, there they dwelt with the king for his work.

These were the potters, or rather, these are, for he seems to oppose their present servitude to their former glory, and to show their low and mean spirits, that had rather turn among the heathen to do their drudgery, than return to Jerusalem to serve God and enjoy their freedom. There they dwell, or tarried, or now dwell, when their brethren are returned. With the king of Babylon or Persia, esteeming it a greater honour and happiness to serve that earthly monarch in the meanest employments, than to serve the king of kings in his temple, and in his most noble and heavenly work.

24 ¶ The sons of Simeon were, Nemuel, and Jamin, ¶ Jarib, Zerah, and Shaul.

The sons of Simeon these are here joined with Judah.

because their possession was taken out of Judah's portion, Josh xix 1. This account seems to differ from that Gen xlii both in the number and names of the persons, which is not strange, considering how customary it was amongst the Hebrews for one person to have two or three names given to him upon several occasions. And for Ubad Gen xlii 10, he may be omitted here, because he left no posterity or family after him, as the rest did.

25 Shallum his son, Mibsam his son, Mishma his son.

Shallum his son, i e son of Saul last mentioned

26 And the sons of Mishma, Hamuel his son, Zacchur his son, Shimei his son.

27 And Shimei had sixteen sons and six daughters, but his brethren had not many children, neither did all their family multiply, † like to the children of Judah.

† Heb. unto The tribe of Simeon did not increase proportionally to the tribe of Judah, in which they dwelt, as appears by those two catalogues, Numb i 22, xvi 14 which is to be ascribed to God's curse upon them delivered by the mouth of holy Jacob, Gen xlix and signified by Moses's neglect of them, when he blessed all the other tribes.

† Josh 13 2 28 And they dwelt at Beer-sheba, and Moladah, and Hazar shual,

These and the following cities are mentioned Josh xix 2, &c, with no great alterations.

† Or, Balah Josh 11 5 29 And at Bilhah, and at Ezim, and at Tolad,

† Or, Hailad Josh 1 4 30 And at Bethuel, and at Hormah, and at Zaklag,

† Or, Hazar Josh 11 5 31 And at Beth-marcaboth, and at Hazar-susim, and at Beth-buri, and at Sharuaim. These were their cities unto the reign of David.

Either, 1 Of David's posterity as long as the kingdom of Judah lasted, or until the captivity of Babelon. But this seems not to be true, for Simeon was gone into captivity with the rest of the ten tribes long before that time. Or rather 2 Of David himself. And this may seem to be added, because some of these cities though given to Simeon by Joshua, yet through the sloth or cowardice of that tribe were not taken from the Philistines until David's time, who took some of them, and the Simeonites having justly forfeited their right to them by their neglect gave them to his own tribe. For it is evident concerning Zaklag one of them, that it was in the Philistines' hands in David's time, and by him given to him, and by him annexed to the tribe of Judah 1 Sam xxvii 6.

† Or, Ither Josh 19 32 And then villages were, Paltam, and Ain, Rimmon, and Tochen, and Ashan, five cities.

† Or, Ban Josh 18 2 33 And all their villages that were round about the same cities, unto Baal. These were their habitations, and their genealogy.

† Or, as they divided themselves by nations among them. 34 And Meshobab, and Jamlech, and Jediah the son of Amariah,

These and the rest here following are particularly mentioned for their valiant and successful achievements, related ver 39, &c.

35 And Joel, and Jehu the son of Josiab, the son of Seraiah, the son of Asub, 36 And Elhocnai, and Jakobah, and Jeshohai, and Asaiah, and Adiel, and Jesimiel, and Benaiah, 37 And Ziza the son of Shuphi, the son of Alon, the son of Jediah, the son of Shumri, the son of Shemaiah, † Heb. coming 38 These † mentioned by their names were princes in their families and the house of their fathers increased greatly.

* These named ver 34—37 The house of their fathers increased greatly which forced them to seek for new and larger habitations.

39 ¶ And they went to the entrance of Gedor, even unto the east side of the valley, to seek pasture for their flocks.

To the entrance of Gedor, to that country that belongs to Gedor, or borders upon it, either that Gedor Josh xv 58, or that called Gedorah Josh xv 36 into the east side of the valley, of which see on 1 Sam xvii 2, 52.

40 And they found fat pasture and good, and the land was wide, and quiet, and peaceable, for they of Ham had dwelt there of old.

They of Ham, i e the posterity of that cursed Ham, either the Arabians, or the Canaanites or Philistines, who descended from Ham, Gen x 6. And accordingly these words contain a reason, either, 1 To prove that the land was good, because the Arabians, who being wholly given to pasturage, used to find out the choicest grounds, had formerly pitched their tents there. Or, 2 Why they went and possessed this place, because it was not in the hands of their brethren of Judah, but in the possession of that people which they had authority and command to expel. Had dwelt there of old i e had possessed it of old and hitherto. Or dwelt there before i e before they came and cast them out of their possessions.

41 And these written by name came in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and smote their tents, and the habitations that were found there, and destroyed them utterly unto this day, and dwelt in their rooms because there was pasture there for their flocks.

In the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, but a little before their captivity which was in the sixth year of Hezekiah, 2 Kings xxvii. So their joy in their new and pleasant, and fruitful possessions lasted but for a very little while. Smote their tents i e the people dwelling in tents, for so it seems these still did for the convenience of pasturage. Destroyed them utterly unto this day, i e so as they could never after recover themselves.

42 And some of them, of the sons of Simeon five hundred men, went to mount Seir, having for their captains Pealtiah, and Neariah, and Rephaiah, and Uzziel, the sons of Ishi.

Some went to Mount Seir, probably about the same time.

43 And they smote the rest of the Amabathites that were escaped, and dwelt there unto this day.

The rest of the Amabathites, not destroyed by Saul, or David, or his successors. Unto this day, either, 1 Until the captivity of the ten tribes. But that happening so speedily after this time, this expression may seem to be very improper and insignificant here. Or rather, 2 Until the Babylonish captivity, or the time next after it when these books were written. For although the main body of that tribe dwelling in Canaan were carried into captivity, yet this small remnant of them having removed their dwellings and being planted in Mount Seir, which lay southward from Judah, might possibly be continued and preserved in those parts, when their brethren were gone into captivity.

CHAP. V

The war of Reuben unto the captivity their war against the Hagrites, 1—10 The chief men and habitations of Gad, 11—17 The number of the Reubenites, Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh, that marched against the Hagrites, and overcame them, 18—21 They are all carried captives into Assyria, 25—26.

NOW the sons of Reuben the firstborn of Israel, (for he was the firstborn; but,

b Gen 35
22 & 49
c Gen 48
15 22

forasmuch as he <sup>b</sup>d filed his father's bed, his birthright was given unto the sons of Joseph the son of Israel and the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright

For he was the first-born these and the following words to ver 3, which are enclosed within a parenthesis, seem to be inserted here as an answer to a secret objection, or as a reason why Reuben's genealogy was not set down first, but Judah's was put before it, which is double, the first follows immediately, the other is in the last clause of this verse. His birthright, i.e. the right of the first born, which although it continued in it something of dominion, Gen. xxvii
1, 32 which Joseph had in his own person Gen. xlix
1, yet principally consisted in having a double portion as appears from Deut. xxi 17, which Joseph enjoyed both in his person and in his posterity which had two parts of twelve in Canaan. And it is Joseph's posterity which is here considered. Unto the sons of Joseph, Ephraim and Manasse each having a distinct portion. The sons of Israel this is added emphatically, because they were reputed and treated as if they had been the immediate sons of Jacob, of which see Gen. xlviii 5. The genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright, this is the second reason which sheweth both why Reuben's genealogy was not first mentioned, and if another tribe was to be linked before it why that was Judah, and not Joseph, as it might seem most fit for the former reason because, saith he, the order of their genealogy was not to be ruled by the birthright but by a higher privilege, which was given to Judah, and which here follows

1 Or <sup>d</sup> Judah prevailed above his brethren and of him came the chief ruler but the birthright was Joseph's

Judah, not the person (for so Joseph prevailed) but the tribe of Judah. Prevailed above his brethren, excelled the other tribes in number and power, and especially in the following privilege. And of him, or for of him, i.e. the Hebrew word oft used, this being a reason of the precedence, as nation, or a declaration wherein he did prevail.
Came the chief ruler, the government was by God's promise and appointment to be exercised chiefly and most durably in that tribe, first in David and his successors and then in he Messiah who sprang out of Judah. Heb. xii 14 which was a far greater privilege than the birthright. Or as the ruler (i.e. as to the point of dominion) he was more than he, or preferred before him, i.e. before Joseph who remained in the very next clause the premonition being referred unto the following noun, which is frequent among the Hebrews as Psal. lxxxviii 1 ver 19. But the birthright, or although I have preferred so this prevents our removing the reason again to Judah's precedence taken from his birthright.

1 Or <sup>d</sup> The sons, I say, of Reuben the first-born of Israel were, Hanoch, and Pallu,
Hezion and Carmi

1 The sons of Joel, Shemua his son, Grog his son, Shimei his son,

Joel was the son either of Carmi last mentioned, or rather of Hanoch Reuben's first born because he and his were successively princes of this tribe as may be gathered from ver 6

5 Micah his son, Reaia his son, Baal his son

6 Beerah his son, whom a Philgath-puraser king of Assyria carried away captive for he was prince of the Reubenites

7 And his brethren by their families, when the genealogy of their generations was reckoned, were the chief, Jereel, and Zechariah,

His brethren i.e. the other sons of Reuben and then posterity. The chief, Heb. the head, which was the head of his family

8 And Bela the son of Azaz, the son of Sheva, the son of Joel, who dwelt in Aroer, even unto Nebo and Bala-meon

Who dwell, to wit, the Reubenites, all these here before mentioned, as appears both by the following verses, which relate to the whole tribe, and by the agreement of this description of their inheritance with that, Josh. xii 15, 16

9 And eastward he inhabited unto the entering in of the wilderness from the river Euphrates because their cattle were multiplied in the land of Gilead

He inhabited i.e. the tribe of Reuben. From the river Euphrates, from Jordan and the wilderness beyond it unto Euphrates. Of the wilderness, which lies towards the reaches to the river Euphrates, namely, the great wilderness of Kedemoth, Deut. ii 26, which was extended far and wide towards Euphrates, for that was the eastern boundary of Reuben's possession and not Euphrates, to which their habitation never reached. Their cattle were multiplied; which forced them to enlarge their habitation as far as they could eastward towards Euphrates.

10 And in the days of Saul they made war with the Hagaites, who fell by their hand and they dwelt in their tents throughout all the east land of Gilead

They made war, the Gadites and Manassites joining with them in the war ver 18, 19. With the Hagaites, the Ishmaelites, who dwelt in Arabia the Desert. They dwelt in their tents, the Israelites took possession of their lands, and tents or houses. Throughout all the east land of Gilead, which lay eastward from the land of Gilead

11 And the children of Gad dwelt over against them, in the land of Bashan unto Saleh

12 Joel the chief, and Shapham the next, and Jaani, and Shaphat in Bashan

The chief, the prince of the tribe, or at least of his family when they were referred to wit, in the days of Joshua ver 17. Shephar in bashan i.e. who dwelt in the city of Bashan. Others say, Who abode in Bashan to defend the city and country, when their brethren went out to war against the Hittites ver 18, 19

13 And their brethren of the house of their fathers were Michael, and Meshullam and Sheba, and Jerni, and Jachari, and Zari, and Heber, seven

14 These are the children of Abihail the son of Huri, the son of Jaroah, the son of Gilead, the son of Michael, the son of Jeshishai, the son of Jahdo the son of Buz

These are the children these seven last named

15 Ahu the son of Abdul, the son of Guni, chief of the house of their fathers

This Ahu is the head or chief of the houses or families with 1. Of those seven named ver 13, or, 2. Of Abdul and Guni last named and of their fathers

16 And they dwelt in Gilead in Bashan, and in her towns and in all the suburbs of Shaton, upon their borders

Then dwelt, i.e. the children of the tribe of Gad. In Gilead, i.e. a part of Gilead. In the Reubenites and Manassites dwelt in other parts of it, Deut. iii 12, 13, 16. In Bashan in the tent of Bashan as it is said, ver 11. Quest. How came the Gadites to dwell in Bashan, when all Bashan is expressly said to be given to the half tribe of Manassah, Deut. iii 15, Josh. xiii 29, 30? Ans. All Bashan is put for the greatest part of it by a synecdoche, very frequent in Scripture and all authors, and so the Gadites might possess a part of it. And thus both Bashan and Gilead are used for parts of them. Josh. xvii 1, where it is said of Michai a Manassite that he had Gilead and Bashan. And it is unquestionably true that Gilead is taken sometimes for largely for all the land of the Israelites beyond Jordan sometimes more strictly for that part of it which borders upon Mount Gilead, of which see my notes on Josh.
xvii 1, the like may be presumed concerning Bashan, and so in its strictest sense it might be all given to the Manassites and yet in its largest sense might comprehend a part of the land belonging to the Gadites. In her towns,

1 e in some of her cities and towns In all the suburbs,
1 e in its fields and pasture grounds 1 Chron. xxvii 29
Of Sharon; not that within Jordan 1 e xxvii. 2, but another without Jordan Upon their borders, to wit of Gilead and Bashan, for Gilead properly so called or the greatest part of it, belonged to the Reubenites and Bashan or the greatest part of it, to the Manassites, and so the Gadites (whose habitation was between the Reubenites and Manassites) had those parts of both their countries which were towards their borders Or unto their borders, 1 e as far as the suburbs of Gilead of Bashan, which were last mentioned, were extended

17 All these were reckoned by genealogies in the days of Jotham king of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam king of Israel.

In the days of Jotham king of Judah who reigned long, partly in his father's days, and partly by himself, 2 Kings xxv, and being at leisure as to wars and troubles, thought this a fit season to examine the state of his people In the days of Jeroboam, either the second of that name of whom see 2 Kings xiii 13 Or rather the first Jeroboam partly because he is called simply Jeroboam, without any addition, which shows that he speaks of the most famous of the two and partly because this work of taking an account of the people doth fit better agree to the times of Jeroboam the first, when the kingdom of Israel was first erected and established, and broken off from that of Judah, when it was necessary for Jeroboam to know his own strength, and the numbers of his people than to the times of Jeroboam the second when the kingdom of Israel was broken and near to its ruin

18 ¶ The sons of Reuben, and the Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh, of valiant men, men able to bear buckler and sword, and to shoot with bow, and skilful in war, were four and forty thousand seven hundred and threescore, that went out to the war

19 And they made war with the Hagarites with Jetur, and Nephish, and Nodab

1 e With the posterity of Isaac &c, who were Ishmael-ites, as appears from Gen xxv 13

20 And they were helped against them, and the Hagarites were delivered into their hand, and all that were with them for they cried to God in the battle, and he was intreated of them because they put their trust in him

They were helped against them, to wit by God ver 22 who give them extraordinary courage and success All that were with them, their friends and allies in this war

21 And they took away their cattle of their camels fifty thousand, and of sheep two hundred and fifty thousand, and of asses two thousand, and of fowls an hundred thousand

Of their camels fifty thousand, for camels were very numerous in Arabia, being used in war and for burdens &c, and being very patient of thirst and therefore most fit for those hot and dry countries Of men an hundred thou- sand, whom they took prisoners, and either used as slaves, or sold them for such

22 For there fell down many slain, because the war was of God And they dwelt in their steads until the captivity

The war was of God, God put them upon it, and mightily assisted them in it They dwelt, 1 e that party of these tribes which went out to this war being 41760 men, or part of them by the consent of the rest Until the captivity, of which 2 Kings xv 29, xviii 6

23 ¶ And the children of the half tribe of Manasseh dwelt in the land they increased from Bashan unto Baal-hermon and Senir, and unto mount Hermon

Having discoursed of the Reubenites ver 1 &c, and next of the Gadites, ver 11 &c, he now comes to the Manassites In the land, 1 e in their land to wit, in the northern part of the land beyond Jordan

24 And these were the heads of the house of their fathers, even Ephraim, and Ishi, and Ehel, and Azriel, and Jeremiah, and Hodaviah, and Jahdiel, mighty men of valour, famous men, and heads of the house of their fathers

25 ¶ And they transgressed against the God of their fathers and went a whoring after the gods of the people of the land, whom God destroyed before them

26 And the God of Israel stirred up the spirit of Pul king of Assyria, and the spirit of Tilgath pilneser king of Assyria, and he carried them away, even the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh, and brought them unto Halah, and Habor, and Hara, and to the river Gozan unto this day

Stirred up the spirit, he so governed his counsels and affections that he should bring his forces against this people rather than others Of Halah Habor, &c, see 2 Kings xviii 6, xviii 11

The sons of Levi the line of the high priests from Aaron to the captivity 1-15 The families of Gershon, Merari, and Kohath 16-18 The office of Aaron and his sons unto Shiloh, 19-53 The cities of the priests and Levites, 54-61

THE sons of Levi, of Gershon, Kohath, and Merari

2 And the sons of Kohath Amram,
Ishih, and Hebron, and Uzzi

Uzzi called also Ammonadab, ver 22 compare Exod
vi 21

3 And the children of Amram, Aaron, and Moses, and Miriam The sons also of Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar

1 ¶ Eleazar begat Phinehas, Phinehas begat
Abishua,

2 And Abishua begat Bukki, and Bukki begat Uzzi,

In the days of Uzzi it is supposed that the high priesthood was translated from Eleazar's family to Ithamar's, for some cause now unknown in whose line it continued for some successions

6 And Uzzi begat Zerahiah, and Zerahiah begat Meraioth,

7 Meraioth begat Amariah, and Amariah begat Ahitub,

8 And Ahitub begat Zadok, and Zadok begat Ahimaaz,

9 And Ahimaaz begat Azariah, and Azariah
begat Johanan,

10 And Johanan begat Azariah, (he it is that executed the priest's office in the temple that Solomon built in Jerusalem)

He it is that executed the priest's office so did all the rest, but it is implied that he did it faithfully, he filled his place and valiantly discharged his office in Uzzi's time; of which see 2 Chron xxvi 17, &c. Or thus he may relate to Jotham, otherwise called Jehonada, who is so highly commended for the good service which he did to the house of God and of the king, of whom see 2 Kings xi. In the temple that Solomon built, in Solomon's temple, so called to distinguish it from the second temple, which was built or in building when these books were written.

11 And <sup>h</sup> Azariah begat Amariah, and Amariah begat Ahitub, 12 And Ahitub begat Zadok, and Zadok begat <sup>h</sup> Shallum, 13 And Shallum begat Hilkiah, and Hilkiah begat Azariah, 14 And Azariah begat <sup>h</sup> Seraiah, and Seraiah begat Jehozadak

Seraiah, who was slain by Nebuchadnezzar at Riblah, 2 Kings xxv 18, 21

15 And Jehozadak went into captivity, when the Lord carried away Judah and Jerusalem by the hand of Nebuchadnezzar

16 ¶ The sons of Levi, <sup>1</sup> Gershom, Kohath, and Merari

This he repeats, as the foundation of the following genealogy of those Levites who were not priests

17 And these be the names of the sons of Gershom, Libni, and Shimei

18 And the sons of Kohath <sup>h</sup> neri, Amram, and Izhar, and Hebron, and Uzziel

19 The sons of Merari, Mahli, and Mushi. And these are the families of the Levites according to their fathers

Who are distinguished and named from their fathers. And the following catalogue is thought to contain the successive heads or chiefs of their several families until the times of David, by whom they were distributed into several ranks or courses

20 Of Gershom Libni his son, Jahath his son, <sup>m</sup> Zimmah his son,

21 His grandson, by his son Shuni, as appears from ver 12, 43, the names of father and son being oft used in Scripture of more remote progenitors or successors

22 ¶ Joah his son, ¶ Iddo his son, Zerah his son, ¶ Jetherai his son

23 The sons of Kohath, ¶ Amminadab his son, Korah his son, Assir his son,

24 Elkanah his son, and Ibiassaph his son, and Assir his son

25 Tabath his son, ¶ Uriel his son, Uzziel his son, and Shaul his son

Uriel called also Zephaniah, ver 36, where also Uzziel here following is called Azariah

26 And the sons of Elkanah, <sup>h</sup> Amasai, and Ahimoth

Elkanah, the son of that Korah mentioned above ver 22, as is manifest by ver 35—37, and by Exod vi 23, 24

27 ¶ As for Elkanah the sons of Elkanah, <sup>h</sup> Zophai his son, and <sup>h</sup> Nahath his son,

28 ¶ Elkanah, this was another Elkanah, son or grandson of the former Elkanah, and either the son or brother of Ahimoth last mentioned or of Amasai. Nahath, called also Zophai, ver 36, and Iohu 1 Sam i 1

29 ¶ Elkanah his son, Jeroham his son, Elkanah his son

Jeroham the father of the prophet Samuel, 1 Sam i 1, who therefore follows here

30 And the sons of Samuel, the first-born ¶ Vashni, and Abnah

31 The sons of Merari, Mahli, Libni his son, Shimei his son, Uzziel his son, 30 Shimei his son, Haggiah his son, Asaiah his son.

31 And these are they whom David set over the service of song in the house of the Lord, after that the ark had rest.

These are they, whose names here follow. The service, Heb the hands. Hand put for ministry or service, which is commonly performed by the hand. Thus God is frequently said to speak or command things by the hand (i. e. the ministry) of Moses. Compare 2 Chron xix 23. After that the ark had rest, which was in David's time, 2 Sam. vi 17

32 And they ministered before the dwelling place of the tabernacle of the congregation with singing, until Solomon had built the house of the Lord in Jerusalem, and then they waited on their office according to their order.

The dwelling-place of the tabernacle, or the tabernacle of the tent, as the same Hebrew words are translated, Exod xxxix 32, xl 2, 6. According to their order, which David had appointed by the Spirit, as it follows in this book 33 And these are they that waited with their children. Of the sons of the Kohathites. Heman a singer, the son of Joel, the son of Shemuel,

Then to wit, Heman here mentioned, and Asaph, ver 39, and Ethan, ver 14. Shemuel, or, Samuel the prophet

34 The son of Elkanah, the son of Jeroham, the son of Eli, the son of ¶ Toah,

35 The son of ¶ Zuph, the son of Elkanah, the son of Mahath, the son of Amasai, 36 The son of Elkanah, the son of ¶ Joel; the son of Azariah, the son of Zephaniah, 37 The son of Jahath, the son of Assir, the son of ¶ Ebiassaph, the son of Korah,

38 The son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi the son of Israel

39 And his brother Asaph, who stood on his right hand, even Asaph the son of Berechiah, the son of Shimea, Asaph is here called Heman's brother, both by birth being of the same tribe and father, Levi, and by his office and employment, which was the same with his

40 The son of Michael, the son of Baaseiah, the son of Malchiah, 41 The son of ¶ Ethni, the son of Zerah, the son of Adaiah,

42 The son of Ethan, the son of Zimmah, the son of Shimei,

43 The son of Jahath, the son of Gershom, the son of Levi

44 And their brethren the sons of Merari stood on the left hand. ¶ Ethan the son of ¶ Kishi, the son of Abdi, the son of Malluch,

Ethan, called also Jeduthun, 1 Chron. ix 16; 2 Chron. xxv 15, and in the titles of divers psalms

45 The son of Hashabiah, the son of Amaziah, the son of Hilkiah,

46 The son of Amzi, the son of Bani, the son of Shamer,

47 The son of Mahli, the son of Mushi, the son of Merari, the son of Levi

48 Their brethren also the Levites were appointed unto all manner of service of the tabernacle of the house of God.

The Levites; such of them as had no skill in singing were otherwise employed

Lev 1. 7
Ex 28. 7.
49 ¶ But Aaron and his sons offered upon the altar of the burnt offering, and on the altar of incense, and were appointed for all the work of the place most holy, and to make an atonement for Israel, according to all that Moses the servant of God had commanded.

Having mentioned the work and employment of the high priests, he briefly rehearseth the names of the persons who successively performed it.

50 And these are the sons of Aaron, Eleazar his son, Phinehas his son, Abishua his son.

51 Bukki his son, Uzzi his son, Zerahiah his son,

52 Merari his son, Amariah his son, Ahitub his son,

53 Zadok his son, Ahimaaz his son.

54 ¶ Now these are their dwelling places throughout their castles in their coasts, of the sons of Aaron, of the families of the Kohathites for their's was the lot.

Or, this lot or portion which here follows Or, the first lot, as appears by the sequel.

55 And they gave them Hebron in the land of Judah, and the suburbs thereof round about it.

56 But the fields of the city, and the villages thereof, they gave to Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

57 And to the sons of Aaron they gave the cities of Judah, namely, Hebron, the city of refuge, and Libnah with her suburbs, and Jattir, and Eshtemoa, with their suburbs.

They gave the cities, or, out of the cities the Hebrew eth being put for merth as hath been oft noted.

58 And Hilen with her suburbs, Debir with her suburbs,

59 And Ashan with her suburbs, and Beth-shemesh with her suburbs.

60 And out of the tribe of Benjamin, Geba with her suburbs, and Alemeth with her suburbs, and Anathoth with her suburbs. All their cities throughout their families were thirteen cities.

Whereof eleven are here numbered, and two more added to them, Josh xxi 13.

61 And unto the sons of Kohath which were left of the family of that tribe were cities given out of the half tribe, namely, out of the half tribe of Manasseh, by lot, ten cities.

Which were left, over and above the priests who were of the same family of Kohath and tribe of Levi. By lot ten cities, or, by lot, (with a full point, for there the sense ends). All these cities were ten cities, as it is expressly said, Josh xxi 26. These words, all their cities were, are to be understood out of the former verse, which is not unusual in the Holy scripture. And so this sacred writer explains him self, ver 61, &c, where eight of these cities are named, whereof only two are taken out of this half tribe of Manasseh ver 70, the other two being named, Josh xxi 21, &c, where the cities are more plainly and fully declared.

62 And to the sons of Gershon throughout their families out of the tribe of Issachar, and out of the tribe of Asher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, thirteen cities.

To the sons of Gershon, understand here cities were given, which is also understood ver 61, and expressed ver. 64.

63 Unto the sons of Merari were given by lot, throughout their families, out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

64 And the children of Israel gave to the Levites these cities with their suburbs.

To the Levites, i. e. to the tribe of Levi, consisting of priests and other Levites. These cities, which are numbered or named in this chapter.

65 And they gave by lot out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, and out of the tribe of the children of Benjamin, these cities, which are called by their names.

They gave to wit to these Levites of the family of Kohath who were priests, as appears both by ver 57, &c, where the cities given to the Aaronites are said to be taken out of the tribe here named, even out of Judah (under which Simeon is comprehended, because his lot lay within that of Judah) and Benjamin, and by the next verse, where the other Kohathites who were not priests are called the residue of the families of the sons of Kohath, by way of distinction from those of them to whom this ver 65 relates. Which are called by their names, which are expressed by their names above ver 57, &c.

66 And the residue of the families of the sons of Kohath had cities of their coasts out of the tribe of Ephraim.

Of their coasts, or of their borders i. e. of their country contained within its borders as that word is oft used, as hath been noted before.

67 And they gave unto them, of the cities of refuge, Shechem in mount Ephraim with her suburbs, they gave also Gazer with her suburbs,

They gave, either the Ephraimites or rather, the children of Israel, as it is expressed, ver 6 who gave part out of Ephraim, and part out of the half tribe of Manasseh, as it here follows. But the Ephraimites could not give away any cities belonging to the Manassites. Unto them, i. e. to the residue of the Kohathites last mentioned. Of the cities of refuge, or the cities (i. e. the city, the plural number used of one, of which frequent examples have been given before see chap vii. 1, 12, 11) of refuge. Or, cities (the construct form being put for the absolute, of which the want not examples in the Hebrew language), the city of refuge. As to the names of these cities, divers of them are derived from those names which were given to them, Josh xxi 13. Not is it at all strange that the names of places should be changed in so many hundreds of years as were between Joshua and this time. And to the cities themselves, this is further to be observed, that they are dispersed among all the tribes, partly that Jacob's prophecy might be fulfilled concerning the scattering of Levi, Gen xlix 7, and partly that every tribe might have teachers among them, by whom they might be directed in and quickened to the observation of God's laws, upon which the safety and happiness wholly depended.

68 And Jokim with her suburbs, and Beth-horon with her suburbs, 69 And Ajalon with her suburbs, and Gath-rimmon with her suburbs.

70 And out of the half tribe of Manasseh, Aner with her suburbs, and Bileam with her suburbs, for the family of the remnant of the sons of Kohath.

71 Unto the sons of Gershon were given out of the family of the half tribe of Manasseh, Golan in Bashan with her suburbs, and Ashtaroth with her suburbs:

72 And out of the tribe of Issachar, Kedesh with her suburbs, Daberath with her suburbs,

73 And Ramoth with her suburbs, and Anem with her suburbs

74 And out of the tribe of Asher, Mashal with her suburbs, and Abdon with her suburbs,

75 And Hukok with her suburbs, and Rehob with her suburbs

76 And out of the tribe of Naphtali, Kedesh in Galilee with her suburbs, and Hammon with her suburbs, and Kirjathaim with her suburbs

77 Unto the rest of the children of Manasse were given out of the tribe of Zebulun, Rimmon with her suburbs, Tabor with her suburbs

78 And on the other side Jordan by Jericho, on the east side of Jordan, were given them out of the tribe of Reuben, Bezer in the wilderness with her suburbs, and Jahzah with her suburbs,

79 Kedemoth also with her suburbs, and Methaath with her suburbs

80 And out of the tribe of Gad, Ramoth in Gilead with her suburbs, and Mahanaim with her suburbs,

81 And Heshbon with her suburbs, and Jazer with her suburbs

CHAP VII

The sons of Issachar 1-5 Of Benjamin, 6-12 Of Naphtali, 13 Of Manasseh 14-19 Of Ephraim, their camings, and habitations, 20-29 Of Asher 30-40

NOW the sons of Issachar were, *Tola, and *Puah, *Jishub, and Shemrom, four

Tashub, called, by way of contraction. Job Gen xvi 13

2 And the sons of Tola, Uzzi, and Rephiah, and Jeriel, and Jidmai, and Jisai, and Shemuel, heads of their fathers house, to wit, of Tola they were valiant men of might in their generations, whose number was in the days of David two and twenty thousand and six hundred

In the days of David, when he numbered the people, 2 Sam xiv 1, &c

3 And the sons of Uzzi, Iziahah and the sons of Iziahah, Michael, and Obadiah, and Joel Ishuah, five all of them chief men

The sons for the son, for he names but one son Michael and Obadiah, and Joel, Ishuah, &c, including their father Izrahiah

4 And with them, by their generations, after the house of their fathers, were bands of soldiers for war six and thirty thousand men for they had many wives and sons

Six and thirty thousand men, to wit, of the posterity of Uzzi, as the other twenty-two thousand six hundred, ver 2, were the posterity of Tola

5 And their brethren among all the families of Issachar were valiant men of might, reckoned in all by their genealogies fourscore and seven thousand

6 ¶ The sons of Benjamin, Bela, and Becher, and Jediael, three

There were ten, Gen xvi 21 and five of them are named, chap viii 1, but here only three are mentioned, either because these were most famous for courage or fruitful ness, or because the other families were now extinct

7 And the sons of Bela, Ezbon, and Uzzi, and Uzziel, and Jerimoth, and Iri, five, heads of the house of their fathers, mighty men of valour, and were reckoned by their genealogies twenty and two thousand and thirty and four

Heads of the house of their fathers, each of them head or chief, or commander of that house or family from which he was descended or to which he belonged For it may seem, by comparing this with chap. viii 3, &c that these were not the immediate sons of Bela, but his grandchildren descended each from a several father, and their fathers are here omitted, peradventure because they were obscure persons as their sons are mentioned for their eminency

8 And the sons of Becher, Zemira, and Joash, and Eliezer, and Eliezer, and Omri, and Jerimoth, and Abiah, and Anathoth, and Alameth All these are the sons of Becher.

9 And the number of them, after their genealogy by their generations, heads of the house of their fathers, mighty men of valour, was twenty thousand and two hundred

10 The sons also of Jediael; Bilhan and the sons of Bilhan, Jeush, and Benjamin, and Ehud, and Chenaanah, and Zethan, and Tharshish, and Ahishahar

11 All these the sons of Jediael, by the heads of their fathers, mighty men of valour, were seventeen thousand and two hundred soldiers, fit to go out for war and battle

12 ¶ Shuphim also, and Huphim, the children of *Ir, and Hushim, the sons of *Ahi

Shuphim also, and Huphim, called Muphim and Huphim, Gen xvi 21 also Hupham and Shupham, Numb xxvi 59

The sons of Ahi, but divers take the Hebrew word ahi for a common not proper name, and render the words thus, another son, or the son of another family or tribe, to wit, of Dan, as may be gathered, 1 From Gen xvi 24 where Hushim is mentioned as the only son of Dan, where also the word sons is used of that one man, as it is here 2 From the clause of the next verse, the sons of Bilhah who was mother both to Dan and Naphtali 3 Because otherwise the genealogy of Dan is quite left out. 4 From the word another which is used in the Hebrew writers to design an abominable thing which the writer disdained to mention, whence they call a swine, which to them was a very unclean and loathsome creature, another thing. And it must be remembered that the tribe of Dan had made themselves and their memory infamous and detestable by that gross idolatry, which began first and continued longest in that tribe. Judg xviii; for which reason many interpreters conceive this tribe is omitted in the numbering of the sealed persons. Rev vii

13 ¶ The sons of Naphtali, Jahziel, and Guni, and Jezei, and *Shallum, the sons of Bilhah

The sons of Bilhah, i e the grandchildren, for Bilhah was Jacob's concubine, and mother both to Naphtali the father of these last named persons, and to Dan. See on ver 12

14 ¶ The sons of Manasseh; Ashriel, whom she bare (but his concubine the Aramitess bare Machir the father of Gilead:

The sons of Manasseh, i e grandchildren, as ver 13 For both Ashriel and Zelophehad were the grandchildren of Machir son of Manasseh Numb xxvi 29, &c, xxvii 1 Whom she bare, to wit, his wife, as may be thought because his concubine is here opposed to her Or whom he got, for the Hebrew word yalad is sometimes used of men's begetting, as Gen. v 18, &c Compare Psal ii 7 But there and the following words may be otherwise rendered according to the Hebrew text, whom his concubine the Aramitess bare, who bare him (which ellipse are very frequent quent in the Hebrew) for month, of, or by Machir so this was a differing Ashriel from him named Numb xxv. 31, for that was Gilead's son, and this his brother. The father of Gilead, a person so called, as is manifest from ver. 17, Numb xvi. 29.

15 And Machir took to wife the sister of Huppim and Shuppim, whose sister's name was Maachah, and the name of the second was Zelophehad and Zelophehad had daughters.

The sister, which word is here fitly understood out of the following clause, where it is expressed and she is called Maachah, who also is called the wife of Machir, ver.

16 The name of the second, of the second son or grandson of Machir, for so Zelophehad was, Numb xvi. 29, &c. Or Zelophehad is here called the second, because he was the younger brother of Ashriel who was the eldest son of Hepler, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir. Had daughters, i. e. only daughters, and no sons.

16 And Maachah the wife of Machir bare a son, and she called his name Peresh, and the name of his brother was Sheresh, and his sons were Iam and Bakem.

17 And the sons of Ulam, Bedan. These were the sons of Gilead the son of Machir, the son of Manassah.

These, to wit, Ashriel and Zelophehad named ver. 15, the relative being here referred to the remoter antecedent, as is frequent in the Hebrew.

18 And his sister Hammelecheth bare Ishod, and Abiezer, and Mahalah.

His sister, i. e. Gilead's sister. Ishod, and Abiezer, and Mahalah, understood, and Shumadah out of the next verse.

19 And the sons of Shemudih were, Ahian, and Shechem, and Lihhi, and Aniam.

20 ¶ And the sons of Ephraim, Shuthelah, and Bered his son, and Tahath his son, and Eladah his son, and Tahath his son.

Bered his son, either, 1 The son of Shuthelah and so Tahath the son of Bered, and so the rest, which make up seven succeeding generations. Or 2 The son of Ephraim, and so Tahath's son not of Bered but of Ephraim and so forward. And thus all these were brethren, and sons or grandchildren of Ephraim, living together at one time with their father. Object This cannot be, because then Ephraim had two sons called Shuthelah and two called Tahath. Answer That might easily happen either because the first Shuthelah and Tahath were dead before the other two of those names were born; or because two of them were Ephraim's sons, and two of them his grandchildren, called after their uncle's names. For this is certain the name of sons is promiscuously used concerning immediate children and grandchildren, and great grandchildren.

21 ¶ And Zabid his son, and Shuthelah his son, and Ezer, and Elad whom the men of Gath that were born in that land slew, because they came down to take away their cattle.

This history is not recorded elsewhere in Scripture. It is in the ancient Hebrew writers, though mixed with many fables. The Philistines (one of whose cities this Gath was) and the Egyptians were next neighbours, and in those ancient times it was usual for such to make incursions one into another's country, and to carry thence what prey they could take, as we find both in Scripture and in profane writers. And as the Philistines had probably made such incursions formerly into Egypt, and particularly the land of Goshien, which was the utmost part of Egypt bordering upon the Philistines' land, so the Israelites might requite them in the like kind, and particularly the children of Ephraim, either presuming upon their numbers and strength, or having possibly received the great injury from the Philistines in their last invasion, might make an attempt upon the Philistines to their own great loss, as is here related. And this seems to have happened a little before the Egyptian persecution and before the reign of that new king mentioned Exod. 18. The Philistines are here called the men of Gath, either because they were subject to the king of Gath as afterwards that people were, or because they lived about Gath. And this clause, that were born in that land, may be added emphatically, as the motive which made them more resolute and furious in their fight with the Ephraimites, because they fought in and for their own land, wherein all their wealth and concerns lay and against those that unjustly endeavoured to turn them out of their native country.

22 And Ephraim their father mourned many days, and his brethren came to comfort him.

Ephraim their father, either, 1 That Ephraim of whom he speaks ver. 20, whose sons are here named. But that to many seems hard, especially if those several sons named ver. 20, 21, be understood successively, so as each man be the son of him who is named next and immediately before him, which seems most probable, for so here are seven successive generations of Ephraim, which it is not likely that Ephraim lived to see, for then he must have been near two hundred years old. Although it is not necessary that the persons here said to be slain should be that generation which was last mentioned, but the particle whom may belong to the other sons of Ephraim of the fourth, or fifth or sixth generation. Nor is the word whom in the Hebrew text which runs thus, and the men of Gath—slew them, i. e. the sons of Ephraim in the general, as they are expressed in the beginning of ver. 20 without respect to this or that particular generation. And the relative particle the may be referred not unto the persons last named, but unto some of the other and more remote persons, this being a common observation of Hebrews that the relative oft belongs to the remoter antecedent. Or 2 Zabid the father of the three persons and families last named, who might possibly have two names and be called both Zabid and Ephraim. Or rather the name of Ephraim may be put synonymically (as the learned speak) for the son and successor of Ephraim, who being now in Ephraim's stead the head of the tribe, old Ephraim was in his time might well be called by the same name. Thus Isaac is put for his son Jacob or Jacob Anos vii. 9, and Moses for the sons of Moses Psal. xc. title and David for his son Rehobeam 1 Kin. xii. 16, and for Christ Jer. xxx. 9, 12, xxv. 2, and (as many think) Abraham for Jacob, Abraham's grandchild, Acts vii. 16. And these words, their father, seem to be added by way of distinction, to show that he meant not this or the Ephraim, but of that who was father to the three persons said to be slain, ver. 21. For if he had understood this of the first Ephraim having called these the sons of Ephraim, it might seem superfluous and tautologous to tell us that Ephraim was their father. His brethren, i. e. his kinsmen, as that word is frequently used.

23 And when he went in to his wife, she conceived and bare a son, and he called his name Berah, because it went evil with his house.

24 And his daughter was Sherah, who built Bethoron the nether, and the upper, and Uzzensharah.

His daughter, i. e. his grandchild or great grandchild, for both are oft called sons or daughters in Scripture. Who built Bethoron the nether or repaired which possibly she did in her husband's time. And this work may be ascribed to her because these works were done either by her design or contrivance or by her instigation and influence upon her husband and brethren who did it.

25 And Rephah was his son, also Resheph, and Tahah his son, and Tahah his son.

26 Laadan his son, Ammihud his son, Elisham his son.

Phasma, the head of the tribe of Ephraim in the wilderness Numb. i. 10.

27 ¶ Non his son, Jehoshuah his son.

28 ¶ And their possessions and habitations were, Bethel and the towns thereof, and eastward Naaran, and westward Gezer, with the towns thereof, Shechem.

<sup>Or Adasa
Ma 7 45</sup> also and the towns thereof, unto Gaza and the towns thereof

Their possessions, i. e. the portion allotted to the tribe of Ephraim Beth-el, which stood in the border of Benjamin, but belonged to Ephraim unto Gaza not that of the Philistines, which belonged to another tribe, and was remote from Ephraim, but another of the same name. Or rather Adasa, as it is in the margin of our Bible, the participle ad, here rendered unto being a part of the name, for why should unto be put to this town, which is not put to any of the other?

29 And by the borders of the children of <sup>2 Josh 17 7</sup> Manasseh, Beth-shean and her towns, <sup>12 Josh 17 11</sup> Taanach and her towns, Megiddo and her towns, Dor and her towns. In these dwelt the children of Joseph the son of Israel.

The children of Joseph, i. e. of Ephraim, Joseph's eldest son, who is sometimes called Joseph, as hath been noted before.

35 And the sons of his brother Helem, Zophah, and Imna, and Shilesh, and Amal.

His brother, brother either of Shamer the eldest named Hotham, or of Aram last mentioned.

36 The sons of Zophah, Suth, and Harnaphi, and Shual, and Beni, and Imnah.

37 Bezir, and Hod, and Shamma, and Shilshah, and Ithram, and Beera.

38 And the sons of Jether, Jephunneh, and Pispah, and Aia.

39 And the sons of Ullai, Aiah, and Hanani, and Rezia.

Ullai another son of Jether, as may be gathered by the course of the genealogy, though he be not expressed with his brethren, ver 38. See the like defect ver 18 and 31.

40 All these were the children of Asher, heads of their father's house, choice and mighty men of valour, chief of the princes. And the number throughout the genealogy of them that were apt to the war and to battle was twenty and six thousand men.

CHAP VIII

The sons and children of Benjamin, 1—32. The stock of Saul and Jonathan, 33—40.

<sup>1600, 20
m Gen 46:31
Num 26:38
ch 7:5</sup> NOW Benjamin begat Bela his first-born, Ashbel the second, and Aharah the third.

He had spoken something of the tribe of Benjamin before, chap vii 6, but now he treats of it again, and that more fully and exactly; partly for Saul's sake who was of this tribe, and partly because this tribe adhered to David and the kingdom of Judah, and went with Judah into Babylon, and now were returned from thence in greater numbers than the other tribes, except Judah. Bel, so called by Moses but the names of the rest vary from those in Moses, either because the same person had two several names, as hath been often noted, or because these were not the immediate sons of Benjamin, but his grandchildren, here mentioned in their parents' stead, possibly because they were more eminent than their parents.

2 Nohah the fourth, and Rapha the fifth.

3 And the sons of Bela were, Addar, <sup>Or, 2d, 1600, 20
Gen 46:31</sup> and Gera, and Abihud.

4 And Abishua, and Naaman, and Ahoah.

5 And Gera, and Shephuphan, and Huram.

6 And these are the sons of Ehud.

these are the heads of the fathers of the inhabitants of Geba, and they removed them to Manahath.

These are the sons, either these three last mentioned, or rather these following, ver 7, because he here speaks of them who were removed, and they are said to be removed ver 7.

He describes the sons of Benjamin by the places of their habitation without an exact account of their parents, because their genealogies were broken by that almost total extirpation of this tribe, Judg xx. They removed them; either their fathers, or their heads and superiors, removed them, or they removed themselves, either because they were too numerous for that place, or because they desired to change their habitation, and hoped it would be for the better, and judged Manahath a more convenient place.

7 And Naaman, and Abihud, and Gera, he removed them, and begat Uzzah, and Abihud.

He removed them, either 1. Their father, or 2. Gera last mentioned, who it seems, was the chief counsellor or promoter of this work. Begat Uzza and Abihud, when he was settled in Manahath.

8 And Shiharam begat children in the country of Moab, after he had sent them away, Hushim and Baara were his wives.

In the country of Moab, whither he had removed himself, either at the same time when Himalech did, Ruth i 1, &c., or upon the same or like occasion. After he had sent them away, Uzza or Gera just mentioned. Hushim and Baara were his wives. Others join these words with the former and render the place thus after he had sent them (to wit, his sons) away with Hushim and Baara his wives, i. e. as he also sent his wives away from him, which may be here mentioned as a brand upon him, to show that he was without natural affection to his wives and children. And it seems the more probable that he divorced them because he had him married to another wife, ver 9.

9 And he begat of Hodah his wife, Jobab, and Zibia, and Mesha, and Malcham.

10 And Jeuz, and Shachia, and Mirma. These were his sons, heads of the fathers.

11 And of Hushim he begat Abitub, and Lipal.

12 The sons of Elpaal, Eber, and Misham, and Shamed, who built Ono, and Lod, with the towns thereof.

Of which see Ezra ii 33, Neh vii 37, xi 35.

13 Beriah also, and Shema, who were heads of the fathers of the inhabitants of Ayalon, who drove away the inhabitants of Gath.

Ayalon, a place formerly belonging to the tribe of Dan, Josh xix 42, but after the return from Babylon possessed by the Benjamites, because both Dan and the rest of the ten tribes were get for the generality of them in captivity, and but few of them returned. Who drove away the inhabitants of Gath, either, 1. At that time when they made such a slaughter among Ephraim's children, chap. vii 21 and were possibly pursuing their victory, till they were driven back by these Benjamites, who came to the succour of their brethren. Or, 2. Now when they were returned from the captivity, and found the men of Gath possessed of Ayalon. Or, 3. At some other time not mentioned in Scripture.

14 And Abio, Shashak, and Jeremoth, 15 And Zebadiah, and Arad, and Ader, part of Jerusalem, which was over against that where their brethren dwelt

CHAP. IX

The chief of the tribe of Judah, Benjamin, Ephraim, and Manasseh, who returned from captivity, and dwelt at Jerusalem, 1-9 Also the priests and Levites, and how they executed their office in the temple at Jerusalem, 10-34
The family of Saul, 35-44

SO all Israel were reckoned by genealogies; and, behold, they were written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah, who were carried away to Babylon for their transgression

In the book of the kings of Israel and Judah, not in that sacred and canonical book so called, but (as hath been oft observed before) in the public records, wherein there was an account of that kingdom, and of the several families in it, according to their genealogies Who were carried away, i.e. which tribe or people of Judah last mentioned

2 ¶ Now the first inhabitants that dwelt in their possessions in their cities were, the Israelites, the priests, Levites, and the Nethinims

The first inhabitants the first after the return from Babylon That dwelt in their possessions in their cities, i.e.
that took possession of their own lands and cities, which had been formerly allotted to them, but of late years had been taken from them for their sins, and possessed by other people The Israelites, i.e. the common people of Judah and Israel called here by the general name of Israelites, which was given to them before that unhappy division of the two kingdoms, and now is restored to them when the Israelites are united with the Jews in one and the same commonwealth, that so all the names and signs of their former division might be blotted out And although the generality of the ten tribes were yet in captivity, yet divers of them were now returned, either such as had long before the captivity fled to Jerusalem to worship God, and joined themselves with Judah as those 2 Chron xi 16, and others, or such as upon Cyrus's general proclamation, associated themselves, and returned with those of Judah and Benjamin The priests Levites, these took possession of the cities or places belonging to them, as they had need and opportunity The Nethinims, a certain order of men, either Gibeonites or others joined with them, devoted to the service of God and of his house and of the priests and Levites; who that they might attend upon their work without distraction had certain places and possessions given to them, which they are now said to possess

3 And in Jerusalem dwelt of the children of Simeon, and of the children of Benjamin, and of the children of Ephraim, and Manasseh,

Some of each of these tribes, either such as offered themselves, or such as were chosen by lot Neh xi
1, 2

4 Uthai the son of Ammihud, the son of Omri, the son of Imri, the son of Bani, of the children of Pharez the son of Judah

That there is so great a diversity of names between this catalogue and that Neh xi may be ascribed to two causes

1 To the custom of the Hebrews, who used very frequently to give two or three several names to one person, and, 2, To the change of times, for here they are named who came up at the first return; but many of those in Nehemiah might be such as returned afterward, and came and dwelt either instead of the persons here named, who might be then dead, or gone from Jerusalem, or with them

5 And of the Shilonites, Asaiah the firstborn, and his sons

Or, Shelanites, as they are called from Shelah, Numb.
xvi 20 Asaiah, called also Manasseh, Neh xi 5.

6 And of the sons of Zerah, Jemai, and their brethren, six hundred and ninety

7 And of the sons of Benjamin, Salu the son of Meshullam, the son of Hodaviah, the son of Hasenuah,

Salti the son of Meshullam, who is mentioned, but described by other parents Nch 3 7, or at least by persons under other names. Possibly they were his more immediate, and those his more remote parents, or he might be born of one, and adopted by another. For this is certain, men are sometimes in Scripture called the sons of those who adopted them or whose right of inheritance fell to them.

8 And Imnah the son of Jeroham, and Elah the son of Uzzi, the son of Michri, and Meshullam the son of Shephathiah, the son of Reuel, the son of Ibmajah.

9 And their brethren, according to their generations, nine hundred and fifty and six. All these men were chief of the fathers in the house of their fathers.

Nine hundred and fifty and six they are reckoned but nine hundred and twenty eight Nch xi 8 either because there he mentions only those that were by lot determined to dwell at Jerualem, to whom he here adds the who freely offered them lives to go Nch xi 1 2, or because some of the persons and families he placed there were dead or extinguished or else removed from Jerualem upon some emergency or occasion.

10 ¶ And of the priests Jedaiar, and Jehoiarib, and Jachin.

11 And ¶ Azariah the son of Hilkiab, the son of Meshullam, the son of Zadok, the son of Meraioth, the son of Ahitub, the ruler of the house of God.

Azariah the same called Seraph Nch xi 11. Hilkiab either of him in Josiah's time 2 Kings xxii 8 or rather another of the same name. The ruler of the house of God or a ruler in the house of God, not the high priest who was 1 Chr xvi 6 but a chief ruler under him either the second priest, as such he called Numb iii 32 or the head of one of the twenty four families or courses of the priests.

12 And Adaiah the son of Jeroham, the son of Pashur, the son of Malchijah and Maasei the son of Adai, the son of Jahzeiah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Meshillemith, the son of Immer.

The son of Pashur, i.e. his great grandson, as appears from Nch xi 12 13.

13 And their brethren, heads of the house of their fathers, a thousand and seven hundred and threescore, very able men for the work of the service of the house of God.

Very able men, Heb. mighty men of valour, which is here noted as an excellent qualification for their place because the priests might meet with great opposition and difficulty in the faithful discharge of their office in the execution of the censures upon all impure persons without exception, and in preserving sacred things from violation by the touch of forbidden hands, of which see an eminent instance in Azariah 2 Chron xxvi 17, &c.

14 And of the Levites, Shemaiah the son of Hashub, the son of Azbukam, the son of Hashabiah, of the sons of Merari.

15 And Bakbakkar Heresh, and Galal, and Mattathiah the son of Micah, the son of Zichri, the son of Asaph, 16 And Obadiah the son of Shemaiah, the son of Galal, the son of Jeduthun and Berechiah the son of Isa, the son of Elkai, that dwelt in the villages of the Netophathites.

The Netophathites were in Judah Jer ii 54. Here they now dwelt, either because their proper cities were not yet built, or because they were not yet numerous enough to replenish them.

17 And the porters were, Shallum, and Akkub, and Talmon, and Ahiman, and their brethren. Shallum was the chief.

Porters, whose office it was to keep all the gates of the temple that no unclean person or thing might enter into it.

18 Who hitherto waited in the king's gate eastward they were porters in the companies of the children of Levi.

In the king's gate eastward, in the east gate of the temple which was so called either because it was the chief and most magnificent of all the gates or because the kings of Judah used to go to the temple through that gate, 2 Kings xvi 18 compare Lark xlv 1, 2. Under this gate he comprehends all the rest, which also were guarded by these porters. In the companies or according to the companies, or orders, or courses i.e. they kept the gates successively, according to that method into which themselves and the rest of their brethren the Levites were distributed, for the more convenient management of their several offices, among which this of the porters was one.

19 And Shafum the son of Kore, the son of Ebiasaph, the son of Korah, and his brethren, of the house of his father, the Korahites, were over the work of the service, keepers of the gates of the tabernacle and their fathers, being over the host of the Lord, were keepers of the entry.

Keepers of the gates of the tabernacle, or who were, to wit, in time past which is expressed in a like case ver 20, when the tabernacle was standing before the temple was built. Their father he Korahites of whom see on Numb xv 4. Over the host of the Lord or with (as this Hebrew particle is oft used) the host, &c. i.e. when the Israelites were in the wilderness, encamped in a military manner round about the tabernacle, with or among whom these were then placed. Keepers of the entry, i.e. of the veil by which they entered into the tabernacle, which he calls the entry distinctively, because then there were no gates. The meaning is that all things were now restored to their primitive order and institution, and the several persons took those places and offices upon them, which their ancestors had before them.

20 And Phinhas the son of Eleazar was the ruler over them in time past, and the Lord was with him.

Over them i.e. over all the porters, and other Levites and priests before mentioned. The Lord was with him to direct and assist and bless him in the discharge of his place, which seems here related to encourage his successor, and consequently all the priests and Levites of that time, to go on courageously and resolutely in their work, not doubting but God will stand by them as he had done by their fathers.

21 And Zechariah the son of Meshelemiah was porter of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

To wit in the time of David as the following verse sheweth. See chap xxvi 1, 2, xxvii 2. Porter, i.e. chief porter. Of the door of the tabernacle, i.e. of the door which led out of the priests' court into the tabernacle, in which the ark was placed, 2 Sam vi 17.

22 All these which were chosen to be porters in the gates were two hundred and twelve. These were reckoned by their genealogy in their villages, whom David and Samuel the seer did ordain in their set office.

In their villages, where their usual residence was, and whence they came to Jerusalem in their courses. Did ordain in the times of the judges there was much disorder and confusion, both in the Jewish state and church, and the Levites came to the tabernacle promiscuously, and as their inclinations or occasions brought them. But Samuel, the best of judges, having some prospect and good hopes of deliverance from their enemies, and of a happy settlement of the Israelitish church and nation, and observing that the Levites were greatly increased, he began to think of establishing some order among the Levites in their ministration about the tabernacle. And these intentions of his probably were communicated by him to David, who after Samuel's death, and his own peaceable settlement in his throne, received and perfected Samuel's design, and took care to put it in execution. In their set office Heb in their faith, or faithfulness, i.e. either, 1. In their office, which is called faithfulness, because this is required in that office. Or, 2. In the faithful discharge of their duty and in obedience to the will of God, signified to them by revelation or by the spirit, as it is said of David, 1 Chron xxiii 12 which they received by faith, and accordingly designed and David executed it. And so this is added to show that this was no human invention, as some might conceive but a Divine appointment, to which all ought to submit.

23 So they and their children had the oversight of the gates of the house of the Lord, namely, the house of the tabernacle, by wards.

To wit, in David's time. The house of the tabernacle this is added to explain what he means by the house of the Lord, not that tabernacle which David had set up for the ark, but that more solemn tabernacle, which Moses had made by God's express command and most particular direction, which in David's time was at Gibeon, in which God was and would be worshipped until the temple was built. See 1 Kings in 2, &c. 2 Chron 1 3 &c. by wards i.e. by turns or courses, each of them at his late, and in his appointed time.

24 In four quarters were the porters, toward the east, west, north, and south.

The porters, i.e. the chief porters, as this is explained ver 26.

25 And then brethren, which were in their villages, were to come after seven days from time to time with them.

From then several villages to the place of worship. After seven days every sabbath or seventh day the courses were changed, and the new comers were to tarry till the next sabbath day. See 2 Kings xi 5 7 9. With them i.e. to be with them i.e. with the chief porters who always abode in the place of God's worship, and to minister to them.

26 For these Levites the four chief porters, were in their best office, and were over the chambers and treasuries of the house of God.

Were in their set office i.e. these were constantly upon the place and in the execution of their office, that so they might oversee and direct the inferior porters in their work. Or, as others render the words, agreeably to the Hebrew text, For these (i.e. their brethren ver 25) were under the charge, or committed to the trust of the four chief porters who also were Levites, as their brethren were, where is the chief of all of them was a priest. Either way these words contain a reason of what was said ver 25 why the new were to come to these and to be with them. Treasuries in which the sacred utensils, and other treasures belonging to the temple, were kept.

27 ¶ And they lodged round about the house of God, because the charge was upon them, and the opening thereof every morning pertained to them.

They lodged round about the house of God, therefore they were obliged to constant residence in the place and were not permitted to dwell in the villages, as their brethren were.

28 And certain of them had the charge of the ministering vessels, that they should bring them in and out by tale.

29 Some of them also were appointed to oversee the vessels, and all the instruments of the sanctuary, and the fine flour, and the wine, and the oil, and the frankincense, and the spices.

30 And some of the sons of the priests made the outment of the spices.

This is added to prevent a mistake and to show that although the Levites were intrusted with the keeping of this outment yet none but the priests could make it. See Exod xxx 22 &c.

31 And Mattithiah, one of the Levites, who was the firstborn of Shallum the Kohathite, had the set office over the things that were made in the pans.

i.e. Was to take care that fine flour might be provided and kept such and well that when occasion required they might make cakes in pans to be offered to the Lord, of which see on Lev ii 5.

32 And other of their brethren, of the sons of the Kohathites, were over the shewbread, to prepare it every sabbath.

Of which see Exod xxx 13.

33 And these are the singers chief of the fathers of the Levites, who remaining in the chambers were free for they were employed in that work day and night.

These are others of the Levites, of whose several office he had spoken before. For the singers or rather were, which is understood, and all along in the foregoing and following verses and again in this very verse. In the chambers, where they waited that they might be ready to come whenever they were called to the service of God in the tabernacle. Were free from all trouble and employment that they might wholly attend upon their proper work. Employed in that work either composing or ordering sacred songs, or actually singing or teaching others to sing them. Day and night i.e. continually and particularly in the morning and evenings, the two times appointed for solemn service and offerings.

34 These chief fathers of the Levites were chief throughout their generations, these dwelt at Jerusalem.

Upon their return from Babylon they were not suffered to choose their habitations in the country, as others were, but were obliged to settle themselves at Jerusalem, that they might constantly attend upon God's service there, and be ready to instruct the younger Levites in their office as they needed or desired it.

35 ¶ And in Gibeon dwelt the father of Gibeon Jehudi, whose wife's name was Maachah.

In this and the following verses to the end of this chapter he figures what he said before, chap viii 29, &c. concerning Saul's genealogy that he might make way for the following history, which is a figure called epitaphus which is frequent both in sacred and profane writers.

36 And his firstborn son Abdon, then Zur, and Kish, and Baal, and Ner, and Nadab, 37 And Gedor, and Ahio, and Zechariah, and Mikloth.

38 And Mikloth begat Shimeam. And they also dwelt with their brethren at Jerusalem, over against their brethren.

39 ¶ And Ner begat Kish, and Kish begat Saul, and Saul begat Jonathan, and Malchishua, and Abinadab, and Ish-baal.

40 And the son of Jonathan was Merib-baal, and Merib-baal begat Mirah.

41 And the sons of Micah were, Pithon, and Melech, and Tahrca, and Ahaz.

† i.e. bringing them in by tale and carrying them out by tale.
† Or, women.

42 And Ahaz begat Jarah, and Jarah begat Alemeth, and Azmaveth, and Zimri, and Zimri begat Moza;

43 And Moza begat Binea, and Rephah his son, Eleasah his son, Azel his son

44 And Azel had six sons, whose names are these, Azrikam, Bochim, and Ishmael, and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and Huan: these were the sons of Azel

CHAP X

Saul's overthrow and death, 1-7 The Philistines triumph over Saul 8-10 The kindness of Jabesh-gilead towards Saul and his sons his sin, 11-14

10 c NOW the Philistines fought against Israel, and the men of Israel fled from before the Philistines, and fell down slain in mount Gilboa

Of this and the following verses till ver 13, see my notes on 1 Sam xxxi, where we have the same thing expressed almost in the same words

2 And the Philistines followed hard after Saul, and after his sons, and the Philistines slew Jonathan, and Abinadab, and Malchishua, the sons of Saul

3 And the battle went sore against Saul, and the archers hit him, and he was wounded of the archers

1 Then said Saul to his armourbearer, Draw thy sword, and thrust me through therewith, lest these uncircumcised come and abuse me: But his armourbearer would not, for he was sore afraid: So Saul took a sword, and fell upon it

5 And when his armourbearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell likewise on the sword, and died

6 So Saul died, and his three sons, and all his house died together

All his house i.e. all his children, to wit then present with him namely his three sons: as it is expressed 1 Sam xxxi 6. For it is evident that Ish-bosheth and Mephibosheth were not slain. But nothing is more common in Scripture and all authors than to understand all of a great and most considerable part

7 And when all the men of Israel that were in the valley saw that they fled, and that Saul and his sons were dead, then they forsook their cities, and fled: and the Philistines came and dwelt in them

In the valley which was beneath Mount Gilboa, where the fight was ver 1

8 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, when the Philistines came to strip the slain that they found Saul and his sons fallen in mount Gilboa

9 And when they had stripped him, they took his head and his armour, and sent into the land of the Philistines round about, to carry tidings unto their idols, and to the people

10 ¶ And they put his armour in the house of their gods, and fastened his head in the temple of Dagon

And his body severed from his head to the wall of Bethshan, 1 Sam xxxi 10

11 ¶ And when all Jabesh-gilead heard all that the Philistines had done to Saul

12 They arose, all the valiant men, and took away the body of Saul, and the bodies of his sons, and brought them to Jabesh, and buried their bones under the oak in Jabesh, and fasted seven days

To wit, every day till evening, after the manner of the Jewish fasts

13 ¶ So Saul died for his transgression which he committed against the Lord, even against the word of the Lord, which he kept not, and also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, to enquire of it

Saul died for his transgression the sense is, Wonder not that Saul fell by the hands of the Philistines, who were armed against him by his own sin and by God's vengeance for it. Against the word of the Lord, against God's express, and plain, and positive command: which is a great aggravation of any sin. For asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, which also was contrary to a manifest command, Lev xiv 31, and moreover, contrary to his own conscience which was so fully convinced hereof, that he had endeavoured the utter extirpation of all such persons in pursuance of God's law. See 1 Sam xxviii. 9 To enquire of it, concerning the event of the approaching battle

14 And enquired not of the Lord therefore he slew him, and turned the kingdom unto David, the son of Jesse

Inquired not of the Lord. Object Saul inquired of the Lord 1 Sam xxviii 6. Answer He did so, but not in a right manner not humbly and penitently, not diligently and importunately not patiently and perseveringly but when God would not answer him speedily, he gives it over and goes from God to the devil. Compare 1 Sam xvi 18, 19. Such an inconsiderate and trifling inquiry as Saul made, is justly accounted to be no inquiry at all, as they are said not to eat the Lord's supper, 1 Cor xi 20, who did eat it in a sinful and unworthy manner

CHAP XI

David made Ithy at Hebron, by Joab's valour won the castle of Zion from the Jebusites, repaired the city of Jerusalem 1-9 I set down of his mighty men, 10-17

THEN all Israel gathered themselves to David unto Hebron, saying, Behold, we are thy bone and thy flesh

All Israel, i.e. all the tribes of Israel, as it is expressed 2 Sam v 1, i.e. their elders as it is here said, ver 3 and officers, and a great multitude of the soldiers and people

2 And moreover in time past, even when Saul was king, thou wast he that leddest out and broughtest in Israel: and the Lord thy God said unto thee, Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be ruler over my people Israel

God said unto thee, or, concerning thee, for it is apparent that they knew of it, and therefore many of them opposed David hitherto against their own consciences

3 Therefore came all the elders of Israel to the king to Hebron, and David made a covenant with them in Hebron before the Lord, and they appointed David king over Israel, according to the word of the Lord by Samuel

4 ¶ And David and all Israel went to Jerusalem, which is Jebus, where the Jebusites were, the inhabitants of the land

Of this and the three following verses see the notes on 2 Sam v, 6, &c.

5 And the inhabitants of Jebus said to David, Thou shalt not come hither. Nevertheless David took the castle of Zion, which is the city of David.

6 And David said, Whosoever smiteth the Jebusites first shall be chief and captain. So Joab the son of Zeruiah went first up, and was chief.

Before this he was one of David's chief captains, 2 Sam xii, 23, and general of the forces of Judah, but now he is made captain-general of all the forces of Israel and Judah.

7 And David dwelt in the castle, therefore they called it the city of David.

8 And he built the city round about, even from Millo round about: and Joab repaired the rest of the city.

9 So David waxed greater and greater for the Lord of hosts was with him.

10 ¶ These also are the chief of the mighty men whom David had, who strengthened themselves with him in his kingdom, and with all Israel, to make him king, according to the word of the Lord concerning Israel.

Who strengthened themselves with him in his kingdom, who helped him with all their might to settle him in his kingdom with all Israel, in conjunction with all those loyal Israelites who joined with David, of whom see the next chapters.

11 And this is the number of the mighty men whom David had, Jashobeam, the Hachmonite, the chief of the captains: he lifted up his spear against three hundred slain by him at one time.

In Hachmonite, called the Iachmonite, and Adino the Izrite, 2 Sam xxiii 8. Slain by him to wit, by his own hand, five hundred more being slain by others then joining with him: who pursued the victory that he alone got, and in the pursuit slew five hundred both who it seems make up the eight hundred numbers, 2 Sam xxiii 8 the laughter of all which is justly ascribed to him because it was the effect of his valour. But concerning that and other differences about these persons or things, see my notes on 2 Sam xxiii.

12 And after him was Eleazar the son of Dodo the Ahohite, who was one of the three mighty.

13 He was with David at Pas-dammim, and there the Philistines were gathered together to battle, where was a parcel of ground full of barley: and the people fled from before the Philistines.

14 And they set themselves in the midst of that parcel, and delivered it, and slew the Philistines, and the Lord saved them by a great deliverance.

15 ¶ Now three of the thirty captains went down to the rock to David into the cave of Adullam, and the host of the Philistines encamped in the valley of Rephaim.

16 And David was then in the hold, and the Philistines garrisoned then at Beth-lehem.

17 And David longed, and said, Oh that one would give me drink of the water of the well of Beth-lehem, that is at the gate.

18 And the three brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that is by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: but David would not drink of it, but poured it out to the Lord.

19 And said, My God forbid it me, that I should do this thing: shall I drink the blood of these men that have put their lives in jeopardy? for with the jeopardy of their lives they brought it. Therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mighty.

Heb these three mighty, to wit, last mentioned, whereof one was Abishai, ver 20, for the acts of two of the first three are here passed over, being recorded 2 Sam xxiii.

20 ¶ And Abishai the brother of Joab, he was chief of the three: for lifting up his spear against three hundred, he slew them, and had a name among the three.

He slew them: he vanquished them all, and slew a great number of them, though it be not said that he slew them all at one time: as it is said of Jashobeam, above, ver 11.

21 Of the three, he was more honourable than the two, for he was their captain: howbeit he attained not to the first three.

He did not equal them in valiant exploits.

22 Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man of Kabzeel, who had done many acts, he slew two lion-like men of Moab: also he went down and slew a lion in a pit in a snowy day.

23 And he slew an Egyptian, a man of great stature, five cubits high, and in the Egyptian's hand was a spear like a weaver's beam, and he went down to him with a staff, and plucked the spear out of the Egyptian's hand, and slew him with his own spear.

24 These things did Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and had a name among the three mighty.

Had a name: i.e. was greatly reputed for: though he did not equal Abishai, one of the three, as appears by ver 20, yet he did excel the third of the three, and all the thirty here following.

25 Behold, he was honourable among the thirty, but attained not to the first three: and David set him over his guard.

Heb his hearing, or obedience, i.e. those that were always ready to hear and obey or execute his commands, to wit, the king, i.e. his body.

26 ¶ So the valiant men of the armies were, Asahel the brother of Joab, Elhanan the son of Dodo of Beth-lehem, 27 Shammoth the Harorite, Helez the Pelonite,

28 Ira the son of Ikkesh the Tekoite, Abi-ezer the Antothite, 29 Sibbecai the Hushathite, Hui the Ahohite,

30 Mishael the Netophathite, Hoded the son of Baanah the Netophathite,

31 Ithai the son of Ribai of Gibeah, that pertained to the children of Benjamin, Benaiah the Pirathonite,

32 Hurai of the brooks of Gash, Abiel the Arbathite,

Of the brooks, or of the valleys, i.e. one of them, the plural number for the singular, so called because he was born or bred there.

33 Azmaveth the Baharumite, Elahba the Shaalbonite, 34 The sons of Hashem the Garmite, Jonathan the son of Shage the Hararite,

Hashem, or Jashem, to wit Jonathan here following, and Shamamah here omitted, but expressed 2 Sam xxiii 32 33

Or, Agar 35 Ahiham the son of || Sacar the Hararite, || Eliphai the son of || Uri,

Or, 2 Another who, upon the death of the former, was put in his stead*

39 Zelek the Ammonite, Niharai the Berothite, the armourbearer of Joab the son of Zeruiah, 40 Iia the Ithite, Garch the Ithrite,

41 Urnah the Hittite, Zabad the son of Ahlai,

Urnah the Hittite, the last of that catalogue in 2 Sam xxiii 39 But here some others are added to the number, because though they were not of the thirty yet they were men of great valour and renowned amongst David's commanders

42 Admii the son of Shiza the Reubenite, a captain of the Reubenites, and thirty with him,

43 Hanan the son of Maashah, and Josphath the Mithnite,

44 Uzria the Ashterathite, Shama and Jehiel the sons of Hothuf the Arochite,

The fourth so called possibly because his station and quarter were upon the river Aror beyond Jordan, being placed there for the defence of those parts

Or, Haurite 45 Jedai the son of Shimri, and Joab his brother the Tizite, 46 Ithai the Mahavite, and Jeribai, and Joshaviah, the sons of Elnaam, and Ithmah the Moabite,

So called either because he was by birth a Moabite, though now proselyted to the true religion, or from some eminent service done by him, as must the Moabites as among the Romans Scipio was called Asiatic and African because of his great achievements and victories over those parts and people

47 Ithai, and Obed and Jasai the Mesobaites

The company that came to David at Ziklag when pursued by Saul's men of Saul's own family, some of the tribe of Benjamin and Judah, and Manasseh,

2 They were armed with bows and could use both the right hand and the left in hurling stones and shooting arrows out of a bow, as of Saul's brethren of Benjamin

Could use both the right hand as a left, with like nimbleness and certainly, Compare Judg ii 15, xx 16 Of

Saul's brethren of Benjamin, i e of Saul's own tribe, who were moved hereunto by God's Spirit, and by the conscience of their duty to David, to whom God had given the crown in reversion, and by their observation of God's departure from Saul, and of his special presence with David, and his gracious providence for him

3 The chief was Ahiozer, then Joash, the sons of || Shemai the Gibeathite, and Jeziel, and Pelet, the sons of Azmaveth, and Berachah, and Jehu the Antothite,

4 And Ismaiah the Gibeonite, a mighty man among the thirty, and over the thirty, and Jeremnah and Jethaziel, and Johanan, and Josabab the Gederathite,

Or, Hasmah Over the thirty, i e who came attended with thirty valiant Benjamites, and was their leader and commander

6 Elkanah, and Jesiah, and Azareel, and Jo-ezer, and Jashobeam, the Korhites,

7 And Joelah, and Zabadiah, the sons of Jeroham of Gedor

8 And of the Gadites there separated themselves unto David into the hold to the wilderness men of might, and men of war fit for the battle, that could handle shield and buckler, whose faces were like the faces of lions, and were as swift as the roes upon the mountains,

Separated themselves from Saul to whom they had hitherto adhered, and from their brethren of their own tribe, who yet maintained Saul's cause, and from their families and the places where they lived from whom they went to David

Into the hold to the wilderness, i e either to the cave of Adullam or to the wilderness of Ziklag, as appears from ver 1 which was in the wilderness of Judah which is here called the hold, or the fortress, which name is also given to the city of David, 1 Chron vi 7 the Hebrew word being the same both here and there

Whose faces were like the faces of lions, who were full of courage and by the majesty and heroism of their countenances terrified their adversaries

As swift as the roes upon the mountains, is their very looks daunted their enemies and put them to flight so they could easily pursue and overtake and destroy them in their flight

9 Ezer the first, Obadiah the second, Liah the third,

10 Mishmannah the fourth, Jeremiah the fifth,

11 Attai the sixth, Eliel the seventh,

12 Johai the eighth, Elzabad the ninth,

13 Jeremiah the tenth, Machbani the eleventh

14 These were of the sons of Gad, captains of the host || one of the least was over an hundred, and the greatest over a thousand

Or, one that was least is, i e least in number

Not that they brought now so many men with them but rather 1 They had hitherto been captains or colonels under Saul or in the established militia or bands of their tribe

Or 2 They were so afterwards under David, who for their valour and fidelity thus advanced them

15 These were they that went over Jordan in the first month, when it had overflowed all his banks, and they put to flight all them of the valleys, both toward the east, and toward the west

They that went over Jordan, to wit in Saul's time when, it seems the enemies of the Israelites had made an incursion and done some mischief to the Israelites beyond Jordan, to whose help these then came

When it had overflowed all his banks, as it commonly did about that time See Josh iii 15, iv 18, Jer xlix 19 This is noted either

Or, Heb. All over the land

as a description of the time when this was done, it being usual with historians to note the circumstances of great actions, or as an aggravation of the fact. And possibly these, being men of great nimbleness and dexterity, did swim over Jordan, through their ardent desire to help their brethren and to fight with their enemies. 17 them of the valleys i.e. the people that lived in the valleys or directly beyond Jordan who as it seems, when Saul was engaged against the Philistines, took that advantage to fall upon the Israelites beyond Jordan. Toward the east and toward the west, either, 1. The people that lived more eastward, and remote from Jordan and those who lived more westward, or nearer to it. Or, 2. Them made to fly several ways, some eastward, some westward as they saw the way open for them. See Deut. xxviii. 7, 25.

17 And David went out to meet them, and answered and said unto them, If ye be come peaceably unto me to help me, mine heart shall be knit unto you: but if ye be come to betray me to mine enemies, seeing there is no wrong in mine hands, the God of our fathers look thereon, and rebuke it.

And answered, i.e. spake, as that word is oft used in Scripture, even of him that spake first. Mine heart shall be knit unto you, I shall ever esteem and love you and show this by my actions to you hereafter. If ye be come to betray me to mine enemies, which your number and quality, and near relation to Saul gives me some cause to suspect. There is no wrong in mine hands. I have done no injury to Saul, nor to you, but have spared him and you when it was in my power to have destroyed you. The God of our fathers look thereon, and rebuke it to me, by his kind and power manifested for me and against you for your perfidiousness.

18 Then the spirit came upon Amasai, who was chief of the captains: and he said, Thine are we,

David: and on thy side, thou son of Jesse: peace, peace, be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers, for thy God helpeth thee. Then David received them, and made them captains of the band.

The Spirit came upon Amasai, not only signifying but other heroic and generous motions are ascribed to God's Spirit, which here shined up in him a more than ordinary greatness and presences of mind and resolution.

Thy God helpeth thee, we have observed God's singular and gracious care of thee, and kindness to thee, and thou shouldst oppose thee who could be fighters against God and his word and providence. Captains of the band i.e. of those forces which they brought with them. On he put them among the heads or officers of his band i.e. he gave them commands, either now in his small army, or according to his quality, or afterwards when he was advanced to the kingdom, for it is not here expressed when he did so.

19 And there fell some of Manasseh to David, when he came with the Philistines against Saul to battle: but they helped them not for the lords of the Philistines upon advisement sent him away, saying, He will fall to his master

Saul to the jeopardy of our heads.

They helped them not, i.e. the Manasseh whom named, and the rest of David's forces to whom they had now joined themselves, did not help the Philistines in battle, as David had pretended to do.

20 As he went to Ziklag, there fell to him of Manasseh, Adnah, and Jozabab, and Jedaiel, and

Michael, and Jozabab, and Elihu, and Zithai, captains of the thousands that were of Manasseh as he went to Ziklag, as he returned from the camp of the Philistines to Ziklag. 1 Sam. xiv. 11.

21 And they helped David against the band of the rovers for they were all mighty men of valour, and were captains in the host.

Against the band of the rovers, i.e. against the Amalekites who had taken and burned Ziklag, whom David and his six hundred men were now pursuing, whom they accompanied in that expedition. Or with a band or troop of soldiers, which they brought along with them to David's assistance. They were all mighty men of valour, therefore they readily came to David's help. These captains in the host, therefore they brought others along with them.

22 For at that time, day by day there came to David to help him, until it was a great host, like the host of God.

At that time i.e. while he was at Ziklag and in his march to Hebron and principally at Hebron, is the next verse explains it. Like the host of God i.e. innumerable like the stars or angels, both which are called God's hosts.

Otherwise the host of God i.e. a very great host, great things being so called as celestial mountains &c. of God.

But the particle of likeness here added excludes the sense of it had been very improper to say a great host like a great host i.e. like itself.

23 And these are the numbers of the bands that were ready armed to the war, and came to David to Hebron to turn the kingdom of Saul to him, according to the word of the Lord.

Whereby he had stilled the crown upon David after Saul's death.

24 The children of Judah that bore shield and spear were six thousand and eight hundred, ready armed to the war.

Who came hither in the name of all their brethren, for that whole tribe stuck to David thus very in coming to Hebron.

25 Of the children of Simeon mighty men of valour for the war, seven thousand and one hundred.

26 Of the children of Levi four thousand and six hundred.

27 And Jehoiada was the leader of the Aro-nites: and with him were three thousand and seven hundred.

Of the children of the Aroonites, not the high priest for that was Abiathar. 1 Sam. xxiii. 6, but one of eminent piety and a man who had a great power and interest among his brethren.

28 And Zadok, a young man mighty of valour, and of his father's house twenty and two captains.

Zadok, then hit to be the same who was made high priest in Solomon's time, 1 Kings ii. 35, which if true, he was very young at the time. Twenty and two captains, whom he brought along with him.

29 And of the children of Benjamin, three thousand and fifty, the greatest part of them were of the house of Saul, to keep the crown in their own tribe, as Saul's family.

30 And of the children of Ephraim, twenty thousand and eight hundred, mighty men of valour, famous throughout the house of their fathers.

31 And of the half tribe of Manasseh eighteen thousand, which were expressed by name, to come and make David king.

Of the half tribe of Manasseh, which was within Jordan, for of the other half beyond Jordan he speaks ver 37 Which were expressed by name, which were not ashamed nor afraid publicly to own David, first by putting their names to some paper presented to them for that purpose, and then by marching to him to Hebron

32 And of the children of Issachar, <sup>1</sup> which were men that had understanding of the times, to know what Israel ought to do, the heads of them were two hundred, and all their brethren were at their commandment

Understanding of the times, either, 1 Skill in the stars, and several seasons and changes of the air which might be of good use in husbandry, to which this tribe was addicted, Gen xix 11 Deut xxxiii 18 Or rather 2 Political prudence to discern and embrace the fit seasons for all actions appears 1 From the following words, to know what not only their own tribe, but all Israel ought to do 2 By the great authority and command which they had over all their brethren upon this account as it here follows 3 Because this is so considerable a circumstance in all human and especially in public affairs, that the success or disappointment of them depends very much upon the right or wrong timing of them, and therefore this is a very fit expectation to justify their great prudence And particularly they showed the point of their wisdom at this time for as they had adhered to Saul whilst he lived as knowing the time was not yet come for David to take possession of the kingdom, and as they could not join themselves to David whilst Abner lived and was potent, and had the command of the other tribes, where with they were encompassed, so as soon as he was dead and they had opportunity to declare themselves they owned David for their king 1 By the like use of this phrase 1 Sam i 13

33 Of Zebulun, such as went forth to battle, <sup>1</sup> expert in war, with all instruments of war, fifty thousand, which could keep rank they were of double heart

Of Zebulun fifty thousand for this tribe being next to that of Issachar which was generally well affected to David were probably very much swayed by their opinion and advice Which could keep rank or which were disposed, or prepared or ordered for battle or to fight for David, at occasion so required Not of double heart Heb without a heart and a heart, which may relate either, 1 To the whole body of them they were all of one heart and one mind towards David not one for him and others secretly against him but all with one soul and one consent adhered to him Or 2 To the same particular persons, they were each of them sincerely loyal to David and did not dissemble with David, pretending to be for him, whilst in their hearts they favoured Saul's family which possibly some of those who came to Hebron did On this is particularly noted of this tribe, because they lay under some suspicion in this matter as also some of the other tribes did, and therefore the like testimony is given to all of them ver 38

34 And of Naphtali a thousand captains, and with them with shield and spear thirty and seven thousand

35 And of the Danites expert in war twenty and eight thousand and six hundred *

36 And of Asher such as went forth to battle, <sup>1</sup> expert in war, forty thousand

37 And on the other side of Jordan, of the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and of the half tribe of Manasseh, with all manner of instruments of war for the battle, an hundred and twenty thousand

38 All these men of war that could keep rank, came with a perfect heart to Hebron, to make David king over all Israel and all the rest also of Israel were of one heart to make David king

To wit, after the death of Abner and Ish-boneth.

39 And there they were with David three days, eating and drinking for their brethren had prepared for them

40 Moreover they that were nigh them, even unto Issachar and Zebulun and Naphtali, brought bread on asses, and on camels, and on mules, and on oxen, and <sup>1</sup> meat, meal, cakes of figs, and bunches of raisins, and wine, and oil, and oxen, and sheep abundantly for there was joy in Israel

They that were nigh them, that lived not far from Hebron, the place where they now were Unto Issachar and Zebulun and Naphtali this is added by way of amplification and explication, to show that he did not understand this of those Israelites only who lived in the neighbourhood of Hebron, but of those that lived at some distance, yet were nearer to Hebron than some of the other tribes here named On oxen, which though not commonly used in this manner, nor fit for such purposes, now they so used because the quantity of provisions which they brought was very great as the numbers of the people at Hebron were and horses they had few in Israel and most of their asses and camels, and mules here mentioned probably were used to carry divers men, or women and children, to this great and public, and happy solemnity There was joy in Israel, partly because their civil wars were wholly ended, and they were all united under one king, and partly because they had now a king of eminent valour and piety and felicity and therefore expected to be saved from all their enemies and calamities, as they were

CHAP XIII

David fetcheth the ark from Kirjath jearim with great solemnty 1 & Uzzah being smitten, the ark is left at the house of Obad edom, 9-11

AND David consulted with the captains <sup>1045</sup> of thousands and hundreds, and with every leader

Or governor or elder of the people

2 And David said unto all the congregation of Israel, If it seem good unto you, and that it be of the LORD our God, I <sup>1046</sup> let us send abroad unto our brethren every where, that are left in all the land of Israel, and with them also to the priests and Levites which are in their cities and suburbs, that they may gather themselves unto us

Unto all the congregation of Israel, 1. unto all the people then assembled with him at Hebron This story is mentioned in another place, in 2 Sam v, vi, even after the taking of Jerusalem and the two first fights with the Philistines whereas here it is placed before the latter, and there is no mention here of the former The matter may be thus conceived There being now a great and general concourse of all Israel, and David being now established in his throne with universal consent and applause, he begins with God and his first thoughts and cares are about religion and the ark, then the great instrument and ornament of it, and takes the opportunity of this assembly to desire their advice and concurrence with him in it, that the ark might be brought either to Hebron, which then was the royal city, or to Jerusalem which as probably he told them, he was resolved to besiege, and doubted not by God's help to take After this was proposed by the king, and accepted by the people, this great assembly was dismissed, only some of them David reserved to go with him against Jerusalem, which accordingly he did, and succeeded in his enterprise, as is related 1 Sam v. But before this resolution could be executed the Philistines came and fought twice with David, as is related, 1 Sam v 17, &c, and here, chap xiv 8, &c

And after they were repulsed with great loss and shame David sets upon the execution of that which before he had resolved, and in order to it, calls another general assembly of the people. And that it be of the Lord our God 1 c. it thus translation of the ark be pleasing to God, which I purpose to inquire by the Urim after the manner, and to act accordingly. Let us send abroad, Heb let us break out and send, 1 c let us send messengers speedily and universally to the several tribes. We are now in some sort pent up in a corner of the land in Hebron but let us break up the assembly, and disperse ourselves, and send far and near about this work. It is a metaphor from the sea or rivers, which, when the banks are broken do suddenly overflow the whole adjoining country. That are left, by which word he minds them of the great desolations and destructions which God for their sins had hitherto made among them, and therefore adviseth that remnant whom God had so graciously saved in and from those dreadful ruins, that they would more seriously set themselves to seek God than they had formerly done.

3 And let us bring again the ark of our God to us for we enquired not at it in the days of Saul.

The ark was then neglected, and the generality of the people either lived in the gross neglect of the solemn worship of God, or contented themselves with going to tabernacle, and offering sacrifices there not caring, though the ark, the soul of the tabernacle was in another place. In the days of Saul so it was in the days of Samuel, but it is rather charged upon Saul than him, partly because Samuel was exercised with continual wars or expectation of war, with the Philistines all the time of his agency, and therefore wanted the opportunity to bring back the ark which Saul had neglected, partly, because Samuel took care to stir up and maintain religion among them by other means, and in an extraordinary manner where is this but one branch of Saul's impiety and was joined with a contempt of all religion, as the history of his life shows, and partly, because it was more proper to accuse him self and the present generation who were guilty of this neglect than to rake into the ashes of the deceased progenitors and lay his charge against those who were dead and gone some good while since.

4 And all the congregation said that they would do so for the thing was right in the eyes of all the people.

Their consciences smiting them for their former negligence and being fully convinced of the just and reasonableness of this proposition.

5 So David gathered all Israel together, from Shihor of Egypt even unto the entering of Hemath, to bring the ark of God from Kirjath-jearim.

11 Israel, 1 c all the chosen men of Israel, as it is placed 2 Sam vi 1, their elders and representatives. Shihor of Egypt, of which see Numb xxxiv 5 Josh vii 3, Jer ii 18.

6 And David went up, and all Israel, to Baalah, that is, to Kirjath-jearim, which belonged to Judah, to bring up thence the ark of God the Lord, that dwelleth between the cherubims, whose name is called on it.

That is, to Kirjath-jearim, which explication is justified by Josh xv 9 60 where the same city is called by both names. Object They are said to go from this Baale, 2 Sam vi 2 Answer 1 Some learned men render that place also to Baale, the particle mem being sometimes used for to amongst the Hebrews, and especially amongst the Arabians. 2 Both were true, they first went to Baale for the ark, as is here said, and then went from Baale to bring, or to carry, (for the word signifies either) or carrying, from thence the ark of God, as is there related. But of this and other difficulties or differences between these two relations, see the notes on 2 Sam vi.

7 And they carried the ark of God in a new cart out of the house of Abinadab and Uzza and Ahio drove the cart.

8 And David and all Israel played before God with all then might, and with singing, and with harps, and with psalteries, and with timbrels, and with cymbals, and with trumpets.

9 And when they came unto the threshing floor of Chidon, Uzza put forth his hand to hold the ark; for the oxen stumbled.

10 And the anger of the Lord was kindled against Uzza, and he smote him, because he put his hand to the ark: and there he died before God.

11 And David was displeased, because the Lord had made a breach upon Uzza, wherefore that place is called Perez-uzza to this day.

12 And David was afraid of God that day, saying, How shall I bring the ark of God home to me?

13 So David brought not the ark home to himself to the city of David, but committed it aside unto the house of Obed-edom the Gittite.

14 And the ark of God remained with the family of Obed-edom in his house three months. And the Lord blessed the house of Obed-edom, and all that he had.

CHAP. XIV.

Hiram's kindness to David, 1 His victory in battle, 2 His victory against the Philistines, 3 17.

NOW Hiram king of Tyre sent messengers to David and timber of cedars, with masons and carpenters, to build him an house.

2 And David perceived that the Lord had confirmed him king over Israel, for his kingdom was lifted up on high because of his people Israel.

David perceived, by the remembrance of God's promise, and his providence complying with it, &c. But of this and the following verses see the notes on 2 Sam v 12, &c. where the same history is related.

3 And David took more wives at Jerusalem and David begat more sons and daughters.

4 Now these are the names of his children which he had in Jerusalem, Shammua, and Shobab, Nathan, and Solomon,

5 And Ithar, and Elishua, and Iphlet,

6 And Nogah, and Nepheg, and Japhia,

7 And Elishama, and Beeliada, and Eliphalet.

8 And when the Philistines heard that David was anointed king over all Israel, all the Philistines went up to seek David. And David heard of it, and went out against them.

ramoth, and Jehiel, and Unni, Eliab, and Ben uah, and Maaseiah, and Mattithiah, and Elipheleh, and Mikneiah, and Obed-edom, and Jeiel the porters.

Their brethren of the second degree, the first rank or degree of sacred musicians being those three in our persons named ver 17, next unto whom were these here named the porters, who were to keep the doors of the tabernacle and courts, but withal were instructed in music and singing, that when they were free from attendance upon their proper office, they might not be idle nor unprofitable persons in God's house

19 So the singers, Heman, Asaph, and Ethan, were appointed to sound with cymbals of brass,

20 And Zechariah, and Eliezer, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Unni and Eliab, and Maaseiah and Benaiah, with psalteries on Alamoth,

In this catalogue Ben is omitted who was mentioned ver 18. Yet others think him to be the same who is called Azaziah, ver 21. But Ben might be some other person who was indeed appointed for this work as is related ver 17, 18, and yet he might be taken off by death or sickness, or some sudden and extraordinary accident which hindered his execution of the place and work allotted for him which might force the chief of the Levites to appoint some other in his stead, when they came to put their institution in practice, as here they did. On Alamoth or with (as that particle is elsewhere used) Alamoth, which is thought to be the name of an instrument of music, or of a certain tune or note, or part in music. The certain signification of it is not now known, nor is it necessary for us to know it. And the like may be said of Sheminith ver 21.

21 And Mattithiah, and Elipheleh, and Mikneiah, and Obed-edom, and Jeiel, and Azaziah, with harps on the Sheminith to excel.

See on ver 20. to excel the word may be here added to note the excellency of that instrument or note, or part of music, or that there was a greater extension or elevation of the voice than in the former.

22 And Chenaniah, chief of the Levites, was for song he instructed about the song, because he was skilful.

He was for song Heb was for lifting up either 1. Of the ark, he was for charge of the ark being appointed to instruct or direct the time and manner of carrying the ark, and when they should make a stand or a change in the bearers. Or rather 2. Of the voice, he was the moderator of the music, instructing them when and how to lift up their voices or change their notes, or make their stop, which best agree with the following reason because he was skilful, for the required far more skill than the charge of the ark, which any man of common discretion could easily govern, and with ver 27, where this Chenaniah is joined with the singers.

23 And Berechiah and Iliknah were doorkeepers for the ark.

These were appointed to keep the door of the tent in which the ark was to be put and kept that no unworthy person might press in and touch it and in like manner they were to attend upon the ark in the way and to guard it from the press and touch of profane hands, for which end these two went before the ark, as their other two brethren, mentioned in the close of ver 24 came after it that it might be guarded on all sides, which how necessary it was to be done, sufficiently appears from the danger of coming too near the ark, or to look into it, which was exemplified in the Bethshemites, 1 Sam vi 19.

24 And Shebaniah and Jehoshaphat, and Nathaneel, and Amasai, and Zechariah, and Benaiah, and Eliezer, the priests, did blow with the trumpets before the ark of God and Obed-edom and Jehiah were doorkeepers for the ark.

25 ¶ So David, and the elders of Israel, and the captains over thousands, went to bring up the ark of the covenant of the Lord out of the house of Obed-edom with joy.

26 And it came to pass, when God helped the Levites that bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord, that they offered seven bullocks and seven rams.

When God helped the Levites, either 1. By giving them strength to carry their burden, or rather 2. By encouraging them in their work with some comfortable sign of his presence with them and approbation of their work and manner of carrying the ark when they saw that he did not cut off any of the persons employed as he had done before but spared and favoured them, which they perceived when they had gone six paces, as appears by 2 Sam vi 13.

27 And David was clothed with a robe of fine linen, and all the Levites that bare the ark, and the singers and Chenaniah the master of the song with the singers. David also had upon him an ephod of linen.

With a robe of fine linen, i.e. with a linen ephod as it is explained in the close of this verse where this circumstance is repeated, because it was a notable and unusual thing, for David who was no Levite to wear a Levitical garment. See of this and the following verse the notes on 2 Sam vi 11-16.

28 ¶ Thus all Israel brought up the ark of the covenant of the Lord with shouting, and with sound of the cornet, and with trumpet, and with cymbals, making a noise with psalteries and harps.

29 ¶ And it came to pass, as the ark of the covenant of the Lord came to the city of David that Michal the daughter of Saul looking out at a window saw king David dancing and playing and she despised him in her heart.

CHAP. XVI.

David's festival sacrifice and dance. The psalm of thanksgiving sung by a choir and the people said, Amen, 1-36. Ministers, porters, priests, and musicians appointed to attend the ark continually, 37-38.

30 ¶ David brought the ark of God, and set it in the midst of the tent that David had pitched for it and they offered burnt sacrifices and peace offerings before God.

Of these three first verses, see on 2 Sam vi 17-19.

31 And when David had made an end of offering the burnt offerings and the peace offerings, he blessed the people in the name of the Lord.

32 And he dealt to every one of Israel, both man and woman, to every one a loaf of bread, and a good piece of flesh, and a flagon of wine.

33 And he appointed certain of the Levites to minister before the ark of the Lord, and to record, and to thank and praise the Lord God of Israel.

34 Asaph the chief, and next to him Zechariah, Jeiel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Mattithiah, and Eliab, and Benaiah, and Obed-edom and Jeiel with psalteries and with harps, but Asaph made a sound with cymbals,

7 ¶ Then on that day David delivered <sup>2 Sam 23</sup> first this psalm to thank the Lord into the hand of Asaph and his brethren

David delivered first this psalm, whereby it is implied, that after this he delivered many other psalms successively into their hands to be sung by them to the praise of God at his public service. See 2 Sam xxiii 1, 2 Chron xxix 30. As for the matter of this psalm, I shall defer the explanation of it till I come to the Book of Psalms, where we shall find it in the same words, in Psal xcvi and cv

8 ¶ Give thanks unto the Lord, call upon his name, make known his deeds among the people

9 Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him, talk ye of all his wondrous works

10 Glory ye in his holy name let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord

11 Seek the Lord and his strength, seek his face continually

12 Remember his marvellous works that he hath done, his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth,

13 O ye seed of Israel his servant, ye children of Jacob, his chosen ones

14 He is the Lord our God, his judgments are in all the earth

15 Be ye mindful always of his covenant the word which he commanded to a thousand generations,

16 Even of the covenant which he made with Abraham, and of his oath unto Isaac

17 And hath confirmed the same to Jacob for a law and to Israel for an everlasting covenant

18 Saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance,

19 When ye were but few, even a few, and strangers in it

20 And when they went from nation to nation and from one kingdom to another people

21 He suffered no man to do them wrong: yea, he reproveth kings for their sake,

22 Saying, Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm

23 Sing unto the Lord, all the earth shew forth from day to day his salvation

24 Declare his glory among the heathen, his marvellous works among all nations

25 For great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised: he also is to be feared above all gods

26 For all the gods of the people are idols: but the Lord made the heavens

27 Glory and honour are in his presence, strength and gladness are in his place

28 Give unto the Lord, ye kindreds of the people, give unto the Lord glory and strength

29 Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name: bring an offering and come before him: worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness

30 For before him, all the earth the world also shall be stable, that it be not moved

31 Let the heavens be glad, and let the earth rejoice and let men say among the nations, The Lord reigneth

32 Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof: let the fields rejoice, and all that is therein

33 Then shall the trees of the wood sing out at the presence of the Lord, because he cometh to judge the earth

34 O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever

35 And say ye, Save us, O God of our salvation, and gather us together, and deliver us from the heathen, that we may give thanks to thy holy name, and glory in thy praise

Deliver us from the heathen this might seem an improper and unreasonable prayer for David's time, when the Israelites were not yet scattered amongst the heathen, but indeed it was not so, partly because they had already been sadly divided by a civil war among themselves, and though they were now externally and visibly united under David, yet he might justly think that there were some who yet retained in their hearts their old leaven, their hatred of him and their affection to Saul, which might hereafter break forth when occasion was offered, as it did, 2 Sam vi 4, and therefore he justly prays that they may be gathered and united together in hearty love, as well as in outward show: and partly because this psalm or prayer was made by David for the use of the church, not only in that present time but in future ages, in which David foretold by the Spirit of prophecy, or by consideration of those ancient and used prophecies Deut xxxi, xxxii that the Israelites would one time or other forsake God and for their apostasy be dispersed among the heathen: when they should have great and particular need of this prayer

36 Blessed be the Lord God of Israel for ever and ever And all the people said, Amen and praised the Lord

37 ¶ So he left there before the ark of the covenant of the Lord Asaph and his brethren, to minister before the ark continually, as every day's work required

38 He appointed them their work and station there And Obed-edom with their brethren, threescore and eight, Obed-edom also the son of Jeduthun and Hosai to be porters

Or, door-keepers, as the same Hebrew word is rendered, chap xv 23 24 of which see the note on ver 23

39 And Zadok the priest, and his brethren the priests, before the tabernacle of the Lord in the high place that was at Gibeon,

Zadok the priest, not the high priest, but the second and the chief priest at Gibeon, where the famous tabernacle and altar made by Moses still were 1 Chron xxi 29, 2 Chron i 3, where also the ordinary sacrifices were offered, and the stated and public worship of God was performed, as it here follows for which the priests were placed there, as the extraordinary worship was before the ark upon great occasions, as when God was consulted, which was to be done before the ark and by the high priest, Exod xxviii. 12, 20, 21 who now was Asathar, who therefore abode here with the ark, when Zadok was left at Gibeon

40 To offer burnt offerings unto the Lord upon the altar of the burnt offering continually morning and evening, and to do according to all that is written in the law of the Lord, which he commanded Israel,

41 And with them Heman and Jeduthun, and the rest that were chosen, who were expressed by name, to give thanks to the Lord, *because his mercy endureth for ever;

Who were expressed by name, so exceeding careful was this good king of God's worship, that he would have no person employed in it but such as he appointed to it, and were fit for it.

42 And with them Heman and Jeduthun with trumpets and cymbals for those that should make a sound, and with musical instruments of God. And the sons of Jeduthun were porters.

Musical instruments of God, i.e. appointed and approved to the worship and honour of God.

43 And all the people departed every man to his house: and David returned to bless his house.

CHAP. XVII.

David designing to build God a house. Nathan at first approveth of it, after, by the word of God forbiddeth him, 1-10, promising him blessings and benefits in his seed, 11-15, David's prayer and thanksgiving, 16-27.

NOW it came to pass, as David sat in his house, that David said to Nathan the prophet, Lo, I dwell in a house of cedars, but the ark of the covenant of the Lord remaineth under curtains.

This whole chapter is explained 2 Sam. vii. where the same things are recorded with very little variation of the words, which also hath been considered in my notes upon that chapter, to which I refer the reader taking notice here but of some very few things.

2 Then Nathan said unto David, Do all that is in thine heart, for God is with thee.

3 And it came to pass the same night, that the word of God came to Nathan, saying,

4 Go and tell David my servant, Thus saith the Lord, Thou shalt not build me an house to dwell in.

5 For I have not dwelt in an house since the day that I brought up Israel unto this day, but I have gone from tent to tent, and from one tabernacle to another.

6 Wheresoever I have walked with all Israel, spake I a word to any of the judges of Israel, whom I commanded to feed my people, saying, Why have ye not built me an house of cedars?

7 Now therefore thus saith the Lord unto my servant David, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, I took thee from the sheepcote, even from following the sheep, that thou shouldest be ruler over my people Israel.

8 And I have been with thee whithersoever thou hast walked, and have cut off all thine enemies from before thee, and have made thee a name like the name of the great men that are in the earth.

9 Also I will ordain a place for my people Israel, and will plant them, and they shall dwell in their place, and shall be moved no more, neither shall the children of wickedness waste them any more, as at the beginning.

The children of wickedness, such as are devoted and wholly given up to wickedness, elsewhere called children of Belial.

10 And since the time that I commanded judges to be over my people Israel. Moreover I will subdue all thine enemies. Further more I tell thee that the Lord will build thee an house.

11 And it shall come to pass, when thy days be expired that thou must go to be with thy fathers, that I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy sons, and I will establish his kingdom.

12 He shall build me an house, and I will establish his throne for ever.

13 I will be his father, and he shall be my son, and I will not take my mercy away from him, as I took it from him that was before thee.

14 But I will settle him in mine house and in my kingdom for ever, and his throne shall be established for evermore.

In mine house, in my dwelling-place, either, 1. In wisdom, the place where God had put his name for ever, 2 Kings xxi. 4, 7, 2 Chron. vi. 5, 6. compare 2 Kings xi. 36, xi. 4. Or, 2. In the temple, which is more properly and constantly called God's house, and so this expression agrees but very imperfectly with Solomon or his successors, who might be said to be settled in God's house, because they were settled near it, and in some sort set over it, because they were to take care that the priests and others should perform their office and God's service in it, but strictly and properly agrees only to Christ, to whom alone that promise also of an everlasting establishment in this kingdom belongs, as was noted on 2 Sam. vii. And this expressed seems to be most emphatically added, to signify that that person in whom all the promises should be fully and perfectly accomplished to wit, the Messiah, should be settled not only in the king's throne, as rulers of David's successors were, but also in God's house or temple, and consequently that he should be a Priest as well as a King, which mystery was more clearly revealed to David, Paul, &c. 1, 2, 1 and may be intimated, though obscurely, (as was fit and usual in that state of the church) in these words.

In my kingdom, either 1. In the kingdom of Israel, which God calls his kingdom because it was in a special manner their king and Governor, having raised them up and formed them into a kingdom, and given them that protection and assistance which kings owe to their kingdoms, and because he expected and required from them what kin do from their people that they should be wholly governed by his laws, and devoted to his service. Or, 2. In God's kingdom in a more large and general sense. And this is the former phrase given singularly to belong to the Messiah who was not only to be the king of Israel but also of all nations as was foretold even in the Old Testament as Psal. lxxvi. 12, xxii. 27, 28, lxxxi. 11, Isa. li. Hag. ii. 7. and so this may be an intimation of that great mystery which is more fully revealed in the New Testament to wit that Christ is the Head or King or Governor of all God's church consisting of Jews and Gentiles and of all times and indeed of all creatures the angels not excepted, all which is God's kingdom and by him given to his Son, our blessed Lord Christ. And for the confirmation of the great things, there is so great and remarkable an alteration of the phrase here from what it is in 2 Sam. vii. where speaking to David, he constantly calls it his (i.e. David's) kingdom, and his house, ver. 12, 13, 16, 19, 25, 27 for which he here saith my house and my kingdom which also he distinguisheth from his throne, which is mentioned in the next clause of this verse, and in ver. 11, 12. But these things I submit to the judicious reader.

15 According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David.

16 And David the king came and sat before the Lord, and said, Who am I?

I, O Lord God, and what is mine house, that thou hast brought me hitherto?

Sat before the Lord which may note either his gesture, or his continuance there till he had finished this following prayer

17 And yet this was a small thing in thine eyes, O God, for thou hast also spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come, and hast regarded me according to the estate of a man of high degree. O Lord God

1 c Thou hast treated me as if I had been born the son of a great monarch and not a poor shepherd, as indeed I was, O Lord God. Otherwise, thus, Thou hast regarded or respected me as the type or figure or according to the rank or order of that excellent man or man of high degree who is also the Lord God, the Messiah, who is God man, 1 c Thou hast given to me and my house an everlasting kingdom which is the peculiar privilege of that great person the Messiah, Dan ii 11, vi 13, 14

18 What can David speak more to thee for the honour of thy servant? for thou knowest thy servant.

19 O Lord, for thy servant's sake, and according to thine own heart, hast thou done all this greatness, in making known all <sup>4 fl. b</sup> ~~these~~ <sup>greatnesses</sup> | great things

* For thy servant's sake, in 2 Sam vi 21, it is, for thy word's sake, i. e. for the sake of thy word and promise made to thy servant, as that phrase for David's sake is oft thus understood, for God's covenant's sake made with David.

20 O LORD, there is none like thee, neither is there any God beside thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears.

21 And what one nation in the earth is like thy people Israel, whom God went to redeem to be his own people, to make thee a name of greatness and terrible-ness, by driving out nations from before thy people, whom thou hast redeemed out of Egypt?

22 For thy people Israel didst thou make thine own people for ever, and thou, Lord, becamest their God.

23 Therefore now, Lord, let the thing that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant and concerning his house be established for ever, and do as thou hast said.

21 Let it even be established, that thy name may be magnified for ever saying, The Lord of hosts is the God of Israel, even a God to Israel and let the house of David thy servant be established before thee

(Or The Lord of hosts, the God of Israel is a God to Israel) : & he is really to his people that which he hath styled himself their God, having taken such care of them, and showed such mercy and truth to them, as did fully answer that title

25 I or thou, O my God, † hast told thy servant that thou wilt build him an house: therefore thy servant hath found in his heart to pray before thee.

26 And now LORD, thou art God and hast promised this goodness unto thy servant

27 Now therefore, let it please thee to bless the house of thy servant that it may be before thee for ever for thou blessest, O Lord, and it shall be blessed for ever.

CHAP. XVIII

David subdueth the Philistines and the Moabites, smiteth Hadarezen and the Syrians, 1-8 Thou sendest Hadoram with presents to bless David the presents and spoil David dedicated to God, 9-11 He putteth garrisons in Idom, 12, 13 David's officers, 14-17

NOW after this it came to pass, that David smote the Philistines, and subdued them, and took Gath and her towns out of the hand of the Philistines

2 And he smote Moab, and the Moabites became David's servants, and brought gifts

3 ¶ And David smote || Hadarezer king || Gr
Hadarezer

of Zobah unto Hamath, as he went to establish his dominion by the river Euphrates

4 And David took from him a thousand chariots, and <sup>b</sup>seven thousand horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen. David also houghed all the chariot horses, but reserved of them an hundred chariots.

5 *And when the Syrians of †Damascus came to help Hadadizer king of Zobah, David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men.

6 Then David put garrisons in Syria-damascus, and the Syrians became David's servants, and brought gifts. Thus the Lord preserved David whithersoever he went.

7 And David took the shields of gold that were on the servants of Hadarezer, and brought them to Jerusalem.

8 I likewise from || Tibhath, and from Chun, cities of Hadadzer, brought David very much brass, wherewith Solomon made the brassen sea, and the pillars, and the vessels of brass.

Labhath and Chun, for which, 2 Sam viii 8 Betah and Brothar are mentioned. I rather therefore they were the same place called by several names as is usual, or they were four neighbouring places, out of all which the brass was taken whereof two places having been named there, one omitted here and the other two places there omitted are here numbered.

9 ¶ Now when ¶ Tou king of Hamath ¶ Or Tou heard how Davi<sup>d</sup> had smitten all the host ¶ Sam<sup>u</sup>el of Hadarai king of Zobah.

10 He sent ¶ Hadoram his son to king David ¶ to enquire of his welfare, and to congratulate him, because he had fought against Hadarezer, and smitten him (for Hadarezer † had war with Tou,) and with him all manner of vessels of gold and silver and brass

11 ¶ Them also king David dedicated unto the Lord, with the silver and the gold that he brought from all these nations from Edom, and from Moab, and from the children of Ammon, and from the Philistines, and from Amalek.

12 Moreover † Abishai the son of Zeruiah slew of the Edomites in the valley of salt <sup>d</sup> eighteen thousand

13 ¶ And he put garrisons in Edom, and all the Edomites became David's servants. Thus the Lord preserved David whithersoever he went.

14 ¶ So David reigned over all Israel, and executed judgment and justice among all his people

15 And Joab the son of Zeruiah was over the host, and Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud, reorder

16 And Zadok the son of Ahitub, and Abimelech the son of Abiathar, were the priests, and Shavsha was scribe,

CHAP XIX

David's messengers to Hanun are villainously entreated, 1-5
The Ammonites and Syrians are overcome by Joab and Abishai, 6-15, by David himself, 16-19

NOW it came to pass after this that Nahash the king of the children of Ammon died, and his son reigned in his stead

Of all the contents of this chapter, see the notes on 2 Sam 8, where we have the same things and almost the very same words

2 And David said, I will shew kindness unto Hanun the son of Nahash because his father shewed kindness to me And David sent messengers to comfort him concerning his father So the servants of David came into the land of the children of Ammon to Hanun, to comfort him

3 But the princes of the children of Ammon said to Hanun I thinkest thou that David doth honour thy father that he hath sent comforters unto thee? we will not let his servants come unto thee for to search and to overthrow, and to spy out the land

4 Wherefore Hanun took David's servants, and shaved them, and cut off their garments in the midst hard by their buttocks and sent them away

5 Then there went certain, and told David how the men were served And he sent to meet them for the men were greatly ashamed And the king said, Tarry at Jericho until your heads be grown, and then return

6 ¶ And when the children of Ammon saw that they had made themselves odious to David, Hanun and the children of Ammon sent a thousand talents of silver to hire them chariots and horsemen out of Mesopotamia, and out of Syria-mechah, and out of Zobah

7 So they hired thirty and two thousand chariots, and the king of Maachah and his people, who came and pitched before Medeba And the children of Ammon gathered themselves together from their cities, and came to battle

Thirty and two thousand chariots is a thirty-two thousand men fighting from or with chariots, as that word is elsewhere used, of which see my notes on 1 Sam xii 5 And this interpretation seems the more probable by comparing this place with 2 Sam x 6, where this army is said to consist of twenty thousand footmen, and twelve thousand men of Ish tob, which make up these thirty-two thousand men, who fought partly from chariots, and partly on foot with chariots, or attending upon the chariots, as the ancient manner of fighting was And here, ver 6 this army is made up of chariots and horsemen, where except the chariots be understood of footmen there were no footmen in the army which is unusual and incredible

8 And when David heard of it, he sent Joab, and all the host of the mighty men

9 And the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in array before the gate of the city and the kings that were come were by themselves in the field

10 Now when Joab saw that the battle was set against him before and behind, he chose out of all the choice of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians

11 And the rest of the people he delivered unto the hand of Abishai his brother, and they set themselves in array against the children of Ammon

12 And he said If the Syrians be too strong for me then thou shalt help me but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will help thee

13 Be of good courage, and let us behave ourselves valiantly for our people, and for the cities of our God and let the Lord do that which is good in his sight

14 So Joab and the people that were with him drew nigh before the Syrians unto the battle, and they fled before him

15 And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, they likewise fled before Abishai his brother, and entered into the city Then Joab came to Jerusalem

16 ¶ And when the Syrians saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they sent messengers, and drew forth the Syrians that were beyond the Euphrates and Shophach the captain of the host of Hadarezer went before them

17 And it was told David, and he gathered all Israel and passed over Jordan, and came upon them, and set the battle in array against them So when David had put the battle in array against the Syrians, they fought with him

18 And the Syrians fled before Israel, and David slew of the Syrians seven thousand men which fought in chariots, and forty thousand footmen, and killed Shophach the captain of the host

How this agrees with 2 Sam 8:18 see in the notes on that place

19 And when the servants of Hadarezer saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they made peace with David, and became his servants neither would the Syrians help the children of Ammon any more

CHAP XX

David's army is urged, spoiled, and tortured by David, 1-3
Three giants slain 4-8

AND it came to pass, that after the year was expired, at the time that kings go out to battle, Joab led forth the power of the army, and wasted the country of the children of Ammon, and came and besieged Rabbah But David tarried at

2 Sam 11:2

of the year

Jerusalem. And <sup>2</sup>Joab sinote Rabbah, and destroyed it.

<sup>1</sup> Of this first verse see guy notes on 2 Sam. xi. 1. and of ver. 2, 3, on 2 Sam. xii. 30, 31, and of the rest of this chapter, on 2 Sam. xxi. 10, &c., where also an account is given of the becoming differences between this and that relation.

<sup>2</sup> And David took the crown of their king from off his head, and found it to weigh a talent of gold, and there were precious stones in it, and it was set upon David's head, and he brought also exceeding much spoil out of the city.

<sup>3</sup> And he brought out the people that were in it, and cut them with saws, and with harrows of iron, and with axes. Even so dealt David with all the cities of the children of Ammon. And David and all the people returned to Jerusalem.

<sup>4</sup> ¶ And it came to pass after this, that there arose war at Gath with the Philistines, at which time Sippai the Hushathite slew of the children of the giant, and they were subdued.

<sup>5</sup> And there was war again with the Philistines, and Elhanan the son of Jaar slew Lahmi the brother of Goliath the Gittite, whose spear staff was like a weaver's beam.

<sup>6</sup> And yet again there was war at Gath, where was a man of great stature, whose fingers and toes were four and twenty, six on each hand, and six on each foot, and he also was the son of the giant.

<sup>7</sup> But when he defied Israel, Jonathan the son of Shimea David's brother slew him.

<sup>8</sup> These were born unto the giant in Gath, and they fell by the hand of David, and by the hand of his servants.

CHAP. XXI

David numbereth the people, 1-6. His repentance of three judgments pronounced, he chooseth the pestilence, and why? 7-13. David, by God's direction, buildeth an altar, and sacrificeth. The plague is stayed, 14-30.

AND <sup>1</sup>Satan stood up against Israel, and provoked David to number Israel.

<sup>2</sup> Satan stood up Heb. stood, to wit, before the Lord and his tribunal to accuse David and Israel, and to beg God's permission to tempt David to number the people. Standing is the accusatory posture before men's tribunals, and consequently the Holy Scripture (which useth to speak of God, and of the things of God, after the manner of men) to bring them down to an equitable view, where represents Satan in this posture as 1 Kings xxi. 21. Zech. iii. 1. And so this agrees with 2 Sam. xxi. 1. where the Lord is said to move David. And to give Satan commission or permission to move him, for otherwise God tempteth no man. James i. 13. But of this, and of the whole chapter, and of the variations and seeming contradictions between this narrative and that in Samuel see my notes on 2 Sam. xxi.

<sup>3</sup> And David said to Joab and to the rulers of the people, Go, number Israel from Beer-sheba even to Dan, and bring the number of them to me, that I may know it.

people an hundred times so many more as they be, but, my lord the king, are they not all my lord's servants? why then doth my lord require this thing? why will he be a cause of trespass to Israel?

Or, why will he be, or why should this be, a trespass, or a cause of trespass, or an occasion of punishment, (for Hebrew words signifying sin are oft used to note the punishment of sin,) or a desolation, or a cause of desolation or destruction, (for the verb whence this noun proceeds is oft used in that sense,) to or against Israel? Why wilt thou provoke God by this sin to punish Israel? Thus he speaks, because God commonly punisheth the people for the sins of their rulers, because they are for the most part guilty of their sins in one kind or other, or at least God takes this occasion to punish people for all their sins.

<sup>5</sup> Nevertheless the king's word prevailed against Joab. Wherefore Joab departed, and went throughout all Israel, and came to Jerusalem.

<sup>6</sup> ¶ And Joab gave the sum of the number of the people unto David. And all they of Israel were a thousand thousand and an hundred thousand men that drew sword, and Judah was four hundred threescore and ten thousand men that drew sword.

<sup>7</sup> But Levi and Benjamin counted he not among them for the king's word was abominable to Joab.

Levi and Benjamin counted he not among them, partly for the following reason, and principally by God's special and gracious providence to these two tribes. To Levi because they were devoted to his service, and to Benjamin, because they were the best of all the tribes, having been almost extinct Judge. xi. and because God had seen that they would be faithful to the law. David in the division of the tribes, and therefore he would not have them diminished. And Joab presumed to have these two tribes unnumbered, because he had special pretence for it. In Levi, because they were no warriors, and Benjamin, because they were only to those that drew no sword appears from ver. 5. and for Benjamin, because they were so small a tribe, and bordering upon Jerusalem then chief city, might easily be numbered afterward.

<sup>8</sup> ¶ And God was displeased with this thing, therefore he smote Israel.

God was displeased with this thing, because, this was done without any colour of necessity, and out of mere curiosity and ostentation, and carnal confidence, as David's own conscience told him, which therefore moved him as it is said 2 Sam. xxiv. 10. Therefore he smote Israel, which is particularly related in the following verses.

<sup>9</sup> And David said unto God, I have sinned greatly, because I have done this thing, but now, I beseech thee, do away the iniquity of thy servant, for I have done very foolishly.

<sup>10</sup> ¶ And the Lord spake unto Gad, David's seer, saying, <sup>11</sup> Go and tell David, saying, Thus saith the Lord, I offer thee three things, choose thee one of them, that I may do it unto thee.

<sup>12</sup> So Gad came to David, and said unto him, Thus saith the Lord, Choose thee.

<sup>13</sup> Either three years' famine, or three months to be destroyed before thy foes, while that the sword of thine enemies overtaketh thee, or else three days the sword of the Lord, even the pestilence, in the land, and the angel of the LORD destroying throughout all the coasts of Israel. Now therefore advise thyself what word I shall bring again to him that sent me

13 And David said unto Gad, I am in a great strait let me fall now into the hand of the LORD, for very great are his mercies but let me not fall into the hand of man

14 ¶ So the LORD sent pestilence upon Israel and there fell of Israel seventy thousand men

15 And God sent an angel unto Jerusalem to destroy it and as he was destroying, the LORD beheld, and he repented him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed, It is enough, stay now thine hand And the angel of the LORD stood by the threshingfloor of Ornan the Jebusite

16 And David lifted up his eyes, and saw the angel of the LORD stand between the earth and the heaven, having a drawn sword in his hand stretched out over Jerusalem Then David and the elders of Israel, who were clothed in sackcloth, fell upon their faces

In sackcloth, i. e. in mourning garments humbling themselves before God for their sins and deprecating his wrath against the people

17 And David said unto God, Is it not I that commanded the people to be numbered? even I it is that have sinned and done evil indeed, but as for these sheep, what have they done? let thine hand, I pray thee, O LORD my God, be on me, and on my father's house, but not on thy people, that they should be plagued

18 ¶ Then the angel of the LORD commanded Gad to say to David, that David should go up, and set up an altar unto the LORD in the threshingfloor of Ornan the Jebusite

19 And David went up at the saying of Gad, which he spake in the name of the LORD

20 ¶ And Ornan turned back, and saw the angel, and his four sons with him hid themselves Now Ornan was threshing wheat

Or, And Ornan turned back, (i. e. turned his face from the angel) for, or when, (for the Hebrew verb is frequently used both those ways,) he saw the angel and (so did) his four sons with him hiding themselves, partly because of the glory and majesty in which the angel appeared, which men's weak and sinful natures are not able to bear, and partly from the fear of God's vengeance which was at that time riding circuit in the land, and now seemed to be coming to their family

21 And as David came to Ornan, Ornan looked and saw David, and went out of the threshingfloor, and bowed himself to David with his face to the ground

22 Then David said to Ornan, † Grant me the place of this threshingfloor, that I may build an altar there unto the LORD thou shalt grant it me for the full price that the plague may be stayed from the people

23 And Ornan said unto David, Take it to thee, and let my lord the king do that which is good in his eyes lo, I give thee the oxen also for burnt offerings, and the threshing instruments for wood, and the wheat for the meat offering, I give it all

24 And king David said to Ornan, Nay, but I will verily buy it for the full price for I will not take that which is thine for the LORD, nor offer burnt offerings without cost

25 So David gave to Ornan for the place six hundred shekels of gold by weight.

26 And David built there an altar unto the LORD, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings, and called upon the LORD and he answered him from heaven by fire upon the altar of burnt offering

From heaven by fire Heb. by fire sent from heaven, which was the sign of God's acceptance See Lev. ix. 24; 1 Kings xviii. 21, 38, 2 Chron. vii. 1

27 And the LORD commanded the angel, and he put up his sword again into the sheath thereof

28 ¶ At that time when David saw that the LORD had answered him in the threshingfloor of Ornan the Jebusite then he sacrificed there

When he perceived that his sacrifice there offered was acceptable to God he proceeded to offer more sacrifices in that place and did not go to Gibeon, as otherwise he should have done

29 ¶ For the tabernacle of the LORD, which Moses made in the wilderness, and the altar of the burnt offering, were at that season in the high place at Gibeon

30 But David could not go before it to inquire of God for he was afraid because of the sword of the angel of the LORD

David could not inquire of God before the tabernacle where the altar stood To inquire of God, Heb. to see God i. e. humbly to beg his favour by prayer and sacrifice Because of the sword of the angel of the LORD i. e. when he saw the angel stand with his drawn sword over him (as is related above ver. 15, 16, he durst not go away thence to Gibeon, lest the angel in the mean time should destroy Jerusalem, for the prevention whereof he thought it most proper to continue to worship God in this place which he had consecrated by his special presence) & gracious acceptance

CHAP. XXII

David prepared for the building of the temple 1-5 instructed Solomon in God's promises and his duty, 6-16 He chargeth the princes to assist his son, 17-19

THEN David said, This is the house of the LORD God, and this is the altar of the burnt offering for Israel

Then David said, partly by his observation of this gracious and glorious appearance of God, and his command to erect an altar and his acceptance of a sacrifice offered in this place, and partly by the instinct and direction of God's Spirit by which, as he is said to have had the pattern of the house, porch, altar &c. 1 Chron. xxviii. 11, 12, 19; so doubtless he was also instructed as to the place where the house should be built This is the house of the LORD God, this is the place appointed by God for the building of his temple and altar

2 And David commanded to gather together the strangers that were in the land of Israel, and he set magons to hew wrought stones to build the house of God

The strangers that were in the land of Israel, the same persons whom Solomon afterwards employed in the same work, of which see I Kings v. 15 compared with I Kings ix. 20-21. He set masons to hew wrought stones, wherein he could not do much but prevented by death, but Solomon carried on and perfected what David had begun.

3 And David prepared iron in abundance for the nails for the doors of the gates, and for the joinings, and brays in abundance without weight.

For the joinings to be used together with melted lead, for the joining of those great square stones together.

4 Also cedar trees in abundance for the Zalmonians and they of Tyre brought much cedar wood to David.

5 And David said, 'Solomon my son is young and tender, and the house that is to be build for the Lord must be exceeding magnificent, of fame and of glory throughout all countries. I will therefore now make preparation for it. So David prepared abundantly before his death.

David said within himself or in his own thoughts Solomon is young and tender, and therefore through youth full vanity and folly and unsteadiness may not use that care and consideration and diligence in making such provisions as this great work requires. Of Solomon's age, see I Kings i. 7.

6 ¶ Then he called for Solomon his son, and charged him to build an house for the Lord God of Israel.

7 And David said to Solomon, My son, is for me, 'it was in my mind to build an house unto the name of the Lord my God.

8 But the word of the Lord came to me, saying, 'Thou hast shed blood abundantly, and hast made great wars: thou shalt not build an house unto my name, because thou hast shed much blood upon the earth in my sight.

Because thou hast shed much blood upon the earth, not that wars either now or then were simply unlawful or that David sinned in shedding the blood of war, for it is manifest that David's wars were undertaken by God's command or with his leave and were attended with his blessing, but partly because David's military employments did for a good while fill his head and hand, and gave him no leisure for temple work, and principally for mystical signification to teach us that the church (whereof the temple was a most illustrious type) should be built by Christ the Prince of peace (Isa. ix. 6) and that it should be gathered and built up not by might or force, or by force of arms but by God's Spirit (Zech. iv. 6) and by the preaching the gospel of peace. In my sight, which I have taken particular notice of. And this expression may possibly be added in reference to Uriah and the rest of the Israelites who were slain at the siege of Hebron by David's contrivance, which perforce tore David and in his eye Paul II. where David confessing this sin useth this very expression, I have done this evil in thy sight.

9 'Behold, a son shall be born to thee who shall be a man of rest, and I will give him rest from all his enemies round about: for his name shall be Solomon, and I will give peace and quietness unto Israel in his days.

10 'He shall build an house for my name, and he shall be my son, and I will be his father, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom over Israel for ever.

Of this see my notes on 2 Sam. vi. 1.

11 Now, my son, 'the Lord be with thee, and prosper thou, and build the house of the Lord thy God, as he hath said of thee.

Prosper thou, go on prosperously in carrying on this work, or the Lord gave thee that rest and prosperity which is necessary for it.

12 Only the Lord give thee wisdom and understanding, and give thee charge concerning Israel, that thou mayest keep the law of the Lord thy God.

Give thee charge concerning Israel, i. e. give thee instructions or direction rightly to manage and rule his people Israel. Or, and set thee over Israel, as the Syriac renders it, whom the Arabic follows. Or, when (as the Hebrew van is oft used) he shall set thee over Israel, i. e. when thou shalt be king, for then Solomon would need this wisdom, for which therefore he prayeth, I Kings i. 9.

13 'Then shalt thou prosper, if thou takest heed to fulfil the statutes and judgments which the Lord charged Moses with concerning Israel: be strong, and of good courage, dread not, nor be dismayed.

14 Now, behold, in my trouble I have prepared for the house of the Lord an hundred thousand talents of gold, and a thousand thousand talents of silver, and of brass and iron without weight, for it is in abundance: timber also and stone have I prepared, and thou mayest add thereto.

In my trouble, this he allegeth is a reason why he could do no more because of the many troubles and wars both foreign and civil whereby much of his treasures was exhausted. In hundred thousand talents of gold. A talent of gold in the first constitution was three thousand shekels, as may be gathered from Exod. xxxviii. 21, 26, and so this amounts to a very vast sum, yet not impossible for David to get considering how many and great conquests he made, and what vast spoils and presents he got, and that he could be assisted by all just and honourable ways to get as much as he could not out of covetousness or for his own ends, but merely out of zeal for God's house. And whereas some object that this quantity of gold and silver was sufficient though the whole fabric of the temple had consisted of massy gold and silver, it is to be considered that all this treasure was not spent upon the materials of the temple but a very great part of it upon the workmen, which were much two hundred thousand whereof a great number were officers, which being employed for so long time together, would exhaust a considerable part of it, and what was not employed in the building of the temple, was laid up in the sacred treasures for future occasions, there being mention of the great treasures left by David, even in other authors. But some learned men make the talents far less than those in Moses's time, and they conceive that is there were two sorts of shekels both of gold and silver the common and the sacred shekel, whereof the latter is commonly thought to be double to the former so also there were talents of divers kinds and values. For the Hebrew word talhar, which is rendered a talent properly signifies only a mass, or a piece, as it is used Exod. xxix. 23, I Sam. ii. 36, Zech. i. 7. So it may indifferently denote either a greater or a lesser piece. And this is certain, and observed by two ancient and most learned writers, Varro and Pollux, and by others that a talent among the Greeks and Romans sometimes notes but a small quantity, and that a talent of gold contains only six diamas. And Homer in his Iliad, among other things of no great value, which are propounded as rewards to the conqueror at a solemn and public exercise, a bond-woman, a horse, and a pot, mentions two talents of gold, which plainly shows that in his time (which was after the building of this temple) talents of gold were very far inferior in quantity and price to what they had been in former ages. And Josephus a Jew, and therefore the more competent judge of these things, speaking of this very thing, for a hundred thousand talents of gold he mentioned, he puts a hundred thousand; and for a thousand thousand talents of silver, he puts one hundred thousand, either because the talents in Moses's time were of ten times more bulk and price than in David's and Solomon's time, and therefore these talents reduced to them amounted to no greater sum, or because he read so in his copy of the Hebrew Bible. And certainly it is infinitely more tolerable and reasonable to suppose that here is a mistake here in the genuineness of the present copies of the Hebrew Bible, through the error of the scribe (which being only in a numeral and historical passage, might happen without impeachment to the care of God's providence, which hath so miraculously preserved all the most important and substantial parts of Scripture as hath been formerly said) than upon such pretences to deny the truth and Divine original and authority of the Holy Scriptures. Add to this that all the gold then used was not of equal weight and purity, as appears both by the special commendation given to some sorts of gold in divers parts of Scripture, and particularly by the difference observed in this very history between the gold and gold which David gave for this use, whereof one little part being distinctively called pure gold and refined gold 1 Chron xxviii 17, 18, it is sufficiently implied that all the rest of the gold was not refined nor pure, which might greatly diminish the worth of it for in what degree it was impure or alloyed with other things in those times and places we cannot know at this distance, and therefore we cannot make a true estimate what those talents of gold did amount to in our value. A thousand thousand talents of silver just as much in silver as gold for this known and agreed, that the proportion of gold to silver is ten to one.

15 Moreover there are workmen with thee in abundance, hewers and workers of stone and timber and all manner of cunning men for every manner of work.

16 Of the gold, the silver and the brass, and the iron, there is no number. Arise therefore, and be doing, and the Lord be with thee.

Be doing, to wit, when thou shalt come to the throne in thy stead.

17 ¶ David also commanded all the princes of Israel to help Solomon his son, saying,

18 Is not the Lord your God with you? and hath he not given you rest on every side? for he hath given the inhabitants of the land into mine hand, and the land is subdued before the Lord, and before his people.

Father, I. It is brought under the command of God and of you his people, all the enemies of God and of Israel in it or near it, being now perfectly subdued. Or 2. It is really subdued, where of both God and your own eyes are witnesses.

19 Now set your heart and your soul to seek the Lord your God, arise therefore, and build ye the sanctuary of the Lord God, to bring the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and the holy vessels of God, into the house that is to be built to the name of the Lord.

CHAP XXIII

David maketh Solomon king. 1 The number and distribution of the Levites, according to their families, 2-23. Their office, 24-32.

1015 SO when David was old and full of days, he made Solomon his son king over Israel.

Not that he did resign the kingdom to him, but that he declared his mind concerning his succession into the throne after his death. As David himself is called king, 1 Sam xvi 1, because he was appointed and anointed to be king after Saul's death, though till then he was only a subject.

2 ¶ And he gathered together all the princes of Israel, with the priests and the Levites.

Partly to declare God's mind and his own will, that Solomon should be his successor, and so to cut off the claims and pretences which others of his sons might make to the crown, and partly to acquaint them with those directions which he had received from God by the Spirit as appears from chap xxviii 11 &c. concerning the establishment of a new order and method in the ministration of the priests and Levites in the temple.

3 Now the Levites were numbered from the age of thirty years and upward and their number by their polls, man by man, was thirty and eight thousand.

From the age of thirty years and upward, not only till fifty as it was appointed Numb iv 2, 3 but even till their death, for that was but a temporary law grounded upon a special reason because the Levites were employed in carrying the tabernacle and sacred vessels from place to place and therefore God would have them freed from those burdens when they came to feel the infirmities of age, which reason wholly ceasing upon the building of the temple and their work being far easier than it had been, and their service being more a privilege than a burden, their time of service is justly and fitly prolonged.

4 Of which, twenty and four thousand were set forward the work of the house of the Lord, and six thousand were officers and judges.

To set forward the work of the house of the Lord, to take care that all the work of the temple about sacrifices and other part of means of God's service should be punctually and diligently performed either by the Levites or others which they were not to do all at once but by courses, a thousand at a time as we shall shortly see. Officers and judges, whose work it seems to have been to judge of and determine all difficult causes or difficulties which might arise either among the inferior priests or among the people which they were to govern in all their concerns only by the laws of Moses. It was fit and necessary that the priests and Levites should be consulted and concerned in their matters.

5 Moreover four thousand were porters with the instruments which I made, said David, to praise thereon.

Porters, whose office was to take the charge of all the gates of the temple and its courts, that no forbidden or unclean person might enter there, and of the courts themselves, and of several chambers or buildings belonging to the temple and the service thereof. These also were to do their work by turns. Four thousand praised the Lord with instruments, whereof two hundred and eighty eight were persons of greater skill than their brethren, and did instruct them and had some authority over them.

6 And David divided them into courses among the sons of Levi, namely, Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

David divided them into courses, which he did not by his own invention but as a man of God and by the command of God, and with the advice and concurrence of Gad and Nathan the prophets, as is manifest from 2 Chron viii 14; xxix 25.

7 ¶ Of the Gershonites were, Leadan, and Shimei.

8 The sons of Leadan, the chief, was Jebiel, and Zetham, and Joel, three.

The sons of Leadan, I. e. his posterity, and so in the following verses, for these could not be their immediate sons.

9 The sons of Shimei, Shelomith, and Haziel, and Haran, three. These were the chief of the fathers of Laadan.

10 And the sons of Shimei were, Jaish, Ithiah, Uzziah, and Jeriah, and Beriah. These four were the sons of Shimei.

The sons of Shimei, not that Shimei named ver 9, but another, and possibly the son or grandson of that Shimei.

11 And Ithiah was the chief, and Zizah the second, but Jeriah and Beriah had not many sons, therefore they were in one reckoning, according to their father's house.

They were reckoned together as one family, and were not called by the name of their two immediate parents, but by the name of their grandfather Shimei.

12 ¶ The sons of Kohath, Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel, four.

13 The sons of Amram, Aaron and Moses, and Aaron was separated, that he should sanctify the most holy things, and his sons for ever, to burn incense before the Lord, to minister unto him, and to bless in his name for ever.

That he should sanctify the most holy things, not positively, for so he could not sanctify them, they being already sanctified by God in the highest degree, but negatively, that he might keep them from pollution, for the most holy things were polluted when they were touched by any other persons. He and his sons, not only his eldest sons, the high priests successively, but all his posterity, or all the priests, for the works here following were not peculiar to the high priest, but common to all the priests who might all turn thence, 2 Chron xxv 11. Luke i 9, and to minister in the temple, and to bless the people in God's name, Numb vi 23. Dent x 8.

14 Now concerning Moses the man of God, his sons were named of the tribe of Levi.

They were accounted only as common Levites and were not priests, which is mentioned partly to secure the priesthood within the bounds to which God had confined it, lest they should presume to invade it upon a confidence in the nobleness of their extraction, and partly for the honour of Moses, and the demonstration of his eminent piety and self-denial who willingly left the government to Joshua and the priesthood to Aaron, and was content to have his posterity reduced to a very private and mean condition.

15 The sons of Moses were, Gershom, and Eliezer.

16 Of the sons of Gershom, ¶ Shebuel was the chief.

17 And the sons of Eliezer were, Rehabiah the chief. And Eliezer had none other sons, but the sons of Rehabiah were very many.

The sons of Eliezer for the son, the plural number for the singular is Gen xvi 23. 1 Chron ii 8, 31 and oft elsewhere. Rehabiah the chief, Heb the first born. He is so called, not because others were born after him, but because none were born before him. See on Matt i 25.

18 Of the sons of Izhar, ¶ Shelomith the chief.

19 Of the sons of Hebron, Jeriah the first, Amariah the second, Jahaziel the third, and Jekameam the fourth.

20 Of the sons of Uzziel, Micah the first, and Jesiah the second.

21 ¶ The sons of Merari, Mahli, and Mushi. The sons of Mahli, Eleazar, and Kish.

22 And Eleazar died, and had no sons, but daughters, and their brethren the sons of Kish took them.

23 The sons of Mushi, Mahli, and Eder, and Jeremoth, three.

24 ¶ These were the sons of Levi after the house of their fathers; even the chief of the fathers, as they were counted by number of names by their polls, that did the work for the service of the house of the Lord, from the age of twenty years and upward.

As the Levites were anciently numbered from two several times, from the twenty fifth year of their age and from the thirtieth Numb iv 3, vii 24, in like manner and for the same reasons they are here numbered both from their twentieth year, as here, when they were more solemnly prepared for and instructed, and by degrees exercised, in some parts of their work, and from their thirtieth year above ver 3, when they were admitted to the full and complete exercise of all the parts and works of their office. And the reason why they were now sooner admitted to service than they had been formerly by the constitution of Moses is given in the next verses, because now their work was more easy, they being wholly discharged from that burdensome work of carrying the tabernacle and its utensils, which was too heavy for young and tender shoulders. To which may be added that the number of the Israelites was greatly increased, and consequently the services which were to be performed by the Levites on their behalf were multiplied, and the work of the temple was much greater than that of the tabernacle, and therefore more of the Levites were to be employed, and consequently they were to be sooner taken into service.

25 For David said, The Lord God of Israel hath given rest unto his people, that they may dwell in Jerusalem for ever.

26 And also unto the Levites, they shall no more carry the tabernacle, nor any vessel of it for the service thereof.

Also unto the Levites, or rather, as concerning the Levites of whom he is here spoken.

27 For by the last words of David the Levites were numbered from twenty years old and above.

By the last words of David, by his last order and constitution made by God's direction and by the Spirit, as hath been once and again noted and proved before. This is here added, to signify that this act of his was thus settled by David not in his younger years, when it might have been thought to be the effect of youthful heat, and confidence, and presumption and rashness, but when he was come to the greatest maturity, when he was old and near his death, and going to give up his account to his Lord and Maker of all his actions, and particularly of the alterations which he made in the service of God, which he declared was done by the Spirit of God. These were in a manner his dying words, which usually make the deepest impressions.

28 Because their office was to wait on the sons of Aaron for the service of the house of the Lord, in the courts, and in the chambers, and in the purifying of all holy things, and the work of the service of the house of God.

All holy things, i.e. holy places, and garments, and vessels, and sacrifices, which were to be washed and cleansed from any filthiness which possibly might cleave to them.

29 Both for the shewbread, and for the fine flour for meat offering, and for the unleavened cakes, and for that which is baked in the pan, and for that which is fried, and for all manner of measure and size.

This is to be understood either, 1 Particularly of the measure or quantity of fine flour, and wine, and oil which was fixed by God's law Or 2 Generally of all measures, used either in sacred or civil things, the public standards whereof were kept in the sanctuary or temple, of which see on Exod xxx 13, and therefore the care of keeping them inviolable, and producing them upon occasion, must needs belong to the priests, and under them to the Levites, who were to examine other measures and all things by them, as oft as occasion required, that so the priests might be at more leisure for their higher and greater employments

30 And to stand every morning to thank and praise the Lord, and likewise at even,

The two solemn times of offering sacrifices which work was attended with public prayer and thanksgiving

31 And to offer all burnt sacrifices unto the Lord in the sabbaths, in the new moons, and on the set feasts, by number, according to the order commanded unto them, continually before the Lord

Commanded unto them, i.e. unto those persons, the Levites, of whom he speaks Or concerning them, i.e. about those things

32 And that they should keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the holy place, and the charge of the sons of Aaron their brethren, in the service of the house of the Lord

The charge of the sons of Aaron, i.e. what the priests should commit to their charge, or command them to do

CHAP XXIV

The priests are divided by lot into twenty four orders 1 19 Ministers allotted them out of the Levites, out of the tribe of the Kohathites and Merarites, 20 31

NOW these are the divisions of the sons of Aaron The sons of Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu Eleazar, and Ithamar

The divisions, i.e. the several families into which that family was divided (2 d str outed)

2 But Nadab and Abihu died before their father, and had no children therefore Eleazar and Ithamar executed the priest's office

i.e. Were the only persons to whom a id to who e families the execution of that office was committed

3 And David distributed them, both Zadok of the sons of Eleazar, and Ahimelech of the sons of Ithamar, according to their offices in their service

According to their offices, or courses or prefectures, i.e. allotting to each of them several times wherein they in their should by turns have the government of holy ministrations in the temple service

4 And there were more chief men found of the sons of Eleazar than of the sons of Ithamar, and thus were they divided Among the sons of Eleazar there were sixteen chief men of the house of their fathers, and eight among the sons of Ithamar according to the house of their fathers

5 Thus were they divided by lot, one sort with another; for the governors of the sanctuary, and governors of the house of God were of the sons of Eleazar, and of the sons of Ithamar

Thus were they divided by lot, partly to prevent that envy or emulation which otherwise might arise among them, and partly that all men's minds and consciences might be fully satisfied in the order now established by this Divine way of dividing the governors of the house of God, but that is no business of the sanctuary, and so it may seem to make this division improper and irregular, the several members of it being altogether the same Or rather, of the things of God, i.e. of all persons ministering in the sanctuary, and of all holy ministrations done in it, and of all other matters of the Lord as they are called by way of distinction from the king's matters 2 Chron xix 11

6 And Shemaiah the son of Nathan the scribe, one of the Levites, wrote them before the king, and the princes, and Zadok the priest, and Ahimelech the son of Abiathar, and before the chief of the fathers of the priests and Levites one of principal household being taken for Eleazar, and one taken for Ithamar

On the chief (which word is easily supplied out of the context) of one house of the fathers was taken (to wit, by lot) for Eleazar one out of his family, and that which was taken after it was taken for Ithamar, i.e. out of his family The meaning is, that the first lot fell to Eleazar and the second to Ithamar and the third to Eleazar and the fourth to Ithamar, and so successively until all the families of Ithamar had received their lots, and afterwards all the lots came forth to the rest of Eleazar's families which were double in number to those of Ithamar it was said, ver 1

7 Now the first lot came forth to Jehonadab, the second to Jedaiiah,

The first lot came forth to wit out of the vessel in which all the lot were promiscuously put together and out of which they were severally taken

8 The third to Huram, the fourth to Seorim,

9 The fifth to Madhyah, the sixth to Mijamin,

10 The seventh to Hakkoz, the eighth to Abijah

11 The ninth to Jeshuah, the tenth to Shecaniah,

12 The eleventh to Phushib, the twelfth to Jikim

13 The thirteenth to Hupphah the fourteenth to Jeshubab,

14 The fifteenth to Bilgah, the sixteenth to Immer

15 The seventeenth to Hezin, the eighteenth to Aphses,

16 The nineteenth to Pethiah, the twentieth to Jehozekel,

17 The one and twentieth to Jachin, the two and twentieth to Gamul,

18 The three and twentieth to Delaiah, the four and twentieth to Manziah

19 These were the orderings of the men in their service to come into the house of the Lord, according to their manner, under Aaron their father, as the Lord God of Israel had commanded him

These were the orderings of them in their service in their order and method they were to come to perform the offices of the temple To come into the house of the Lord, according to their manner, i.e. to come into the temple every sabbath day and to continue there all the week long until the next sabbath when they were relieved by others as the manner was see 2 Kings xi 5, 1 Chron ix 25 Under Aaron then father i.e. under the inspection and direction of the high priest, whom he calls Aaron because he represented his person and executed his office and also came out of his loins, and their father, because of the authority which by God's appointment he had over them, and that love reverence, and obedience which they owed to him

20 And the rest of the sons of Levi were these Of the sons of Aaron; Shubael of the sons of Shubael, Jehoiada of the sons of Jehoiada

The rest of the sons of Levi, either such as were only Levites and not priests, or rather such as were not named or numbered before in this or the former chapter. Jehoshaphat, who being, as it seems, in eminent person or having a very numerous family, was not reckoned with or under his father's family, but was accounted as a distinct head of another family.

1 Ch. 23 17 21 Concerning Rehobiah of the sons of Rehobiah, the first was Issiah

Rehobiah the son of Ithzer, chap xxiii 17 The first was Issiah, by birth or place

22 Of the Izharites, Shelomoth of the sons of Shelomoth, Jahath
Shelomoth called also Shelomoth, chap xxiii 18

23 And the sons of Hebron Teriah the first, Amariah the second, Jahaziel the third, Jekameam the fourth

The first, which word is fully supplied both out of the rest of this verse, the second, third and fourth having a manifest reference to the first and out of 1 Chron xxiii 19, xxvi 31, where it is expressed

24 Of the sons of Uzziel, Michah of the sons of Michah, Shamir

25 The brother of Michah was Issiah of the sons of Issiah, Zechariah

26 The sons of Merari were Mahli and Mushi the sons of Jaaziah Beno Jaaziah the son either of Mahli, or rather, of Mushi last named, for Mahli's posterity comes ver 28

27 The sons of Merari by Jaaziah, Beno, and Shoham and Zaccur, and Ibr

Beno, whose name is here repeated with his brethren because he was the first born and head of the rest who were all reckoned with and under his family as if they had been branches of it

28 Of Mahli came Eleazar, who had no sons

29 Concerning Kish the son of Kish was Jerahmeel

Kish, another of Mada's sons, as appears from 1 Chron xxiii 21

30 The sons also of Mushi, Mahli, and Eder, and Jeremoth These were the sons of the Levites after the house of their fathers

31 These likewise cast lots over against their brethren the sons of Aaron in the presence of David the king, and Zadok and Ahimelech, and the chief of the fathers of the priests and Levites, even the principal fathers over against their younger brethren

Over against their brethren the sons of Aaron &c in answer to the number and order to those of the priests so as there should be a equal course of the Levites for each course of the priests. This is expressed concerning the singers chap xxx and the like is implied concerning the porters, chap xxxi and is here sufficiently intimated concerning those Levites who were employed in other sacred ministrations. In a natural fathers over against the younger brethren the sons of the elder and younger brethren were promiscuously put in the lot and the order was settled as the lot came forth without any regard to the age, or dignity, or number of the persons or families the youngest family having the preference if they had the first lot, &c

CHAP XXX

The number and offices of the singers out of the sons of Asaph Heman, and Jeduthun, &c Their division by lot into twenty four orders 4-31

MOREOVER David and the captains of the host separated to the service of the sons of Asaph, and of Heman, and of Jeduthun, who should prophesy with harps, with psalteries, and with cymbals and the number of the workmen according to their service was

The captains of the host, both of the civil and sacred host to wit all the princes of Israel, with the priests and the Levites, whom David gathered together chap xxiii 2, for this very end, that in their presence, and with their approbation and consent all these things might be established who were here fully called the captains of the host, for the princes were under David, the chief captains or commanders of the militia or trained bands of the kingdom and as the Levites are called a host, and the Lord's host, Numb xv 3 and elsewhere, because of their number and order in holy ministrations, so these priests and Levites were the captains and governors of the rest. Separated, i.e. distributed them into their several ranks and orders, which though chiefly done by David as a prophet, and by Divine direction, as hath been oft observed, yet is here imputed in part to the captains of the host because it was done with their concurrence and approbation. In the service of the sons of Asaph &c i.e. to the service of God under the conduct and command of these persons. Who should prophesy i.e. praise God by singing the Psalms of David, (of which see on chap xxi 7) and other sacred songs made by themselves who were prophets in some sort or by other prophets or holy men of God. Or this action of theirs is called prophesying because it had been formerly performed by the prophets and the sons of the prophets, of which see 1 Sam x 5 xix 20, 2 Kings iii 15, 1 Chron xv 19. The number of the workmen, of the persons employed in this sacred work

2 Of the sons of Asaph Zaccur, and Joseph, and Nethanai, and Asaph, the sons of Asaph under the hands of Asaph, which prophesied according to the order of the king

Under the hands of Asaph, i.e. under his direct and direction. According to the order of the king, in such manner and order as David appointed

3 Of Jeduthun the sons of Jeduthun, Gedubah, and Zerai, and Jeshaiah, Hashabiah, and Mattithiah six, under the hands of their father Jeduthun who prophesied with a harp, to give thanks and to praise the Lord

The sons of Jeduthun, or, his sons, (the construct form being used before the absolute of which the rene examples in Scripture.) Jeduthun called by his father's name, rather wise they are not so unless either Jeduthun then either be included in that number or Shimei mentioned ver 17 be one of them, as many learned men think. See the like 1 Chron xxv 23

4 Of Heman the sons of Heman, Bukkiah, Mattaniah, Uzziel, Shebuel, and Jeremoth Hamuth, Hanani, Eliathah, Gidditi, and Romamti-ezer, Joshbekashah, Malluthi, Hothir, and Mahazioth

5 All these were the sons of Heman the king's seer in the words of God, to lift up the horn. And God gave to Heman fourteen sons and three daughters

The king's seer or prophet, which is the same thing 1 Sam ix 9. Either he was a prophet as well as a singer, or he is thus called because he prophesied in the sense designed, ver 1. And he is called the king's seer either because the king took special delight in him, or because he frequently attended upon the king in his palace executing his sacred office there while the rest were constantly employed in the tabernacle. In the words of God, i.e. to sing such Divine songs as were inspired by God to the prophets or holy men of God To lift up the horn, either, 1 Metaphorically, to extol and praise God for exalting the horn (i.e. the power and kingdom) of David, of which phrase see Psal xxi 10, cxviii 17 Or rather 2 Properly to praise God with the sound of a trumpet, (as was usual, as 2 Chron v 12, xiii 12) or some other musical instrument made of horn, which being a martial kind of music, might be most grateful to David's martial spirit, though he was also skilled in other instruments of music, which he used in the house of God, as is expressed in the next verse

6 All these were under the hands of their father for song in the house of the Lord, with cymbals, psalteries, and harps, for the service of the house of God, <sup>6 ver 2</sup> according to the king's order to Asaph, Jeduthun, and Heman

<sup>6 ver 2</sup> Under the hands i.e. under his direction as ver 2 According to the king's order to Asaph Jeduthun, and Heman Heb by the hands of the king and of Asaph Jeduthun, and Heman i.e. according to the king's appointment, and under the conduct of Asaph, Jeduthun, and Heman

7 So the number of them, with their brethren that were instructed in the songs of the Lord, even all that were cunning, was two hundred fourscore and eight

All that were cunning, who were so skilful that they were able to teach others Two hundred fourscore and eight, which together with their scholars make up the four thousand mentioned chap xxiii 5

8 ¶ And they cast lots, ward against ward, as well the small as the great, the teacher as the scholar

<sup>Chap 13</sup> Ward against ward i.e. a ward or rank, on course of Levites answerable to one of the priests upon whom the Levites were to wait in their holy ministrations chap xxiii 24

As well the small as the great the teacher as the scholar without any respect to their different ages or abilities

9 Now the first lot came forth for Asaph to Joseph the second to Gedaliah, who with his brethren and sons were twelve

10 Asaph to Joseph i.e. for the family of Asaph of which Joseph was Here that clause he his sons and his brethren were twelve, is to be understood as it is expressed in all the following verses otherwise they do not make up that number of two hundred and eighty eight mentioned ver 7 To Gedaliah who Heb he which word being here expressed is rightly understood and supplied in the rest

10 The third to Zaccur, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

11 The fourth to Izri, he, his sons and his brethren were twelve

12 The fifth to Nethaniah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

13 The sixth to Bukkiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

14 The seventh to Jasharelah, he, his sons and his brethren, were twelve

15 The eighth to Jeshaiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

16 The ninth to Mattaniah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

17 The tenth to Shimei, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

18 The eleventh to Azareel, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

19 The twelfth to Hashabiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

20 The thirteenth to Shubael, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

21 The fourteenth to Mattithiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

22 The fifteenth to Jeremoth, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

23 The sixteenth to Hananiah, he, his sons and his brethren, were twelve

24 The seventeenth to Joshbekashah, he, his sons, and his brethren were twelve

25 The eighteenth to Hanani, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

26 The nineteenth to Mallothi, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

27 The twentieth to Flathah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve

28 The one and twentieth to Hothur, he, his sons and his brethren, were twelve

29 The two and twentieth to Giddalti, he, his sons and his brethren, were twelve

30 The three and twentieth to Mahazioth, he, his sons and his brethren, were twelve

31 The four and twentieth to Rommatiser, he, his sons and his brethren, were twelve

CHAP XXVI

The division of the porters 1-12 The gates as girded by lot 13-19 The Levites have charge of the treasures of the temple 20-28 Officers and judges 29-32

CONCERNING the divisions of the porters Of the Kohites was Meshelah the son of Kore, of the sons of Asaph

Not that Amos Asaph the singer but another Asaph, called also Masaph chap vi 37

2 And the sons of Meshel with were, Zechariah the firstborn, Jediel the second, Zebadiah the third, Jathiel the fourth,

3 Eliam the fifth, Jehohanan the sixth, Elioenai the seventh

4 Moreover the sons of Obadedom were, Shemai the firstborn, Jchozabad the second, Joash the third, and Sacai the fourth, and Nethaniel the fifth,

5 Aniel the sixth, Issachai the seventh, Poulthai the eighth for God blessed him

10 As we with a numerous posterity and other blessings for his respect and affection to the ark See 2 Sam vi 11

6 Also unto Shemai his son were sons born, that ruled throughout the house of their father for they were mighty men of valour

That ruled throughout the house of their father that had the command of their brethren and families, being, as some say, captains of hundreds or of thousands, of which see 1 Sam vi in 20 2 Kings x 9 They were mighty men of valour Shemai is divers times mentioned because their office required both strength and courage for they were to have the doors of the temple, one whereof was so great and weighty that in the second temple it required the help of twenty men to open and shut it as Josephus an eye-witness reports They were also to keep the guard, and to keep out all unclean or forbidden persons who might some way or means attempt to enter into the temple, as Uzziah did and to prevent or suppress the tumults or disorders which might happen in the temple or in its courts and to keep the treasures of the temple ver 20, 24, 24 26 and to be officers and judges over Israel, ver 29, and to manage every matter pertaining to God and the affairs of the king, ver 32

7 The sons of Shemaiah, Othni, and Rephael, and Obad, Elzabad, whose brethren were strong men, Elihu, and Semachiah

8 All these of the sons of Obed-edom they and their sons and their brethren, able men for strength for the service, were threescore and two of Obed-edom

9 And Meshulemiah had sons and brethren, strong men, eighteen

10 Also <sup>a ch. 16, 26.</sup> Hosah, of the children of Merari, had sons, Simri the chief, (for though he was not the firstborn, yet his father made him the chief.)

Taking away the birthright from the first born, either absolutely for some gross miscarriage as Gen. xlix 4, or only in this respect, because he wanted either strength or some other qualification necessary for his office

11 Hilkiah the second, Tebaliah the third, Zechariah the fourth all the sons and brethren of Hosah were thirteen

12 Among these were the divisions of the porters, even among the chief men, having wards one against another, to minister in the house of the Lord

<sup>b ch. 16, 26.</sup> Having wards one against another, Heb. having guards against an unrevocably to their brethren, to wit the other Levites, who were divided into twenty four courses: as the priests also were and so it seems were the porters

13 ¶ And they cast lots, <sup>c ch. 16, 26.</sup> as well the small as the great, according to the house of their fathers for every gate

They cast lots, as well the small as the great determine the times and places of their service not by age or dignity but merely by lot According to the house of their fathers a several lot being allowed for each several house To every gate, but it might be known to whom the care of each gate was more especially committed

14 And the lot eastward fell to Meshulemiah. Then for Zechariah his son, a wise counsellor, they cast lots, and his lot came out northward

<sup>d ch. 16, 26.</sup> A wise counsellor which is noted as an excellent and useful accomplishment for his office in which there was need of wisdom as well as courage, as may appear by the description of their work ver. 20, &c. See the note on ver. 6

15 To Obed-edom southward, and to <sup>e ch. 16, 26.</sup> his sons the house of Asuppim

<sup>f ch. 16, 26.</sup> Asuppim, a place so called, or of gathering, so named either from the assembly of the elders who met there to consult about the affairs of the temple, or from the people who were there gathered together to hear the discourses and debates of the teachers of the law, or because the gifts of the people towards the house and worship of God were kept there. See 2 Kings xxii 4, 2 Chron. xxx 21

16 To Shuppim and Hosah the lot came forth westward, with the gate Shalcheth by the causeway of the going up ward against ward

<sup>g ch. 16, 26.</sup> Shuppim and Hosah for some reason were joined together in the custody of that gate. The gate Shalcheth, a gate of the court so called, as some think, because the angles and fifth of the temple were cast out on that side which was the most convenient gate for that purpose because that was a gate of the great ways to the temple lying on the other side. By the causeway of the going up, by which causeway they went upwards the temple. Ward against ward, which may be put either 1 The time of their watching, that when one set out went off another came on. Or rather, 2 The place of their guard and so this may be understood, either 1 Of the watch in quarters, where there was a double guard, either because there were two gates there, as some think, or for a more effectual cause now unknown. Or rather, 2 Of all the quarters compared together, of all which having spoken, he adds thus that as one gate was over against another, the west against the east and the north against the south, so one ward was over against another

17 Eastward were six Levites, northward four a day, southward four a day, and toward Asuppim: two and two

Eastward were six Levites, for that being the chief gate of the temple, required a better guard. Toward Asuppim, i. e. the house of Asuppim, as it is called, ver. 15, where also it is said to be on the south side, on which there seems to have been a double guard both belonging to Obed-edom, ver. 15, one at the south gate, and the other at Asuppim, where possibly the sacred treasures, mentioned ver. 20 &c. were laid up, and therefore a particular guard was necessary. See on ver. 15

18 At Parbar westward, four at the causeway, and two at Parbar

At Parbar or, as concerning Parbar which was another gate, or some building on the western quarter of the temple at the causeway, which led to Parbar. At Parbar, at the gate or house itself, by which it may seem that this was a place of some importance either the vessels of the temple, or some part of the treasures of God's house being kept here

19 These are the divisions of the porters among the sons of Kore, and among the sons of Merari

20 ¶ And of the Levites, Ahijah was <sup>h ch. 16, 26.</sup> over the treasures of the house of God, and over the treasures of the <sup>i ch. 16, 26.</sup> dedicated things

And over the treasures of the house of God, the latter phrase only explaining the former, the particle and being added to that is, or rather they are two different kinds of treasures, the former containing the sacred vessels and other treasures, which by God's command were appropriated to the maintenance of the house, and worship, and minister of God as riches and first fruits, and other things, and the latter only those things which had been freely given or dedicated to God for those ends, of which see ver. 26, 27

The sons of the Gershonite Iadnan, chief fathers i. e. which sons were chief fathers or heads of the houses of their father Jehich, understand here, and his sons which here follow

22 The sons of Jehich, Zethan, and Joel his brother, which were over the treasures of the house of the Lord

As Shelomith and his brethren were over the treasures of the dedicated things, ver. 26. But both may seem to have been subject and accountable to Ahijah who was over both these kinds of treasures, ver. 20. Or Ahijah might have a general oversight into the management of those treasures as an auditor of the accounts, although the others had more dignity and power in the disposal of them

23 Of the Amramites, and the Izharites, the Hebronites, and the Uzzielites

Or as concerning the Amramites &c. The meaning is the persons here following were of these, or the most of these families. Only here is none of the family of the Uzzielites, either because that family was now extinct; whence it is that we read no more of them in the Scripture, but only in this place and Numb. iii 27, or because there was none of them fit to be employed and trusted in these matters

24 And Shebuel the son of Gershon, <sup>l ch. 23, 16.</sup> the son of Moses, was ruler of the treasures

The prince or chief over all the treasures and treasures mentioned either before or afterward, as his very title shown, which is peculiarly given to him, and to none of the rest.

25 And his brethren by Elezer, Rehahiah his son, and Jehahiah his son, and Joram his son, and Zichri his son, and Shelomith his son

His brethren by Elezer, another son of Moses, Exod xviii 4

26 Which Shelomith and his brethren were over all the treasures of the dedicated things, which David the king, and the chief fathers, the captains over thousands and hundreds, and the captains of the host, had dedicated

27 Out of the spoils won in battles did they dedicate to maintain the house of the Lord

Heb. Out of the battles and spoils
Heb. to strengthen it, either to make that building strong and substantial by these and other charges, or rather, to repair it when it should be built, for which they might the rather take particular care, because it was likely that every one would contribute to the building of the temple and there would be no want for that use, but few would provide for the repair of it, when by the injury of men or time it should receive any damage.

28 And all that Samuel the seer, and Saul the son of Kish, and Abner the son of Ner, and Joab the son of Zeruiah, had dedicated, and whosoever had dedicated any thing, it was under the hand of Shelomith and of his brethren

Shelomith is particularly named here and ver. 26 because they were chiefly committed to his trust; he being, it seems, a person of eminent wisdom and fidelity.

29 Of the Ishabites Chenanith and his sons were for the outward business over Israel, for officers and judges

Chenanith and his sons, who are probably thought to have been one thousand six hundred for that number added to the thousand seven hundred, ver. 30, and the thousand and seven hundred, ver. 32 make up the six thousand Levites which were officers and judges, 1 Chron. xxvi 1. For the outward business, for that business of the Lord and of the king (as it is explained here, ver. 33-34) which was to be done without the temple, and without Jerusalem, for what was to be done within them was committed to the other kind, as we have seen. Over Israel, synecdochically, for ever part of Israel, even over the middle part and the high land upon the sea coast for the other parts of the land on both sides of Jordan we here committed to others ver. 30-31. For officers and judges, who shall be officers and judges over the people in the several cities and towns or parts of the land to determine questions and controversies which might arise among them. And the reason why the Levites were intrusted with the commands was because the common or municipal law of Israel, by which they had and held all their right, was no other than the law of God, whereof the priests and Levites, being the best and chief, looked into matters, must needs therefore be the most proper judges of things depending thereupon.

30 And of the Hebronites, Rehahiah and his brethren, men of valour, a thousand and seven hundred, were officers among them of Israel on this side Jordan westward in all the business of the Lord, and in the service of the king

On this side Jordan westward, in the parts of the land of Canaan which border upon Jordan, or at not very remote from it. In all the business of the Lord, i.e. in all things which did or should concern the house or worship of God, partly to take care that such money as were either imposed by a tax, or freely given by the people, towards the building or repairing of the temple, or towards the sacrifices and other holy ministrations, should be gathered and received, and faithfully sent up to Jerusalem to be employed in that work, partly to see to the execution of all the laws of God among the people and to restrain or punish wilful offenders against it. In the service of the king, not that all the king's businesses were managed by them, for it is apparent, both from the nature of the thing, and from Scripture, that the king's military affairs were managed by his captains, and his political or civil affairs were managed by the princes, and judges, and officers of other tribes, but because they served the king in the execution of his decrees, made pursuant to the laws of God, by which the several rights of king and people were established, and all things both in church and commonwealth were to be ordered. Now as the king was the principal person intrusted with the execution of God's laws, so these Levites chiefly were his eyes by which he saw his people's transgressions, and his hands by which he inflicted due and deserved censures upon them for their misdoings. And the doing of this was very much for the service of the king, whose throne was established and secured by such righteous administrations. Besides, they were to take care by their counsel and authority to keep the people in obedience to their king, which the Levites were most obliged and best obliged to do.

31 Among the Hebronites was Jerijah the chief, even among the Hebronites, according to the generations of his fathers. In the fortieth year of the reign of David they were sought for, and there were found among them mighty men of valour

at Lazer of Gilead
In the fortieth year, which was his last year, in which he made all the orders and distributions of families and offices recorded in the chapters. Lazer of Gilead is here named, either because they were seated in or near that place, but for what cause it is now unknown, or because they were numbered there by some person sent by David to that purpose.

32 And his brethren, men of valour, were two thousand and seven hundred chief fathers, whom king David made rulers over the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh, for every matter pertaining to God, and for wars of the king

Two thousand and seven hundred chief fathers, which is a very great number to be employed about two tribes and a half when all the rest of the tribes had only one thousand and seven hundred, ver. 30, besides those under Chenanith of whom seen ver. 29. But the reason hereof is plain, because the tribes without Jordan being more remote from the king's court and from the place of public and close consociation, needed more than ordinary help to instruct and keep them in the practice of the true religion, and the worship of God, and in obedience to their king.

CHAP XXVII

The twelve captains for every several month 1-15 The princes of the twelve tribes, 16-22 The numbering of the people is hindered, 23, 24 The chief fathers of David's treasures, 25-31 His counsellors and friends, 32-34

NOW the children of Israel after their number, to wit, the chief fathers and captains of thousands and hundreds, and their officers that served the king in any matter of the courses, which came in and went out month by month throughout all the months of the year, of every course were twenty and four thousand

Their officers, the standing force or militia of Israel as it was settled under their several officers as it here follows. In any matter of the courses, i.e. in all the business which the king had occasion for these persons, who were to attend upon him or his commands by courses or by turns. Or, according to all the order or state of the divisions, or about the companies or courses into which they were distributed.

Came in and went out, i. e. executed their office, which is commonly signified by this phrase, as Numb xxv 17, and else where. Month by month, who were to be armed and mustered, and to wait upon the king either at Jerusalem, or in other places as the king should see fit. By this order near three hundred thousand of his people were instructed and exercised in the use of their arms, and fitted for the defence of their king and kingdom when it should be needful, and in the mean time sufficient provision was made against any sudden tumults or irruptions of enemies. And this monthly course was contrived that the burden of it might be easy and equally distributed among the people.

2 Over the first course for the first month was <sup>a 2 Sam 7</sup> <sup>b ch 31 11</sup> Jashobeam the son of Zabdai, and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

Jashobeam, of whom see 2 Sam xxiii 8, 1 Chron xi 11.

3 Of the children of Perez was the chief of all the captains of the host for the first month.

Of Perez, or, of Pharez of the posterity of Judah Gen xlvii 12. This seems to be understood of Jashobeam, and to be mentioned as a reason why he was the chief &c. and the verse may be rendered thus, He was (which is easily understood out of the foregoing word) of the children of Perez, (and consequently of the tribe of Judah to which the preeminence belonged) and of which Perez was) and he was (or, therefore he was) the chief (to wit in dignity and preeminence though not in power and authority for these captains were equal in power, and Joab was their general) of all the captains of the host (whose several names here follow) and was for the first month: therefore he was first in order, and was captain for the first month.

4 And over the course of the second month was <sup>1 Or D 4</sup> <sup>2 Sam 10</sup> Dodai an Ahobite, and of his course was Mikloth also the ruler in his course likewise were twenty and four thousand.

Of his course was Mikloth the ruler, who was either 1. The captain of this course after the death of this Dodai as Zebadiah was after Asahel ver 7. But the differing phrase there and here sufficiently intimates that the same thing is not meant in both places. Or 2. His lieutenant or deputy in case of his necessary absence. But why should such a one be named here and not in the rest of the courses? Or rather, 3. One of the officers of his course who seems here particularly to be named as a person then of great note and eminency.

5 The third captain of the host for the third month was Benaiah the son of Jehonada, a chief priest, and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

A chief priest, or, the chief priest, or rather a chief prince, as this Hebrew word is oft used, as Gen xlv 13, xlvii 22, 2 Sam viii 18, xx 26, 1 Kings ii 5, 2 Kings x 11 and elsewhere. Probably he was not only a captain of this course, but a great officer in the court and state. For although the priests might take up arms in some special cases, yet it is not likely that such were constant officers in the king's army, especially seeing the rest of the captains here named were of other tribes. Besides neither Benaiah nor Jehonada was high priest at that time, but Zadok or Abiathar, and before them Ahimelech in whom the priesthood had been for a long time together, even in the days of Saul and David, and Solomon.

6 This is that Benaiah, who was mighty among the thirty, and above the three, and in his course was Ammizabad his son.

Which seems to have been his father's lieutenant because his father was captain of the king's guard, 2 Sam viii 18, and therefore needed a deputy in the one or in the other place.

7 The fourth captain for the fourth month was <sup>c 2 Sam 24</sup> <sup>d ch 11</sup> Isabel the brother of Joab, and Zebadiah his son after him: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

The fourth captain was Asahel the brother of Joab, by which, it seems, the foundation of this project was laid whilst David was in Hebron, during which time Asahel was slain and David's forces were then divided into twenty four courses, under twenty-four chief commanders, whereof Asahel was one, only it is probable that the number of their forces was much less than that which is here mentioned, but when David was fully settled in his whole kingdom the design was perfected, and the numbers of their soldiers increased to this number. His son after him, i. e. after his death, of which see 2 Sam ii 23. In his course, not Asahel's, for in his time they were not so numerous, but Zebadiah his son.

8 The fifth captain for the fifth month was Shamhuth the Izrahite, and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

Shamhuth, supposed to be the same called Shammah, 2 Sam xxiii 11, and Shammoth 1 Chron xi 27.

9 The sixth captain for the sixth month was <sup>d ch 11 22</sup> Ira the son of Ikkeiah the Tekoite, and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

10 The seventh captain for the seventh month was <sup>e ch 11 27</sup> Holezai the Pelonite, of the children of Iphaim, and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

The Pelonite, so called also 1 Chron xi 27, and the Tallah, 2 Sam xxiii 26.

11 The eighth captain for the eighth month was <sup>f 2 Sam 21</sup> <sup>g ch 11 22</sup> Sibmai the Hushathite, of the Zairites, and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

Of the Zairites, i. e. of the tribe of the Zairites.

12 The ninth captain for the ninth month was <sup>h ch 11 26</sup> Abiez the Anothite, of the Benjamites, and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

13 The tenth captain for the tenth month was <sup>h 2 Sam 25</sup> <sup>i ch 11 27</sup> Mahari the Netophathite, of the Zairites, and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

14 The eleventh captain for the eleventh month was <sup>i ch 11 27</sup> Benaiah the Pirathonite, of the children of Iphaim, and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

15 The twelfth captain for the twelfth month was <sup>j Or Hildai</sup> <sup>ch 11 28</sup> Heldai the Netophathite, of Othmel, and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

16 Furthermore over the tribes of Israel the ruler of the Reubenites was Eliezer the son of Zichri, of the Simronites, Shephatiah the son of Maachab.

Over the children of Israel, i. e. these were the princes of the tribes as they are called below, ver 22, who were the most eminent and constant rulers of the tribes at all times, whether of war or peace, who seem to have had a superior power to these twenty-four captains, and therefore are named before them, chap xxviii 1, being probably the king's chief counsellors and assistants in the great affairs of his kingdom.

17 Of the Levites, Hashabiah the son of Kenuel, of the Aaronites, Zadok.

18 Of Judah, Elihu, one of the brethren of David, of Issachai, Omri the son of Michael.

Elihu, called also Licab, 1 Sam xvi 6.

19 Of Zebulun, Ishmaiah the son of Obadiah, of Naphthali, Jeremoth the son of Azriel.

20 Of the children of Ephraim, Hoshai the son of Azariah - of the half tribe of Manasseh, Joel the son of Pedaiah -

21 Of the half tribe of Manasseh in Gilead, Iddo the son of Zechariah of Benjamin, Jaasiel the son of Abner -

22 Of Dan, Azareel the son of Jeroham These were the princes of the tribes of Israel

Of the most of the tribes, not of all, for Gad is omitted, probably because that tribe was joined with the Reubenites under one prince, and Asher for some such reason, or for some other causes now unknown, and not worth our inquiry

23 ¶ But David took not the number of them from twenty years old and under - because the Lord had said he would increase Israel like to the stars of the heavens

The meaning is, David when he desired to number the people, he designed to number only those who were from twenty years old and upward (which is the same thing) those that drew sword, 1 Chron xxv 5 and not those who were from twenty years old and under. He will increase Israel like to the stars of the heavens, and therefore to number them all both above and under twenty would have been both an infinite trouble and a tempting of God or a questioning of the truth of his promises. And possibly this circumstance might in part deceive or quiet David's conscience, that his desire of knowing the number of his people did not proceed from distrust of God's promise or providence, but from a pure intent to know the true state and strength of his kingdom

24 Joab the son of Zeruiah began to number, but he finished not because there fell wrath for it against Israel, neither was the number put in the account of the chronicles of king David

Began to number to wit all from twenty years old and upward as David commanded him. He finished not, for Iddo and Benjamin he counted not 1 Chron xxv 6. Because there fell wrath for it against Israel, while he was doing the work, which was a necessary evil, aim to excuse Heb. And then fell, &c. Though David numbered them with caution and limit to wit as was noted before yet this did not hinder God's wrath against him up to Israel for this sin. Neither was the number put in the account of the chronicles of King David, the cause is either 1 That the full number was not registered in Iddo and Benjamin were not counted by Joab. Or rather 2 That David being sensible of and smiting for his sin would not have the number brought in by Joab to him put into the public register though God would have it recorded in Scripture for the instruction of succeeding ages. Joab speaks not here of the account given in to the king which was done and was Joab's act, but of the putting of the account into the public records, which was not done, and which could not be done but by David's command or permission

25 ¶ And over the king's treasures was Azmaveth the son of Adiel - and over the storehouses of the fields in the cities, and in the villages, and in the castles, was Jehonathan the son of Uzziah

Over the king's treasures, of gold or silver, or other things of great price, which for greater security were kept in Jerusalem, and in the king's palace, and rather the tribute money also was sent and committed to his care. Over the storehouses of the fruits of the earth, or the share of them which belonged to the king, which were laid up in the fields or cities, or villages, or castles, as there was convenience and occasion

26 And over them that did the work of the field for tillage of the ground was Eziab the son of Chelub

Over the king's husbandry

27 And over the vineyards was Shimei the Ramathite - over the increase of the vineyards for the wine cellars was Zabdi the Shiphmite

Over the vineyards, i.e. over the workmen and labourers in the vineyards, as the next effect is over the fruit of the vineyards. In like manner, one man was over the labourers in the fields, ver 26, and another over the fruit of the fields, put into stores after the manner, ver 25

28 And over the olive trees and the sycamore trees that were in the low plains was Baal-hanan the Gederite - and over the cellars of oil was Joash

29 And over the herds that fed in Sharon was Shitrai the Shimonite - and over the herds that were in the valleys was Shaphat the son of Adlai - Sharon, a place famous for its fruitfulness. See Isa xxviii 9, xxv 2

30 Over the camels also was Obil the Ishmaelite - and over the asses was Jehdeiah the Meronothite

The Ishmaelite, so called either because he was born of that people or had lived among them, or from some notable exploit which he did against them

31 And over the flocks was Izabai the Hagerite. All these were the rulers of the substance which was king David's

32 Also Jonathan David's uncle was a counsellor, a wise man, and a scribe - and Jehu the son of Nethaniel was with the king's sons

A counsellor, a wise man, and a scribe, either one learned in the laws of God which were also the laws of the land, by which all their counsels were to be ruled, or, the king's secretary. With the king's sons as their tutor or governor

33 And Anthophel was the king's counsellor - and Hushai the Archite was the king's companion

The king's counsellor, the person whose counsel in matters of state the king most prized and followed. The king's companion, or his friend as he is called 2 Sam xi 37, the person whom he most trusted with his secrets, and whose conversation was most pleasant and acceptable to him

34 And after Anthophel was Jehonada the son of Benadab, and Abitiah - the general of the king's army was Joab

After Anthophel, i.e. after his death, these were his chief counsellors

CHAP XXVIII.

David in a solemn assembly declareth God's favour to him, and promise to his son Solomon, exhorteth him to fear God, and commandeth Solomon to build the temple 1-10; giveth him a pattern for the form, and gold and silver for the materials 11-21

AND David assembled all the princes of Israel, the princes of the tribes and the captains of the companies, that ministered to the king by course, and the captains over the thousands, and captains over the hundreds, and the stewards over all the substance and possession of the king, and of his sons, with the officers, and with the mighty men, and with all the valiant men, unto Jerusalem

This assembly seems to be distinct from that Chap xxvii, 2, and more general, as may be gathered from the persons said to be assembled here and there. Though others think them to be the same, and this to be a return to his former discourse.

2 Then David the king stood up upon his feet, and said, Hear me, my brethren, and my people As for me, I had in mine heart to build an house of rest for the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and for the footstool of our God, and had made ready for the building.

David stood up, partly out of reverence to God and his word, which was the matter of the following discourse, and partly out of respect to this great and honourable assembly My brethren, so he calls the princes and chief rulers, both because they had a share with him, though under him in the government, and in compliance with the Divine command that the king should not be lifted up above his brethren, Deut xvii 20. An house of rest for the ark, a place where it might be lived, and no more removed from place to place, as it had been. And for the footstool, the word and is here put expositively for by the footstool, &c, he means the ark.

4 Howbeit the Lord God of Israel chose me before all the house of my father to be king over Israel for ever: for he hath chosen Judah to be the ruler, and of the house of Judah, the house of my father, and among the sons of my father he liked me to make me king over all Israel.

5 And of all my sons (for the Lord hath given me many sons) he hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel.

It is not my fancy or fond affection but the Lord will that Solomon should be preferred before me, before thee, and therefore all of you are obliged to submit to him, and accept of him as your king by Divine appointment.

6 And he said unto me, Solomon thy son, he shall build my house and my courts: for I have chosen him to be my son, and I will be his father.

7 Moreover I will establish his kingdom for ever, if he be constant to do my commandments and my judgments, as at this day.

As he hath begun and hitherto continued in some good measure to do.

8 Now therefore in the sight of all Israel the congregation of the Lord, and in the audience of our God, keep and seek for all the commandments of the Lord your God: that ye may possess this good land, and leave it for an inheritance for your children after you for ever.

In the audience of our God, &c. I do here exhort and charge you every one calling God who is here present and this congregation wherein all Israel are present by their representatives, for witness against you if you do not follow my counsel. Keep and seek for all the commandments of the Lord, keep those commands which you know, and seek for or search into what you are yet ignorant of, that you may distinctly understand the whole will of God, and all the parts of your duty, and accordingly give up yourselves to the practice thereof.

9 And thou, Solomon my son, know thou the God of thy father, and serve him with a perfect heart, and with a willing mind: for the Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts: if thou seek him, he will be found of thee, but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off for ever.

Know thou the God, know him, so as to love him and serve him, as it follows, for words of knowledge in Scripture use commonly imply affection and practice: or understand him as thy God, by loving and obeying him, for otherwise Solomon did already know God, having doubtless been very well instructed in the knowledge of God's nature and law. The Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts: if thou dost only put on a profession of religion, to please me and secure thy hopes of the kingdom, or if thy obedience to God be un sincere and with grudging, thou mayst indeed deceive me, but thou canst not deceive him, for he searcheth thy inward thoughts, and the motions of thy heart. If thou forsake him, if when I am dead and gone, and thou art perfectly at thy own dispose, thou shalt cast off that religion and fear of God of which thou now makest profession, and shalt continue to do so without true repentance for thine errors. He will cast thee off for ever, notwithstanding all his promises made to me and to my seed and that great honour and favour which he hath showed to thee, with which possibly thou mayst flatter thyself.

10 Take heed now, for the Lord hath chosen thee to build an house for the sanctuary, be strong, and do it.

I or the sanctuary, or for a sanctuary, &c. which is to be a sanctuary for him to sit, for the ark to dwell in. Be strong, take courage and resolution to break through all difficulties, troubles, discouragements, or oppositions which thou mayst possibly meet with.

11 Then David gave to Solomon his son the pattern of the porch, and of the houses thereof, and of the treasures thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, and of the inner parlours thereof, and of the place of the mercy seat.

The pattern of the porch, to wit, of the temple, which is necessarily to be understood. The houses thereof, either, 1 The houses of the porch so called because they went through the porch into the temple. Or rather, 2 The houses of the temple mainly understood in the next foregoing clause of this verse to wit the holy place, and the holy of holies, which may well pass for two houses, because they were separated by a partition: and because they were of different dimensions, as appears by 1 Kings vi 2 20, especially seeing the holy place is called the greater house, 2 Chron iii 5, comparatively to the holy of holies, which was the lesser house: and so you have two houses. The inner parlours thereof, by these he seems to understand all those rooms which were made against the wall of the house round about, as it is said 1 Kings vi 5, which are here called by divers names, according to the difference of their situation or use. The place of the mercy seat, &c. in what particular part of the holy of holies it was to be placed.

12 And the pattern of all that he had by the spirit, of the courts of the house of the Lord, and of all the chambers round about, of the treasures of the house of God, and of the treasures of the dedicated things.

And the pattern of all, for even the pattern of all, for this clause belongs both to the foregoing and the following particulars. By the spirit, by the Spirit of God, as is evident from ver 19. For seeing all the particulars of the tabernacle built by Moses were suggested to him by God's spirit, by which even the workmen were inspired, Exod xxx 40, xxxi 3, it is not credible that God would use less care and exactness in the building of this far more glorious and durable work. Of all the chambers, &c., all which were within the courts or adjoining to them, as the other chambers ver 11, were adjoined to the house.

13 Also for the courses of the priests and the Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the Lord, and for all the vessels of service in the house of the Lord.

14 He gave of gold by weight for things of gold; for all instruments of all manner of service; silver also for all instruments of silver by weight, for all instruments of every kind of service:

15 Even the weight for the candlesticks of gold, and for their lamps of gold, by weight for every candlestick; and for the lamps thereof: and for the candlesticks of silver by weight, both for the candlestick, and also for the lamps thereof, according to the use of every candlestick.

Whether they were large and fixed in one place whereof there were ten in the holy place, 1 Kings vii 49 or such as were less and loose to be carried from place to place, as need required.

16 And by weight he gave gold for the tables of shewbread, for every table, and likewise silver for the tables of silver.

The tables of shew-bread by this, and 2 Chron iv 19, it appears that there were divers tables to be used either successively or together about the shew-bread, but oft it seems to have been of more eminence and use than the rest and therefore it is most commonly called the table of the shew-bread, in the singular number. But of this and the rest of the utensils here named, see the notes on Exodus.

17 Also pure gold for the fleshhooks, and the bowls, and the cups, and for the golden basons he gave gold by weight for every bason, and likewise silver by weight for every bason of silver.

18 And for the altar of incense refined gold by weight, and gold for the pattern of the chariot of the cherubims, that spread out their wings, and covered the ark of the covenant of the Lord.

Of the chariot of the cherubims, i. e. of the cherubims which Solomon was to make, of which see 1 Kings vi 23 (for those which were fastened to the mercy-seat were made by Moses long before,) which he fully compares to a chariot, because within them God is oft said to sit and to dwell, as 2 Kings xix 15, Psal lxxxv 1, xix 1, and sometimes he is said to ride upon a cherub, Psal xlviii 10. And because a chariot is made to carry a person from place to place, this expression may be used to intimate that God was not so fixed to them by the building of his temple, but that he both could and would remove from them if they forsake him. And when they did so, God did make use of the chariot of his cherubims to convey himself away from them, as is noted, Ezek x 10 &c. Ordered the ark, i. e. above it for that was done by Moses's cherubims, but before it, to keep it from the eyes of the high priest when he entered into the most holy place, 1 Kings vi 23.

19 All this, said David, the Lord made me understand in writing by his hand upon me, even all the works of this pattern.

The meaning is either, 1. That God revealed this to Samuel, (see 1 Chron. ix 22,) or Gad, or Nathan, or some other man of God, who put it into writing and by them to David. Or, 2. That God did, as it were by his own hand and finger, (wherewith he wrote the ten commandments, Exod. xxxi. 18,) write these things upon the table of my mind, which now I deliver to thee.

20 And David said to Solomon his son, Be strong and of good courage, and do not fear, nor be dismayed: for the Lord God, even my God, will be with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee, until thou hast finished all the work for the service of the house of the Lord.

Be strong and of good courage. See the notes on ver. 10, vol. 1.

21 And, behold, the courses of the priests, and the Levites, even they shall be with thee for all the service of the house of God: and there shall be with thee for all manner of workmanship every willing skilful man, for any manner of service: also the princes and all the people will be wholly at thy commandment.

CHAP. XXIX.

David, by his example and entreaty, 1—5, causes the princes and people to offer willingly, 6—8. David's thanksgiving and prayer, 10—19. The people having blessed God and sacrificed, make Solomon king, 20—25. David's reign and death, 26—30.

FURTHERMORE David the king said unto all the congregation, Solomon my son, whom God alone hath chosen, is yet young and tender, and the work is great: for the palace is not for man, but for the Lord God.

Is yet young and tender, comparatively, for he was now married, as appears by comparing 2 Chron ix 30; xii. 13.

2 Now I have prepared with all my might for the house of my God the gold for things to be made of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and the brass for things of brass, the iron for things of iron, and wood for things of wood, onyx stones, and stones to be set, glistening stones, and of divers colours, and all manner of precious stones, and marble stones in abundance.

Stones to be set, diamonds or emeralds, or rubies or any of those precious stones which are usually set in rings or such things.

3 Moreover, because I have seen my affliction to the house of my God, I have of mine own proper good, of gold and silver, which I have given to the house of my God, over and above all that I have prepared for the holy house,

Of mine own proper good; of that which I have reserved as a peculiar treasure to my own use, after I had separated thence that which I had devoted to God.

4 For three thousand talents of gold, of the gold of Ophir, and seven thousand talents of refined silver, to overlay the walls of the houses within.

The gold of Ophir was accounted the best and purest gold, of which see Job xxi 24, xxviii. 16, Isa xlii 12, by which it appears that those hundred thousand talents mentioned before chap. xxi. 11, were a 1000 and impurer sort of gold. To overlay the walls of the houses within, the walls of the temple with gold, and of the rooms adjoining to it with silver be set out into plates, and put upon the other materials both and there as it was thought fit.

5 The gold for things of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and for all manner of work to be made by the hands of artificers. And who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord?

To consecrate his service, Heb. to fill his hand, i. e. to offer an offering, as Exod. xxviii. 29, Lev vii 23, as I have done.

6 Then the chief of the fathers and the princes of the tribes of Israel, and the captains of thousands and of hundreds, ch 27:25 with <sup>the</sup> rulers of the king's work, offered willingly,

7 And gave for the service of the house of God of gold five thousand talents and ten thousand drama, and of silver ten thousand talents, and of brass eighteen thousand talents, and one hundred thousand talents of iron.

8 And they with whom precious stones were found gave them to the treasure of the house of the Lord, by the hand of Jehoiad the Gershonite.

9 Then the people rejoiced, for that they offered willingly, because with perfect heart they offered willingly to the Lord: and David the king also rejoiced with great joy.

The people rejoiced, because this was both an effect of God's grace in them, and an eminent token of God's favour and goodness to be continued to them, and a good pledge that this great and long-desired work of the building of the temple would receive a certain and a speedy accomplishment.

10 ¶ Wherefore David blessed the Lord before all the congregation: and David said, Blessed be thou, Lord God of Israel our father, for ever and ever.

11 Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty for all that is in the heaven and in the earth: Thine, O Lord, is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all.

Thine, O Lord, is the greatness and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty for all that is in the heaven and in the earth: Thine, O Lord, is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all.

12 Both riches and honour come of thee, and thou requestest over all, and in thine hand is power and might: and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all.

Thou requestest over all, i.e. thou disposedst of riches and honour as thou pleasest. To give strength unto all, even to the weakest whom thou canst make strong, and to the strongest who are weak without thy help.

13 Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name.

14 But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? for all things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee.

That we should be able to offer so willingly, i.e. that thou shouldst give us both such riches out of which we should be able to make such an offering and such a willing and free heart to offer them, both which are thy gifts, and the fruits of thy good grace and mercy to us. Of thine own have we given thee, we return only what we have received, and therefore we do only pay a debt to thee, and do not hereby oblige thee, or deserve any thing from thee.

15 For we are strangers before thee, and sojourners, as were all our fathers: our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding.

These words may contain a reason either 1. Of the first clause of ver. 14. Who am I, &c. what me in and contemptible creatures are we, and how unworthy of so high a favour! for, saith he here, we are I and my people, as it is ver. 14, are sojourners, &c. poor pilgrims who bring nothing into the world, and pass hastily through it, in I can carry nothing with us out of it. Or rather 2. of the last clause of that 14th verse, of thine own have we given thee. For the land which we possess is thine, not ours; we are not the proprietors or perpetual possessors of it, but only thy tenants; and as our fathers once were mere sojourners in it, even with or before men, Psal. cx. 12, so we at this day are no better with or before thee, having no absolute right and title in it, but only to travel through it, and sojourn in it for that short time that we live in the world. And thus the argument seems to be borrowed from Lev. xxv. 23, where this is given as a reason why the inheritances of the land of Canaan could not be sold for ever, but only till the jubilee, for, saith God, the land is mine, as to dominion and property, for ye were (or for, or but you are) only strangers and sojourners with me. There is none abiding, we only give to thee what we must shortly leave, and what we cannot keep to ourselves, and therefore it is a great favour that thou wilt accept such offerings, or, and therefore we are not perpetual possessors of this land, and the fruits of it, but only pilgrims and passengers through it.

16 O Lord our God, all this store that we have prepared to build thee an house for thine holy name cometh of thine hand, and is all thine own.

17 I know also, my God, that thou triest the heart, and hast pleasure in uprightness. As for me, in the uprightness of mine heart I have willingly offered all these things: and now have I seen with joy thy people, which are present here, to offer willingly unto thee.

By the largeness of their offering I discern the sincerity, willingness, and generosity of their hearts towards thee, for David judged, as in reason and charity he ought of thee by its fruit, and of their hearts by their actions.

18 O Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, our fathers keep this for ever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, and appoint their heart unto thee.

Keep this for ever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, since it is in thy view that thy people have such willing minds to thy service, I would I could acknowledge I beg the continuance of that grace to thee that they may persist in the same generous and generous disposition towards thee and thy worship. Prepare their heart unto thee, or rather, as it is in the margin, stablish it, confirm, &c. Then who has begun a good work continue and carry it on by thy grace, otherwise it will languish, and this very people will prove degenerate.

19 And give unto Solomon my son a perfect heart, to keep thy commandments, thy testimonies, and thy statutes, and to do all these things, and to build the palace, for the which I have made provision.

By purchasing the place, 1 Chron. xxi., and providing for the expenses of the work.

20 ¶ And David said to all the congregation, Now bless the Lord your God. And all the congregation blessed the Lord God of their fathers, and bowed down their heads, and worshipped the Lord, and the king.

The Lord with religious, and the king with civil worship, as it is evident.

21 And they sacrificed sacrifices unto the Lord and offered burnt offerings unto the Lord, on the morrow after that day, even a thousand bullocks, a thousand rams, and a thousand lambs, with their drink offerings, and sacrifices in abundance for all Israel.

Unto the Lord before the ark which was there for all Israel; either, 1. On the behalf of all Israel, to procure God's presence and blessing for them all. Or, 2. So many, that the beasts which, after the manner, were made of the remainders of the sacrifices were abundantly sufficient for all the sacrifices which were then presented and desired to partake of them, or for all the governors of Israel there assembled, who may well pass under the name of all Israel, because they represented them all.

22 And did eat and drink before the Lord on that day with great gladness. And they made Solomon the son of David king the second time, and anointed him unto the Lord to be the chief governor, and Zadok to be priest

1 Kings 1:35, 36.

Before the Lord, i. e. before the ark in courts or places as near to it as they conveniently could. Or, as in God's presence, in a solemn and religious manner, praising God for this great mercy, and begging his blessing upon this great affair. The second time. This is called the second time in reference to the first time, which was either, 1. When he was made king during Adonijah's conspiracy of which see 1 Kings 1:34, &c. And so this was done after David's death, and not upon that day, when this feasting and solemnity lasted, as the words at first view seem to intimate this being related in the same verse, and immediately after the relation of the feast. But they are examples of things done at distant times put together in one verse as Acts vii 15, So Jacob went down into Egypt and died, he, and our fathers, i. e. first he, and afterwards our fathers. So here, They did eat &c. on that day with great gladness, and afterward they made Solomon king the second time. And this opinion seems to be confirmed by the following passage, in which it is related that at this same time they anointed Zadok to be priest, and that Solomon was king instead of David and that all Israel and all David's sons, submitted to him; all which was not done till after David's death, as may be gathered by comparing this with 1 Kings 1:11. Or, 2. In 1 Chron xxiii 1 where it is said that David made Solomon his son king over Israel, i. e. he declared him his successor. And so this second time was during David's life. And that David had not privately declared chap xxiii. he now does solemnly on us in this great and general assembly, in which David's order and the consent of all that assembly, Solomon was anointed king, i. e. to be king after his father's death. And this opinion the text seems not to favour. For it is said And they made Solomon king &c. they who that must be fetched out of the foregoing words and were they who did eat and drink before the Lord on that day with great gladness as it is here said, and then immediately it follows, and that with a copulative conjunction, they made Solomon king &c. which without such connection pulled away from the foregoing words. And fixed to they must be David and all the congregation who were then present, ver 20, of whom it is said they rejoyced &c. ver 21, and they did eat &c. and they made Solomon &c. The great objection against this opinion is that they anointed Zadok to be priest at this time which was not done till after David's death, for till then Abiathar was not thrust out from being priest, &c. 1 Kings ii 26-27. This indeed is a difficulty, but not in itself. It must be remembered that the high priest had his vicarage who might officiate in his stead, when he was hindered by sickness or other impediment, and that there seems to be some more than ordinary in Zadok's case, for although Abiathar was properly the high priest yet Zadok seems after a sort to be joined in commission with him as ver 22 Sam xi 29, xix 11; and it is expressly said, Zadok and Abiathar were priests, 2 Sam xxi 25. 1 Kings iv 1. And it may be further considered, that this anointing of Zadok might be occasioned by some miscarriage of Abiathar not recorded in Scripture. Possibly he was intrusted with this design of translating the crown to Solomon, and did now secretly favour Adonijah's person and right which afterward he did more openly defend, which being known to David by information, might induce him and the princes who favoured Solomon to take this course, which they might the more willingly do, in consideration that but Davie threatening, 1 Sam ii 31, &c., of transferring the priesthood from Abiathar's and Eli's house, of which Abiathar was, to Eleazar's line, to which it had been promised to perpetuate, Numb. xxv 13, of which line Zadok was. And this might judge this a fit season, or might be directed by God at this time, to execute that threatening to the one, and promise to the other family. And yet this action of theirs in anointing Zadok did not, as I suppose, actually constitute him high priest, but only settled the reversion of it upon him and his line after Abiathar's death. Even as David's making Solomon king, chap. xxiii. 1, and their anointing Solomon to be the chief governor here, did not put him into actual possession of the kingdom, but only gave him a right to it in reversion after the present king's death as Samuel's anointing of David, 1 Sam xvi, had done to David before him. Hence, notwithstanding this anointing, Abiathar continued to exercise his office till Solomon thrust him out 1 Kings ii 27, and even after he was removed from the execution of his office, yet he was reputed the priest till he died, being so called 1 Kings iv 4. And thus I hope may in some sort resolve that difficulty. For the other arguments, they seem not considerable. For as for what follows, ver 23-25. Then Solomon sat on the throne, &c., that indeed seems to belong to the time after David's death, being sufficiently separated from this ver 22, and not so knit to the foregoing words as those words, and they made Solomon king &c. are. And for the particle then, that is confessed by all to be often used at large and indefinitely for about or after that time. To be the chief governor, i. e. to be king after David's death. Zadok to be priest, of which the last note but one

23 Then Solomon sat on the throne of the Lord as king instead of David his father, and prospered, and all Israel obeyed him

On the throne of the Lord, i. e. on the throne of Israel, which is called the throne of the Lord, either more generally as all thrones are the Lord's, by whom kings reign, Prov xiii 12 and magistrates are ordained, Rom. xiii 1, 2, or more especially and peculiarly, either, 1. Because the Lord himself was in a peculiar manner the king and governor of Israel, not only in the time of the judges, but afterward Psal xiv 1, lxxviii 18, cxlv 2, lxx xxxii 2. Or 2. Because it was the throne of Christ the Lord, whose vicarments David and Solomon, and then successors were for whom this throne was reserved, and by whom it was to be established and enjoyed for ever, Luke ii 32. 33. Or 3. The throne of the Lord is put for the throne of the people of the Lord by vicarious and by manner of speech, which is frequent in the Hebrew language, as when the key of David is put in the lock of the house of David, and the anointment of the Lord for the anointment of the Lord's house. Or 4. Because this throne fell to Solomon not by right of inheritance for he had no brethren but by the special appointment and gift of the Lord. And so thus of the Lord is the primary cause of the efficient as the learned call it, and so means which the Lord gave him

24 And all the princes, and the mighty men, and all the sons likewise of king David, submitted themselves unto Solomon the king

1 Peter 2:13-14. Give the Lord your hearts, as unto the Lord, and as unto the king, as unto the Lord.

25 And the Lord magnified Solomon exceedingly in the sight of all Israel, and bestowed upon him such royal majesty as had not been on any king before him in Israel

2 Chron 36:22. And he gave him such royal majesty as had not been on any king before him in Israel.

Such royal majesty, i. e. such honour and reputation, together with power and riches, and all things which make a king great and glorious. Any king, either David or Saul, or any of the former governors of Israel, the word king being oft used in a large sense for any governor.

26 ¶ Thus David the son of Jesse, reigned over all Israel.

1 Sam 17:12. David was 20 years old when he began to reign, and he reigned 40 years.

This sacred writer having mentioned the anointing of Solomon to be king, ver. 22, and upon that occasion promised to give a further account of Solomon's actual settlement in his kingdom, and of his prosperous and glorious management of it, ver. 23-25 he now returns to his main and proper business to give an account of the close of David's reign and life. Thus, in manner hitherto expressed, David—reigned &c.

27 And the time that he reigned over Israel was forty years, "seven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty and three years reigned he in Jerusalem

28 And he died in a good old age, full of days, riches, and honour and Solomon his son reigned in his stead

Full of days fully satisfied with the days which God had given him, having had the happiness to see his beloved Solomon settled in his throne, being now weary of this life, and desiring to be with God

29 Now the acts of David the king, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of Samuel the seer, and in the book of Nathan the prophet, and in the book of Gad the seer,

Either in the two Books of Samuel, as they are now called, which were written part by Samuel, and part by Nathan and Gad, or in the annals or chronicles of that kingdom, which were written by Nathan and Gad, who were not only prophets, but historiographers or annalists, out of which they or some other prophets took, by the direction of God's Spirit, such passages as were most important and useful to the church and to the world in succeeding ages

30 With all his reign and his might, and the times that went over him, and over Israel, and over all the kingdoms of the countries

The times that went over him, i. e. the changes which befall him, both his persecutions and manifold troubles, and his great successes and achievements, the word time or times being oft put for things done or happening in them, as Psal cxvi 15, lxxvii 5 Of the countries, Heb of these countries, to wit, bordering upon the land of Canaan, or not far from it

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES

CHAP I

King Solomon's solemn offering at Gibeon, 1-6 His choice of wisdom as blessed by God, 7-12 His strength and wealth, 13-17

1 AND Solomon the son of David was strengthened in his kingdom, and the Lord his God was with him, and magnified him exceedingly

He was strengthened, or established after his seditions brother Adonijah and his partisans were suppressed, and he was received with the universal consent and joy of his princes and people

2 Then Solomon spake unto all Israel, to the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and to the judges, and to every governor in all Israel, the chief of the fathers

Then Solomon spake to wit concerning his intention of going to Gibeon and that they should attend him thither, as the next verse shows

3 So Solomon, and all the congregation with him went to the high place that was at Gibeon for there was the tabernacle of the congregation of God, which Moses the servant of the Lord had made in the wilderness

To the high place upon which the tabernacle was placed, whence it is called the great high place, 1 Kings iii 1

4 But the ark of God had David brought up from Kirjath-jearim to the place which David had prepared for it for he had pitched a tent for it at Jerusalem

He separated the ark from the tabernacle, and brought it to Jerusalem, because there he intended to build a far more noble and lasting habitation for it

5 Moreover the brasen altar, that Bezalel the son of Uri the son of Hur, had made, he put before the tabernacle of the Lord and Solomon and the congregation sought unto it

He put either Moses, mentioned ver. 1, or Bezalel, here is named, by the command and direction of Moses, or David who may be said to put it there, because he continued it there, and did not remove it, as he did the ark from the tabernacle Sought unto it, i. e. sought the Lord and his favour by his prayers and sacrifices in the place which God had appointed for that work, Lev xvi 3, 4

6 And Solomon went up thither to the brasen altar before the Lord which was at the tabernacle of the congregation, and offered a thousand burnt offerings upon it

Which altar But that he had now said, ver. 5, and therefore would not unnecessarily repeat it Or rather, who, and so these words are emphatical, and contain a reason why Solomon went thither, because the Lord was there graciously present to hear prayers and receive sacrifices

7 ¶ In that night did God appear unto Solomon, and said unto him, Ask what I shall give thee

In that night, after those sacrifices were offered Did God appear, in a dream, of which see the notes on 1 Kings iii 5 &c

8 And Solomon said unto God, Thou hast shewed great mercy unto David my father, and hast made me to reign in his stead

9 Now, O Lord God, let thy promise unto David my father be established, for thou hast made me king over a people like the dust of the earth in multitude

10 "Give me now wisdom and knowledge, that I may go out and come in before this people: for who can judge this thy people, that is so great?

What one man is sufficient to govern so numerous a people?

11 "And God said to Solomon, Because this was in thine heart, and thou hast not asked riches, wealth, or honour, nor the life of thine enemies, neither yet hast asked long life, but hast asked wisdom and knowledge for thyself, that thou mayest judge my people, over whom I have made thee king.

The life of thine enemies, i. e. the taking away of their lives

12 Wisdom and knowledge is granted unto thee, and I will give thee riches, and wealth, and honour, such as none of the kings have had that have been before thee, neither shall there any after thee have the like.

13 ¶ Then Solomon came from his journey to the high place that was at Gibeon to Jerusalem, from before the tabernacle of the congregation, and reigned over Israel.

To the high place, i. e. from the high place, for the Hebrew prefix lamed which commonly signifies to, is sometimes put for the Latin de, which signifies from.

14 "And Solomon gathered chariots and horsemen: and he had a thousand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, which he placed in the chariot cities, and with the king at Jerusalem.

Of this and the three following verses see the notes on 1 Kings x 26, & 4.

15 "And the king made silver and gold at Jerusalem as plentiful as stones, and cedar trees made he as the sycomore trees that are in the vale for abundance.

16 "And Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt, and linen yarn: the king's merchants received the linen yarn at a price.

17 And they fetched up, and brought forth out of Egypt a chariot for six hundred shekels of silver, and an horse for an hundred and fifty: and so brought they out horses for all the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, by their means.

CHAP. II.

Solomon appointeth workmen to build the temple: his embassy to king Hiram for workmen and materials promising to furnish him with victuals 1—10. Hiram's kindness, 11—16. Solomon numbereth and divideth the workmen, 17, 18.

AND Solomon determined to build an house for the name of the Lord, and an house for his kingdom.

A royal palace for himself and his successors. This whole chapter, for the substance of it, is contained in 1 Kings v, and in the notes there it is explained, and the seeming differences reconciled.

2 And Solomon told out threescore and ten thousand men to bear burdens, and fourscore thousand to hew in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred to oversee them.

3 ¶ And Solomon sent to Hiram the king of Tyre, saying, "As thou didst deal with David my father, and didst send him cedars to build him an house to dwell therein, even so deal with me.

Which words may be commodiously understood from the nature of the thing, and from the following words, such ellipses being frequent in the Hebrew. Or, without any ellipsis, the sense, being here suspended, is completed ver. 7, so send me, &c., the 4th, 5th, and 6th verses being inserted by way of parenthesis, to usher in and enforce his following request.

4 Behold, "I build an house to the name of the Lord my God, to dedicate it to him, and to burn before him sweet incense, and for the continual shewbread, and for the burnt offerings morning and evening, on the sabbaths, and on the new moons, and on the solemn feasts of the Lord our God. This is an ordinance for ever to Israel.

To dedicate it to him i. e. to his honour and worship, for the continual shew bread, so called here and Numb. ix 7, because it was to be there continually, by a constant succession of new bread when the old was removed, of which see Exod. xxx 30. Lev. xxiv 8.

5 And the house which I build is great for great is our God above all gods.

The house which I build is great: for though the temple, strictly so called, was but small, yet the buildings belonging to it both above and under ground, were huge and numerous.

6 But who is able to build him an house, seeing the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain him? who am I then that I should build him an house, save only to burn sacrifice before him?

The heaven of heavens cannot contain him: when I speak of building a great house for our God, let none be so foolish to think that I mean to include or comprehend God within it, for he is infinite. To burn sacrifice before him, i. e. to worship him there where he is graciously present.

7 Send me now therefore a man cunning to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, and in iron, and in purple, and crimson, and blue, and that can skill to grave with the cunning men that are with me in Judah and in Jerusalem, whom David my father did provide.

8 "Send me also cedar trees, fir trees, and algum trees out of Lebanon: for I know that thy servants can skill to cut timber in Lebanon, and, behold, my servants shall be with thy servants.

9 Even to prepare me timber in abundance: for the house which I am about to build shall be wonderful great.

See the notes on ver. 5.

10 "And, behold, I will give to thy servants, the hewers that cut timber, twenty thousand measures of beaten wheat, and twenty thousand measures of barley, and twenty thousand baths of oil, and twenty thousand baths of wine.

"Because the Lord hath loved his people, he hath made thee king over them."

12 Hiram said moreover, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, that made heaven and earth, who hath given to David the king a wise son, endowed with prudence and understanding, that might build an house for the Lord, and an house for his kingdom."

13 And now I have sent a cunning man, endowed with understanding, of Hiram my father's,

Who was my father's chief workman. Or, Hiram Abi a man so called, the prefix damed being here only a note of the vocative case. See more on chap. iv. 16.

14 "The son of a woman of the daughters of Dan, and his father was a man of Tyre, skilful to work in gold, and in silver, in brass, in iron, in stone, and in timber, in purple, in blue, and in fine linen, and in crimson; also to grave any manner of graving, and to find out every device which shall be put to him, with thy cunning men, and with the cunning man of my lord David thy father."

The son of a woman of the daughters of Dan of which see the notes on 1 Kings vii. 11. My lord, &c. calls David here, and Solomon in the next verse either out of singular respect to their greatness and true worth, or because he was indeed tributary to them, or, at least his country was nourished by their country, as it was afterwards. Acts xii. 20.

15 Now therefore the wheat and the barley, the oil, and the wine which my lord hath spoken of, let him send unto his servants.

16 "And we will cut wood out of Lebanon, as much as thou shalt need; and we will bring it to thee in flotes by sea to Joppa; and thou shalt carry it up to Jerusalem."

17 "And Solomon numbered all the strangers that were in the land of Israel, after the numbering which with David his father had numbered them; and they were found an hundred and fifty thousand and three thousand and six hundred."

With David his father had numbered them, for David had not only numbered his own people, in which he succeeded, 2 Sam. xxiv., but afterwards he numbered the strangers not out of vanity, but that Solomon might have a true account of them, and employ them about his building, as he saw fit. Yet Solomon thought fit to number them again, because death might have made an considerable abatement among them since David's numbering of them, and it behoved him to have an exact account of them.

18 And he set three-score and ten thousand of them to be bearers of burdens, and four-score thousand to be hewers in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred overseers to set the people a work.

CHAP. III.

The place and time of building the temple. The measure and ornaments thereof, 1-9. The cherubims, 10-13. The veil and the pillars, 14-17.

THEN "Solomon began to build the house of the Lord at Jerusalem in mount Moriah, where the Lord appeared unto David his father, in the place that David had prepared in the threshing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite."

Where the Lord appeared unto David, which place the Lord had consecrated by his gracious appearance there, 1 Chron. xxi. 26. Or, which was showed unto David, to wit, to be the place where the temple should be built, which God pointed out to him, partly by his appearance, and principally by his Spirit suggesting this to David at that time. The place that David had prepared, by pulling down the buildings which were upon it, or near it, by levelling the ground, and possibly by marking it out for the temple and courts, the dimensions whereof he very particularly and exactly understood by the Spirit of God. In the threshing-floor, &c. in the place where that threshing-floor formerly stood.

2 And he began to build in the second day of the second month, in the fourth year of his reign.

Of this verse, and the rest of this chapter, see my notes on 1 Kings vi.

3 "Now these are the things whereof Solomon was instructed for the building of the house of God. The length by cubits after the first measure was three-score cubits, and the breadth twenty cubits."

Solomon was instructed, partly by his father David and partly by the Spirit of God which inspired and guided him in the whole work. Or these were Solomon's foundations, the Hebrew verb being put for the noun as it is elsewhere. The sense is, These were the measures of the foundations upon which he intended to build the temple. After the first measure, &c. a cord, to the measure of the first and second cubit. By which it is evident that there were cubits of different sorts and sizes, which also appears from Ezek. xl. 5. & xlvi. 13. But how big the cubits were, and how much larger than the common cubits, and whether this was the cubit used by Moses in the building of the tabernacle, which seems most probable, or some other and yet larger cubit is not agreed among learned men, and cannot now be exactly known, nor is it of any great moment for us to know.

4 And the porch that was in the front of the house, the length of it was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, and the height was an hundred and twenty; and he overlaid it within with pure gold.

The height was an hundred and twenty, this being a kind of turret to the building. The breadth of it here omitted is expressed to be ten cubits, 1 Kings vi. 3.

5 And the greater house he ciled with fir-tree, which he overlaid with fine gold, and set thereon palm trees and chams.

The greater house, &c. the holy place, which was thrice as large as the lesser house, or the holy of holies, which is called the most holy house, &c. 9. See the notes on 1 Chron. xxviii. 11.

6 And he furnished the house with precious stones for beauty, and the gold was gold of Parvaim.

See the notes on 1 Kings ix. 26. &c.

7 He overlaid also the house, the beams, the posts, and the walls thereof, and the doors thereof, with gold, and graved cherubims on the walls.

8 And he made the most holy house, the length whereof was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits; and he overlaid it with fine gold, amounting to six hundred talents.

9 And the weight of the nails was fifty shekels of gold. And he overlaid the upper chambers with gold.

if the nails, i. e. of each of the nails or heads of those which hereby the plates were fastened to the boards. The upper chambers of which see on 1 Chron xxviii 11.

10 And in the most holy house he made two cherubims of image work, and overlaid them with gold.

Of image work, made in the shape of young men or boys, as they commonly are. Or, of movable work, so called because they were not fixed to the mercy-seat, as the Mosiacal cherubims were, but stood upon their feet, as it is said here, ver 13 in a moving posture.

11 And the wings of the cherubims were twenty cubits long: one wing of the one cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the house; and the other wing was likewise five cubits, reaching to the wing of the other cherub.

12 And one wing of the other cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the house; and the other wing was five cubits also, joining to the wing of the other cherub.

13 The wings of these cherubims spread themselves forth twenty cubits; and they stood on their feet, and their faces were inward.

Hith towards the house, or rather, thit house, not the holy house as divers understand it, for then their back must have been turned towards the Ark which was in decent, and directly contrary to the posture of Moses's cherubims, which looked towards it, but the most holy house which was last named, ver 8, and of which he continues yet to speak. This posture being most agreeable to their use which was with their wings to close in the Ark and cover it, it is expressly affirmed below chap v 8.

14 And he made the veil of blue, and purple, and crimson, and fine linen, and wrought cherubims thereon.

The veil to wit the inner veil before the most holy place, as comparing this with Exod xxviii 31. 1 Kings vi 21.

15 Also he made before the house two pillars of thirty and five cubits high, and the chapter that was on the top of each of them was five cubits.

Before the house, i. e. before the holy house, or before the temple as this is explained, ver 17. For it should be understood of the most holy house of which he had spoken before. Thirty and five cubits high to wit, both of them, of which see the notes on 1 Kings vii 15.

16 And he made chains, as in the oracle, and put them on the heads of the pillars, and made an hundred pomegranates, and put them on the chains.

As in the oracle, as he had long or like unto those which he made, in the oracle of which see 1 Kings vi 21. The pomegranate as is oft understood, as Gen xlix 9, Dent xxxiii 23, &c. An hundred pomegranates in each row, or two hundred in all, as it is said, 1 Kings vii 20.

17 And he reared up the pillars before the temple, one on the right hand, and the other on the left; and called the name of that on the right hand Jachin, and the name of that on the left Boaz.

CHAP. IV.

The altar of brass, 1. The molten sea upon twelve oxen, 2-5. The ten lavers, candlesticks, and tables, 6-8. The courts, and the instruments of brass 9-15. The instruments of gold, 19-22.

MOREOVER he made an altar of brass, twenty cubits the length thereof, and twenty cubits the breadth thereof, and ten cubits the height thereof.

Quest. How could this be when God had said Thou shalt not go up by steps unto mine altar, that thy nakedness be not discovered thereon, Exod xx. 26, and steps were necessary for so high an altar as this was? Answer 1. These steps were so made that there was no fear of this inconvenience. 2. That law was useful and fit when it was made, but afterwards, when the priests were commanded to wear linen breeches in their holy ministrations to cover their nakedness, Exod xxviii 42, it was not necessary. 3. However God could undoubtedly dispense with his own law, as here he did, for he it was that gave the dimensions for the altar.

2 And also he made a molten sea of ten cubits from brim to brim, round in compass, and five cubits the height thereof, and a line of thirty cubits did compass it round about.

A molten sea of this and ver 3, 1, 5, &c., see the notes on 1 Kings vii 23, &c.

3 And under it was the similitude of oxen, which did compass it round about: ten in a cubit, compassing the sea round about. Two rows of oxen were cast, when it was cast.

4 It stood upon twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east: and the sea was set above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward.

5 And the thickness of it was an handbreadth, and the brim of it like the work of the brim of a cup, with flowers of lilies, and it received and held three thousand baths.

6 He made also ten lavers, and put five on the right hand, and five on the left, to wash in them: such things as they offered for the burnt offering they washed in them, but the sea was for the priests to wash in.

For, i. e. of which see 1 Kings vii 38, &c.

7 And he made ten candlesticks of gold according to their form, and set them in the temple, five on the right hand, and five on the left.

According to their form, rather, 1. The form which was appointed for them by God, who signified it to David. Or rather, 2. The old form which God prescribed to Moses, Exod xxv 31, &c. for so these were made. And this clause seems to be added here, because in many things there was a great variation from the old form as in the posture of the cherubims, the height of the altar, and divers other things.

8 He made also ten tables, and placed them in the temple, five on the right side, and five on the left. And he made an hundred basins of gold.

Ten tables, of which see 1 Kings vii 48.

9 Furthermore he made the court of the priests, and the great court, and doors for the court, and overlaid the doors of them with brass.

10 And he set the sea on the right side of the east end, over against the south.

11 And Hiram made the pots, and the shovels, and the basins. And Hiram finished the work that he was to make for king Solomon for the house of God.

Of these and the following verses see the notes on 1 Kings vii 40 &c.

12 Two mol, the two pillars, and the pommels and the chapters which were on the top of the two pillars, and the two wreaths to cover the two pommels of the chapters which were on the pillars,

13 And four hundred pomegranates on the two wreaths, two rows of pomegranates on each wreath, to cover the two pommels of the chapters which were upon the pillars.

14 He made also bases, and flavers made he upon the bases,

15 One sea, and twelve oxen under it.

16 The pots also, and the shovels, and the fishhooks, and all their instruments, did Hiram his father make to king Solomon for the house of the Lord of bright brass.

Hiram's father, i. e. Solomon's father, the relative being put before the antecedent, which is not unusual in the Hebrew tongue. And he is so called here because Solomon usually called him by that name out of that great respect which he bore to him for his excellent art and service which he did for him, it being usual to call great artists and inventors of things by this name, of which see Gen. iv. 20, 21. Or, Hiram Abi, or Abi, a man so called, or Hiram the, as chap. ii. 13.

17 In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in the fertile ground between Succoth and Zeredathah.

18 Thus Solomon made all these vessels in great abundance for the weight of the brass could not be found out.

19 And Solomon made all the vessels that were for the house of God, the golden altar also, and the tables whereon the shewbread was set.

Which were of gold and so are distinguished from those ten tables mentioned ver. 8, which seem to have been made of silver. Compare 1 Chron. xviii. 16.

20 Moreover the candlesticks with their lamps, that they should burn after the manner before the oracle, of pure gold.

After the manner, according to the prescription of God to and by Moses.

21 And the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs, made he of gold, and that perfect gold.

22 And the snuffers, and the basins, and the spoons, and the censers, of pure gold, and the entry of the house, the inner doors thereof for the most holy place, and the doors of the house of the temple, were of gold.

To wit, in part, they were made of wood, 1 Kings vi. 30; 2 Kings xviii. 16, but covered with golden plates.

CHAP. V.

The dedicated treasures, i. e. The solemn induction of the ark into the oracle, 2 + 10. Glory as & praise as sung to God, who appears in a cloud, which filled the house, 11-14.

THUS all the work that Solomon made for the house of the Lord was finished; and Solomon brought in all the things that David his father had dedicated; and the silver, and the gold, and all the instruments, put he among the treasures of the house of God.

Or, even (as that participle is understood) the silver and the gold, the remainder of those vast sums mentioned 1 Chron. xxii. 11.

2 Then Solomon assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto Jerusalem, to bring up the ark of the covenant of the Lord out of the city of David, which is Zion.

Of this and the following verses, see the notes on 1 Kings viii. 1, &c.

3 Wherefore all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto the king in the least which was in the seventh month.

4 And all the elders of Israel came, and the Levites took up the ark.

5 And they brought up the ark, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle, these did the priests and the Levites bring up.

6 Also king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel that were assembled unto him before the ark, sacrificed sheep and oxen, which could not be told nor numbered for multitude.

7 And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the Lord unto his place, to the oracle of the house, into the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims.

8 For the cherubims spread forth their wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and the staves thereof above.

9 And they drew out the staves of the ark, that the ends of the staves were seen from the ark before the oracle, but they were not seen without. And there it is unto this day.

When this history was first written not when it was revised by Ezra who made some additions to it, for after the return from Babylon neither staves nor ark were any more seen or heard of.

10 There was nothing in the ark save the two tables which Moses put therein at Horeb, when the Lord made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of Egypt.

11 And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, (for all the priests that were present were sanctified, and did not then wait by course.

According to David's appointment, 1 Chron. xxiv. xxv which was only for the ordinary service, but in extraordinary solemnities, such as this eminently was, they all came together.

12 Also the Levites which were the singers, all of them of Asaph, of Heman, of Jeduthun, with their sons and their brethren, being arrayed in white linen, having cymbals and psalteries and harps, stood at the east end of the altar, and with them an hundred and twenty priests sounding with trumpets )

13 It came even to pass, as the trumpeters and singers were as one, to make one sound to be heard in praising and thanking the Lord; and when they lifted up their voice with the trumpets and cymbals and instruments of musick, and praised the Lord, saying, 'For he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever: then the house was filled with a cloud, even the house of the Lord.

14 So that the priests could not stand to minister by reason of the cloud: for the glory of the Lord had filled the house of God.

CHAP VI

Solomon blesseth the people, and praiseth God. 1-11 His excellent prayer, wherein he sheweth the right use of the temple, 12-42

THEN said Solomon, The Lord hath said that he would dwell in the thick darkness

This whole chapter for the substance and almost all the words of it are explained in the notes on 1 Kings viii

2 But I have built an house of habitation for thee, and a place for thy dwelling for ever

3 And the king turned his face, and blessed the whole congregation of Israel: and all the congregation of Israel stood

4 And he said, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, who hath with his hands fulfilled that which he spake with his mouth to my father David, saying,

5 Since the day that I brought forth my people out of the land of Egypt I chose no city among all the tribes of Israel to build an house in, that my name might be there, neither chose I any man to be a ruler over my people Israel

6 But I have chosen Jerusalem, that my name might be there: and have chosen David to be over my people Israel

7 Now it was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the Lord God of Israel

8 But the Lord said to David my father, Forasmuch as it was in thine heart to build an house for my name, thou didst well in that it was in thine heart

9 Notwithstanding thou shalt not build the house, but thy son which shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house for my name.

10 The Lord therefore hath performed his word that he hath spoken: for I am risen up in the room of David my father, and am set on the throne of Israel, as the Lord promised, and have built the house for the name of the Lord God of Israel.

11 And in it have I put the ark, wherein is the covenant of the Lord, that he made with the children of Israel

12 And he stood before the altar of the Lord in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands

13 For Solomon had made a brassen scaffold, of five cubits long, and five cubits broad, and three cubits high, and had set it in the midst of the court: and upon it he stood, and kneeled down upon his knees before all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven,

14 And said, O Lord God of Israel, there is no God like thee in the heaven, nor in the earth, which keepest covenant, and shewest mercy unto thy servants, that walk before thee with all their hearts.

15 Thou which hast kept with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him, and spakest with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day

16 Now therefore, O Lord God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him, saying, 'I will not fail thee a man in my sight to sit upon the throne of Israel: yet so that thy children take heed to their way to walk in my law, as thou hast walked before me

17 Now then, O Lord God of Israel, let thy word be verified, which thou hast spoken unto thy servant David

18 But will God in very deed dwell with men on the earth? behold, heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain thee: how much less this house which I have built!

19 Have respect therefore to the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O Lord my God, to hearken unto the cry and the prayer which thy servant prayeth before thee

20 That thine eyes may be open upon this house day and night, upon the place where thou hast said that thou wouldest put thy name there, to hearken unto the prayer which thy servant prayeth toward this place

21 Hearken therefore unto the supplications of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, which they shall make toward this place: hear thou from thy dwelling place, even from heaven, and when thou hearest, forgive

22 If a man sin against his neighbour, and an oath be laid upon him to make him swear, and the oath come before thine altar in this house,

23 Then hear thou from heaven, and do, and judge thy servants, by requiting the wicked, by recompensing his way upon his own head; and by justifying the righteous, by giving him according to his righteousness.

24 And if thy people Israel be put to the worse before the enemy, because they have sinned against thee, and shall return and confess thy name, and pray and make supplication before thee in this house;

25 Then hear thou from the heavens, and forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land which thou gavest to them and to their fathers

26 ¶ When the heaven is shut up, and there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee, yet if they pray toward this place, and confess thy name, and turn from their sin, when thou dost afflict them,

27 Then hear thou from heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, when thou hast taught them the good way, wherein they should walk, and send rain upon thy land, which thou hast given unto thy people for an inheritance

28 ¶ If there be dearth in the land, if there be pestilence, if there be blasting, or mildew, locusts, or caterpillers, if their enemies besiege them in the cities of their land, whatsoever sore or whatsoever sickness there be

29 Then what prayer or what supplication soever shall be made of any man, or of all thy people Israel, when every one shall know his own sore and his own grief, and shall spread forth his hands in this house

30 Then hear thou from heaven thy dwelling place, and forgive, and render unto every man according unto all his ways, whose heart thou knowest, (for thou only knowest the hearts of the children of men)

31 That they may fear thee, to walk in thy ways, so long as they live in the land which thou givest unto our fathers

32 ¶ Moreover concerning the stranger, which is not of thy people Israel, but is come from a far country for thy great name's sake, and thy mighty hand, and thy stretched out arm, if they come and pray in this house,

33 Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for: that all people of the earth may know thy name, and fear thee, as doth thy people Israel, and may know that this house which I have built is called by thy name

34 If thy people go out to war against their enemies by the way that thou shalt send them, and they pray unto thee toward this city which thou hast chosen, and the house which I have built for thy name,

35 Then hear thou from the heavens their prayer and their supplication, and maintain their cause

36 If they sin against thee, (for there is no man which sinneth not) and thou be angry with them, and deliver them over before their enemies, and they carry them away captives unto a land far off or hear,

37 Yet if they repent themselves in the land whither they are carried captive, and turn and pray unto thee in the land of their captivity, saying, We have sinned, we have done amiss, and have dealt wickedly;

38 If they return to thee with all their heart, and with all their soul in the land of their captivity, whither they have carried them captive, and pray toward their land, which thou gavest unto their fathers, and toward the city which thou hast chosen, and toward the house which I have built for thy name

39 Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling place, their prayer and their supplications, and maintain their cause, and forgive thy people which have sinned against thee

40 Now, my God, let I beseech thee, thine eyes be open, and let thine ears be attent unto the prayer that is made in this place,

41 Now therefore arise, O Lord God, into thy resting place, thou, and the ark of thy strength: let thy priests, O Lord God, be clothed with salvation, and let thy saints rejoice in goodness

O thou that sittest in the heavens arise from the throne of thy glory, and come down into this place, which thou hast appointed for thy constant and fixed habitation, from which thou wilt not remove, as formerly thou hast done, from place to place. Thou and the ark, i.e. thou in the ark. Of thy strength, which is the sign and instrument of thy great power put forth from time to time on the behalf of thy people. Let thy priests, O Lord God, be clothed with salvation: i.e. let them be adorned and encompassed on every side with thy protection and benediction. For he seems rather to speak of the salvation afforded to the priests, than of that which by God's blessing on the priests' labours is conferred upon the people, thus being a priver for God's blessing upon the whole community, consisting of priests and people. Let thy saints rejoice in goodness: i.e. let them have cause of rejoicing and thanksgiving for the effects of thy goodness imparted unto them

42 O Lord God, turn not away the face of thine anointed: remember the mercies of David thy servant

Of thine anointed, i.e. of me, who by thy command and appointment was anointed the king and ruler of thy people: do not deny my present requests, nor send me back from the throne of thy grace with a sad heart and dejected countenance. The mercies of David thy servant, i.e. those which thou hast promised to David and to his house for ever

CHAP VII.

I saw from heaven and a glory in the temple, witness the Lord a acceptance the people worship, 1-3 Solomon's solemn sacrifices, 4-7 Having kept the feast of tabernacles, and the feast of the dedication of the altar, he dismissed the people, 8-11 God appeareth to Solomon, promiseth his favour on obedience, else the solemnity grievous judgments, 12-22

NOW when Solomon had made an end of praying, the fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices, and the glory of the Lord filled the house.

The fire came down from heaven, in token of God's acceptance of his prayer. See on Lev ix 24, 1 Kings xviii 38. The glory of the Lord, i.e. the cloud, which was the sign of God's glorious and gracious presence

2 And the priests could not enter into the house of the LORD, because the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD's house.

3 And when all the children of Israel saw how the fire came down, and the glory of the LORD upon the house, they bowed themselves with their faces to the ground upon the pavement, and worshipped, and praised the LORD, saying, For he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever.

The cloud first came down upon the house, and then entered into the house, and was seen both within it by the priests, and without it by the people.

4 ¶ Then the king and all the people offered sacrifices before the LORD.

5 And king Solomon offered a sacrifice of twenty and two thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep: so the king and all the people dedicated the house of God.

6 And the priests waited on their offices: the Levites also with instruments of musick of the LORD, which David the king had made to praise the LORD, because his mercy endureth for ever, when David praised by their ministry, and the priests sounded trumpets before them, and all Israel stood.

When David praised by their ministry, for David composed the psalms or hymns, 1 Chron. xvi. 7, and appointed them to be sung by the Levites, and instrumental music to be joined to their voices.

7 Moreover Solomon hallowed the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt offerings, and the fat of the peace offerings, because the brasen altar which Solomon had made was not able to receive the burnt offerings, and the meat offerings, and the fat.

Of this and ver. 8-10, see the notes on 1 Kings viii. 61, &c.

8 ¶ Also at the same time Solomon kept the feast seven days, and all Israel with him, a very great congregation from the entering in of Hamath unto the river of Egypt.

9 And in the eighth day they made a solemn assembly: for they kept the dedication of the altar seven days, and the feast seven days.

10 And on the three and twentieth day of the seventh month he sent the people away into their tents, glad and merry in heart for the goodness that the LORD had shewed unto David, and to Solomon, and to Israel his people.

11 Thus Solomon finished the house of the LORD, and the king's house, and all that came into Solomon's heart to make in the house of the LORD, and in his own house, he prosperously effected.

See on 1 Kings ix. 1, 2.

12 ¶ And the LORD appeared to Solomon by night, and said unto him, I have heard thy prayer, and have chosen this place to myself for an house of sacrifice.

13 If I shut up heaven that there be no rain, or if I command the locusts to devour the land, or if I send pestilence among my people.

If I command the locusts, I use my authority and power over them to cause them to do so. A metaphor elsewhere used in reference to unreasonable creatures, as 1 Kings xii. 4; Amos ix. 3, who are not properly capable of a command, or of obedience.

14 If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land.

15 Now mine eyes shall be open, and mine ears attent unto the prayer that is made in this place.

Or that shall be made in or towards this place, for he speaks of the answers which he will give to the prayers which shall be made here. Heb. of this place.

16 For now have I chosen and sanctified this house, that my name may be there for ever: and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.

Of this verse and the rest of this chapter, see the notes on 1 Kings ix. 3, &c.

17 And as for thee, if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, and do according to all that I have commanded thee, and shalt observe my statutes and my judgments, 18 Then will I establish the throne of thy kingdom, according as I have covenanted with David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man to be ruler in Israel.

19 But if ye turn away and forsake my statutes and my commandments, which I have set before you, and shall go and serve other gods, and worship them,

20 Then will I pluck them up by the roots out of my land which I have given them; and this house which I have sanctified for my name, will I cast out of my sight, and will make it to be a proverb and a byword among all nations.

21 And this house, which is high, shall be an astonishment to every one that passeth by it, so that he shall say, Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and unto this house?

22 And it shall be answered, Because they forsook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, and laid hold on other gods, and worshipped them, and served them: therefore hath he brought all this evil upon them.

CHAP. VIII.

Solomon's buildings, 1-6. The heathen who remained in the land he maketh tributaries; but the Israelites rulers, 7-11. His yearly solemn sacrifices: he appointed the priests and Levites their places, 12-16. The navy fetcheth gold from Ophir, 17, 18.

AND it came to pass at the end of twenty years, wherein Solomon had built the house of the LORD, and his own house,

2 That the cities which Hiram had restored to Solomon, Solomon built them, and caused the children of Israel to dwell there

Which Hiram restored to Solomon, which Solomon gave to Hiram, who not being pleased with them, 1 Kings ix. 12, 13, here returns them to him again

3 And Solomon went to Hamath-zobah, and prevailed against it

4 And he built Tadmor in the wilderness, and all the store cities, which he built in Hamath

Of this and the following verses, see on 1 Kings ix. 17, &c

5 Also he built Beth-horon the upper, and Beth-horon the nether, fenced cities, with walls, gates, and bars,

6 And Baalath, and all the store cities that Solomon had, and all the chariot cities, and the cities of the horsemen, and all that Solomon designed to build in Jerusalem, and in Lebanon, and throughout all the land of his dominion

7 As for all the people that were left of the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which were not of Israel,

8 But of their children, who were left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel consumed not, them did Solomon make to pay tribute until this day

9 But of the children of Israel did Solomon make no servants for his work, but they were men of war, and chief of his captains, and captains of his chariots and horsemen

10 And these were the chief of king Solomon's officers, even two hundred and fifty, that bare rule over the people

11 And Solomon brought up the daughter of Pharaoh out of the city of David unto the house that he had built for her for he said, My wife shall not dwell in the house of David king of Israel, because the places are holy, which unto the ark of the Lord hath come

Not because every place where once the ark came was thereby consecrated to God, and might not after the ark was gone be put to any common use, for then both the house of Obadedom and all other places where the ark either rested or passed were made holy thereby, and unlawful for men to dwell in, but either, 1 Because she was a woman, and attended by many other women who besides the common pollutions of all, are subject to many and frequent ceremonial pollutions peculiar to their sex and either she, or at least many of her followers might be heathens at this time, and therefore he thought it indecent that such persons should come as it were in God's stead, and succeed him in the place where he had dwelt Or, 2 He speaks not of the time when the ark was gone but whilst it was there, and these words contain a reason not of the more remote words, why he now brought her up thither but of the words immediately preceding, why he built this house for her, because the ark was now in the house of David, which therefore ought to be kept pure and free from the very slightest appearance of pollution

12 Then Solomon offered burnt offerings unto the Lord on the altar of the Lord, which he had built before the porch

13 Even after a certain rate every day, offering according to the commandment of Moses, on the sabbaths, and on the new moons, and on the solemn feasts, three times in the year, even in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles

14 And he appointed, according to the order of David his father, the courses of the priests to their service, and the Levites to their charges, to praise and minister before the priests, as the duty of every day required the porters also by their courses at every gate for so had David the man of God commanded

The man of God, i. e. a prophet inspired by God in those matters, whose commands therefore are the commands of God

15 And they departed not from the commandment of the king unto the priests and Levites concerning any matter, or concerning the treasures

16 Now all the work of Solomon was prepared unto the day of the foundation of the house of the Lord, and until it was finished So the house of the Lord was perfected

All the work of Solomon was prepared, all the material, were procured, and in all points squared, and fitted, and completed beforehand

17 Then went Solomon to Ezion-gebir, and to Elath, at the sea side in the land of Edom

Of this and the next verse, see the notes on 1 Kings ix. 26 &c

18 And Hiram sent him by the hands of his servants ships, and servants that had knowledge of the sea, and they went with the servants of Solomon to Ophir, and took thence four hundred and fifty talents of gold, and brought them to king Solomon

CHAP. IX.

The queen of Sheba visiteth Solomon, and admitteth his wisdom, queth and receiveth presents, 1—12 Solomon's gold, his targets, and shields, 13—16 The throne of ivory, 17—19 His vessels, his presents, 20—23 His chariots and horses, his tributes, his reign and death 25—31

AND when the queen of Sheba heard of the fame of Solomon, she came to prove Solomon with hard questions at Jerusalem, with a very great company, and camels that bare spices, and gold in abundance, and precious stones and when she was come to Solomon, she communed with him of all that was in her heart.

Almost all this chapter is contained in 1 Kings x, where it is explained

2 And Solomon told her all her questions and there was nothing hid from Solomon which he told her not

3 And when the queen of Sheba had seen the wisdom of Solomon, and the house that he had built,

4 And the meat of his table, and the sitting of his servants, and the attendance of his ministers, and their apparel; his cupbearers also, and their apparel, and his ascent by which he went up into the house of the Lord; there was no more spirit in her

5 And she said to the king, It was a true report which I heard in mine own land of thine acts, and of thy wisdom.

6 Howbeit I believed not their words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it: and, behold, the half of the greatness of thy wisdom was not told me: for thou exceedest the fame that I heard.

7 Happy are thy men, and happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, and hear thy wisdom.

8 Blessed be the Lord thy God, which delighted in thee to set thee on his throne, to be king for the Lord thy God: because thy God loved Israel, to establish them for ever, therefore made he thee king over them, to do judgment and justice.

King for the Lord. i. e. in the Lord's name and stead both in general, because all kings have and hold their kingdoms from God, and act as his vicegerents and deputies, and in a special manner, because he sat in God's own throne, and ruled over God's peculiar people, and did in a singular and eminent manner maintain the honour and worship of God in his land, and in the eyes of all the world besides.

9 And she gave the king an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices great abundance, and precious stones: neither was there any such spice as the queen of Sheba gave king Solomon.

10 And the servants also of Huram, and the servants of Solomon, which brought gold from Ophir, brought alburnum trees and precious stones.

11 And the king made of the alburnum trees terraces to the house of the Lord, and to the king's palace, and harps and psalteries for singers: and therewith none such seen before in the land of Judah.

12 And king Solomon gave to the queen of Sheba all her desire, whatsoever she asked, beside that which she had brought unto the king. So she turned, and went away to her own land, she and her servants.

Besides that which she had brought, besides what he gave of his royal bounty, as it is expressed, 1 Kings x. 13, which was compensation for her presents, as is here noted.

13 Now the weight of gold that came to Solomon, in one year was six hundred and threescore and six talents of gold;

14 Beside that which chapmen and merchants brought. And all the kings of Arabia and governors of the country brought gold and silver to Solomon.

15 And king Solomon made two hundred targets of beaten gold: six hundred shekels of beaten gold went to one target.

16 And three hundred shields made he of beaten gold: three hundred shekels of gold went to one shield. And the king put them in the house of the forest of Lebanon.

17 Moreover the king made a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with pure gold.

18 And there were six steps to the throne, with a footstool of gold, which were fastened to the throne, and stays on each side of the sitting place, and two lions standing by the stays.

19 And twelve lions stood there on the one side and on the other upon the six steps: there was not the like made in any kingdom.

20 And all the drinking vessels of king Solomon were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of pure gold: none were of silver; it was not any thing accounted of in the days of Solomon.

21 For the king's ships went to Tarshish with the servants of Huram: every three years once came the ships of Tarshish bringing gold, and silver, ivory, and apes, and peacocks.

22 And king Solomon passed all the kings of the earth in riches and wisdom.

23 And all the kings of the earth sought the presence of Solomon, to hear his wisdom, that God had put in his heart.

24 And they brought every man his present, vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment, harness, and spices, horses, and mules, a rate year by year.

25 And Solomon had four thousand stalls for horses and chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, whom he bestowed in the chariot cities, and with the king at Jerusalem.

Four thousand stalls to wit, greater stalls, in each of which were ten stalls, in all forty thousand stalls, as it is 1 Kings x. 26 where see the notes.

26 And he reigned over all the kings from the river even unto the land of the Philistines, and to the border of Egypt.

27 And the king made silver in Jerusalem as stones, and cedar trees made he as the sycamore trees that are in the low plains in abundance.

28 And they brought unto Solomon horses out of Egypt, and out of all lands.

29 Now the rest of the acts of Solomon, first and last, are they not written in the book of Nathan the prophet, and in the prophecy of Ahijah the Shilonite, and in the visions of Iddo the seer against Jeroboam the son of Nebat?

Iddo the seer, mentioned also chap. xii. 15, supposed to be the same who is called Oded, chap. xv. 1. Thus, and the other prophets mentioned, were also historians, and wrote some annals or histories of their times, out of which these sacred and canonical books were taken, either by these or other prophets.

30 And Solomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel forty years.

31 And Solomon slept with his fathers, and he was buried in the city of David his father, and Rehoboam his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. X.

Rehoboam made king. The Israelites by Jeroboam requested a separation, 1-5. Rehoboam refusing the old men's counsel, by the advice of young men, answered them roughly, 6-15. Ten tribes revolting, kill Hadadram, and make Rehoboam to flee, 16-19.

AND Rehoboam went to Shechem for to Shechem were all Israel come to make him king

The contents of this chapter are in 1 Kings xii, where see the notes

2 And it came to pass, when Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who was in Egypt, whither he had fled from the presence of Solomon the king, heard it, that Jeroboam returned out of Egypt

3 And they sent and called him So Jeroboam and all Israel came and spake to Rehoboam, saying,

And they sent, or, for (as that particle is oft used, as hath been noted before) they had sent &c So this is the reason why he returned, as was said, ver 2

4 Thy father made our yoke grievous now therefore ease thou somewhat the grievous servitude of thy father, and his heavy yoke that he put upon us, and we will serve thee

5 And he said unto them Come again unto me after three days And the people departed

6 ¶ And king Rehoboam took counsel with the old men that had stood before Solomon his father while he yet lived, saying, What counsel give ye me to return answer to this people?

7 And they spake unto him, saying, If thou be kind to this people, and please them and speak good words to them, they will be thy servants for ever

8 But he forsook the counsel which the old men gave him, and took counsel with the young men that were brought up with him, that stood before him

9 And he said unto them, What advice give ye that we may return answer to this people, which have spoken to me, saying, Ease somewhat the yoke that thy father did put upon us?

10 And the young men that were brought up with him spake unto him, saying Thus shalt thou answer the people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it somewhat lighter for us, thus shalt thou say unto them My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins

<sup>c 1 Kings 12 10</sup> 11 For whereas my father put a heavy yoke upon you, I will put more to your yoke my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions

12 So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam on the third day, as the king bade, saying, Come again to me on the third day

13 And the king answered them roughly, and king Rehoboam forsook the counsel of the old men,

14 And answered them after the advice of the young men, saying My father made your yoke heavy, but I will add thereto my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions

15 So the king hearkened not unto the people: for the cause was of God, that the king might perform his word, which he spake by the hand of Ahijah the Shilonite to Jeroboam the son of Nebat

16 ¶ And when all Israel saw that the king would not hearken unto them, the people answered the king, saying, What portion have we in David? and we have none inheritance in the son of Jesse every man to your tents, O Israel: and now, David, see to thine own house. So all Israel went to their tents.

17 But as for the children of Israel that dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them

18 Then king Rehoboam sent Hadoram that was over the tribute; and the children of Israel stoned him with stones, that he died But king Rehoboam made speed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem

19 And Israel rebelled against the house of David unto this day.

CHAP. XI

Rehoboam raising an army to subdue Israel, is forbidden by Shemaiah, 1—4 He strengtheneth his kingdom with forts and provision 5—12 The priests and Levites, and such as feared God forsaken by Jeroboam, who turneth idolaters, strengthen the kingdom of Judah, 13—17 The wives and children of Rehoboam, 18—23

AND when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he gathered of the house of Judah and Benjamin an hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men which were warriors, to fight against Israel, that he might bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam

<sup>a 1 Kings 12 21, &c</sup> Of this verse, and ver 2—4, see the notes on 1 Kings xii 21 &c

2 But the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah the man of God, saying,

3 Speak unto Rehoboam the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and to all Israel in Judah and Benjamin, saying,

4 Thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not go up nor fight against your brethren return every man to his house for this thing is done of me And they obeyed the words of the LORD, and returned from going against Jeroboam

5 ¶ And Rehoboam dwelt in Jerusalem, and built cities for defence in Judah

Built cities &c repaired, and enlarged, and fortified them, as building is oft used in Scripture, as hath been formerly proved, for these cities, or divers of them, were built before, as appears from Josh x 10, xii 15, &c 21, 33, 35 38, xiv 42

6 He built even Beth-lehem, and Etam, and Tekoa

7 And Beth-zur, and Shoco, and Adullam,

8 And Gath, and Marreshah, and Ziph,

9 And Adoraim, and Lachish, and Azekab,

10 And Zorah, and Ajalon, and Hebron, which are in Judah and in Benjamin fenced cities.

11 And he fortified the strong holds, and put captains in them, and store of victual, and of oil and wine

12 And in every several city he put shields and spears, and made them exceeding strong having Judah and Benjamin on his side

In every several city, to wit, so fortified, as he said, ver 11

13 ¶ And the priests and the Levites ants; that they may know my service, and the service of the kingdoms of the countries

That they may experimentally know and feel the difference between my yoke and the yoke of a foreign and idolatrous prince, and what mischief they have done to themselves by forsaking me and my service

9 <sup>1 Kings</sup> So Shishak king of Egypt came up 16 20 25 against Jerusalem, and took away the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house, he took all he carried away also the shields of gold which Solomon had made Upon which condition, and Rehoboam's submission to him, he delivered up to him the fenced cities of Judah, which he had taken, ver 4 But of this and the two next verses, see on 1 Kings xv 26, &c

10 Instead of which king Rehoboam made shields of brass, and committed them to the hands of the chief of the guard, that kept the entrance of the king's house

11 And when the king entered into the house of the Lord the guard came and fetched them, and brought them again into the guard chamber

12 And when he humbled himself, the wrath of the Lord turned from him, that he would not destroy him altogether and also in Judah things went well

13 <sup>Or and yet on Judah there were good things see Gen 26
26 & 1 Kin
14 15 ch
11 1</sup> Heb These were good things The meaning is either
1 Though there were many corruptions in Judah yet there were also divers good things there, which were not in Israel, as the word and ordinances, and pure worship of God, prophetic and ministers of God's institution and divers truly religious people And so this is an additional reason why God would not destroy him Or, 2 Notwithstanding this loss they began to recruit themselves and to regain some degree of their former prosperity, whence it follows ver 14, so, there being some requite given, and peace being restored, Rehoboam strengthened himself, &c

13 ¶ So king Rehoboam strengthened himself in Jerusalem, and reigned for 1 Kings
14 21
Rehoboam was one and forty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the Lord had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, to put his name there
And his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess.

14 And he did evil, because he ¶ prepared not his heart to seek the Lord

Prepared not or directed not, or settled not &c, i e although he humbled himself and seemed penitent for a season, and professed the true religion and worship of God, yet he quickly relapsed into his former sins because he was not sincere nor serious in his actions, and his heart was not right with God

15 Now the acts of Rehoboam, first and last, are they not written in the book of Shemaiah the prophet, and of Iddo the scribe concerning genealogies?
And there were wars between Rehoboam and Jeroboam continually

Concerning genealogies an historical account written by him of the genealogies and actions of the kings of Judah

16 And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David and Abijah his son reigned in his stead

CHAP. XIII.

Abijah warreth against Jeroboam king of Israel, 1-3, declareth the right of his cause, 4-12; trusteth in God;
overcometh Jeroboam, 13-20 His wives and children, 21, 22

NOW in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam began Abijah to reign over Judah

2 He reigned three years in Jerusalem.
His mother's name also was Michajah the daughter of Uriel of Gibeah And there was war between Abijah and Jeroboam

Michajah the daughter of Uriel, called Maachah the daughter of Absalom, 1 Kings xv 2 She might be daughter to one, and granddaughter to the other, or the proper and natural daughter of the one, and the other's by adoption, of which there are instances in Scripture, or the same person might be called Uriel and Absalom see 1 Kings xv 2

3 And Abijah set the battle in array with an army of valiant men of war, even four hundred thousand chosen men: Jeroboam also set the battle in array against him with eight hundred thousand chosen men, being mighty men of valour.

Abijah set the battle in array against Jeroboam We need not scrupulously inquire into the lawfulness of this war for this Abijah, though here he makes a fair flourish, and maintained the better cause, yet was indeed an un-godly man, 1 Kings xv 3, and therefore minded not the satisfaction of his conscience, but only the recovery of his parent's ancient dominions

4 ¶ And Abijah stood up upon mount Zemaraim, which is in mount Ephraim, and said, Hear me, thou Jeroboam, and all Israel,

Upon Mount Zemaraim some commodious place whence his voice might be heard by Jeroboam, and some of his host who possibly were pitched in the valley Or the two armies being pitched near to one another, Abijah might drive a parley before they fought, whereupon Jeroboam, and some of his commanders and soldiers, might draw near to him, and stand below him at the bottom of the hill, where they might hear his speech, which Jeroboam was the more willing to do, that in the mean time he might cause an ambushment to come behind Abijah and his army, as he did, ver 13, whilst he was quietly standing before them, and seemed to hearken to any terms of accommodation which might be offered

5 Ought ye not to know that the Lord
God of Israel gave the kingdom over Israel to David for ever, even to him and to his sons by a covenant of salt?

1 e By a perpetual covenant which thy usurpation cannot disannul For the phrase see on Numb xvi 19

6 Yet Jeroboam the son of Nebat, the servant of Solomon the son of David, is risen up, and hath rebelled against his lord

7 And there are gathered unto him vain men, the children of Belial, and have strengthened themselves against Rehoboam the son of Solomon, when Rehoboam was young and tenderhearted, and could not withstand them

The children of Belial, such as have cast off the yoke and obedience which they owed both to God and to their king
When Rehoboam was young, not in age, for he was then forty-one years old, but in his kingdom, which he had but newly obtained, and in experience in politics; and especially in military affairs, to which he was wholly a stranger, as having been born and bred up in a time of great peace and security Tender-hearted, i.e. cowardly and fearful, who durst not adventure to chastise the rebels as he should have done. But he ruin Abijah forgot his duty, both to his father, whom he falsely traduced, and to God, by whose express command Rehoboam was restrained from the war against Israel which otherwise he had both courage and resolution to prosecute, as appears from the history, 1 Kings xii 21.

8 And now ye think to withstand the kingdom of the Lord in the hand of the sons of David, and ye be a great multitude, and there are with you golden calves, which Jeroboam made you for gods

1 Kings 12
N. & 14. 8
110. R. 8

The kingdom of the Lord in the hand of the sons of David, that kingdom which was not set up by vain men in pursuance of their own ambition and discontent as yours was but ordained and established by God himself in the house of David. And ye be a great multitude or because (that Hebrew participle being oft so used) ye be, &c. This he mentions partly as the ground of their confidence, that they had more tribes and a greater host, and partly as a prize of their downfall, which trusting to the arm of flesh is. And there are with you golden calves, or but there are. &c. There is that among you which may damp your courage and confidence you worship those images which God abhors and severely forbids. For gods or for God, as that plural word is most commonly used, i.e. instead of God, to give them the name of God as Exod xxiii 1, and that worship which is peculiar to him

9 Have ye not cast out the priests of the Lord, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites, and have made you priests after the manner of the nations of other lands?

1 Kings 12
N. & 14. 8
110. R. 8

so that whosoever cometh to consecrate himself with a young bullock and seven rams, the same may be a priest of them that are no gods

To consecrate himself, i.e. to make himself a priest see on Lev vii 37. That are no gods, that have nothing of the nature or power, though you give them the name of gods

10 But as for us, the Lord is our God, and we have not forsaken him, and the priests, which minister unto the Lord are the sons of Aaron, and the Levites wait upon their business

The Lord Heb Jehoval, the only true and great God. We have not forsaken him, we maintain his honour and worship, which you have utterly rejected

11 And they burn unto the Lord every morning and every evening burnt sacrifices and sweet incense: the shewbread also set they in order upon the pure table, and the candlestick of gold with the lamps thereof to burn every evening for we keep the charge of the Lord our God, but ye have forsaken him

The pure table, so called because it was made of pure gold, Exod xxv 23, 24. The candlestick, he saith table and candlestick though there were ten of each, chap iv 7. 4, either, 1 Because Shishak had carried away all but one. Or, 2 The singular number is put for the plural, as 1 Kings vii 18, and oft else where. Or, 3 Because ordinarily there was but one of each used at a time for those uses. To burn every evening, and from evening to morning continually, Lev. xxiv 2, 3, for which end one candlestick was sufficient and it is very improbable that all the candlesticks were used every night. We keep the charge of the Lord our God, this he saith, though he was an ungodly king, either because he flattered himself, and fancied that his keeping up the external worship of God would make full satisfaction for the errors of his life, or that he might thereby encourage his own soldiers, and convince or terrify his enemies

12 And, behold, God himself is with us for our captain, and his priests with sounding trumpets to cry alarm against you. O children of Israel, fight ye not against the Lord God of your fathers, for ye shall not prosper

With sounding trumpets to cry alarm against you, upon the sounding whereof God hath solemnly promised to assist his people, Numb x 9. Fight ye not against the Lord God of your fathers, you have not only us for your enemies, but God, even the God whom your fathers honoured and served, to their own great comfort and benefit

13 But Jeroboam caused an ambushment to come about behind them so they were before Judah, and the ambushment was behind them

Whilst Abijah was discoursing, Jeroboam takes the advantage of it to lay an ambush

14 And when Judah looked back, behold, the battle was before and behind and they cried unto the Lord, and the priests sounded with the trumpets

15 Then the men of Judah gave a shout and as the men of Judah shouted, it came to pass, that God smote Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah

By strengthening the hearts and hands of the men of Judah, and taking away the spirits and power of their enemies, and, it may be, by some extraordinary assistance

16 And the children of Israel fled before Judah and God delivered them into their hand

17 And Abijah and his people slew them with a great slaughter so there fell down slain of Israel five hundred thousand chosen men

A vast number but it hath been observed and recorded by sacred and profane historians, that in those ancient times there were very numerous armies and oftentimes very great slaughter, and if this slaughter was more than ordinary there is nothing strange or incredible, because the Almighty God fought against the giants

18 Thus the children of Israel were brought under at that time, and the children of Judah prevailed, because they relied upon the Lord God of their fathers

They put their trust in him, and confidently expected help from him which is a disposition of heart that God prize and take kindly. See 2 Kings xviii 5, 2 Chron xx 20, Psal xxii 4, Dan vi 28

19 And Abijah pursued after Jeroboam, and took cities from him, Beth-el with the towns thereof, and Jeshanah with the towns thereof

Beth-el, which Jeroboam recovered afterwards, as appears by the course of the history though it be not particularly mentioned which is the case of many other considerable things. And in the mean time it is very probable, that when Jeroboam's host was disappointed, and he expected that Abijah would pursue his victory, he removed the golden calf from Beth-el, which lay near Abijah's kingdom, to some safer place Ephraim, a city so called, possibly the same which is mentioned John xi 54, or that which is called Ophrah, Judg vii 27

20 Neither did Jeroboam recover strength again in the days of Abijah and the Lord struck him, and he died

The Lord struck him i.e. Jeroboam is appears from the contrary condition of Abijah described in the next verse. Him God might strike, either with vexation and horror of mind or with some painful and lingering, but incurable, disease, like that of Jehoram, which tormented him two years together, and at last killed him 2 Chron xxi 19 He died, not presently, but a year or two after this time

N. & 14. 8
110. R. 8

21 ¶ But Abijah waxed mighty, and married fourteen wives, and begat twenty and two sons, and sixteen daughters

Not now after this victory for he died presently after it, but in the whole time of his life, before he was king and afterward

22 And the rest of the acts of Abijah, and his ways, and his sayings, are written in the || story of the prophet Iddo

Asa is made King, he destroyeth idolatry, 1—5 Having peace, he strengtheneth his kingdom with forts and armies, 6—8 In a short calling on God, he overthroweth Zerah, and spoileth the Ethiopians, 9—15

155 SO Abijah slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David and <sup>1 Kings 15</sup> 16 Asa his son reigned in his stead In his days the land was quiet ten years

1 c There was no open war, either by Baasha or others, only there were secret grudges and private hostilities between his and Baasha's subjects, 1 Kings xv 16

2 And Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord his God

Of this and the next verse, see on 1 Kings xv 11, 12

3 For he took away the altars of the strange gods, and the high places, and brake down the images, and cut down the groves

4 And commanded Judah to seek the Lord God of their fathers, and to do the law and the commandment

By his royal edicts he required them to worship God and him only and to practise all which the laws of Moses required of them

5 Also he took away out of all the cities of Judah the high places and the images and the kingdom was quiet before him

6 ¶ And he built fenced cities in Judah for the land had rest, and he had no war in those years, because the Lord had given him rest

7 Therefore he said unto Judah, Let us build these cities, and make about them walls, and towers gates, and bars, while the land is yet before us because we have sought the Lord our God, we have sought him, and he hath given us rest on every side So they built and prospered

Yc before us i e in our power, as that phrase is oft used See on Gen xiii 9

8 And Asa had an army of men that bare targets and spears, out of Judah three hundred thousand, and out of Benjamin, that bare shields and drew bows two hundred and fourscore thousand. all these were mighty men of valour

Asa had an army which it seems he had now gathered together upon the information of Zerah's design against him

9 ¶ And there came out against them Zerah the Ethiopian with an host of a thousand thousand, and three hundred chariots and came unto Maresah

The Ethiopians, or, the Arabs the Hebrew word Arabs is commonly used as hath been noted before, these being much nearer to Asa than the Ethiopians who also could not have come to Asa but through Egypt which probably the king of Egypt would not permit him to do Maresah, a city upon and within the borders of Judah, Josh xv 14

10 Then Asa went out against him, and they set the battle in array in the valley of Zephathah at Maresah

11 And Asa cried unto the Lord his God, and said, Lord, it is nothing with thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power help us, O Lord our God, for we rest on thee, and in thy name we go against this multitude O Lord, thou art our God; let not man prevail against thee

It is nothing with thee, i e there is no difference, nor no difficulty, with thee In thy name, by thy commission, in confidence of thy assistance, and for the maintenance of thy honour, and service, and people

12 So the Lord smote the Ethiopians before Asa, and before Judah, and the Ethiopians fled

13 And Asa and the people that were with him pursued them unto Gerar and the Ethiopians were overthrown, for they could not recover themselves, for they were destroyed before the Lord, and before his host, and they carried away very much spoil

Gerar, a city of the Philistines who probably were confederate with them in this design

14 And they smote all the cities round about Gerar, for the fear of the Lord came upon them and they spoiled all the cities, for there was exceeding much spoil in them

They smote all the cities round about Gerar, partly because they had joined with Zerah in this war, and partly because the Ethiopians had sheltered a great part of the remains of the army in them

15 They smote also the tents of cattle, and carried away sheep and camels in abundance, and returned to Jerusalem

The tents of cattle i e the dwellers in tents, which were either a part of Zerah's company or joined with them, or had come along with them to furnish that great host with necessary provisions which their custom of dwelling in tents made them more capable of doing

CHAP XV

Isa, with Judah and many of Israel, moved by Azariah the prophet renew a solemn covenant with God, 1—15 He removeth Manasse his mother for her idolatry, burneth the hallowed things again into the temple, and enjoineth a long peace, 16—19

AND the Spirit of God came upon Azariah the son of Oded

2 And he went out to meet Asa, and said unto him, Hear ye me, Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin, The Lord is with you, while ye be with him, and if ye seek him, he will be found of you, but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you

The Lord is with you to defend you against all your enemies as now you have seen and you may hereafter expect, if you persist in that good course into which you are entered If ye forsake him, he will forsake you but let not this victory make you presumptuous or self-confident for you are upon your good behaviour, and if you leave God, he will leave and destroy you after he hath done good

Heb For many days have been to Israel without the true God, &c. i. e. they have long lived without the sound knowledge and worship of the true God. The prophet confirms his foregoing exhortation and the threatening annexed to it, that if they forsake God, he would forsake them, from the usual manner of God's dealing with Israel formerly and the ease in the same case they may expect the same usage Israel, here mentioned and propounded as an example is here understood either 1. Specially of the ten tribes distinguished by that name from the kingdom of Judah, whose condition had been, since Jeroboam's revolt, and now was such in some measure, as is here described, they having been and still being, without God and his true worship, and therefore exposed to many vexations and wars and miseries. But these had not as yet turned unto God or sought him nor was God yet found of them as is said of this Israel, ver 4. Nor had they as yet been exercised with those vexations and continual vexations and wars and mutual destructions of which he here speaks, ver 5, 6 and which in succeeding times they felt, for except it one blow which they had from Abiyah chap xiii we read of none other great mischiefs which befall them. Or rather 2. Generally of the whole nation of Israel in former times, and especially in the times of the judges, to which all that follows suits very well, for then many times they were though not wholly and universally yet in a very great measure and for the generality of them without God and his law and teaching priests, as plainly appears from divers passages in the Book of the Judges, and then indeed they were brought to all the exigences and calamities here following, then they and grievous wars both foreign and domestic, and then they did sometimes turn to the Lord and sought him and he was found of them, and did raise up judges and saviours to them of which see Judges in it large, and Judg. in 9, 10, &c.

When they did turn to Israel mentioned verse 2

July 26

In those times when Israel lived in the gross neglect and contempt of God and his law and worship. No care to him that went out nor to him that came in men could not go abroad about their private occasions without great danger, as it was in the days of Shimeon. Judge 5 to which is a good comment upon this text. Of the countries Heb. of these countries i. e. the divers parts of the land of Israel, both within and without Jordan.

Nation was destroyed of nation i. e. one part of the people of Israel destroyed the other by civil wars, of which see instances Judg. ix. 23, &c. xii. 1, &c. 4. of the people of Israel are called a nation so the several tribes and families of them are sometimes called nations as Gen. xvi. 1, Ezek. ii. 3. Acts iv. 27 compared with Ps. ii. 1.

Be ye strong therefore, go on in the race courageously and resolutely to maintain God's worship and to root out idolatry as you have begun to do, for this is the only right method of preserving yourselves from such calamities as your predecessors have felt. Let not your hands be weak, be not discouraged with the opposition which you may possibly meet with. Your work shall be rewarded, what you do for God and for his honour and service shall not go unrewarded.

9 And he gathered all Judah and Benjamin, and the strangers with them out of Ephraim and Manassah, and out of Simeon: for they fell to him out of Israel in abundance: when they saw that the Lord his God was with him.

Out of Simeon, which tribe they had their inheritance out of the portion of Judah did for the generality of them revolt to Jeroboam with the other tribes, as appears from many passages of Scripture, which they might conveniently do, because their portion bordered, as on one side upon that of Judah, so on the other side upon that of Dan, and therefore might indifferently join with the one or other, as he saw fit. They fell to him to wit, from the king of Israel.

10 So they gathered themselves together at Jerusalem in the third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Asa

In the third month, to wit, of the third year, in which the feast of weeks or of pentecost fell, of which see Exodus xxiii 16, Deut xvi 9. In the fiftieth year of the reign of the Assy had peace but ten years, chap xiv 1, after which probably there were some bickerings and skirmishes, which seem to have been composed, and after that Zerah comes against him, and is discomfited. Upon this great success many of the Israelites fall to him, and in his fiftieth year he calls this assembly

They entered into a covenant, they engaged themselves by a serious and solemn covenant, before the Lord and this great assembly

13 <sup>1</sup>That whosoever would not seek the LORD God of Israel <sup>2</sup>should be put to death, whether small or great, whether man or woman

Whoever should obstinately refuse to pay unto God that solemn worship which he required at his temple in Jerusalem, or should deny God, or serve other gods, should be put to death, by virtue of all those laws which command that such persons should be cut off, and in punishment of that law Deut. xxi. 21. Compare Heb. x. 28.

14 And they swore unto the Lord with a loud voice, and with shouting, and with trumpets, and with cornets.

15 And all Judah rejoiced at the oath for they had sworn with all their heart, and sought him with their whole desire, and he was found of them: and the Lord gave them rest round about.

All Judah rejoiced in a great number of the people, as such general expressions are frequently understood, for none doubt but there were many dissemblers and ungodly men at the time among them.

CHAPTER XVI

Isa mal'ch i haqnu with the Syrians against the king of Israel 1-6, for which the prophet reproving him he put with him into prison 7-10 He is rich, and seeketh to the pleasures, and not to God his death and burial 11-13

IN the six and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa *Baasha king of Israel came up against Judah, and built Ramah, *to the intent that he might let none <sup>of</sup> out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

(If the reign of Asa or of the kingdom of Israel at the kingdom of Judah which was now Asa's kingdom, & from the time of the division of the two kingdoms. Rehoboam reigned seventeen year chap xv 13, Abijah three years, chap xii 2. Asa had now reigned fifteen years, chap xv 10, all which put together, make up the thirty-five years mentioned chap xv 19. And in the next verse a Banath was sent from him at the ground of war was the defection of many of his subjects to Asa chap xv 9, whom Asa endeavours to call together with his own subjects, by an oath and a promise to be true and faithful to God, and consequently to himself which was done in his nineteenth year chap. xv 9, 10 and therefore in his sixteenth year called here the thirty-sixth year of his kingdom, he commeth forth again war against him. If it be objected, That the reign or kingdom of Asa is otherwise understood of the time of A's personal reign (As I have call it,) chap xv 10, the answer is obvious, That there are many instances in Scripture (some of which have been formerly given, and others will be given in their proper places) where the same word or phrase is taken differently, and that in the very same chapter and history. And particularly this variety is elsewhere used, both by sacred and profane writers in the computation of the years of princes, which are sometimes reckoned from the beginning of their reign, and sometimes from other remarkable times and occurrences. Thus Nebuchadnezzar's years are sometimes computed from the beginning of his reign as 2 Kings xxv 8, Jer. li 12 29, 30 and sometimes from his complete conquest of Syria and Egypt, &c., as that passage, Dan ii 1, In the second year of Nebuchadnezzar, is by the general stream of it interpreted understood. Thus Ahaziah's years, which doubtless were usually computed from the time of his birth, are computed from another head, chap xxii 2 where see the note. And the like differences are observed in computing the years of some of the Syrian monarchs and Roman emperors, and particularly of Augustus the years of whose reign are variously accounted by the Roman historians, sometimes from his first consulship sometimes from the time of the triumph, and sometimes from that time as before at Actium, where he utterly overthrew his competitor, and made himself sole and unquestionable emperor. And therefore it is not strange if it be so here. And that it must necessarily be thus understood, appears from hence that it cannot be the thirty sixth year of the reign of Asa in his own person, because Baasha began to reign in Asa's third year 1 Kings xv 24 and reigned only twenty five years, and consequently died in Asa's twenty sixth or twenty seventh year. And it is said he did 1 Kings xv 8. That he might let no one go out or come in to Asa king of Judah, that he might keep his subjects from revolting to Asa, as he perceived they began to do chap xv 9 and keep Asa's subjects from coming into his dominions to reduce his people from their obedience to him.

2 Then Asa brought out silver and gold out of the treasures of the house of the Lord and of the king's house, and sent to Ben-hadad king of Syria,* that dwelt at †Damascus, saying

This verse, and ver 3-6, are explained in Kings xx
18 &c

3 There is a league between me and thee, as there was between my father and thy father: behold I have sent thee silver and gold: go, break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may depart from me.

And Ben-hadad hearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of his armies against the cities of Israel, and they smote Ijon, and Dan, and Abel-maim, and all the store cities of Naphtali.

5 And it came to pass, when Baasha heard it, that he left off building of Ramah, and let his work cease.

6 Then Asa the king took all Judah and they carried away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha was building, and he built therewith Geba and Mizpah

7 ¶ And at that time Hanani the seer came to Aśa king of Judah, and said unto him "Because thou hast relied on the king of Syria, and not relied on the LORD thy God, therefore is the host of the king of Syria escaped out of thine hand

And so reserved to be a scourge to thy kingdom and posterity hereafter, whereas if he had joined with Baasha against thee thou shouldst have overthrown them both, and presented all that mischief which that monarch will do onely to thy family.

8 Were not the Ethiopians and the Libyans [a huge host, with very many chariots and horsemen?] yet, because thou didst rely on the Lord, he delivered them into thine hand

The Libyans, either the Libyans in Africa, or another people possibly descended from them, but now seated in some part of Arabia.

9 For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to shew himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him. Herein thou hast done foolishly: therefore from henceforth thou shalt have wars

If his heart is perfect, i. e. upright and sincere, is thine is not. Object The heart of Asa is said to be perfect all his days chap xv 17. Mean He was pious and sincere in the things there spoken of in the establishment of the outward worship of God, but not in the inward worship of God, trusting, and fearing, and loving him with all his heart, of which he here speaks. Or just He was perfect & sincere in the general course of his life, though in some particulars, whereof this is one, his heart did not perfectly cleave to God, as it should have done. Then shall have wars with Baalim chap. xvi 1

10 Then Asa was wroth with the seer, and put him in a prison house: for he was in a rage with him because of this thing. And Asa oppressed some of the people the same time

A prison house, or in the house of the stocks, in which the feet or some of the Hebrews say the necks of the prisoners were locked up. See Jer xx 2, xxx 26

11 And, behold, the acts of Asa, first and last, be they are written in the book of the Kings of Judah and Israel

12 And Asa in the thirty and ninth year of his reign was diseased in his feet, until his disease was exceeding great yet in his disease he sought not to the Lord, but to the physicians

He did not humble himself before God, nor earnestly desire his help, but put all his confidence in the skill and foolishness of the physicians of whom it seems he had great experience

13 And Asa slept with his fathers, and died in the one and fortieth year of his reign

14 And they buried him in his own sepulchres, which he had made for himself in the city of David, and laid him in the bed which was filled with sweet odours and divers kinds of spices prepared by the apothecaries art: and they made a very great burning for him

Laid him in the bed which was filled with sweet odours, as the manner of the Egyptians was. See Gen i 2, 2 Chron xxi 19. They made a very great burning to wit, of precious spices, thereby testifying their thankfulness for many benefits which they enjoyed under his government, and their respect to him notwithstanding his mismanagements

CHAP XVII

Jehoshaphat is made king, reigneth well and prospereth. 1-6 He sendeth Levites with the princes to teach Judah. 7-9 He is feared by the nations round about, who bring him presents and tribute, his greatness, captivities, and armies, 10-19

AND Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his stead, and strengthened himself against Israel

Against the king and people of Israel, who had molested the kingdom of Judah with wars all the days of Asa, after that sin of his mentioned chap xvi 2, &c

2 And he placed forces in all the fenced cities of Judah, and set garrisons in the land of Judah, and in the cities of Ephraim, which Asa his father had taken

3 And the Lord was with Jehoshaphat, because he walked in the first ways [of his father and of David] Baalim,

In the first ways, which David walked in before he fell into those horrid sins of murder and adultery. Or, in the ways of David and his father's first ways. For the beginning of Asa's reign was laudable, as we have seen though he declined at last. For it seems more probable that this passage is a reflection upon Asa, whose last ways were much his worst, and of whose repentance we have no evidence, than upon David, who, though he fell dreadfully in the matter of Uriah, yet did manifestly repent of it, and return to his first and holy course of life, in which also he continued until death, having the character given him by the Holy Ghost after his death that he did right in all things saving that of Uriah, 1 Kings xv 5

4 But sought to the LORD God of his father, and walked in his commandments, and not after the doings of Israel

1. Their worship of the calves, or other idols

5 Therefore the Lord established the kingdom in his hand, and all Judah brought to Jehoshaphat presents, and he had riches and honour in abundance

Judah brought to Jehoshaphat presents, as subjects in those times and places used to do to their kings, as a token of their respect and subjection to them. See 1 Sam x. 27 1 Kings x 25, 2 Chron xxxii 23

6 And his heart was lifted up in the ways of the Lord: moreover he took away the high places and groves out of Judah

His heart was lifted up above all discouragements, and doubts, and fears, by which men's hearts use to be cast down. He was valiant and resolute for God and his way. He took away the high places and groves, to wit, such or any wherein idols were worshipped, as appears by comparing this with chap xv 13. And though Asa had done this before, yet either he did not do it thoroughly, or the Jews (who were many of them mad upon their idols) had secretly made new ones, in the latter part of his reign, when he grew more infirm in body, and more remiss in God's affairs

7 Also in the third year of his reign he sent to his princes, even to Ben-hail, and to Obadiah, and to Zechariah, and to Nathaniel, and to Michajah, to teach in the cities of Judah

To teach in the cities of Judah: to inform the people of their duty, and of the king's pleasure. As judges or justices of peace teach or instruct the people in the laws of the land when they deliver their charges upon the bench, so did these princes in the king's name admonish and require the people to observe and obey the laws of God which were the municipal laws of that land: the particular explication and enforcement whereof they left to the Levites and priests here following, who were sent for this end, and accordingly taught the people, ver 9

8 And with them he sent Levites, even Shemaiah, and Nathaniah, and Zabudiah, and Asahel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehonathan, and Adonijah, and Tobijah, and Tob-adonijah Levites, and with them Eli-shama and Jehoram, priests

9 <sup>10</sup> And they taught in Judah, and had the book of the law of the Lord with them, and went about throughout all the cities of Judah, and taught the people

10 <sup>11</sup> And the fear of the Lord fell upon all the kingdoms of the lands that were round about Judah, so that they made no war against Jehoshaphat

Justly concluding from this singular pity that God would continually appear for him and against all those who had ill will to him, which was their case. For even the heathens could not but observe that the kings of Judah were either prosperous or unhappy, accordingly as they served God or forsook him

11 Also some of the Philistines brought Jehoshaphat presents, and tribute silver, and the Arabians brought him flocks, seven thousand and seven hundred rams, and seven thousand and seven hundred he goats

Some of the Philistines, who had been subject to this kingdom ever since David's time, but it seems had neglected this duty in the time of his predecessor, but now were moved by their swiftness to perform it. The Arabians brought him flocks, either because he had upon some just occasion waged war against them, and subdued them, though the particulars of it be not described in Scripture, or because they voluntarily put themselves under his protection in recompence whereof they sent him these presents, or only to shew their acknowledgment of the goodness to him

12 <sup>13</sup> And Jehoshaphat waxed great exceedingly, and he built in Judah, cities, and cities of store

13 And he had much business in the cities of Judah, and the men of war, mighty men of valour, were in Jerusalem

He had much business in the cities of Judah, partly to repair and fortify them, and furnish them with necessary provisions, and partly to purge out in the cities and seeds of idolatry and impiety, which were none secretly and publicly managed in the cities then in the country, and which were first and most in the cities, and thence spread their infection into the country about them. See Jer. ii. 25

14 And these are the numbers of them according to the house of their fathers. Of Judah, the captains of thousands, Adnah the chief, and with him mighty men of valour three hundred thousand

15 And next to him was Jehoram the captain, and with him two hundred and fourscore thousand

Next to him either 1. After his death, as his successor in the same command. And the like is supposed concerning Jehozabab, ver. 18. Or 2. Next to him in place and authority, as it is, in power, and the number of his host.

16 And next to him was Azariah the son of Zachariah, who willingly offered himself unto the Lord, and with him two hundred thousand mighty men of valour

As volunteers and auxiliaries to be ready upon occasion to the service of the king should require. Possibly these or most of the men the strangers which had come out of Israel into the land of Judah in Asa's days, and probably since that in his reign

17 And of Benjamin, Elah, a mighty man of valour, and with him armed men with bow and shield two hundred thousand

18 And next to him was Jehozabab and with him an hundred and fourscore thousand ready prepared for the war

19 These waited on the king, beside those whom the king put in the fenced cities throughout all Judah

These above mentioned were the trained bands of auxiliaries, whose chief officers waited upon the king to receive his commands, and to raise and bring in all or part of their forces to the service of the king and kingdom, as need required

CHAP. XVIII.

Jehoshaphat joined in affinity with Ahab is persuaded to go with him against Ramoth-gilead 1—3 Ahab seduced by false prophets according to the word of Micaiah, is slain there, 4—31

NOW Jehoshaphat had riches and honour in abundance, and joined affinity with Ahab

For Jehoram his eldest son married Athaliah Ahab's daughter, chap. xxi. 6, 2 Kings vii. 18. This chapter is for substance the same with 1 Kings xxii, where it is explained

2 And after certain years he went down to Ahab to Samaria. And Ahab killed sheep and oxen for him in abundance, and for the people that he had with him, and persuaded him to go up with him to Ramoth-gilead

3 And Ahab king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat king of Judah, Wilt thou go with me to Ramoth-gilead? And he answered him, I am as thou art, and my people as thy people, and we will be with thee in the war

4 And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, Enquire I pray thee, at the word of the Lord to day

5 Therefore the king of Israel gathered together of prophets four hundred men, and said unto them, Shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, Go up, for God will deliver it into the king's hand

6 But Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the Lord besides, that we might enquire of him?

7 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet one man, by whom we may enquire of the Lord, but I hate him, for he never prophesied good unto me, but always evil, the same is Micaiah the son of Imlah. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the king say so

8 And the king of Israel called for one of his officers, and said, Fetch quickly Micaiah the son of Imlah

9 And the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat king of Judah sat either of them on his throne, clothed in their robes, and they sat in a void place at the entering in of the gate of Samaria, and all the prophets prophesied before them

10 And Zedekiah the son of Cheneanah had made him horns of iron, and said, Thus saith the Lord, With these thou shalt push Syria until they be consumed

11 And all the prophets prophesied so, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper, for the Lord shall deliver it into the hand of the king

12 And the messenger that went to call Micaiah spake to him, saying, Behold, the words of the prophets declare good to the king † with one assent, let thy † word therefore, I pray thee, be like one of theirs, and speak thou good

13 And Micaiah said As the Lord liveth, even what my God saith, that will I speak

14 And when he was come to the king, the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And he said, Go ye up, and prosper, and they shall be delivered into your hand

15 And the king said to him How many times shall I adjure thee that thou say nothing but the truth to me in the name of the Lord?

16 Then he said, I did see all Israel scattered upon the mountains, as sheep that have no shepherd: and the Lord said These have no master: let them return therefore every man to his house in peace.

17 And the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, Did I not tell thee that he would not prophesy good unto me, but evil?

18 Again he said, Therefore hear the word of the Lord: I saw the Lord sitting upon his throne, and all the host of heaven standing on his right hand and on his left

19 And the Lord said, Who shall entice Ahab king of Israel, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one spake saying after this manner, and another saying after that manner

20 Then there came out a Spirit, and stood before the Lord, and said I will entice him: And the Lord said unto him, Where with?

21 And he said, I will go out, and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets: And the Lord said, Thou shalt entice him, and thou shalt also prevail: go out, and do even so

22 Now therefore behold the Lord hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of these thy prophets, and the Lord hath spoken evil against thee

23 Then Zedekiah the son of Cheneanah came near, and smote Micaiah upon the cheek, and said, Which way went the Spirit of the Lord from me to speak unto thee?

24 And Micaiah said, Behold thou shalt see on that day when thou shalt go into an inner chamber to hide thyself

25 Then the king of Israel said, Take ye Micaiah, and carry him back to Amon the governor of the city, and to Jorish the king's son

26 And say, Thus saith the Lord: Put this fellow in the prison, and feed him with bread of affliction and with water of affliction until I return in peace

27 And Micaiah said, If thou certainly return in peace, then hath not the Lord spoken by me: And he said, Hearken all ye people

28 So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah went up to Ramoth-gilead.

29 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, I will disguise myself, and will go to the battle; but put thou on thy robes. So the king of Israel disguised himself, and they went to the battle

30 Now the king of Syria had commanded the captains of the chariots that were with him, saying, Fight ye not with small or great, save only with the king of Israel

31 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, It is the king of Israel: Therefore they compassed about him to fight: but Jehoshaphat cried out, and the Lord helped him; and God moved them to depart from him

32 For it came to pass, that, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, they turned back again from pursuing him

33 And a certain man drew a bow at a venture, and smote the king of Israel between the joints of the harness: therefore he said to his chariot man, Turn thine hand, that thou mayest smite me out of the host: for I am wounded

34 And the battle increased that day: howbeit the king of Israel stayed himself up in his chariot against the Syrians until the even: and about the time of the sun going down he died

CHAP. XIX.

Jehoshaphat removed by the prophet Jehu, visiteth his kingdom 1-4. The instructions to the judges 5-7, to the priests and Levites 8-11

AND Jehoshaphat the king of Judah returned to his house in peace to Jerusalem

His being miraculously delivered from imminent danger, as we related chap. xiii. 1, 2

2 And Jehu the son of Hanani the seer went out to meet him, and said to king Jehoshaphat, Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the Lord? therefore is wrath upon thee from before the Lord

Jehu the son of Hanani the seer of whom see 1 Kings xvi. 1. Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the Lord? was this agreeable to thy duty and love, which thou professedst to God and godliness, that thou hast entered into so strict an alliance and friendship with wicked Ahab, my sworn enemy, and given such assistance to him? Therefore is wrath upon thee from before the Lord, therefore I, O, God, am angry with thee, and will chastise thee for this misdeed: who he he did, partly, by stirring up the Midianites and others to invade him, chap. xx., partly, by permitting his eldest son Jehoram to kill all his brethren chap. xxi. 1, and principally, by bringing that sore and cruel general destruction upon his grandchildren by Jehu, 2 Kings ix. 27 x. 13, 14, which was the proper fruit of his alliance with Ahab.

3 Nevertheless there are good things found in thee, in that thou hast taken away the groves out of the land, and hast prepared thine heart to seek God

There are good things found in thee, i. e. good works proceeding from an honest heart, which God more regards than thus particular errors, and therefore though he will chasten thee, yet he will not utterly destroy thee. Or, directed or set thy heart, i. e. thou hast sought and served God with all thy heart, and not humbly, as many others do. And thus work of preparing or directing his heart is here ascribed to Jehoshaphat, as elsewhere it is attributed to God, Prov. xvi 1, Phil ii 13, because it is man's action, but performed by God's grace, preventing enabling and inclining him to it.

4 And Jehoshaphat dwelt at Jerusalem and he went out again through the people from Beer-sheba to mount Ephraim, and brought them back unto the LORD God of their fathers.

He went out again, once he went by his officers, chap xvi 7 &c, now he went in his own person from Beer-sheba to Mount Ephraim i.e. through his whole kingdom, whereof these were the two bounds. Brought them back unto the Lord, such of them as had revolted from God to idols, he reclaimed by his good counsel and example and by the instructions of the Levites and priests, whom doubtless now he carried with him, as he sent them before with his officers of state.

5 ¶ And he set judges in the land throughout all the fenced cities of Judah, city by city,

In every city, for itself and the country adjacent that justice might be administered with the most ease and convenience to the people, and they might not all be forced to go up to Jerusalem.

6 And said to the judges, Take heed what ye do for ye judge not for man, but for the LORD, who is with you in the judgment.

You represent God's person, to whom judgment belongeth, and you have your commission and power from God and not from man only and your administration of justice is not only for man's good, but also for God's honour and service. If he is with you, both to observe your carriage, and to defend you against all those enemies whom the impartial exercise of justice may provoke.

7 Wherefore now let the fear of the LORD be upon you, take heed and do it for there is no iniquity with the LORD our God nor respect of persons, nor taking of gifts.

And therefore you who are in God's stead and do his works, and must give an account that must imitate God here. Of respect of persons see Deut x 17 Job xxxv. 16 Act x 31 No taking of gifts, so is to pervert judgment for then by comparing this with Exod xxiii 8, Deut xvi 19 Prov xiii 23.

8 ¶ Moreover in Jerusalem did Jehoshaphat set of the Levites, and of the priests, and of the chief of the fathers of Israel, for the judgment of the LORD, and for controversies when they returned to Jerusalem.

The chief of the fathers of Israel who were not priests and Levites but such persons of other tribes as were most eminent for their dignity ability and integrity. But whether these persons made up one court called the Sanhedrim by which all cases ecclesiastical and civil were decided or there were two distinct courts the one ecclesiastical consisting of the priests and Levites, the other civil consisting of the chief of the fathers of Israel, belongs to another place to determine, and requires more words than the nature of this work importeth. For the judgment of the Lord, i.e. of sacred matters concerning the laws and worship and service of God. For controversies for matters of difference between man and man. When they returned to Jerusalem, i.e. when Jehoshaphat and his company were returned to Jerusalem, then he made this order concerning established judges there. But so this last clause may seem superfluous and tautological being more than implied in the beginning of the verse. Or rather, when they, i.e. the causes and controversies last mentioned shall return, or be returned to Jerusalem i.e. when the causes shall be so different that the judges and cited in every city cannot determine them, or, when your brethren that dwell in every city shall come to you, as it is expressed, ver 10, appealing from their city courts, to the great court or council at Jerusalem, of which see on Exod. xxiii 26, Deut. i 17 xvi 8. As for the phrase, not only persons, but things, are said to return or be returned as blood 1 King i 33 and clouds Eccles. xii. 2, and reproach, Hos. xii 14. If it be further objected that these causes were never brought to Jerusalem before, and therefore cannot be properly said to be returned thither, that may be answered both from the usage of our law, wherein such causes are said to be returned to Westminster which never were there before, and from the use of Scripture, wherein sinners are commonly said to return to the Lord, though they had never been with the Lord in that sense before but were estranged from God even from the womb till the time of their conversion. And the dust, i.e. man's body, is said to return to the earth, Eccles. xii 7, though it was never there before.

9 And he charged them, saying, Thus shall ye do in the fear of the LORD, faithfully, and with a perfect heart.

Passing such sentences with your mouths as your own minds and consciences, upon the hearing of the parties shall judge to be just, and not acting against your own consciences for carnal motives, as corrupt judges do.

10 ¶ And what cause soever shall come to you of your brethren that dwell in their cities, between blood and blood, between law and commandment, statutes, and judgments, ye shall even warn them that they trespass not against the LORD, and so wrath come upon you and upon your brethren this do, and ye shall not trespass.

Between blood and blood, of which see the notes on Deut xvi 8. Between law and commandment, statutes and judgments when any doubts or differences shall arise about the meaning of any of God's laws one party possibly putting this and the other quite differing seem upon the same place or one thing in one place, and the other an other place which may seem to clash with it. Ye shall even warn them that they trespass not against the Lord, ye shall not only give a righteous sentence for what is just but ye shall admonish the offender and others, to take heed to themselves and the ways for the future. This do and ye shall not trespass so you shall not bring guilt and wrath upon yourselves and others who otherwise you will certainly do.

11 And, behold, Amariah the chief priest is over you in all matters of the LORD, and Zebadiah the son of Ishmael, the ruler of the house of Judah for all the king's matters also the Levites shall be officers before you. Deal courageously, and the LORD shall be with the good.

Is over you, shall be your president to direct and assist you in all matters of the Lord in spiritual or ecclesiastical matters. The ruler of the house of Judah, either 1 The prince, or chief ruler under the king, of the tribe of Judah, which is called the house of Judah 2 Sam. vii 1, 7, 10 1 Kings xii 21, 23, 1 Chron. xxviii 1, Jer. xiii 11, 1 Zek. iv 6 Or, 2 The ruler of the king's house which also seems to be called the house of Judah, 2 Chron. xxv 10 and more fully the king's house of Judah 1 Cor. xvi 6 And who so fit to manage the king's matters as the ruler of the king's house. For all the king's matters, for civil causes or controversies which might arise either between the king and his people, or between subject and subject which may be called the king's matters because it was a principal part of his office to see them justly decided. The Levites shall be officers before you they shall be at your command to execute your just sentences executed, which work was fitly committed to the Levites, as persons who might add their instructions to the corrections, and might work the guilt to an acknowledgment of their fault, and a submission to their punishment. And so this is an argument to encourage the judges to proceed courageously and vigorously in their work, because they had the Levites to stand by them and assist them. The Lord shall be with the good, & shall protect and bless good judges in their doing of good and just things.

CHAP. XX.

Several nations come against Judah. Jehoshaphat in his fear proclaimeth a fast, 1—4 His prayer, 5—13 Jehaziel's prophecy, 14—17 The enemies are overthrown, 20—25 The people return in triumph, blessing God, 26—30 His reign his navy miscarrueth, 31—37

IT came to pass after this also, that the children of Moab, and the children of Ammon, and with them other beside the Ammonites, came against Jehoshaphat to battl.

Other beside the Ammonites to wit, the people that dwell in Mount Seir, who were now confederate with them as appears from ver 10, 22, 23. Or this is the name of a peculiar people, called either Yehumim of whom you read 2 Chron xxvi 7 (and so there is only a transposition of two letters in the Hebrew word, which is not unusual in that language), or Minacans, as the LXX interpreters render this word, for Ammonim or Jehumim as it is in the Hebrew, (the two first letters being not prefixes as they are commonly made, but part of the word or proper name of that people) who, as it may seem now dwell in Mount Seir being either of the old stock of the Idumites, or another nation since come in their stead or mixed with them. Others render the phrase thus, for (as the Hebrew word is oft taken) with them (i. e. with the Moabites) were the Ammonites or children of Ammon, which may be distinctly noted, either to show the largeness of the confederacy in which not only the Moabites were engaged who dwelt near Jehoshaphat's kingdom but the Ammonites also who lived at a greater distance from him or to intimate that the Ammonites being possibly instigated by the Syrians, their next neighbours, were the first beginners and chief promoters of the war and engaged both the Moabites and the inhabitants of Mount Seir in their quarrel.

2 Then there came some that told Jehoshaphat, saying, There cometh a great multitude against thee from beyond the sea on this side Syria, and, behold, they be in Hazaz in Ramat, which is in the land of Edom beyond the sea to wit the Dead Sea beyond which Mount Seir lies. On the side Syria or from Syria, largely so called, and so it includes the Moabites and Ammonites. And it may be thus expressed, to intimate that they come by the instigation of the Syrians who thought by this means to revenge themselves of Jehoshaphat for joining with Ahab to smite them.

3 And Jehoshaphat feared, and set himself to seek the Lord, and proclaimed a fast throughout all Judah. Jehoshaphat feared, partly from human frailty and partly from the remembrance of his own guilt, and the wrath of God denounced against him for it chap xix. He himself to seek the Lord the phrase notes his settlement, seriousness, and earnestness in it and the preparing and fixing his heart for it. Proclaimed a fast, partly in token of his humiliation and penitence for his sins, and partly to make himself and his people more fervent in their prayers.

4 And Judah gathered themselves together, to ask help of the Lord even out of all the cities of Judah they came to seek the Lord.

5 And Jehoshaphat stood in the congregation of Judah and Jerusalem, in the house of the Lord, before the new court.

In the house of the Lord here is so called i. e. in one of the courts of the temple even in the court of the people and upon that brazen wheel which Solomon had erected for such a purpose, 2 Chron vi 13. Before the new court i. e. before and before the priests' court for there were but two courts belonging to the temple, as is noted 2 Kings

xxi. 5, xxiii. 12. And Jehoshaphat stood in the new court, which must be that of the people, and before the other which therefore can be no other than that of the priests, which is called the new court, because it had been lately renewed when the altar was renewed, chap xv. 8 as the command of love is called a new command John xiii 34, 1 John ii 8, because it was so solemnly renewed, and revived, and reinforced by Christ.

6 And said, O Lord God of our fathers, art not thou God in heaven? and rulest not thou over all the kingdoms of the heathen? and in thine hand is there not power and might, so that none is able to withstand thee?

7 Art not thou our God, who didst drive out the inhabitants of this land before thy people Israel, and gavest it to the seed of Abraham thy friend for ever?

i. e. To whom thou hast engaged thyself by covenant to be his friend, and the friend of his seed for ever and therefore we trust thou wilt not forsake us his posterity.

8 And they dwelt therein, and have built thee a sanctuary therein for thy name, saying,

9 If, when evil cometh upon us, as the sword, judgment, or pestilence, or famine, we stand before this house, and in thy presence, (for thy name is in this house) and cry unto thee in our affliction, then thou wilt hear and help.

The sword judgment or rather the word of judgment or of vengeance, i. e. war, whereby thou judgest and punishest thy people for their sins. Compare Lev xxv 2.

10 And now, behold, the children of Ammon and Moab and mount Seir, whom thou wouldst not let Israel invade, when they came out of the land of Egypt, but they turned from them, and destroyed them not.

11 Behold, I say, how they are ward us, to come to cast us out of thy possession, which thou hast given us to inherit.

12 O our God, wilt thou not judge them? for we have no might against this great company that cometh against us, neither know we what to do but our eyes are upon thee.

Thus he speaks, partly though he well knew it aimed to be drawn to, yet he seems to have been surprised by the men before his forces were in readiness to oppose them, and partly because he well knew, and piously and wisely considered, that no human forces, though numerous and valiant were able to defend him without God's assistance, which he feared by his sins he had forfeited, and then he had really been as weak as water. Our eyes are upon thee, looking to thee only for relief and succour.

13 And all Judah stood before the Lord, with their little ones, their wives, and their children.

Whom they used to present before the Lord in times of great distress, partly to set up themselves to more fervent and faithful prayers, that their eyes, being upon their harmless and tender children, might affect them to sit with a greater sense of their misery, and partly to move God to compassion, not as if he were capable of passion or changes upon such a sight, but because God hath declared himself that he will be prevailed with by such methods as these.

14 Then upon Jahaziel the son of Zephaniah, the son of Benaiab, the son of Jehoi, the son of Mattaniah, a Levite of the sons of Asaph, came the Spirit of the Lord in the midst of the congregation,

He was suddenly inspired by God with the following message

15 And he said, Hearken ye all Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, and thou king Jehoshaphat, Thus saith the Lord unto you, Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude, for the battle is not yours, but God's.

God will fight for you, and he alone will do the work, you need not take a stroke.

16 To-morrow go ye down against them: behold, they come up by the cliff of Ziz, and ye shall find them at the end of the brook, before the wilderness of Jeruel.

Go ye down to the Jerusalem, where he and his army now were, which stood upon high ground.

17 Ye shall not need to fight in this battle: set yourselves, stand ye still, and see the salvation of the Lord with you, O Judah and Jerusalem: fear not, nor be dismayed, to-morrow go out against them: for the Lord will be with you.

18 And Jehoshaphat bowed his head with his face to the ground: and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell before the Lord, worshipping the Lord.

Bowed his head with his face to the ground in token of his reverence to God and his message: his belief of the promise and his thankfulness for so great a favour.

19 And thus he invites, of the children of the Kohathites, and of the children of the Korhites, stood up to praise the Lord God of Israel with a loud voice on his name.

The Levites stood up by Jehoshaphat's appointment: With a loud voice on high, i.e. with most loud voice, with heart and voice lifted up, whereby they showed their full assurance of the victory, as if it were already accomplished.

20 ¶ And they rose early in the morning, and went forth into the wilderness of Tekoa: and as they went forth, Jehoshaphat stood and said, Hear ye me, O Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem: Believe in the Lord your God: so shall ye be established: believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper.

Believe his prophets, i.e. God's promise delivered to us by this prophet, and consequently all other predictions of the prophets that either have been or shall be. So shall ye prosper, i.e. be blessed, lest by your unbelief you frustrate God's promise.

21 And when he had consulted with the people, he appointed singers unto the Lord, and that should praise the beauty of holiness, as they went out before the army, and to say, Praise the Lord: for his mercy endureth ever.

With the people, i.e. with the elders or chief of the people, partly to take their advice about the expediency of the thing, and partly that they might excite and prepare themselves and the people with them to this great work of praising God. He appointed singers unto the Lord, to the honour and service of God: The beauty of holiness, i.e. (by a vulgar Hebrewism) the Holy Music, i.e. the music of the sanctuary, i.e. in the same comely or beautiful and magnificent manner as they used to do it in the temple, i.e. the following song was usually sung, as 2 Chron. 7, 13, vii. 3, 4.

22 ¶ And when they began to sing and to praise, the Lord set ambushments against the children of Ammon, Moab, and mount Seir, which were come against Judah, and they were smitten.

When they began to sing and to praise, i.e. so acceptable are the fervent prayers of God's people to God, and so terrible to their enemies. Ambushments, or, tiers in rear, i.e. 1. The holy angels who appeared in the shape of men and possibly put on the appearances and visages of Moabites or Ammonites, and in that shape slew the rest who supposing this slaughter to be done by a part of their own army, fell upon them, and so broke forth into mutual slaughter. Or, 2. God raised jealousies and animosities amongst themselves, which by degrees broke forth, first into secret ambushments, which one party laid for another, and then into open hostilities and outrages to their utter destruction. So vain are all men's attempts against God who needs none to destroy his enemies but himself, and their own mistakes and passions, which he can when he pleases turn against them.

23 For the children of Ammon and Moab stood up against the inhabitants of mount Seir, utterly to slay and destroy them: and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped to destroy another.

24 And when Judah came toward the watch tower in the wilderness, they looked unto the multitude: and behold, they were dead bodies fallen to the earth, and none escaped.

Toward the watch tower, which stood upon the cliff of Ziz mentioned above ver. 16, or upon other hill which looked toward the wilderness where their enemies lay encamped whose numbers, and order, and condition they could discern from thence.

25 And when Jehoshaphat and his people came to take away the spoil of them, they found among them in abundance both riches with the dead bodies, and precious jewels, which they stripped off for themselves, more than they could carry away: and they were three days in gathering of the spoil, it was so much.

Riches and precious jewels, which they brought with them, partly to corrupt the officers of Jehoshaphat's army, and partly to procure necessaries for their own army from time to time: and partly, because they went on to a triumph rather than to a fight, being secure and confident of the victory, because of their great numbers, and especially because they thought to surprise Jehoshaphat ere he could make any considerable preparations against them, God also permitting them to be puffed up to their own destruction.

26 ¶ And on the fourth day they assembled themselves in the valley of Berachah: for there they blessed the Lord: therefore the name of the same place was called, The valley of Berachah, unto this day.

The valley of Berachah, Heb. of blessing, so called from their solemn blessings and praises given to God in it upon this occasion.

27 Then they returned, every man of Judah and Jerusalem, and Jehoshaphat in the forefront of them, to go again to Jerusalem with joy, for the Lord had made them to rejoice over their enemies.

28 And they came to Jerusalem with psalteries and harps and trumpets unto the house of the Lord.

To renew their praises in the court of the temple the proper and usual place for it

19 And the fear of God was on all the kingdoms of those countries, when they had heard that the Lord fought against the enemies of Israel

On all the kingdoms of those countries which were near, or which heard these things

30 So the realm of Jehoshaphat was quiet for his God gave him rest round about

31 And Jehoshaphat reigned over Judah he was thirty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and five years in Jerusalem And his mother's name was Azubah the daughter of Shilhi

32 And he walked in the way of Asa his father, and departed not from it, doing that which was right in the sight of the Lord

33 Howbeit the high places were not taken away for as yet the people had not prepared their hearts unto the God of their fathers

The high places were not taken away wholly nor universally, of which see on chap xxi 6 The fault was not in Jehoshaphat, but in the people who though they did worship the true God yet would not be contented to the full, but for their own convenience or from their affectation not a custom chose to worship him in the places which Jehoshaphat was forced to remove at those proper being debarred from that dearly beloved place should fall into a neglect of God and his worship

34 Now the rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat first and last behold they are written in the book of Jehu the son of Hanani, who is mentioned in the book of the kings of Israel

35 And after this did Jehoshaphat king of Judah join himself with Ahaziah king of Israel, who did very wickedly

This is mentioned as an aggravation of his sin after so great a favour and obligation laid upon him by God and that he had been so sharply reprov'd and threatened by a prophet for the same thing chap xix 2 yet he relapsed to the same sin, which proceeded partly from that men's custom which was contracted between the two families partly from the sweetness and caresses of Jehu's flatter's temper, which could not resist the solicitation of others in such things as might seem indifferent For he did not join with him in a war as he did with Ahaziah in a peaceable way only, in a matter of trade and commerce And yet God sharply reproveth and punisheth him for it 37, to show his great dislike and detestation of all the daily and familiar conversation of his servants and people with idolaters and professed enemies of God and of religion Ahaziah was who is therefore thus stigmatized in the text as one who did very wickedly Who did very unchristianly, or who did unchristianously, and maliciously, and constantly work his wickedness as the Hebrew phrase implies giving himself up to iniquity and all wickedness

36 And he joined himself with him to make ships to go to Tarshish and they made the ships in Ezion-gaber

To make ships to go to Tarshish, of which see on 1 Kings x 22, xxi 48 They made the ships in Ezion-gaber, of which see on 1 Kings ix 26

37 Then Hizezer the son of Dodavah of Mareshah prophesied against Jehoshaphat, saying Because thou hast joined thyself with Ahaziah, the Lord hath broken thy works And the ships were broken, that they were not able to go to Tarshish

ch. xxi.

CHAP. XXI.

Jehoram is made king, and slayeth his brethren 1-11 His wicked reign, 12-17 Edom and Ishmael rebuffed 18 The prophecy of Ilyan against him in sorcery 19-25 The Philistines and Arabian oppress him, his incurable disease, death, and burial 26-29

NOW Jehoshaphat slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David And Jehoram his son reigned in his stead

2 And he had brethren the sons of Jehoshaphat, Azariah, and Jehiel, and Zechariah, and Azariah, and Michael, and Shephatiah all these were the sons of Jehoshaphat king of Israel

Jehoram, two sons called by the same name, though doubtless distinguished by some additional title which is not mentioned here because it did not concern succeeding ages to know it Though indeed there is a difference in their Hebrew names the one being Jezariah the other Azariah the hu being the last syllable in his name, as in Lehu and others Jehoshaphat king of Israel, so he is called, either 1 Because he was so by right Or 2 Because he was king not only of Judah and Benjamin, but of a great number of Israelites, who had come into and settled themselves in his kingdom in his and in his predecessor's days, who being a considerable and the purest and best part of Israel, may well be called Israel being more truly and properly God's Israel than their apostate brethren, who were no longer worthy of that name Or, 3 Because all his subjects were Israelite and therefore he was king of Israel though not of all Israel Or 4 With some reflection upon his memory for making so strict an alliance and friendship with the king of Israel, whose cause he defended with his own and his kingdom's great hazard, as if he had been the king not so much of Judah as of Israel And this may be the rather noted here, because here speedily followed a sad effect of that wicked and bad match Some say Israel was forced into one camp the true either instead of Judah as it was first written

3 And their father gave them great gifts of silver and of gold, and of precious things, with fenced cities in Judah but the kingdom gave he to Jehoram, because he was the firstborn

Whom he favoured that he ought to prefer by virtue of that law of God Deut xxi 15 though otherwise he would not have come it having probably ere this time perceived his perverse and wicked inclinations, and how much he was swayed by his idolatrous wife Now he saw his error when it was too late

4 Now when Jehoram was risen up to the kingdom of his father, he strengthened himself, and slew all his brethren with the sword, and divers also of the princes of Israel

He strengthened himself he took courage and hardened his heart as that word sometimes signifies Slew all his brethren with the sword, partly because they either did or he knew that they would, oppose him in his wicked designs and partly for his own security, lest his people who, as he believed would be highly exasperated with the execution of his counsels, should advance any of them to the throne, and depose him Of the princes of Israel, either 1 Of Judah here called Israel of which see the notes on x 2 Or, 2 The princes or chief men of Israel, properly so called, not the princes of all Israel, or of the several tribes thereof, but the chief of those Iudubus who, out of love to God and to the true religion had forsaken their estates and worldly advantages in the kingdom of Judah, and were now incorporated with the kingdom of Judah These he especially struck at either 1 Because his wife instigated him thereunto, both to punish them for their revolt from her father and to deter others from following their example. Or, 2 Because he justly and truly thought these would be most firm and constant to aid zealous for that religion which he was resolved to oppose, being both by their conscience and interest obliged to it.

12 <sup>12</sup> ¶ Jehoram was thirty and two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

Of this, and ver 6-10, see the notes on 2 Kings xiii 17, &c.

6 And he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, like as did the house of Ahab: for he had the daughter of Ahab to wife: and he wrought that which was evil in the eyes of the Lord.

7 Howbeit the Lord would not destroy the house of David, because of the covenant that he had made with David, and as he promised to give a sign to him and to his sons for ever.

Because of the covenant that he had made with David, for which, in 2 Kings xiii 19, it is said David his servants said: not for David's merits but for God's free promise and covenant, as it is here explained.

8 ¶ In his days the Edomites revolted from under the dominion of Judah, and made themselves a king.

9 Then Jehoram went forth with his princes, and all his chariots with him: and he rose up by night, and smote the Edomites which compassed him in, and the captains of the chariots.

10 So the Edomites revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. The same time also did Laban revolt from under his hand: because he had forsaken the Lord God of his fathers.

To wit publicly and avowedly, setting him at defiance as the next verse shows. And this is mentioned either 1 As the reason why the priests whose city Tybath was forsook him because he had forsaken God: or rather 2 As the reason why God raised up so many enemies against him both from abroad and at home.

11 Moreover he made high places in the mountains of Judah, and caused the inhabitants of Jerusalem to commit fornication, and compelled Judah thereto.

He made high places, not to the Lord whose sworn enemy he was but to Baals or false gods: caused the inhabitants of Jerusalem to commit fornication, not only by his counsel and example but, as it follows, by force by this is implied.

12 ¶ And there came a writing to him from Elijah, the prophet, saying, Thus saith the Lord God of David thy father, Because thou hast not walked in the ways of Jehoshaphat thy father nor in the ways of Asa king of Judah.

There came a writing to him from Elijah. Quest How could this be, when Elijah was reputed to have been taken up to heaven in Jehoshaphat's time? 2 Kings ii 11. Answer Either 1 This was Elijah, or some other prophet called Elijah because he acted in the spirit and power of Elijah for which cause John the Baptist is so called. Or rather 2 This was really written by Elijah who by the Spirit did clearly foresee and foretell the wicked acts of Jehoram, (as others did of Josiah 2 Kings xxi and Isiah of Cyrus chap xvi) long before they were done: and in consideration thereof left this prophesy written, to be delivered in due time by him, or some other person in his name, and as from his mouth. The Lord God of David thy father, whose name he mentions rather to placid him with his generation from so worthy a parent, or to take off his presumption and confidence, who was grounded upon his being the son and successor of David, in whose posterity the crown was settled for ever by God's special appointment, and by the approbation of the people. In the ways of Jehoshaphat thy father whose wise counsel and good example thou hast despised.

13 But hast walked in the way of the kings of Israel, and hast made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to go a whoring, like to the whoredoms of the house of Ahab, and also hast slain thy brethren of thy father's house, which were better than thyself.

More innocent, and righteous and pious.

14 Behold, with a great plague will the Lord smite thy people, and thy children, and thy wives, and all thy goods.

The Lord will smite thy people. Quest Why the people for his sin? Answer 1 Because the generality of them sinned in complying with his wicked and idolatrous commands, through fear, ver 11. 2 Because he suffered in his people's destruction for as the honour and safety, and strength of a king lies in the multitude and prosperity of his people. Prov xiv 28, so when they are diminished and destroyed the king is very much weakened and endangered by it. Thy children and thy wives whose lives shall go for the lives of thy brethren, ver 4.

15 And thou shalt have great sickness by disease of thy bowels, until thy bowels fall out by reason of the sickness day by day.

From day to day continually. Or, year upon year, or one year after another, or for the space of two years as the event shows ver 19. Heb days upon days. Days are oft put for a year, as Exod xiii 10, 1 Cor xxi 20, Num ix 22, Judg xvi 10, 1 Sam i 3, xxvi 11, Amos vi 4.

16 Moreover the Lord stirred up against Jehoram the spirit of the Philistines, and of the Arabians, that were near the Ethiopians.

The Philistines, people fully subdued and dispirited but God now raised their spirits and courage to do his will. Near the Ethiopians, Heb near the Cushites, i.e. the Ethiopians from whom they were parted only by the Red Sea each dwelling upon the opposite shores of it, rather a people in Arabia frequently mentioned in Scripture and so called either for their likeness in colour or complexion to the Ethiopians properly so called, or because one of these people were a colony of the other. But the Ethiopians above Egypt were far enough from the other Arabians being separated from them by the Red Sea.

17 And they came up into Judah and brake into it, and carried away all the substance that was found in the king's house, and his sons also, and his wives, so that there was never a son left him, save Jehoahaz, the youngest of his sons.

His sons also and his wives, whom also they slew, chap xxi 1 except Ahaziah and Athaliah who possibly were hid in some secret and safe place. Jehoahaz, called also Athaliah which signifies the very same thing with Jehoahaz and Ahaziah, chap xxv 6 whose signification is near akin to the other, all signifying God's taking or helping of him.

18 ¶ And after all this the Lord smote him in his bowels with an incurable disease.

19 And it came to pass, that in process of time, after the end of two years, his bowels fell out by reason of his sickness, so he died of sore diseases. And his people made no burning for him, like the burning of his fathers.

20 Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem eight years, and departed without being desired. Howbeit they buried him in the city of David, but not in the sepulchres of the kings.

Departed Heb went to wit the way of all the earth is more fully expressed, Job xxiii 14. Or to the land of darkness as Job x 21 22. Or, to his long home Eccl. xii 5. Or, went away, to wit, out of this world, as his word is used, Job xiv 20. Eccles. x 15, vi 1. There being many such words and phrases used concerning death in the Old and New Testament, signifying that death is not an annihilation, but only a translation into another place and state. See Gen. xv 15, Phil. i 23. If that being desired, Heb without desire which may belong either 1. To himself, he had no desire of living longer, nor any pleasure in life, but was heartily weary of it through his excessive pains, or rather, 2. To his people who did not desire that he should live longer, but oft and heartily wished that he had died sooner, which contempt of him they showed both by making no burning for him, as they used to do for good and laudable kings, chap. xxi 14. and by denying him burial among the kings, as it here follows. Desire is here put for a person or thing whose life or continuance is desirable or desired by others as Isa. ii 10, Ezek. xxiv 16, 18 21, 25, Dan. ix 23, x 11, 19. And this is an emphatical expression, because it is used with care to denote the deaths of some persons whom afterward they lamented and heartily wish that they were alive again, as they may have cause to do. But for this ungodly and unhappy prince, his people did not only in his lifetime wish his death, but afterwards they did not regret of those desires not with him alive again, but rejoiced that they were delivered from a great plague as he was to them.

CHAP XXII

At the death of Joram, the son of Ahab, his son Oziah began to reign, and he was thirty years old when he began to reign, and he was thirty years old when he began to reign, and he was thirty years old when he began to reign.

AND the inhabitants of Jerusalem made Ahaziah his younger son king in his stead for the band of men that came with the Arabians to the camp had slain all the eldest. So Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah reigned.

Men that came with the Arabians, either, 1. A great sort of men who came along with the Arabians, and therefore slew those whom the Arabians had spared, and only carried away captivity. Or, 2. The Philistines who did accompany the Arabians in this expedition chap. xxi 16. who lived in the kingdom of Judah, and therefore thought to make as much work as they could in destroying all the branches of the royal family, who otherwise, they expected, would recover strength, and revenge themselves upon them.

2. Forty and two years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Athaliah the daughter of Omri.

Forty and two years old was Ahaziah. Object. He was then only twenty-two years old as is affirmed, 2 Kings xxi 25. Besides, Joram his father died in his fortieth year, as is affirmed, chap. xxi 5, 20. how then can this be true? Answer. 1. In the Hebrew it is, a son of forty-two years, &c. which is an ambiguous phrase, and though it doth for the most part, yet it doth not always signify the age of the person, as is manifest from 1 Sam. xiii 1. where he is the notes. And therefore it is not necessary that this should note his age (as it is generally presumed to do) and that is the only ground of the difficulty), but it may note either, 1. The age of his mother Athaliah, who being so great and infamous, and mischievous a person to the kingdom and royal family of Judah it is not strange if her age be here described, especially seeing she herself did for a season sway this sceptre. Or rather, 2. Of the reign of that royal race and family from which by his mother he was descended, to wit, of the house of Omri who reigned six years, 1 Kings xxi 23, Ahab his son reigned twenty-two years, 1 Kings xxi 29, Ahaziah his son two years, 1 Kings xxi 51, Joram his son twelve years, 2 Kings i 1. all which, put together, make up exactly these forty-two years. In Ahab's beginning his reign in Joram's twelfth year, 2 Kings xxi 25. And such a kind of computation of the years, not of the king's person, but of his reign or kingdom, we had before, chap. xvi 1, where see the notes. And so we have an account of the person's age in 2 Kings xxi 26, and here of the king's date to which he belonged. Aziah 2. Some acknowledge an error in the transcribers of the present Hebrew copy, in which language the numeral letters for twenty-two and forty-two are so like that they might easily be mistaken. For that it was read twenty-two here as it is in the Book of Kings, in other Hebrew copies, they gather from hence, that it is at this day so read in divers ancient Greek copies, as also in those two ancient translations, the Syriac and the Arabic, and particularly in that famous and most ancient copy of the Syriac, which was used by the church of Antioch in the primitive times, and to this day is kept in the church of Antioch, from which that most reverend, learned, pious, and public-spirited archbishop Usher did at his own charge get another copy transcribed, in which he hath published to all the world that he found it here written twenty and two years old, &c. Nor doth this overthrow the authority of the sacred text as misdoers would have it, partly because it is only an historical passage of no importance to the substantial doctrines of faith and a good life, and partly because the question here is not whether the text be true, but which is the true reading of the text, whether that of the generality of present copies, or that which was used in the ancient copies, which the ancient and venerable translators above mentioned did follow, for it seems unreasonable and uncharitable to think that all of them would have conspired to have changed the text and put in twenty and two for forty and two, if they had so read it in their Hebrew copies. Nor can this open any great door to the innumerable changes which some have boldly and rashly made in the Hebrew text without any such pretence of authority, as they do for the which is they are affirmed without reason, or authority, or necessity, so they may as easily be rejected. If all this will not satisfy our present doubts, I desire them only to consider what hath been here before upon such occasions, that many difficulties which had seem'd unresolvable, have now fully cleared by later studies, it is but reasonable to think that this may be so in other times, either by finding of one Hebrew copy in which it may be twenty and two years, &c. or by some other way. The daughter of Omri is of Omri's family, or of Ahab, Omri's son. Grandchildren are oft called sons and daughters, as Matt. i. 1, 10. 11. 26.

3. He also walked in the ways of the house of Ahab, for his mother was his counsellor to do wickedly.

Being a crafty and an imperious woman.

4. Wherefore he did evil in the sight of the Lord like the house of Ahab, for they were his counsellors after the death of his father to his destruction.

After the death of his father, who, whilst he lived, succeeded him by his counsel and authority, and made other evil counsellors then unnecessary.

5. ¶ He walked also after their counsel, and went with Jehoram the son of Ahab king of Israel to war against Hazael king of Syria at Ramoth-gilead, and the Syrians smote Joram.

¶ Went with Jehoram to war against Hazael, following the evil example of Jehoshaphat therein, chap. xxi. though he would not follow him in what was good. But of this and the following verse, see 2 Kings xxi 28 29. 18 21, 27.

Jehorad maketh Tossah his son 1-11 Athaliah is slain, 12-15 The pure worship of God is reformed, 16-21

AND in the seventh year Jehoada strengthened himself, and took the captains of hundreds, Azariah the son of Jerobam, and Ishmael the son of Jehohanan, and Azariah the son of Obed, and Maaseiah the son of Adaiah, and Elishaphat the son of Zichri, into covenant with him

Took the captains of hundreds, not all, but those here following in whom he put most trust But this chapter is almost all taken out of 2 Kings xi, where it is explained

2 And they went about in Judah, and gathered the Levites out of all the cities of Judah, and the chief of the fathers of Israel, and they came to Jerusalem

Gathered the Levites out of all the cities of Judah, partly because they could do this without any suspicion, upon pretence of some solemn feast, which time, it is probable was chosen for this purpose and partly because he knew them to be well affected to the cause of God and the king, to which they were obliged by the two firmest ties conscience and interest The chief of the fathers of Israel, i. e. both of the two tribes, and of the ten tribes, all which are called Israel, and he with the name of Israel rather than that of Judah because there were now great numbers of the other tribes incorporated with Judah, and these he esteemed more faithful than many of Judah, having given better proofs of the truth of their religion than they, and therefore he picked out of the chief men of the other tribes as well as of Judah and Benjamin

3 And all the congregation made a covenant with the king in the house of God And he said unto them, Behold, the king's son shall reign, as the Lord hath said of the sons of David

1 This is the thing that ye shall do, A third part of you entering on the sabbath of the priests and of the Levites, shall be porters of the doors,

Both that of Samaria, 2 Kings xi 6 and other doors adjoining to, or leading to it

5 And a third part shall be at the king's house, and a third part at the gate of the foundation and all the people shall be in the courts of the house of the Lord

At the gate of the foundation, at the east gate, thought to be so called, because it stood lower than the rest of the doors at the foot of the steps, by which they went up from the king's house to the temple In the courts, either 1 In the two courts, and so by the people he understands as well the generality of the Levites, who had no particular stations allotted to them, as their brethren had, ver 1 which were to be in the priests court, as the people who were in the court of the people or, 2 In the court of the people which may be called courts, the plural number being put for the singular, in regard of great amplitude and divers quarters and partitions into which it was or might be divided, as the temple is called sanctuaries, because of its division into divers parts, 1 Cor xxi 31

6 But let none come into the house of the Lord, save the priests, and they that minister of the Levites, they shall go in, for they are holy but all the people shall keep the watch of the Lord

Into the house of the Lord, strictly so called, as it is distinguished from the courts, into which others were permitted to come ver 5, to wit into the holy place The priests and they that minister of the Levites, they who are to minister in course or by my present appointment 11 watch of the Lord, i. e. of the house of the Lord, as the phrase may be filled up out of this place and 2 Kings xi 6 The sense is, Let them stand in their court to prevent or oppose any person who shall endeavour violently to break into the house to seize upon the king, or to disturb the present work, which he expected Athaliah and her accomplices would do

7 And the Levites shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand, and whosoever else cometh into the house, he shall be put to death but be ye with the king when he cometh in, and when he goeth out.

8 So the Levites and all Judah did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest had commanded and took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that were to go out on the sabbath for Jehoiada the priest dismissed not the courses.

9 Moreover Jehoiada the priest delivered to the captains of hundreds spears, and bucklers and shields, that had been king David's, which were in the house of God.

10 And he set all the people every man having his weapon in his hand, from the right side of the temple to the left side of the temple, along by the altar and the temple, by the king round about.

11 Then they brought out the king's son, and put upon him the crown, and gave him the testimony, and made him king. And Jehoiada and his sons anointed him, and said, God save the king.

Jehoiada and his sons and Zachariah among the rest, whom afterwards he ungirt fully slew, chap xxiv 21.

12 ¶ Now when Athaliah heard the noise of the people running and praising the king, she came to the people into the house of the Lord.

13 And she looked, and, behold, the king stood at his pillar at the entering in, and the princes and the trumpets by the king, and all the people of the land rejoiced, and sounded with trumpets, also the singers with instruments of musick, and such as taught to sing praise. Then Athaliah rent her clothes, and said, Treason, Treason.

14 Then Jehoiada the priest brought out the captains of hundreds, that were set over the host, and said unto them, Have her forth of the ranges, and whoso followeth her, let him be slain with the sword. For the priest said, Slay her not in the house of the Lord.

15 So they laid hands on her, and when she was come to the entering of the horse gate by the king's house, they slew her there.

16 ¶ And Jehoiada made a covenant between him, and between all the people, and between the king, that they should be the Lord's people.

Between him, i.e. the Lord as is sufficiently implied in the end of this verse, and plainly expressed 2 Kings xi 27. Or, between himself, that the people might see that he brought them under no bond but what he would take upon himself. That they should be the Lord's people, i.e. that every one in his place and station would maintain the law and worship of God, and root out all false worship, which they did in the next verse.

17 Then all the people went to the house of Baal, and brake it down, and brake his altars and his images in pieces, and slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars.

18 Also Jehoiada appointed the offices of the house of the Lord by the hand of the priests the Levites, whom David had distributed in the house of the Lord, to offer the burnt offerings of the Lord, as it is written in the law of Moses, with rejoicing and with singing, as it was ordained by David.

Appointed the offices of the house of the Lord by the hand, or, as it is in the Hebrew, put the offices of the house of the Lord into the hand, i.e. he restored the priests and Levites, either 1 To their places and offices, which possibly in the time of the idolatrous kings, and of Athaliah had been disposed of to persons of other tribes, partly to gratify their wicked friends, and partly to bring God's house and worship into disgrace, or, 2 To the exercise of their offices from which they had been in a great measure hindered.

19 And he set the porters at the gates of the house of the Lord, that none which was unclean in any thing should enter in.

20 And he took the captains of hundreds, and the nobles, and the governors of the people, and all the people of the land, and brought down the king from the house of the Lord, and they came through the high gate into the king's house, and set the king upon the throne of the kingdom.

Through the high gate, to wit, of the court belonging and leading to the king's palace.

21 And all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was quiet, after that they had slain Athaliah with the sword.

CHAP XXIV

Joash reigneth well all the days of Jehoiada 1-11 He doeth, is buried honourably, and Joash falleth to idolatry, slayeth Zachariah the son of Jehoiada 15-22 He is spoiled by the Syrians, slain, and buried, and Jehoazab Amazi'ah succeedeth him 23-27

JOASH was seven years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Bath of Beer-sheba.

A part of this chapter is explained on 2 Kings xii.

2 And Joash did that which was right in the sight of the Lord all the days of Jehoiada the priest.

3 And Jehoiada took for him two wives, and he begat sons and daughters.

4 And it came to pass after this, that Joash was minded to repair the house of the Lord.

5 And he gathered together the priests and the Levites, and said to them, Go out unto the cities of Judah, and gather of all Israel money to repair the house of your God from year to year, and see that ye hasten the matter. Howbeit the Levites hastened it not.

Gather of all Israel, i.e. of all the Israelites that were in the kingdom of Judah. See chap xv 17 xvi 2 To repair the house of your God from year to year, either 1 Repair part of it every year till the reparations be perfected, or, 2 Gather it from year to year till you get such a sum as may suffice for the work, for he supposed one or two years' collection would not suffice for the work, whether it were that collection of half a shekel for every man, of which see

Exod xxx 12, 13; 2 Kings xii 14, or a voluntary contribution required for the present exigence of the temple by virtue of the command and example of Moses, who made such a collection for the building of the tabernacle, Exod. xxxv 5, see also Neh x 32 which he thought would not be any great sum, because of the great iniquity and impiety which yet had reigned for many years, and yet continued in the generality of the people of the land, the Levites not excepted, as the last clause of this verse shows

6 And the king called for Jehoiada the chief, and said unto him, Why hast thou not required of the Levites to bring in out of Judah and out of Jerusalem the collection, according to the commandment of Moses the servant of the Lord, and of the congregation of Israel, for the tabernacle of witness?

Jehoiada the chief it is observable, that he is not called the chief priest, or high priest, but only the chief or the head, which he might be in many other respects, either by reason of his near relation to the royal family, or because he was the chief of one of the twenty four families, or because he had been the chief man in the contriving and bringing about of this great change, and the general of the forces employed about it. And the high priest seems to be mentioned as a distinct person from Jehoiada here 2 Kings xii 9 10 all which make it questionable whether Jehoiada was the high priest or not. The collection, according to the commandment of Moses Heb the collection of Moses, is such a one as he commanded or made in the like case, of which see on ver 5. In like manner we read of the sins of Manasseh, 2 Kings xxiv 3, and of the sin of Teobeam frequently

7 For the sons of Athaliah, that wicked woman, had broken up the house of God, and also all the dedicated things of the house of the Lord did they bestow upon Baalim

The sons of Athaliah to wit, Ahaziah and his brethren before they were carried away captive chap xxi 17 who did this by her instigation, as this phrase implies. And broken up the house of God, both broken up the treasures, and defaced the house itself

8 And at the king's commandment they made a chest, and set it without at the gate of the house of the Lord

Of the court of the people, whither all manner of persons might come to offer

9 And they made a proclamation through Judah and Jerusalem, to bring in to the Lord the collection that Moses the servant of God laid upon Israel in the wilderness

A collection answerable to it as they are said to be guilty of the error of Balaam and gainsaying of Core, Jude 11 who fell into sins of the same kind

10 And all the princes and all the people rejoiced, and brought in, and cast into the chest, until they had made an end

11 Now it came to pass, that at what time the chest was brought unto the king's office by the hand of the Levites, and when they saw that there was much money, the king's scribe and the high priest's officer came and emptied the chest, and took it and carried it to his place again. Thus they did day by day, and gathered money in abundance

The chest was brought unto the king's office from the gate of the court into one of the chambers belonging to the temple which was appointed by the king for this office

12 And the king and Jehoiada gave it to such as did the work of the service of the house of the Lord, and hired masons and carpenters to repair the house of the Lord, and also such as wrought iron and brass to mend the house of the Lord

13 So the workmen wrought, and the work was perfected by them, and they set the house of God in his state, and strengthened it

14 And when they had finished it, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Jehoiada, whereof were made vessels for the house of the Lord, even vessels to minister, and to offer incense, and spoons, and vessels of gold and silver. And they offered burnt offerings in the house of the Lord continually all the days of Jehoiada

Whereof were made vessels for the house of the Lord, because Athaliah and her sons had taken the old ones away, ver 7

15 But Jehoiada waxed old, and was full of days when he died, an hundred and thirty years old was he when he died

16 And they buried him in the city of David among the kings, because he had done good in Israel both toward God, and toward his house

He had done good in Israel i. e. in Judah, which was an eminent part of Israel, and the only part of it which owned God or was owned by God as his Israel, to whom therefore he oft appropriated this name, thereby signifying that the other tribes were unworthy of that honourable title, and had forfeited all their right in it to Judah. See on chap xxi 2

17 Now after the death of Jehoiada came the princes of Judah, and made obeisance to the king. Then the king, he ascended unto them

He ascended unto the king, in that posture presenting their requests to him, that they might not be confined to unnecessary and troublesome journeys in coming to Jerusalem to worship, but might have the liberty which their fathers enjoyed of worshipping God in the high places, which liberty when once they had obtained, they knew they could then worship idols without observation or disturbance, which was the thing at which they aimed. And for the prevention of such abuses, God obliged all to worship him in one place

18 And they left the house of the Lord God of their fathers, and served groves and idols, and wrath came upon Judah and Jerusalem for this their trespass

By Hazael king of Syria, of which see 2 Kings xii 17, 18

19 Yet he sent prophets to them, to bring them again unto the Lord, and they testified against them but they would not give ear

20 And the Spirit of God came upon Zechariah the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people, and said unto them, Thus saith God, Why transgress ye the commandments of the Lord, that ye cannot prosper? because ye have forsaken the Lord, he hath also forsaken you

Above the people, in a higher place, that his voice and message might be the better heard

21 And they conspired against him, and stoned him with stones at the commandment of the king in the court of the house of the Lord.

They conspired, i. e. the people to whom he preached, who were easily corrupted by the examples of their apostate king and princes

22 Thus Joash the king remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but slew his son And when he died, he said, The Lord look upon it, and require it

i. e. Make inquisition for my innocent blood, which I did not wish from any desire of private revenge, with which so wise and good a man would never be willing to die, but partly from a zeal to public justice, and the punishment of such gross wickedness, and partly to deter them if possible, from completing their murderous intentions But the words may as well be rendered indicatively as optatively The Lord will look upon it and require it, i. e. he will examine this action, and require satisfaction from you for it

23 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of the year, that the host of Syria came up against him and they came to Judah and Jerusalem, and destroyed all the princes of the people from among the people, and sent all the spoil of them unto the king of Damascus

If the end of the year, so soon did God hear the cry of his holy prophet's blood and revenge it Destroyed all the princes of the people, that it might appear they were sent I directed by God to single out to destruction the first princes and chief promoters of this general apostasy Into the king of Damascus, to Hazael the king of that part of Syria called Syria Damascena, from its capital city Damascus

24 For the army of the Syrians came with a small company of men, and the Lord delivered a very great host into their hand, because they had forsaken the Lord God of their fathers So they executed judgment against Joash

25 And when they were departed from him, (for they left him in great diseases,) his own servants conspired against him for the blood of the sons of Jehoiada the priest, and slew him on his bed, and he died and they buried him in the city of David, but they buried him not in the sepulchres of the kings

In the blood of the sons of Jehoiada i. e. of Jerubbabai his son, the plural number sons put for the singular son, as it is frequently both in Scripture as Gen xlii 7 Numb xxi 42 and in Cicero and other profane author Or he might kill other sons of Jehoiada with him either because they owned him in what he had said, or lest they should revenge his death

26 And these are they that conspired against him, Zabad the son of Shimeith an Ammonitess, and Jehozabad the son of Shimrith a Moabitess

27 ¶ Now concerning his sons, and the greatness of the burdens laid upon him, and the repairing of the house of God, behold, they are written in the story of the book of the kings And Amaziah his son reigned in his stead

The greatness of the burdens laid upon him, either the severe prophecies against him which are oft called burdens of which one instance is recorded, and there might be others that are not recorded, or the great judgments of God upon him both by the Syrians, ver 23, 24, and by great diseases, ver 25

CHAP XXV

Amaziah becometh to reign well, slayeth his father's murderers, 1—4 Having hired an army of Israelites against the Edomites, at the word of a prophet he dismisseth them, 5—10, and with his own people overthroweth the Edomites the Israelites in their return home spoil, 11—13 Amaziah smothereth the gods of Edom, and despiseth the admonition of the prophet, 14—16 He provoketh Joash to his overthrow, 17—24 His reign, he is slain by conspiracy, 25—28

AMAZIAH was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem And his mother's name was Jehoadan of Jerusalem

Of this verse, and ver 2—4, see the notes on 2 Kings xiv 1 &c

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, but not with a perfect heart

3 ¶ Now it came to pass, when the kingdom was established to him, that he slew his servants that had killed the king his father

4 But he slew not then children, but did as it is written in the law in the book of Moses, where the Lord commanded, saying, The fathers shall not die for the children, neither shall the children die for the fathers but every man shall die for his own sin

5 ¶ Moreover Amaziah gathered Judah together and made them captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, according to the houses of their fathers throughout all Judah and Benjamin and he numbered them from twenty years old and above and found them three hundred thousand choice men, able to go forth to war, that could handle spear and shield

6 He hired also an hundred thousand mighty men of valour out of Israel for an hundred talents of silver

Out of Israel, out of the kingdom of the ten tribes

7 But there came a man of God to him, saying, O king, let not the army of Israel go with thee, for the Lord is not with Israel, to thee, with all the children of Ephraim

The Lord is not with Israel, he hath forsaken them, and for their sakes will cur their forces, if thou joimest thyself with them

8 But if thou wilt go, do it, be strong for the battle God shall make thee fall before the enemy for God hath power to help, and to cast down

Be strong for the battle, take courage and strengthen thyself as much as thou canst It is an moral concession, like that, Go, and prosper

9 And Amaziah said to the man of God, But what shall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the army of Israel And the man of God answered, The Lord is able to give thee much more than this

10 Then Amaziah separated them, to wit, the army that was come to him out of Ephraim, to go home again wherfore their anger was greatly kindled against Judah, and they returned home in great anger

<sup>q Heb in heat of anger</sup> When anger was greatly kindled against Judah, because they were both disgraced by this rejection, and disappointed that prey and spoil which they hoped to gain, where now they were sent away empty, for the one hundred talents probably were given to their officers only to raise men for this or so, that sum being otherwise too small to be distributed into many hands

<sup>as 1</sup> 11 ¶ And Amaziah strengthened himself, and led forth his people, and went to the valley of salt, and smote of the children of Sennan ten thousand

<sup>h Jos 14 7</sup> 12 And other ten thousand left alive did the children of Judah carry away captive, and brought them unto the top of the rock, and cast them down from the top of the rock, that they all were broken in pieces

<sup>7 11 the voice of it</sup> 13 ¶ But the soldiers of the army which Amaziah sent back, that they should not go with him to battle, fell upon the cities of Judah, from Samaria even unto Beth-horon, and smote thence thousand of them, and took much spoil

¶ Unto Beth-horon to wit, Beth-horon the lower, which was in the tribe of Benjamin, and from thence to Samaria, either 1 To the city of Samaria, for the kings of Judah had taken divers places within the kingdom of Israel. Or 2 To the kingdom of Samaria, Beth-horon and all other places between that city and the own kingdom. ¶ Smote is killed is that word is generally understood. ¶ Three thousand of them, not three thousand cities but three thousand per cent dwelling in them who possibly opposed them in taking the spoil which was the thing they sought

¶ 14 ¶ Now it came to pass after that Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, that he brought the gods of the children of Sennan and set them up to be his gods, and bowed down himself before them, and burned incense unto them

¶ 15 Wherefore the anger of the Lord was kindled against Amaziah, and he sent unto him a prophet which said unto him, Why hast thou sought after the gods of the people, which could not deliver their own people out of thine hand?

¶ Therein thou art not only ungrateful and impious, but also ridiculously foolish in offending that God whose power and wisdom thou hast now found, and in worshipping such gods of whose impotency thou hast had late experience

¶ 16 And it came to pass, as he talked with him that the king said unto him, Art thou made of the king's counsel? forbeare why shouldest thou be shunten? Then the prophet forbore, and said, I know that God hath determined to destroy thee because thou hast done this, and hast not hearkened unto my counsel

¶ 17 ¶ Then Amaziah king of Judah took advice, and sent to Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, the son of Jehu king of Israel, saying, Come let us see one another in the face

¶ Amaziah took advice, i.e. about the injury which the Israelites had done to his people, viz 13, and how he should repair it. But of this and the following verses see on 2 Kings xiv 8 &c

¶ 18 And Joash king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, The thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife and there passed by a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thistle

¶ 19 Thou sayest, Lo, thou hast smitten the Edomites, and thine heart lifteth thee up to boast abide now at home, why shouldest thou meddle to thine hurt, that thou shouldest fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

¶ 20 But Amaziah would not hear, for it came of God, that he might deliver them into the hand of their enemies, because they sought after the gods of Edom

¶ It came of God, who gave him up to his own error and passion in order to his ruin

¶ 21 So Joash the king of Israel went up, and they saw one another in the face, both he and Amaziah king of Judah, at Beth-shemesh, which belongeth to Judah

¶ 22 And Judah was put to the worse before Israel, and they fled every man to his tent

¶ 23 And Joash the king of Israel took Amaziah king of Judah, the son of Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, at Beth-shemesh, and brought him to Jerusalem, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem from the gate of Ephraim to the corner gate, four hundred cubits

¶ 24 And he took all the gold and the silver and all the vessels that were found in the house of God with Obed-edom, and the treasures of the king's house, the hostages also, and returned to Samaria

¶ 25 ¶ And Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah lived after the death of Joash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel fifteen years

¶ 26 Now the rest of the acts of Amaziah, first and last, behold, are they not written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel?

¶ 27 ¶ Now after the time that Amaziah did turn away from following the Lord they made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem, and he fled to Lachish but they sent to Lachish after him, and slew him there

¶ 28 And they brought him upon horses, and buried him with his fathers in the city of Judah of God.

He sought God, & he persisted in the true religion and worship of God. In the days of Zechariah, as long as he lived. Compare chap. xxiv. 2. Who had understanding, who was a very knowing and experienced person. Or who made him understanding, or who instructed him—who was his tutor and teacher—and had great authority and influence upon him, and so restrained him from those exuberancies to which he was otherwise inclined. In the visions of God, either 1. In prophetic visions which he either received from God himself, or understood and explained the prophetic visions of others, which was a special gift of God. (I which see Gen. xli. 1.) Dan. i. 17. ii. 19. Or 2. In the law and word of God which sometimes cometh under that name. 2 Prov. xviii. 18, Isa. xxi. 15.

6 And he went forth and <sup>a</sup>wared against the Philistine, and brake down the wall of Gath and the wall of Jabneh, and the wall of Ashdod, and built cities about Ashdod, and among the Philistines

Gath had been taken by Huzai in the days of Josiah his grandfather, 2 Kings xii 17, but was either relinquished by him, because it lay so far from his other dominions, or retaken by the Philistines, who had now repaired its fortifications, and kept it

7 And God helped him against the Philistines, and against the Arabians that dwelt in Gur-baal, and the Meunims.

8 And the Ammonites gave gifts to Uzziah and his name gave abroad even to the entering in of Egypt, for he strengthened himself exceedingly.

9 Moreover Uziah built towers in Jerusalem at the corner gate, and at the valley gate, and at the turning of the wall, and fortified them.

19 Also he built towers in the desert, and digged many wells for he had much cattle, both in the low country, and in the plains husbandmen also, and vine dressers in the mountains, and in Camel for he loved husbandry

It built towers in the desert, partly to guard his cattle from the inroads and depredations which the Arabians were accustomed to make, and partly to give notice of the ap- proach of any enemy, and to give some stop to their march on that side

11 Moreover Uziah had an host of fighting men, that went out to war by bands, according to the number of their account by the hand of Jehiel the scribe and Manasseh the ruler under the hand of Hannaniah, one of the king's captains.

That went out to war by bands, i. e. some bands at one time, and some at another, as occasion required. See the notes on 1 Chron xxxv 1. &c. 2 Chron xiv 11

12 The whole number of the chief of the fathers of the mighty men of valour were two thousand and six hundred

13 And under their hand was <sup>the power of</sup> an army, three hundred thousand and seven thousand and five hundred, that made war with mighty power, to help the king against the enemy

14 And Uzziah prepared for them throughout all the host shields, and spears, and helmets, and habergeons, and bows, and slings to cast stones.

15 And he made in Jerusalem engines, <sup>stones of</sup> invented by cunning men, <sup>slings</sup> to be on the towers and upon the bulwarks, to shoot arrows and great stones withal. And his name spread far abroad, for he was marvellously helped, till he was strong <sup>+ lib</sup> <sup>urn fort</sup>

16 ¶ But <sup>h</sup> when <sup>h</sup> he was strong, his heart was <sup>h</sup> lifted up to <sup>h</sup> his destruction for he transgressed against the Lord his God, and <sup>h</sup> went into the temple of the Lord to burn incense upon the altar of incense

But when he is strong, when he was strengthened in his kingdom and free from the fear of any enemy. Into the temple of the Lord, into the holy place, where the altar of incense stood and into which he went to the priests might enter, much less offer incense.

17 And <sup>11</sup>Azariah the priest went in <sup>11</sup>after him, and with him fourscore priests <sup>12</sup>of the Lord that were valiant men

18 And they withstood Uzziah the king, and said unto him, It is appertaining in Num 16 40 & 18 unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incense unto the Lord, but ~~to~~ the <sup>the</sup> priests the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated to burn incense go out of the sanctuary, for thou hast trespassed, neither shall it be in 1 K 20 7 for thine honour from the Lord God

They s<sup>t</sup>ood Uzzah, Heb stood up against Uzzah, not by force, or laying hands upon him to restrain him, for in the next verse you still find the cause in his hand; but only by admonition and reproof, which here follows
Ye ther shall it be for thine honour from the Lord God, expect that God will punish thee or put some brand of mi-series upon thee, for this presumption. But this they express modestly, and by a figure called metonymy, where more is meant than is expressed, because they considered that he to whom they spake, though an offender, was their lord and GOVERNOR.

19 Then Uzziah was wroth, and had a censer in his hand to burn incense: and while he was wroth with the priests, the leprosy even rose up in his forehead before the priests in the house of the Lord, from beside the incense altar.

I ziah was wroth with the priests. The leprosy even rose up in his forehead, so as he could not hide his shame, though it is probable it was also in the rest of his body from head to the increase of his, by a stroke from an invisible hand coming from the altar that he might be assured that this was the effect of God's just displeasure against him

20 And Azariah the chief priest, and all the priests, looked upon him, and, behold, he was leprous in his forehead, and they thrust him out from thence, yea, himself hasted also to go out, because the Lord had smitten him

They thrust him out not by force, as was noted on ver 18, which needed not, for he voluntarily hasted away as it follows, but by vehement persuasions and denunciations of God's further judgments upon him, if he did not depart. Some suppose that the earthquake mentioned Amos 1, 1, which xiv 5 happened upon this occasion, as another token of God's displeasure against this unparalleled arrogance.

21 And Uzziah the king was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a several house, being a leper, for he was cut off from the house of the Lord and Jotham his son was over the king's house, judging the people of the land

Into the day of his death God would have this leprosy to be memorable, as a lasting monument of his anger against such presumptuous ignorances of the priest's office. Dwelt in a several house, as he was obliged to do by law, Lev xiii 46, which he durst not now resist being under the hand and stroke of God, and under the fear of further and worse plagues, if he did so. For he was cut off, so the following words are a reason of the former, he dwelt in a several house because he might not come into the temple or courts, nor consequently into any public assembly or the society of others. Or and therefore as the Hebrew che often signifies, and the particle and is not understood. So it is an inference from the next foregoing words. He was a leper and therefore he was cut off &c. He who could not content himself with God's allowance but usurped the priest's place and office is now deprived of the privilege of the nearest of his people. A just and most sensible judgment.

22 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Uzziah, first and last, did Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, write

23 So Uzziah slept with his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in the field of the burial which belonged to the kings: for they said, He is a leper and Jotham his son reigned in his stead

CHAP XXVII

Jotham reigneth well, prospereth 1-4, rendereth the Ammonites tributaries his reign. Ahaz succeedeth him, 5-9

JOTHAM was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Jerushah, the daughter of Zadok

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord according to all that his father Uzziah did: howbeit he entered not into the temple of the Lord. And the people did so corruptly

He entered not into the temple of the Lord, to wit, to offer incense. But seeing this was not commendable how is this mentioned as in exception from the foregoing character, that he did as his father did in that which was right, &c. It is an exception only from the last clause, where also one word may be supplied out of the foregoing words, as is most usual in Scripture, thus. He did according to all that his father Uzziah did, then it truly follows, howbeit, &c. i.e. except in his mis carriage.

3 He built the high gate of the house of the Lord, and on the wall of Ophel he built much

He built &c. repaired it, for it was built before, chap xi 5. The high gate otherwise called the new gate, Jer xxxvi 10. The wall of Ophel, a tower upon or near the wall of Jerusalem, which probably he fortified as his father had done other towers, chap xxvi 9.

4 Moreover he built cities in the mountains of Judah, and in the forests he built castles and towers

5 ¶ He fought also with the king of the Ammonites, and prevailed against them. And the children of Ammon gave him the same year an hundred talents of silver, and ten thousand measures of wheat, and ten thousand of barley. So much did the children of Ammon pay unto him, both the second year, and the third.

The king of the Ammonites, it seems, endeavoured to shake off the yoke which from David's time had been put upon them.

6 So Jotham became mighty, because he prepared his ways before the Lord

Or directed his ways, i.e. his counsels and actions, by the rule of God's law.

7 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jotham, and all his wars, and his ways, lo, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah

8 He was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem

9 ¶ And Jotham slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead

CHAP XXVIII

Ahaz reigning ill, 1-4, is smitten by the Syrians, and by the Israelites 5-7, who carry away captives which by the advice of a prophet, they return 8-15. Ahaz sendeth to the king of Assyria for help against the Philistines and Idomites, but obtaineth none 16-21. His great idolatry 22-25. He dieth, and Hezekiah is king, 26, 27.

AHAZ was twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: but he did not that which was right in the sight of the Lord, like David his father

2 For he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and made also molten images for Baalim

To worship his Baalim, or false gods, in and by them.

3 Moreover he burnt incense in the valley of the son of Hinnom, and burnt his children in the fire, after the abominations of the heathen whom the Lord had cast out before the children of Israel

4 He sacrificed also and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree

5 Wherefore the Lord his God delivered him into the hand of the king of Syria, and they smote him, and carried away a great multitude of them captives, and brought them to Damascus. And he was also delivered into the hand of the king of Israel, who smote him with a great slaughter.

The Lord his God God was his God, though not by covenant and grace, and special relation which Ahaz had received, yet by his sovereign dominion over him, for God did not forfeit his right by Ahaz's denying it.

6 ¶ For <sup>h</sup> Pekah the son of Remaliah slew in Judah an hundred and twenty thousand in one day, which were all valiant men, because they had forsaken the Lord God of their fathers.

7 And Zichri, a mighty man of Ephraim, slew Maaseiah the king's son and Azikani the governor of the house and Elkanah that was next to the king.

8 And the children of Israel carried away captive of their brethren two hundred thousand, women, sons, and daughters, and took also away much spoil from them, and brought the spoil to Samaria.

9 But a prophet of the Lord was there, whose name was Oded: and he went out before the host that came to Samaria and said unto them, Behold, because the Lord God of your fathers was wroth with Judah, he hath delivered them into your hand, and ye have slain them in a rage that reacheth up unto heaven.

In a most high and heroic manner. A usual hyperbole with signifying that their rage did cry aloud, and was he led to heaven, from whence it would pull down vengeance upon them.

10 And now we purpose to keep under the children of Judah and Jerusalem for bondmen and bondwomen unto you, but give them not with you even with you, sins against the Lord your God.

Which, if not repented of may bring down the like vengeance upon your own heads.

11 Now hear me therefore and deliver the captives again, which ye have taken captive of your brethren: for the fierce wrath of the Lord is upon you.

12 Then certain of the heads of the children of Ephraim, Azariah the son of Johanan, Berechiah the son of Meshillemoth, and Ichnaziah the son of Shallum, and Amasai the son of Hadad, stood up against them that came from the war.

13 And said unto them, Ye shall not bring in the captives hither: for whereas we have offended against the Lord already, ye intend to add more to our sins and to our trespass: for our trespass is great, and there is fierce wrath against Israel.

14 So the armed men left the captives and the spoil before the princes and all the congregation.

15 And the men which were expressed by name rose up, and took the captives, and with the spoil clothed all that were naked among them, and shod them, and gave them to eat and to drink, and anointed them, and carried all the feeble of them upon asses, and brought them to Jericho, the city of palm trees, to their brethren: then they returned to Samaria.

Which were expressed by name, which were appointed to take care about the management of this business.

16 ¶ At that time did king Ahaz send unto the kings of Assyria to help him.

The kings of Assyria, i. e. the king, the plural number for the singular. either, 1. Because he was a great king and a king of kings, as the elephant or as others think, the crocodile, is called behemoth, which signifies beasts Job xl, because of his vast bulk and eminency above other beasts. Or, 2. Because he wrote to divers of the kings or great princes, who may be called kings in a more general signification of the word, and indeed are so called, Isa x b, the king of kings altogether kings?

17 For again the Edomites had come and smitten Judah, and carried away captives.

18 The Philistines also had invaded the cities of the low country, and of the south of Judah, and had taken Beth-she-mesh, and Ajalon, and Gederoth, and Shococho with the villages thereof, and Timnath with the villages thereof, Gimzo also and the villages thereof: and they dwell there.

The low country, that part of Judah which was towards the sea and towards the Philistines' land. The south of Judah of which see Josh xv 21.

19 For the Lord brought Judah low because of Ahaz king of Israel, for he made Judah naked, and transgressed sore against the Lord.

He made Judah naked, taking away their ornament and their defence and strength, to wit, their treasures which he sent to the Assyrians to no purpose, their frontier towns and other strong holds, which by his folly and wickedness were lost, their religion and the Divine protection, which was their great and only firm security, which by his sins he forfeited. See the notes on Isa xlii 25.

20 And Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria came unto him, and distressed him, but strengthened him not.

21 For Ahaz took away a portion out of the house of the Lord and out of the house of the king, and of the princes, and gave it unto the king of Assyria: but he helped him not.

Distressed him or strengthened him, by robbing him of his treasures. But he helped him not, but strengthened him not, a more emphatic expression, for though he weakened his power, enemy the Syrian as is relate 1, 2 Kings xvi 9, yet really, if all things considered, he did not strengthen Ahaz and his kingdom, but rather weaken them, for by the removing the Syrian, who though a troublesome neighbour, was a kind of bulwark to him, as to many other enemies, he opened the way for himself, a far more dangerous and more dangerous enemy, as appears by his invasion of Judah in the very next king's reign.

22 ¶ And in the time of his distress did he trespass yet more against the Lord: this is that king Ahaz.

That monster and reproach of mankind, that unrepentable and incorrigible prince, whom even grievous afflictions made worse, which commonly make men better. This is he whose name deserves to be remembered and detested for ever. Oh, king Ahaz, was the same no changing, not a whit better by all the methods which God used with him.

23 For he sacrificed unto the gods of Damascus, which smote him, and he said, Because the gods of the kings of Syria help them, therefore will I sacrifice to them, that they may help me. But they were the ruin of him, and of all Israel.

Which smote him, or, which had smitten him formerly, i. e. had enabled their worshippers the Syrians, to smite him, as he fondly imagined, who yet he saw confuted, living now found by experiment that they could not save them from the Assyrian power.

24 And Ahaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God, and cut in pieces the vessels of the house of God, and shut up the doors of the house of the Lord, and he made him altars in every corner of Jerusalem.

25 And in every several city of Judah he made high places to burn incense unto other gods, and provoked to anger the Lord God of his fathers.

26 ¶ Now the rest of his acts and of all his ways, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

27 And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city, even in Jerusalem; but they brought him not into the sepulchres of the kings of Israel; and Hezekiah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP XXIX

Hezekiah's good reign, he restored religion, exhorted the Levites, 1-11. They sanctify themselves, and cleanse the house of God, 12-19. He offereth solemn sacrifices with songs of praise, and the congregation add their offerings, 20-26.

HEZEKIAH began to reign when he was five and twenty years old and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Abijah, the daughter of Zechariah.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, according to all that David his father had done.

3 ¶ He in the first year of his reign, in the first month, opened the doors of the house of the Lord, and repaired them which Ahaz his father had shut up. Chap XXVIII 24.

4 And he brought in the priests and the Levites, and gathered them together into the east street,

Which was before the eastern gate of the temple.

5 And said unto them, Hear me, ye Levites, sanctify now yourselves, and sanctify the house of the Lord God of your fathers, and carry forth the filthness out of the holy place.

That filthy altar, which Ahaz had put in the place of God's altar, Kings XVI 11, &c. and the idols or other abominable or polluting things which were there. Out of the holy place, the temple, or the priests' court which also is called a holy place. Lev VI 16 & 13, Numb XXVIII 7.

6 For our fathers have transgressed, and done that which was evil in the eyes of the Lord our God, and have forsaken him, and have turned away their faces from the habitation of the Lord, and turned their backs.

Either, 1. Metaphorically, they have wilfully, and obstinately, and contumaciously forsaken God and his house and worship, that posture being a signification of contempt. Or, 2. Literally and properly. For Ahaz having removed the altar of God onto a high place, Kings XVI, and directing his worship towards the east, for the manner of the heathens whom he designed to follow, and not to the west as the Israelites did by God's command, in which quarters the ark was, he must needs consequently turn his back upon the altar, and house, and ark of God.

7 Also they have shut up the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burned incense nor offered burnt offerings in the holy place unto the God of Israel.

8 Wherefore the wrath of the Lord was upon Judah and Jerusalem, and he hath delivered them to trouble, to astonishment, and to hissing, as ye see with your eyes.

To astonishment and to hissing, i. e. to such calamities as all that see and hear of shall be astonished at and hiss at those who by their own sin and folly have brought such miseries upon themselves. See on 1 Kings IX 8.

9 For, lo, our fathers have fallen by the sword, and our sons and our daughters and our wives are in captivity for this.

Or were though they were presently released, Chap XXVIII 5, 11, 15.

10 Now it is in mine heart to make a covenant with the Lord God of Israel, that his fierce wrath may turn away from us.

11 My sons, be not now negligent for the Lord hath chosen you to stand before him, to serve him, and that ye should minister unto him, and burn incense.

My sons, so he calls them and frequently, though many of them were older than himself, because he was by his tenderness of love and affection as he was by his office obliged to be a nursing father to them. See Isa XLIX 25. Be now diligent in sanctifying yourselves and the temple, i. e. in quickening and purifying yourselves and the people to God's service.

12 ¶ Then the Levites arose, Mahath the son of Amasai, and Joel the son of Azariah, of the sons of the Kohathites, and of the sons of Merari, Kish the son of Abdi, and Azariah the son of Ichalel, and of the Gershonites, Joah the son of Zimmah, and Eden the son of Joah.

13 And of the sons of Elizaphan, Shimri, and Jeciel, and of the sons of Asaph, Zechariah, and Mattaniah.

14 And of the sons of Heman, Schiel, and Shimei, and of the sons of Jeduthun, Shemariah, and Uzziel.

15 And they gathered their brethren, and sanctified themselves, and came, according to the commandment of the Lord, by the words of the Lord, to cleanse the house of the Lord.

16 And the priests went into the inner part of the house of the Lord, to cleanse it, and brought out all the uncleanness that they found in the temple of the Lord into the court of the house of the Lord. And the Levites took it, to carry it out abroad into the brook Kidron.

The inner part of the house of the Lord, not the holy of holies, into which only the high priest might enter, and that but once in a year; but the holy place. Into the court, to wit the priests' court called hence the court, by way of eminency.

17 Now they began on the first day of the first month to sanctify, and on the eighth day of the month came they to the porch of the Lord; so they sanctified the house of the Lord in eight days, and in the sixteenth day of the first month they made an end

In sixteen days purging the house, and porch, and courts, and all the chambers belonging to the temple. This is noted to imply partly the universal abuse and defilement of all the parts of it by Ahaz, which required so much time to remove, and partly the diligence of the priests in this work.

18 Then they went in to Hezekiah the king, and said, We have cleansed all the house of the Lord, and the altar of burnt offering, with all the vessels thereof, and the showbread table, with all the vessels thereof.

19 Moreover all the vessels, which king Ahaz in his reign did cast away in his transgression, have we prepared and sanctified, and, behold, they are before the altar of the Lord.

20 ¶ Then Hezekiah the king rose early, and gathered the rulers of the city, and went up to the house of the Lord.

21 And they brought seven bullocks and seven rams, and seven lambs, and seven he goats, for a sin offering for the kingdom, and for the sanctuary, and for Judah. And he commanded the priests the sons of Aaron to offer them on the altar of the Lord.

The number of seven is famous and customary in sacred matters and is here used in regard of the vast numbers and various kinds of sins, the guilt whereof yet lay upon the kingdom which was now to be expiated. Indeed in case of one particular sin of ignorance done by the people, there was but one bullock to be offered, Lev. iv. 13, 14 but here the sins were many and presumptuous. A sin-offering for the kingdom, to make atonement for the sins of the king, and the royal family, and the court. For the sanctuary, for all the idolatry and uncleanness wherewith the temple had been polluted, which as it had been changed naturally by the priests' hands, so now was to be purged morally by sacrifices. For Judah, for the sins of all the people of Judah.

22 So they killed the bullocks, and the priests received the blood, and sprinkled it on the altar. Likewise, when they had killed the rams, they sprinkled the blood upon the altar. They killed also the lambs, and they sprinkled the blood upon the altar.

23 And they brought forth the he goats for the sin offering before the king and the congregation, and they laid their hands upon them.

24 And the king and the elders of the congregation in the name of the whole congregation.

24 And the priests killed them, and they made reconciliation with their blood upon the altar, to make an atonement for all Israel. For the king commanded that the burnt offering and the sin offering should be made for all Israel.

For all Israel, i. e. for Judah and Benjamin, in all the parts of the tribes, whereof a considerable number were now in his dominions.

25 And he set the Levites in the house of the Lord with cymbals, with psalteries, and with harps, according to the commandment of David, and of Gad the king's seer, and Nathan the prophet.

For so was the commandment of the Lord by his prophets.

26 And the Levites stood with the instruments of David, and the priests with the trumpets.

27 And Hezekiah commanded to offer the burnt offering upon the altar. And when the burnt offering began, the song of the Lord began also with the trumpets, and with the instruments ordained by David king of Israel.

28 And all the congregation worshipped, and the singers sang, and the trumpeters sounded, and all this continued until the burnt offering was finished.

29 And when they had made an end of offering, the king and all that were present with him bowed themselves, and worshipped.

30 Moreover Hezekiah the king and the princes commanded the Levites to sing praise unto the Lord with the words of David, and of Asaph the seer. And they sang praises with gladness, and they bowed their heads and worshipped.

31 Then Hezekiah answered and said, Now ye have consecrated yourselves unto the Lord, come near and bring sacrifices and thank offerings into the house of the Lord. And the congregation brought in sacrifices and thank offerings, and as many as were of a free heart burnt offerings.

Now ye have consecrated yourselves unto the Lord, now that you have reconciled yourselves and the house to God, I pray, and that he is willing and ready to accept your sacrifices. Burnt offerings, wherein there was more generosity than in the other sacrifices because they were wholly burnt and offered to God. The people had no share in them as they had in the other.

32 And the number of the burnt offerings, which the congregation brought, was threescore and ten bullocks, an hundred rams, and two hundred lambs: all these were for a burnt offering to the Lord.

And the consecrated things were six hundred oxen and three thousand sheep.

All the offerings consecrated to God besides the burnt offerings already mentioned.

33 But the priests were too few, so that they could not slay all the burnt offerings, wherefore their brethren the Levites did help them, till the work was ended, and until the other priests had sanctified themselves (for the Levites were more upright in heart to sanctify themselves than the priests).

The priests were too few, to wit, such as were sanctified and fit for their work, as the following words show, for otherwise the number of the priests was more than sufficient for this employment. They could not slay all the burnt offerings, and much less all the other sacrifices which were more numerous, the slaying whereof was the priest's proper work, Lev. i. 5, 6. The Levites did help them, not only excusing their deviation from the rule, as it hath excused others in like cases.

34 And also the burnt offerings were in abundance, with the fat of the peace offerings, and the drink offerings for every burnt offering So the service of the house of the Lord was set in order

And also the burnt-offerings were in abundance, or, for the burnt-offerings were to be offered also in abundance. So it is a reason why the priests could not stay all the burnt-offerings, as was said, ver 31, because there was so much other work for them, for the burnt-offerings were not only to be stayed, but also to be offered, to wit, wholly, and with them the fat of peace offerings, &c.

36 And Hezekiah rejoiced, and all the people, that God had prepared the people for the thing was done suddenly

It was, as a very great, so a sudden change, that the people, who but the other day were so ready to comply with wicked Ahab in his idolatrous and impious prescriptions, were now so free and forward in God's service, whereby it plainly appeared to be the work of the Almighty God changing their hearts by his Holy Spirit

CHAP XXX

Hezekiah proclaimeth a solemn passover for Judah and Israel, 1-12 They, having destroyed the altars of idolatry keep the feast fourteen days, 13-26 The priests and Levites bless the people, 27

AND Hezekiah sent to all Israel and Judah, and wrote letters also to Ephraim and Manasseh, that they should come to the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, to keep the passover unto the Lord God of Israel

To all Israel, whereby he understands all the persons of the ten tribes, who were now settled in his kingdom, as appears by their contradistinction to Ephraim and Manasseh here following. To Ephraim and Manasseh, i. e. to all the removers of the ten tribes ver 5, who are here synecdochically expressed by the names of Ephraim and Manasseh as if where by the name of Ephraim only. But he name these two tribes, because they were nearest to his kingdom and a great number of them had long since and from time to time joined themselves to the kingdom of Judah, 2 Chron. xxviii. 9, and therefore he had most hopes of success amongst them. That they should come to the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, admonishing them of their duty to God, and persuading them to comply with it.

2 For the king had taken counsel, and his princes, and all the congregation in Jerusalem, to keep the passover in the second month

Which was against the common rule and practice but was permitted by that supreme law of necessity, and by a just impediment, which made the doing of this in its proper time, to wit the fourteenth day of the first month impossible because the temple was not cleansed nor they prepared till that time was past chap xxix. 3, 17. Compute Numb. ix. 10, 11.

3 For they could not keep it at that time, because the priests had not sanctified themselves sufficiently neither had the people gathered themselves together to Jerusalem

They could not keep it at that time, which God had appointed for it, 1. xxi. 6, one reason whereof was evident in itself, because the temple was not then purified and prepared, to which he adds two other reasons. The priests had not sanctified themselves sufficiently to wit, in such manner and degree as was fit not in such numbers as were necessary for the slaying and offering of so many thousands of paschal offerings, as appears because they were not sufficient for those offerings, which were comparatively few, chap xxix. 32-34. Neither did the people gathered themselves together to Jerusalem, as they used and ought to do at that time from all places, which now they could not do, because neither the thing was agreed upon nor the people summoned thither, till the proper time was past.

4 And the thing pleased the king and all the congregation

5 So they established a decree to make proclamation throughout all Israel, from Beer-sheba even to Dan, that they should come to keep the passover unto the Lord God of Israel at Jerusalem for they had not done it of a long time in such sort as it was written

They established a decree, they fixed this resolution in such sort as it was written, i. e. so as God had commanded them to do it, to wit, that all the males in Israel should do it, which express command of God they ought to have obeyed, rather than the wicked commands or edicts of men to the contrary, which was both the judgment and practice of the priests and Levites, and other godly Israelites as is manifest from 2 Chron. xv. 8, &c.

6 So the posts went with the letters from the king and his princes throughout all Israel and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, saying, Ye children of Israel, turn again unto the Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and he will return to the remnant of you, that are escaped out of the hand of the kings of Assyria

To wit, Pul and Tilgath-pilneser, who had carried their brethren away captives, 2 Kings xv. 19, 29, 1 Chron. v. 26, 2 Chron. xxviii. 20.

7 And be not ye like your fathers, and like your brethren, which trespassed against the Lord God of their fathers, who therefore gave them up to desolation, as ye see

8 Now be ye not stiffnecked, as your fathers were, but yield yourselves unto the Lord, and enter into his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for ever and serve the Lord your God, that the fierceness of his wrath may turn away from you

Yield yourselves unto the Lord, Heb. give the hand to him, i. e. submit yourselves to him by obeying his command and renew your covenant with him, both which things were done amongst men by this ceremony of giving the hand. See 1 Chron. xix. 21, Ezek. x. 18. Which he hath sanctified for ever, not for a transient and temporary use, but as long as the state and church of Israel had a being, whatsoever alterations should happen therein.

9 For if ye turn again unto the Lord, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, so that they shall come again into this land for the Lord your God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him

10 So the posts passed from city to city through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh, even unto Zebulun but they laughed them to scorn, and mocked them.

They laughed, i. e. the generality of the ten tribes, who by long want of meat had now lost all their appetite to God's ordinances, and from neglect were now fallen into a contempt and derision of them, for which they paid dear. For about six years after their refusal of this offer of grace they were all carried captive, 2 Kings xxviii. 1, 10.

11 Nevertheless divers of Asher and Manasseh and of Zebulun humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem

12 Also in Judah the hand of God was to give them one heart to do the commandment of the king and of the princes, by the word of the LORD

<sup>9 ch. 24. 23</sup> 1. c. God by the power of his grace inclined their hearts to a unanimous compliance with God's and the king's will and this is mentioned as the reason of this wonderful change wrought in these men, who had lately been utterly averse from God's worship and wholly given up to idolatry, as was noted before chap. xxix. 36

<sup>13</sup> ¶ And there assembled at Jerusalem much people to keep the feast of unleavened bread in the second month, a very great congregation

<sup>14</sup> And they arose and took away the <sup>ch. 25. 24</sup> altars that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into the brook Kidron

The altars, to wit, of burnt-offerings, because they are distinguished from the altars of incense here following, both which were removed and destroyed, partly because all the idols were confined to the altars of the temple, and partly because these altars were erected to idols

<sup>15</sup> Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month and the priests and the Levites were <sup>ch. 29. 34</sup> ashamed, and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt offerings into the house of the LORD

The priests and the Levites were ashamed then negligence and remissness being upbraided by the great and general clarity and fervour of the people

<sup>16</sup> And they stood in their place after their manner, according to the law of Moses the man of God the priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites

The priests sprinkled the blood of the sacrifices upon the altar Lev. 1. 5. Which they received of the hand of the Levites, who slayed and killed the sacrifices which the priests, if they had been sanctified, should have done, as it was observed before, chap. xxix. 31

<sup>17</sup> For there were many in the congregation that were not sanctified therefore the Levites had the charge of the killing of the passovers for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto the LORD

That were not sanctified that had more desire to come to the passover, than care and diligence to cleanse and prepare themselves for it. Now these persons were either, 1. The priests, who were before taxed with uncleanness and unpreparedness. Or rather, 2. The people, as is implied in the word congregation, and expressed in the next verse and confirmed by the reason here following. The Levites had the charge of the killing because many of the people were unclean and therefore many more sacrifices were to be offered for their purification than the priests could kill. Of the passovers, 1. e. either, 1. The paschal lambs which the Levites here offered, because of the impurity of many of the masters of families, who otherwise, as some think should have killed the paschal lambs in their own houses, Exod. xii. 3. Or, 2. The other sacrifices which accompanied the passover, which also are called by the same name as is evident from Deut. xvi. 2, 3, where see my notes, which the Levites here killed for the reason now mentioned. For every one that was not clean, so far as they could make any discovery of their uncleanness either by their own confession or otherwise. But there were many whose uncleannesses were not known, and therefore did not cleanse themselves, as is said, ver. 18 as they ought to have done

<sup>18</sup> For a multitude of the people, even many of Ephraim, and Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, had not cleansed themselves, yet did they eat the passover otherwise than it was written. But Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, The good LORD pardon every one

Otherwise than it was written they had so eager a desire to partake of this ordinance, that, rather than neglect it they would venture upon it with some ceremonial uncleanness upon them

<sup>19</sup> That prepareth his heart to seek God, the LORD God of his fathers, though he be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary

1. e. With that ceremonial purification which was required of them that came into God's sanctuary. So he calls it, to distinguish from that moral and internal purity which they are here acknowledged to have

<sup>20</sup> And the LORD hearkened to Hezekiah, and healed the people

From their uncleanness; which itself was a spiritual disease, and which probably produced a disease, or distemper, or trouble in their minds and consciences, which also had formerly brought and might justly now bring even outward diseases upon the body, as, at least, guilt, which is a disease upon the soul, from all which the LORD was pleased now to heal them, by pardoning thus their sin, and accepting them and their services, as if they had been clean, which it is likely God was pleased to manifest by some outward sign, possibly by fire from heaven consuming the sacrifices, which was the usual token of God's approbation, as hath been formerly noted more than once

<sup>21</sup> And the children of Israel that were present at Jerusalem kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with great gladness and the Levites and the priests praised the LORD day by day, singing with loud instruments unto the LORD

<sup>22</sup> And Hezekiah spake comfortably unto all the Levites that taught the good knowledge of the LORD and they did eat throughout the feast seven days, offering peace offerings, and making confession to the LORD God as their fathers

Spake comfortably unto all the Levites, encouraged them to cheerful and diligent attendance upon their holy ministrations by the promise of his favour and utmost care for them which he faithfully performed chap. xxxi. 1, &c. That taught the good knowledge of the LORD, who by their office were to instruct and build up the people in the knowledge and love of God, which is mentioned as the cause of his respect and kindness to them which was for their work's sake, 1. e. as said, 1. Thess. v. 13. Making confession, either, 1. Confessing their sins; which work was to accompany many of their sacrifices, of which see Lev. x. 5; ver. 21. Or rather, 2. Confessing God's goodness, or praising of God which oft goes under this name, as 1 Chron. xvi. 8, 24, which also seems to be more proper work for this season of joy

<sup>23</sup> And the whole assembly took counsel to keep other seven days and they kept other seven days with gladness

Not in the same manner as they had done the former, with offering new paschal lambs, and eating only unleavened bread, (of which there is not the least intimation in the text,) but only in the solemn worship of God by sacrifices, and prayers and praises, and public instruction of that great congregation in the good knowledge of the LORD, which was so dear to Hezekiah, ver. 22 and at this time most reasonable and necessary for the people after so long and dismal a night of ignorance, superstition and idolatry, as both Israel and Judah had been involved in

ech 29 34 and a great number of priests "sanctified themselves

Ezekiah did give to the congregation, first to God to whom the priests appointed were offered in way of thanks giving, and then to the people who fasted upon the relics, as the offering used to be in peace offerings, and Ezekiah who was the offering gave away his right in the remains of the sacrifices to the people. A thousand bullocks and seven thousand sheep, which generosity is the more considerable because it was in the beginning of his reign when he found the royal exchequer exhausted and empty, and when he had been at great expense about the cleansing and refitting of the temple, and making preparations for this great feast. A great number of priests sanctified themselves, having now both means and further need of sanctifying themselves to offer the numerous sacrifices.

25 And all the congregation of Judah, with the priests and the Levites, and all the congregation that came out of Israel, and the strangers that came out of the land of Israel, and that dwelt in Judah, rejoiced.

26 So there was great joy in Jerusalem for since the time of Solomon the son of David king of Israel there was not the like in Jerusalem.

27 ¶ Then the priests the Levites arose and blessed the people, and their voice was heard, and their prayer came up to his holy dwelling place, even unto heaven.

The priests the Levites, those of the Levites who were priests also, for to them only this work belonged. 1 Chron xxi 13. Or, the priests and the Levites, for as the Levites did some other part of the priests' work at this time, it is not strange if they did this also. Or the priests might bless by solemn pronouncement of the blessing, and the Levites by their acclamations or with their musical instruments. Blessed the people, either commended them for their great zeal and diligence in God's service, or rather, solemnly prayed to God to bless them, and their prayer was not in vain, as the following words show.

CHAPTER XXXI

The people forward in destroying idolatry. Ezekiah ordered the courses of the priests and Levites, and provideth for their work and maintenance. 1. The people forward in offerings and tithes 5-10. Ezekiah appointeth officers to dispose of the tithes 11-14, his sincerity 20, 21.

NOW when all this was finished, all Israel that were present went out to the cities of Judah, and brake the images in pieces, and cut down the groves, and threw down the high places and the altars out of all Judah and Benjamin, in Ephraim also and Manasse, until they had utterly destroyed them all. Then all the children of Israel returned, every man to his possession into their own cities.

In Ephraim also and Manasse, either 1. In those cities belonging to Ephraim and Manasse which the kings of Judah had formerly taken from the kings of Israel. Or, 2. In the tribes of Ephraim and Manasse. For although these were a part of Hosea's kingdom yet Ezekiah presumed to do this partly by virtue of the law of God, to which both Israel and Judah were subject, which commanded the extirpation of these things out of the whole land of Canaan, partly by the special impulse and direction of God's Spirit, which sometimes did put persons upon heroic and extraordinary actions not to be drawn into imitation, and partly, because he knew that Hosea contented himself with the worship of the calves, and did not practise that great idolatry which his predecessors had used, and therefore would patiently suffer the breaking of these images of Baal, and the things belonging to them, which all that was done at this time.

2 ¶ And Ezekiah appointed the courses of the priests and the Levites after their courses, every man according to his service, the priests and Levites for burnt offerings and for peace offerings, to minister, and to give thanks, and to praise in the gates of the tents of the Lord.

1. Within the gates of the house of the Lord, which here called tents, partly because all houses are so called as Judg xiv 9, xx 8. Psal lxxx 25, and partly because the host of the Lord, to wit, the priests and Levites frequently so called, encamped there, and kept their stations and orders there by course.

3 He appointed also the king's portion of his substance for the burnt offerings, to wit, for the morning and evening burnt offerings, and the burnt offerings for the sabbaths, and for the new moons, and for the set feasts, as it is written in the law of the Lord.

For the burnt offerings, which had hitherto been, and were to be, taken out of the treasures of the temple which were collected from the people 1 Chron xxi 20, Neh x 32, 33, but that he might ease them in their present poverty which his predecessor had brought upon them, and engage them to a more cheerful attendance upon God's service, he took the burden upon himself.

4 Moreover he commanded the people that dwelt in Jerusalem to give the portion of the priests and the Levites, that they might be encouraged in the law of the Lord.

1. Freed from worldly cares and distractions, and enabled to give up themselves entirely to the serious study of God's law, in which many of them were ignorant, and to the instruction and direction, and quickning of the people in their several duties.

5 ¶ And as soon as the commandment came abroad, the children of Israel brought in abundance the firstfruits of corn, wine, and oil, and honey, and of all the increase of the field, and the tithe of all things brought they in abundantly.

As soon as the commandment came abroad, either 1. As soon as the report of this command of the king, ver 4, was got abroad into other parts. Or, 2. As soon as the king engaged and extended that command to all the parts of his kingdom, which ver 4, was confined to them that dwelt in Jerusalem. Honey or, dates, is the Hebrew writers generally, and many other learned Hebrews understand this word, which is given to them because of the sweetness of their taste, in some sort resembling honey. For the law requires no tithes but of the fruits of trees, or of the earth or of beasts.

6 And concerning the children of Israel and Judah, that dwelt in the cities of Judah, they also brought in the tithe of oxen and sheep, and the tithe of holy things which were consecrated unto the Lord their God, and laid them by heaps.

Also the tithe of oxen and sheep, they brought in not only the same tithes which the dwellers in Jerusalem did, to wit, of corn, and wine and oil, &c., which they had in their own storehouses in that city, but also oxen and sheep which were more proper to the country, for under the tithes of Judah are comprehended the suburbs and territories adjacent and belonging to them, as is evident from the nature of the thing, and the law of God. And the tithe of holy things this may be taken either, 1 By way of explication even the tithes of holy things, &c Or rather, 2 By way of addition, the tithes of all holy things which were consecrated unto the Lord, whether by vow, or voluntary promise, or otherwise, as the tithes of gains by merchandise, or spoils of war, &c., of which see Gen xiv 20, xxviii 22, Numb xxxi 28, 30

7 In the third month they began to lay the foundation of the heaps, and finished them in the seventh month

In the third month, to wit of the sacred year Lev xii 2 in which their harvest began In the seventh month, in which their harvest ended and the feast of tabernacles was kept Lev xxiii 16, Lev xxiii 34

8 And when Hezekiah and the princes came and saw the heaps, they blessed the Lord, and his people Israel

They blessed the Lord, both for giving such plentiful provisions to his land in this year, and for giving his people such liberal and pious hearts towards this good work And his people Israel, they praised them for their forwardness and faithfulness in it

9 Then Hezekiah questioned with the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps

How it came to pass that no more of their provision was spent, and that there yet remained such great heaps of it

10 And Azariah the chief priest of the house of Zadok answered him, and said, Since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the Lord, we have had enough to eat, and have left plenty for the Lord hath blessed his people, and that which is left is this great store

The chief priest of the house of Zadok, either 1 The high priest called also Zadok 1 Chron vi 12 because he was of his line and family Or, 2 The chief priest, or the head of that family of Zadok, or of Eleazar, as there was another chief priest of the family of Abiathar or of Ithamar, see 2 Sam viii 17 1 Chron xxiv 3 but both subject to the high priest Since the people began to bring the offerings which they did from the beginning of the harvest, according to the manner The Lord hath blessed his people in an extraordinary degree 11 ¶ Then Hezekiah commanded to prepare chambers in the house of the Lord, and they prepared them,

In the house of the Lord, vulgarly so called to wit in the courts or in the chambers adjoining to the house

12 And brought in the offerings and the tithes and the dedicated things faithfully over which Cononiah the Levite was ruler, and Shimei his brother was the next

13 And Jehiel, and Azariah, and Nehath, and Asabel, and Jeremoth, and Jozabad, and Iliel, and Ismachiah of Mahath, and Benarath, were overseers under the hand of Cononiah and Shimei his brother, at the commandment of Hezekiah the king, and Azariah the ruler of the house of God

Overseers under the hand of Cononiah and Shimei his brother, i. e. to dispose of those provisions by their direction and to be accountable to them therein The ruler of the house of God, either the supreme ruler, to wit, the high priest, or the chief ruler under him, and in his stead, being appointed by him to inspect this work See above, x 10, and 1 Chron ix 11, ix xx 1

14 And Kore the son of Imnah the Levite, the porter toward the east, was over the freewill offerings of God, to distribute the oblations of the Lord and the most holy things

Toward the east, at the east gate of the Lord's house, of which see on chap xxiii 5 To distribute to the priests and Levites, to whom they were appropriated by God The most holy things to wit the remainders of the freewill offerings, Lev ii 3, 10, the sin offering and trespass offering, Lev vi 18, 22, vii 1, and the shew bread Lev xxiv 9

15 And next him were Eden, and Miniamin, and Jeshua, and Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah, in the cities of the priests, in their set office, to give to their brethren by courses, as well to the great as to the small

These were intrusted with the receiving and distributing of the several portions belonging to the priests who abode in the several cities, whilst their brethren came up to Jerusalem

16 Beside their genealogy of males, from three years old and upward, even unto every one that entereth into the house of the Lord, his daily portion for their service in their charges according to their courses,

From three years old and upward, to whom a portion of these things was allotted, as is here implied Unto every one that entereth into the house of the Lord that were capable of entering thither and doing service there, which they were at twenty years old as is expressed here, ver 17, and 1 Chron xxiii 24 through the whole company of the priests and Levites

17 Both to the genealogy of the priests by the house of their fathers, and the Levites from twenty years old and upward, in their charges by their courses,

18 And to the genealogy of all their little ones, their wives, and their sons, and their daughters through all the congregation for in their set office they sanctified themselves in holiness

This is alleged as a reason why their wives and children were provided for out of the holiness because they sanctified themselves by their service in which they much otherwise have provided for their families, and entirely devoted themselves to holy ministrations

19 Also of the sons of Aaron the priests which were in the fields of the suburbs of their cities, in every several city, the men that were expressed by name gave portions to all the males among the priests, and to all that were reckoned by genealogies among the Levites

The priests, which were in the fields, who are opposed to those that lived in or resorted to the great city Jerusalem

20 ¶ And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and wrought that which was good and right and truth before the Lord his God

21 And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the law, and in the commandments, to seek his God he did with all his heart, and prospered

CHAP XXXII

Sennacherib invading Judah, Hezekiah fortifieth himself, 1-4, and sendeth letters to Sennacherib concerning the blasphemy of Sennacherib 5-20 In anger destroyeth the host of the Assyrians, 21-23 Hezekiah's sickness and sign of recovery 24, and nearing death, is humbled by God 25, 26, His wealth and error, 27-31 His death and successor, 32, 33

AL'TER these things, and the establishment thereof, Sennacherib king of Assyria came, and entered into Judah, and encamped against the fenced cities, and thought to win them for himself

After these things, and the establishment thereof, an im-phatual price signifying that notwithstanding all his pious care and zeal for God yet God saw fit to exercise him with a sore trial and calamity, which yet he turned to his great honour and advantage. He designed and brought that he would win them all, and did actually win many of them, 2 Kings xviii 13

2 And when Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was come, and that he was purposed to fight against Jerusalem,

3 He took counsel with his princes and his mighty men to stop the waters of the fountains which were without the city and they did help him

To stop the waters of the fountains with cuth or other things cast into them, and withal to derive the waters by secret paths and pipes under ground to Jerusalem

1 So there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains, and the brook that ran through the midst of the land, saying, Why should the kings of Assyria come, and find much water?

Which was a usefull commodity in this country, and the want of it might much annoy the Assyrian army

5 Also he strengthened himself, and built up all the wall that was broken, and raised it up to the towers, and another wall without and repaired Millo in the city of David and made darts and shields in abundance

The wall that was broken by Jewish chap xxy 23 and it is since repaired. Up to the towers, either 1. As high is the towers on the tops of the wall. Or, 2. As far as the two towers or gates which were made in the form of towers and had the use of towers to wit that of Iphum and the corner gate, both mentioned above chap xxy 23 Or brought up engines or instruments of defence upon the towers. Millo, of which see 1 Kings ix 21, xi 27

6 And he set captains of war over the people, and gathered them together to him in the street of the gate of the city, and spoke comfortible to them, saying,

7 Be strong and courageous, be not afraid nor dismayed for the king of Assyria, nor for all the multitude that is with him: for there be more with us than with him

8 With him is an haum of flesh, but with us is the Lord our God to help us, and to fight our battles. And the people trusted themselves upon the words of Hezekiah king of Judah

9 After this did Sennacherib king of Assyria send his servants to Jerusalem, (but he himself laid siege against Lachish, and all his power with him,) unto Hezekiah king of Judah, and unto all Judah that were at Jerusalem, saying,

Of this and the following verses, see the notes on 2 Kings
xxvii 17, &c; xxix 10, &c

10 Thus saith Sennacherib king of Assyria, Whereon do ye trust, that ye abide in the siege in Jerusalem?

11 Doth not Hezekiah persuade you to give over yourselves to die by famine and by thirst, saying, The Lord our God shall deliver us out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

12 Hath not the same Hezekiah taken away his high places and his altars, and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, saying, Ye shall worship before one altar, and burn incense upon it?

13 Know ye not what I and my fathers have done unto all the people of other lands? were the gods of the nations of those lands any ways able to deliver their lands out of mine hand?

14 Who was there among all the gods of those nations that my fathers utterly destroyed, that could deliver his people out of mine hand, that your God should be able to deliver you out of mine hand?

15 Now therefore let not Hezekiah deceive you, nor persuade you on this manner, neither yet believe him: for no god of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people out of mine hand, and out of the hand of my fathers: how much less shall your God deliver you out of mine hand?

Seeing I have destroyed so many nations, and some of them stronger than you, in spite of all their gods, it is not probable that your God should defend you, which none of the rest could do for their people

16 And his servants spake yet more against the Lord God, and against his servant Hezekiah

17 He wrote also letters to rail on the Lord God of Israel, and to speak against him, saying, As the gods of the nations of other lands have not delivered their people out of mine hand, so shall not the God of Hezekiah deliver his people out of mine hand

18 Then they cried with a loud voice in the Jews speech unto the people of Jerusalem that were on the wall, to af-fright them, and to trouble them, that they might take the city

19 And they spake against the God of Jerusalem, as against the gods of the people of the earth, which were the work of the hands of man

20 And for this cause Hezekiah the king, and the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz, prayed and cried to heaven

21 ¶ And the Lord sent an angel, which cut off all the mighty men of valour, and the leaders and captains in the camp of the king of Assyria. So he returned with shame of face to his own land. And when he was come into the house of his god, they that came forth of his own bowels slew him there with the sword

22 Thus the Lord saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Assyria, and from the hand of all other, and guided them on every side

23 And many brought gifts unto the Lord to Jerusalem, and † presents to Hzekiah king of Judah so that he was magnified in the sight of all nations from thenceforth

(Or of all those nations which were not very remote from Canaan, and heard these matters)

24 ¶ In those days Hzekiah was sick to the death, and prayed unto the Lord, and he spake unto him, and he gave him a sign

Of which see a more particular account 2 Kings xx 1, &c. 25 But Hzekiah rendered not again according to the benefit done unto him for his heart was lifted up therefore there was wrath upon him, and upon Judah and Jerusalem

His heart was lifted up, for that prodigious victory over the Assyrians, above, ver 21, and for his miraculous restoration from sickness, and the confirmation of that work by a strange and supernatural motion of the sun and by the honour since done him by an embassy from the great and potent king of Babylon, all which probably raised in him too great an opinion of himself, as if these things were done if not by his power yet at least for his piety and virtues. And instead of walking humbly with God, and giving the glory of all entirely to him, he took the honour to himself, and vain gloriously showed his riches and precious treasures to the Babylonish ambassadors 2 Kings xx 12, &c. Upon Judah and Jerusalem who might justly be punished for Hzekiah's sin because they followed him in it, as they confess in the next verse

26 ¶ Notwithstanding Hzekiah humbled himself for the pride of his heart, both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so that the wrath of the Lord came not upon them in the days of Hzekiah

27 ¶ And Hzekiah had exceeding much riches and honour, and he made himself treasures for silver, and for gold, and for precious stones, and for spices, and for shields, and for all manner of pleasant jewels,

28 Storehouses also for the increase of corn, and wine, and oil, and stalls for all manner of beasts, and cotes for flocks.

29 Moreover he provided him cities, and possessions of flocks and herds in abundance for God had given him substance very much

He provided him cities, Heb he made, &c. Either he purchased them to himself by his gold or silver, or he repaired and fortified, and beautified them for the honour and safety of his kingdom. But the former sense seems to agree best with the following words

30 ¶ This same Hzekiah also stopped the upper watercourse of Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David. And Hzekiah prospered in all his works

The upper water-course of Gihon, a rivulet near Jerusalem consisting of two streams, the upper which was brought to one pool called the upper pool, Isa viii 1, and the lower, which was brought unto another, called the lower pool, Isa xxix 9. The former he diverted and brought by secret pipes into Jerusalem, which was a work of great art, and labour, and policy, and therefore is here commended. Brought straight down, where is before it fetched a compass, and it might have been bridged to the Assyrian host

31 ¶ Howbeit in the business of the ambassadors of the princes of Babylon, who sent unto him to enquire of the wonder that was done in the land, God left him, to try him, that he might know all that was in his heart

God left him, to wit to himself, and his own impotency and corruption. God withdrew from him those supplies and assistance of his Spirit which would certainly and effectually have kept him from that sin and suffered Satan to tempt him, and him to fall into the sin of pride and ostentation. That he might know, either, 1 That God might know it. So it is spoken of God after the manner of men, whereof we have had many instances. Or, 2 That Hzekiah might know that he had infirmities and sins as well as virtues, and therefore that the great mercies which he had received were not the effects of his own merits, as he might be prone to believe, but of God's free grace

32 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Hzekiah, and his goodness, behold, they are written in the vision of Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, and in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel

33 ¶ And Hzekiah slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the chieftest of the sepulchres of the sons of David, and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem did him honour at his death. And Manasseh his son reigned in his stead

CHAPTER XXXIII

Manasseh's wicked reign 1-10. His captivity 11. His prayer and reformation 12-17. His acts, 18, 19 and death 20. Amos's wicked reign, is standing by his servants, 21-24. They being slain, Josiah succedeth him, 25

MANASSEH was twelve years old when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem

This and the following verses 1-11, are taken out of 2 Kings xxi 1 &c.

2 But did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, like unto the abominations of the heathen, whom the Lord had cast out before the children of Israel

3 ¶ For he built again the high places which Hzekiah his father had broken down, and he reared up altars for Baalim, and made groves, and worshipped all the host of heaven, and served them

4 Also he built altars in the house of the Lord, whereof the Lord had said,

¶ In Jerusalem shall my name be for ever

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the Lord

6 ¶ And he caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom, also he observed times, and used enchantments, and used witchcraft, and dealt with a familiar spirit, and with wizards, he wrought much evil in the sight of the Lord, to provoke him to anger

7 And he set a carved image the idol, which he had made, in the house of God, of which God had said to David and to Solomon his son, In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen before all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever

8 <sup>a. 8</sup> Neither will I any more remove the foot of Israel from out of the land which I have appointed for your fathers, so that they will take heed to do all that I have commanded them, according to the whole law and the statutes and the ordinances by the hand of Moses

9 So Manassah made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err, and to do worse than the heathen, whom the Lord had destroyed before the children of Israel

10 And the Lord spake to Manassah, and to his people but they would not hearken

11 ¶ Wherefore the Lord brought upon them the captains of the host of the king of Assyria, which took Manassah among the thorns, and bound him with fetters, and carried him to Babylon

Among the thorns in some thicket where he thought to hide himself from the Assyrians till he could make his escape, the Israelites formerly used to do, 1 Sam xiii 6 Or with hooks, a metaphorical expression Or in his forts, one of them (called him) Babylon, either therefore in Judah Sennacherib's successor, had recovered Babylon from Merodach Baladan, or rather the king of Babylon is here called the king of Assyria because at this time he had added Assyria to his empire, who having been informed by his ambassadors of the great riches which were in Hezekiah's treasures at Jerusalem which he was desirous to enjoy, and without being secured of Manassah's denunciation from the piety and virtue of his father and from that God whose power alone made Hezekiah formidable he thought this a fit season to invade Manassah's kingdom which he did with success

12 And when he was in affliction, he besought the Lord his God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers,

13 And prayed unto him and he was intreated of him, and heard his supplication, and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom Then Manassah knew that the Lord he was God

14 He was convinced by his own experience of God's power justice and goodness that Jehovah alone was the true God and not those idols which he had worshipped by which he had received great hurt, and no good

15 Now after this he built a wall without the city of David, on the west side of the city in the valley, even to the entering in at the fish gate, and compassed about Ophel, and raised it up a very great height, and put captains of war in all the fenced cities of Judah

He built a wall he repaired and strengthened that wall which Hezekiah had built chap xxxiv and which possibly the king of Assyria who first took Jerusalem, had carried to his own city either wholly or in part On the west side of the city the west side of the city of David, to which Hezekiah had brought this water course down chap xxxiv and into the pool which he had made to receive it and possibly this wall was built to secure the free use of it to the citizens when they should be distressed or besieged by an enemy Compared about Ophel with a wall Ophel is a fort chap xxxv 3

15 And he took away the strange gods, and the idol out of the house of the Lord, and all the altars that he had built in the mount of the house of the Lord, and in Jerusalem, and cast them out of the city

16 And he repaired the altar of the Lord, and sacrificed thereon peace offerings and thank offerings, and commanded Judah to serve the Lord God of Israel

That thereby he might, as far as he could, repair the injuries which he had done to God by his impious commands, ver 9

17 Nevertheless the people did sacrifice still in the high places, yet unto the Lord their God only

18 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Manassah, and his prayer unto his God, and the words of the seers that spake to him in the name of the Lord God of Israel, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel

Of Judah, oft called Israel, as hath been noted before He speaks not of that part of the canon, called the Book of Kings, for these things are not mentioned there but of their public records where all things were particularly mentioned, and whence the most important things were taken by the prophets and put into those canonical books

19 His prayer also, and how God was intreated of him, and all his sins, and his trespass, and the places wherein he built high places, and set up groves and graven images, before he was humbled behold, they are written among the sayings of the seers

Or rather, of Hosea a writer so called for when the sacred penman met a reference, they constantly refer us to some particular book or certain author as to the chronicles of the kings of Israel, or Judah, or to the prophecy of Isaiah or Daniel &c

20 ¶ So Manassah slept with his fathers, and they buried him in his own house and Amon his son reigned in his stead

In his own house, i.e. in his garden, of which see on 2 Kings xxi 18

21 ¶ Amon was two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned two years in Jerusalem

22 But he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, as did Manassah his father for Amon sacrificed unto all the carved images which Manassah his father had made, and served them,

23 And humbled not himself before the Lord, as Manassah his father had humbled himself, but Amon trespassed more and more

24 And his servants conspired against him, and slew him in his own house

25 ¶ But the people of the land slew all them that had conspired against king Amon, and the people of the land made Josiah his son king in his stead

CHAP XXXIV

Josiah's good reign, 1, 2 He destroyeth idolatry, 3-7 He repairs the temple, 8-13 The book of the law found, 11-22 Huldah prophesieth the destruction of Jerusalem 23-28 Josiah's covenant with God, 29-33

JOSIAH was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem one and thirty years

Of this chapter, see the notes on 2 Kings xxi, xxi.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the ways of David his father, and declined neither to the right hand, nor to the left.

3 ¶ For in the eighth year of his reign, while he was yet young, he began to seek after the God of David his father, and in the twelfth year he began to purge Judah and Jerusalem from the high places, and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images.

While he was yet young, in the sixteenth year of his age when he was entering into the age and state of temptation and youthful lusts, and had the administration of his kingdom wholly in his own hand and power, and none to rebuke or restrain him, yet even then he begins to be religious in good earnest.

4 And they brake down the doors of Baalim in his presence, and the images, that were on high above them, he cut down, and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images, he brake in pieces, and made dust of them, and strowed it upon the graves of them that had sacrificed unto them.

5 And he burnt the bones of the priests upon their altars, and cleansed Judah and Jerusalem.

6 And so did he in the cities of Manasseh and Ephraim and Simeon, even unto Naphtali, with their mattocks round about.

Then into Naphtali, which was in the utmost and north on borders of the kingdom of Israel. For it must be remembered that the ten tribes were now come into captivity, and those who were come thither at that time were weak and few, and not able to withstand the power of Assyria.

7 And when he had broken down the altars and the groves, and had beaten the graven images into powder, and cut down all the idols throughout all the land of Israel, he returned to Jerusalem.

8 ¶ Now in the eighteenth year of his reign, when he had purged the land, and the house, he sent Shaphan the son of Azariah, and Mesiah the governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joab the recorder, to repair the house of the LORD his God.

The land and the house, the house of God, called the house by way of eminency.

9 And when they came to Hilkiah the high priest, they delivered the money that was brought into the house of God, which the Levites that kept the doors had gathered of the hand of Manasseh and Ephraim, and of all the remnant of Israel, and of all Judah and Benjamin, and they returned to Jerusalem.

The Levites, who had gone abroad through all the kingdom to gather money for this good use, and now came with it to Jerusalem to lodge it in the treasures of the Lord's house.

10 And they put it in the hand of the workmen that had the oversight of the house of the LORD, and they gave it to the workmen that wrought in the house of the LORD, to repair and amend the house.

11 Even to the artificers and builders gave they it, to buy hewn stone, and timber for couplings, and to floor the houses which the kings of Judah had destroyed.

To floor the houses, i. e. the chambers joining on the temple, or within the courts.

12 And the men did the work faithfully, and the overseers of them were Jahath and Obadiah, the Levites, of the sons of Merari, and Jaachiah and Meshullam, of the sons of the Kohathites, to set it forward, and other of the Levites, all that could skill of instruments of music.

Or, all these here named were skilful in instruments of music, which may be here mentioned, either to their commendation, that they were fit for and careful and diligent in this employment where with they were now intrusted, no less than in their own proper work, or to intimate that as they were skilful so they were exercised in both their employments, and did successively oversee the work, and praised God with their voices and instruments for his gracious and powerful help in carrying on the work.

13 Also they were over the bearers of burdens, and were overseers of all that wrought the work in any manner of service, and of the Levites there were scribes, and officers, and porters.

14 ¶ And when they brought out the money that was brought into the house of the LORD Hilkiah the priest found a book of the law of the LORD given by Moses.

15 And Hilkiah answered and said to Shaphan the scribe, I have found the book of the law in the house of the LORD. And Hilkiah delivered the book to Shaphan.

16 And Shaphan carried the book to the king, and brought the king word back again, saying, All that was committed to thy servants, they do it.

17 And they have gathered together the money that was found in the house of the LORD, and have delivered it into the hand of the overseers, and to the hand of the workmen.

18 Then Shaphan the scribe told the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath given me a book. And Shaphan read it before the king.

19 And it came to pass, when the king had heard the words of the law, that he rent his clothes.

20 And the king commanded Hilkiah, and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and Abdon the son of Micah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asnah a servant of the king, saying,

21 Go, enquire of the LORD for me, and for them that are left in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found, for great is the wrath of the LORD that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of the LORD, to do after all that is written in this book.

22 And Hilkiah, and they that the king had appointed, went to Huldah the prophetess, the wife of Shallum the son of Tikvath, the son of Hasrah, keeper of the wardrobe.

<sup>+ Heb garments</sup> the wardrobe, (now she dwelt in Jerusalem in the college) and they spake to her to that effect

23 ¶ And she answered them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Tell ye the man that sent you to me,

24 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even all the curses that are written in the book which they have read before the king of Judah

25 Because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands, therefore my wrath shall be poured out upon this place, and shall not be quenched

26 And as for the king of Judah, who sent you to enquire of the LORD, so shall ye say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel concerning the words which thou hast heard,

27 Because thine heart was tender, and thou didst humble thyself before God, when thou heardest his words against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, and humbledst thyself before me, and didst rend thy clothes, and weep before me, I have even heard thee also, saith the LORD

28 Behold, I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered to thy grave in peace, neither shall thine eyes see all the evil that I will bring upon this place, and upon the inhabitants of the same So they brought the king word again

29 ¶ Then the king sent and gathered together all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem

30 And the king went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the priests, and the Levites, and all the people, great and small, and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant that was found in the house of the LORD

31 And the king stood in this place, and made a covenant before the LORD, to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, with all his heart, and with all his soul, to perform the words of the covenant which are written in this book

32 And he caused all that were present in Jerusalem and Benjamin to stand to it And the inhabitants of Jerusalem did according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers

To stand to it, to own or maintain it or persist in it, is this phrase as used Deut xxx 18 He caused them to engage themselves by mouth or covenant, that they would observe and obey the laws of God, as his godly predecessors had formerly done, and which indeed they were bound to do They complied with God's and the king's command, as to the outward acts of God's worship, though not with an uprightness appears by the history

33 And Josiah took away all the abominations out of all the countries that pertained to the children of Israel, and made all that were present in Israel to serve, even to serve the LORD their God And <sup>1 Chr 10</sup> all his days they departed not <sup>+ Heb from after</sup> from following the LORD, the God of their fathers

CHAP XXXV.

Josiah keepeth a solemn passover, 1-19 He provoketh Pharaoh-necho, and is slain at Megiddo, 20-24. Lamentations for Josiah, 25-27

MOREOVER Josiah kept a passover unto the LORD in Jerusalem and they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the first month

2 And he set the priests in their charges, and encouraged them to the service of the house of the LORD,

3 And said unto the Levites that taught all Israel, which were holy unto the LORD, Put the holy ark in the house which Solomon the son of David king of Israel did build, it shall not be a burden upon your shoulders serve now the LORD your God, and his people Israel,

Which were holy, or, and which were holy in the house, in the temple, or in the holy of holies, whence, it may seem it had been removed, (1 Chr 1) By some of the wicked and idolatrous kings of Judah, possibly by Josiah's father Amon, which peradventure may be implied by that expression, chap xxxiv 23, Amon trespassed more and more, i. e. more than he or his father Manasseh had done, which seems to point at some very enormous crime committed by him Or 2 By his father's order, that the temple might be thoroughly repaired both in the holy place, and in the most holy place, which some of the idolatrous kings of Judah, may be had defiled or defiled, and therefore it was to be sanctified in order to its reparation, and to that end it might seem fit to remove the ark, and upon this occasion Hilkiah might find the original book of the law, which was written by the hands of Moses, and by God's command was laid beside the ark, and upon the removal of the ark was carefully covered It shall not be a burden upon your shoulders, or that it might not be a burden &c So these words are to be joined with the former, as the reason why Solomon built this house, that the ark might have a constant and fixed habitation, and not need to be carried from place to place upon their shoulders as it had been done while it was in the tabernacle And withal this is mentioned as an argument to quicken them to the more diligent service of God in their present work, because they were freed from that troublesome part of their office which lay upon their forefathers

4 And prepare yourselves by the houses of your fathers, after your courses, according to the writing of David king of Israel, and according to the writing of Solomon his son

5 And stand in the holy place according to the divisions of the families of the fathers of your brethren the people, and after the division of the families of the Levites

Stand in the place, or, minister as that word is frequently used, in the court of the priests, which is so called elsewhere, as hath been noted before After the division of the families of the Levites, i. e. according to the several families both of the people, whom he calls their brethren, lest they should despise them, or grudge to serve them, and of the Levites For the passover was to be eaten by the several families according to their numbers, Exod xii 3 And therefore he commands these persons, that when the paschal lambs were brought to them to be killed, as they were 7-9, they might so order the matter, that they might distributed to the several families, whether of the Levitical or other tribes

6 So kill the passover, and "sanctify yourselves, and prepare your brethren, that they may do according to the word of the Lord by the hand of Moses

Prepare your brethren, by purifying them, and quickening them to fit themselves for so great and solemn a work

7 And Josiah † gave to the people, of the flock, lambs and kids, all for the passover offerings, for all that were present, to the number of thirty thousand, and three thousand bullocks these were of the king's substance

Lambs and kids, for either of these might be used for the paschal-offering, Exod xii 5 Three thousand bullocks which were to be offered after the lambs, upon the several days of the feast of unleavened bread

8 And his princes † gave willingly unto the people, to the priests, and to the Levites Hilkiah and Zephaniah and Jehiel, rulers of the house of God, gave unto the priests for the passover offerings two thousand and six hundred small cattle, and three hundred oxen

His princes, not the political but ecclesiastical princes or the chief of the priests and Levites whose names here follow To the priests and to the Levites for the use of every of the families of any of them, as need should be, for they supposed the 30,000 which the king had given were not sufficient for all the families Of the king gave his cattle to the people only, or principally, for they only are mentioned for that gift ver 7 And therefore these persons here named give their cattle not only to the people but also to the priests and to the Levites as it is here expressed And the Levites being not yet sufficiently provided for some of them by them, named ver 9 gave 5000 more peculiarly unto the Levites, as is there said Rulers of the house of God, for so they were, Hilkiah being the high priest, and the other the two chief priests, of the two lines of Phineas and Ithamar, who in many things were to officiate in the high priest's stead, and were in power and dignity next to him, and were in some sort joint commissioners with him in ruling the affairs of the temple

9 Conaniah also, and Sheumiah and Nathanael, his brethren, and Hushabiah and Jehiel and Jozabad, chief of the Levites, † gave unto the Levites for passover offerings five thousand small cattle, and five hundred oxen

10 So the service was prepared and the priests stood in their place, and the Levites in their courses, according to the king's commandment

11 And they killed the passover, and the priests sprinkled the blood from their hands, and the Levites flayed them

Which they did, though properly it belonged to the priests because the priests, who were sanctified, were not sufficient for that work there being so many thousands of the cattle, and they were fully employed in the killing of the sacrifices and the sprinkling of the blood, which was more properly the priests' work than the other

12 And they removed the burnt offerings, that they might give according to the divisions of the families of the people, to offer unto the Lord, as it is written in the book of Moses And so did they with the oxen

They removed the burnt offerings, i. e. those cattle which were to be offered for burnt-offerings to wit, some of the lesser cattle, for those also might be offered as burnt-offer- ings, Lev i. 10. And hence it may seem that all these small cattle were not given to the people to be eaten by them for their paschal lambs, but that some of them were to be offered as burnt offerings for the people And these they put apart by themselves, partly lest they should be confounded with them which were for another use, and partly that they might not be hindered from that which was their present and more immediate work, as it follows, that they might give, to wit, the paschal lambs or kids To offer unto the Lord these words may belong either, 1 To the more remote words the burnt-offerings, the other words being to be put within a parenthesis, or there being a transposition in the words, which is frequent in Scripture, and which is here observed by some learned interpreters Or, 2 To the last words, and to the paschal lambs, which they were first to offer to the Lord, by killing them and sprinkling the blood, as was noted before, and then to be given to the people, though the giving be here mentioned before the offering, such transpositions being usual in Scripture and other authors So did they with the oxen to wit, as they did with the lesser cattle of which see the first note on this verse They removed those oxen which were to be offered as burnt offerings from those which were to be offered as peace offerings

13 And they roasted the passover with fire according to the ordinance but the other holy offerings sod they in pots, and in caldrons, and in pans, and divided them speedily among all the people

The other holy offerings, those from which the burnt-offerings were removed ver 12 to wit, the peace-offerings, part of which fell to the share of the officer, who was Josiah, and by his gift to the people

14 And afterward they made ready for themselves and for the priests because the priests the sons of Aaron were busied in offering of burnt offerings and the fat until night, therefore the Levites prepared for themselves, and for the priests the sons of Aaron

Afterward they made ready, to wit the paschal lambs, and then put of the peace offerings

15 And the singers the sons of Asaph were in their place, according to the commandment of David, and Asaph, and Heman, and Jeduthun the kings scribes, and the porters waited at every gate, they might not depart from their service, for their brethren the Levites prepared for them

16 So all the service of the Lord was prepared the same day, to keep the passover, and to offer burnt offerings upon the altar of the Lord, according to the commandment of king Josiah

17 And the children of Israel that were present kept the passover at that time, and the feast of unleavened bread seven days

18 And there was no passover like to that kept in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet, neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept, and the priests, and the Levites, and all Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem

19 In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah was this passover kept

20 After all this, when Josiah had prepared the temple, Necho king of Egypt came up to fight against Charchemish by Euphrates and Josiah went out against him.

When Josiah had prepared the temple, when he and his people hoped that God was reconciled, and the foundation of a solid and lasting happiness was laid, their hopes were quickly blasted. So much are men oft mistaken in their judgments about the designs of God's counsel and providence. Chaschemish, which the Assyrian had lately taken from the king of Egypt, of which he boasts, Isa x 9.

21 But he sent ambassadors to him, saying, What have I to do with thee, thou king of Judah? I come not against thee this day, but against the house wherewith I have war: for God commanded me to make haste, forbear thee from meddling with God, who is with me, that he destroy thee not.

Against the house wherewith I have war, Heb against the house or family of my war, i e against the house of the king of Assyria between whom and me there is war. God commanded me, either his false god by their lying priests, or the true God, either, 1 By some prophet, for God's prophets used sometimes to deliver or send commands from God to heathen kings. Though it is not probable either that Pharaoh would regard the command of the true God, or that a prophet of the Lord would not acquaint Josiah with this message, or that Josiah would oppose Pharaoh in a war undertaken by God's command. Or rather, 2 By a dream, as God spoke to another heathen king, Nabuchodon Gen xx 3. Though it is not impossible that he pretended this for his own advantage, that Josiah might not assist his enemies.

22 Nevertheless Josiah would not turn his face from him, but disguised himself, that he might fight with him, and hearkened not unto the words of Necho from the mouth of God, and came to fight in the valley of Megiddo.

Josiah would not turn his face from him, being peradventure encouraged to do so by a misinterpretation of that promise made to him, chap xxviii 28. Thou shalt be gathered to thy grave in peace: thus God overrules the errors and miscarriages of men to the accomplishment of his own counsel. Disguised himself, changed his habit that he might not give his enemies the advantage of aiming at his person, which he wisely thought they would do, that being a likely course to end their trouble, is indeed it proved. Unto the words of Necho from the mouth of God, either 1 Which Pharaoh sent to him in the name of God, or is coming from God's mouth. Or rather, 2 Which Pharaoh received from the mouth of God, who was pleased some way or other to imprint his mind to him, and which Pharaoh acquainted him with by the command of God. And therefore Josiah hearkened not for not hearkening to this message. Although if he sinned herein, it was only a sin of ignorance, for he did not know that God had spoken this to Pharaoh, and was not bound to believe his testimony, which he had good reason to suspect in this matter. Yet methinks, he ought so far to have regarded it, as to have inquired the mind of God about it, which he neglected to do, and therefore he cannot be wholly excused, and is here taxed for it.

23 And the archers shot at king Josiah, and the king said to his servants, Have me away, for I am sore wounded.

24 His servants therefore took him out of that chariot, and put him in the second chariot that he had, and they brought him to Jerusalem, and he died, and was buried in one of the sepulchres of his fathers. And all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah.

25 ¶ And Jeremiah lamented for Josiah, and all the singing men and the singing women spake of Josiah in their lamentations to this day, and made them an ordinance in Israel, and, behold, they are written in the lamentations.

In their lamentations to this day, in all their succeeding lamentations for their public calamities, and for the ruin of their city, and temple, and state, and church, they remembered Josiah's death as their first and most fatal blow, and as that which opened the flood gates to all their following miseries, and it was ordained that they should do so, as the next words intimate. In the lamentations, either in that canonical book of Jeremiah's lamentations, or in some other volume of mournful ditties, made by divers persons upon occasion of their following calamities, which is since lost.

26 Now the rest of the acts of Josiah, and his goodness, according to that which was written in the law of the Lord,

His goodness, either, 1 His piety towards God and his house. Or 2 His benignity, clemency, and kindness to wards all his subjects, being of a most tender disposition and carriage both towards God, chap xxxiv 27, and towards men. But the former seems principally intended, because it best agrees both with the history of Josiah, which is wholly taken up with the former, and speaks little or nothing of the latter, and with the following words, and it doth not disagree with the Hebrew word hasad, which though it doth most frequently express kindness to men, yet sometimes it notes a man's piety to God and his house, as is manifest from Neh xiii 14.

27 And his deeds, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah.

Jehoiachaz succeeding is deposed by Pharaoh and carried to Egypt 1-4. Jehoahaz's wicked reign, his captivity into Babylon 5-8. Jehoachin likewise, 9-10. Zedekiah's wicked reign, his contempt of the prophet and rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar 11-13. Jerusalem's destruction, 14-21. The proclamation of Cyrus, 22, 23.

THEN the people of the land took Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, and made him king in his father's stead in Jerusalem.

The contents of this chapter, for the substance of them are explained in the notes upon 2 Kings xxiii 31 & xxiv, xxv, what is peculiar to it shall be here opened, so far as is necessary.

2 Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem.

3 And the king of Egypt put him down at Jerusalem, and condemned the land in an hundred talents of silver and a talent of gold.

4 And the king of Egypt made Eliakim his brother king over Judah and Jerusalem, and turned his name to Jehoiakim. And Necho took Jehoahaz his brother, and carried him to Egypt.

5 ¶ Jehoakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem, and he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord his God.

6 Against him came up Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and bound him in fetters, to carry him to Babylon.

7 Nebuchadnezzar also carried of the vessels of the house of the Lord to Babylon, and put them in his temple at Babylon.

him, and his abominations which he did, and that which was found in him, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah and Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead

That which was found in him, that crime of rebellion against the king of Babylon, which for a time he kept in his own breast, but when he saw fit he discovered it, and was convicted of it. 2 Kings xiv 1

9 ¶ Jehoiachin was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months and ten days in Jerusalem and he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord

Jehoiachin was eight years old, of which see the notes upon 2 Kings xiv 6, where he is said to be eighteen years old

10 And when the year was expired, king Nebuchadnezzar sent, and brought him to Babylon, with the goodly vessels of the house of the Lord, and made Zedekiah his brother king of Judah and Jerusalem

When the year was expired, Heb at the return of the year, 1 e at the beginning of the next year, according to the sacred account of the Hebrews, at the spring of the year, the time when kings go forth to battle, as is else where said, when Nebuchadnezzar, among others, went forth to settle and enlarge his conquests. Zedekiah his brother, largely so called, for this was his uncle or his father's brother as he is called, 2 Kings xxv 17, being the son of Josiah. See 1 Chron ix 15, Jer i 3

11 ¶ Zedekiah was one and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned eleven years in Jerusalem

12 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord his God, and humbled not himself before Jeremiah the prophet speaking from the mouth of the Lord

Humbled not himself by repentance for his past errors and obedience to God's express commands, which he would not yield to through the pride of his heart, as is intimated by this phrase, and expressed Jer xxxviii 19

13 And he also rebelled against King Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him swear by God but he stiffened his neck, and hardened his heart from turning unto the Lord God of Israel

Who had made him swear by God, who had required and forced him to swear fealty and constant obedience to him by the true God, whom he had served, and whom he called upon to be a witness against him if he broke his oath. So his rebellion was aggravated with perjury, and horrid contempt of God. Compare Jerk xxv 18. Hardened his heart, 1 e he added obstinacy and incorrigibility to his sins

14 ¶ Moreover all the chief of the priests, and the people, transgressed very much after all the abominations of the heathen, and polluted the house of the Lord which he had hallowed in Jerusalem

The people transgressed very much, they were universally iniquitous and therefore God justly brought upon them a universal destruction

15 ¶ And the Lord God of their fathers sent to them by his messengers, rising up betimes, and sending, because he had compassion on his people, and on his dwelling place

Rising up betimes, and sending, 1 e sending them early and diligently, as a careful householder who riseth betimes about his business, and pursues it till night come. God sent them many prophets and messengers, some at the very beginning of their apostasy, and others afterward, as they proceeded in their iniquity, until the very day of their captivity

16 But they mocked the messengers of God, and despised his words, and misused his prophets, until the wrath of the Lord arose against his people, till there was no remedy.

They mocked the messengers of God, of which see instances, Jerk xi 3, xx 49. Misused his prophets, imprisoning and persecuting them as they did Jeremiah. Or reduced themselves by his prophets, 1 e by their prophecies, which they perverted or misconstrued. An eminent instance we have in this, that because Jeremiah prophesied that Zedekiah should be led to Babylon, Jer xxxv 5, and Ezekiel, that he should not see Babylon Jerk xii 13, therefore they believed neither, as the Hebrew writers relate. Till there was no remedy, because the people would not repent and God would not pardon them

17 Therefore he brought upon them the king of the Chaldees, who slew their young men with the sword in the house of their sanctuary, and had no compassion upon young man or maiden, old man, or him that stooped for age he gave them all into his hand

In the house of their sanctuary either in Jerusalem, which was the dwelling place of God's sanctuary, or, in the house which was then sanctuary, as the river of Tophates, Gen xx 14, is the river which is Tophates. It is probable they killed them in the very courts and house of God, to which some of them fled for refuge such places being esteemed sacred and inviolable by the heathens themselves

18 And all the vessels of the house of God, great and small, and the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king, and of his princes, all these he brought to Babylon

19 And they burnt the house of God, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem, and burnt all the palaces thereof with fire, and destroyed all the goodly vessels thereof

20 And them that had escaped from the sword carried he away to Babylon, where they were servants to him and his sons until the reign of the kingdom of Persia

21 To fulfil the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah, until the land had enjoyed her sabbaths for as long as she lay desolate she kept sabbath, to fulfil threescore and ten years

Had enjoyed her sabbaths 1 e had rested from the labour of the husbandmen in ploughing and harrowing it, &c the people that should have managed it being destroyed. Of this phrase, see the notes on Lev xxv 2. To fulfil threescore and ten years, that so the seventy years captivity prophesied of by Jeremiah might be accomplished

22 ¶ Now in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, that the word of the Lord spoken by the mouth of Jeremiah might be accomplished, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,

This and the next verse are repeated in the beginning of the next book, where they will be more fully explained

Ezra 1:22 23 <sup>h</sup> Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, All the kingdoms of the earth hath the LORD God of heaven given me, and he hath charged me to build him an house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah. Who is there among you of all his people? The LORD his God be with him, and let him go up

EZRA

THE ARGUMENT

THAT this book of EZRA is part of the canonical Scripture is evident, partly from the testimony of the Jewish church, to which were committed the oracles of God Rom. in 2 who also did carefully keep them, and faithfully transmit them to us, and are not once charged either by Christ or his apostles with breach of that trust, and partly by the unanimous consent of all both Jews and Christians, at this day. And that Ezra was the writer of this book, is also and ever was, the opinion of the Jews, who had the best means of knowing this, and is most agreeable to his quality, for he was the son or grandson, (as the word is elsewhere used,) of Seraiah Ezra vi 1 who was the high priest, 2 Kings xxv 18, 1 Chron. vi 14, and he was a ready scribe in the law of Moses, Ezra vii 6, and endowed with a more than ordinary measure of God's Spirit, as is evident from this book, and was himself in eye witness of these transactions. In his time also there lived divers other holy men of God as Daniel and Nehemiah, and Mordecai and Zorobabel, and Joshua, which makes that probable which the Jews report, that these prophets and other holy and learned men did review the canonical books of the Old Testament and added here and there some few passages in the historical books and digested them into that order in which now we have them in our Hebrew Bibles, this being a work most suitable to the prudence, and piety and sacred function of these persons and to the present estate of the Jewish nation, who had been long in captivity in Babylon, where it was to be feared that many of them were ignorant or corrupt in the principles of religion, and who were yet in a broken condition and likely to be exposed to further calamities and dispersions, which also might be signified to some of them, and it was suitable also to that care which the wise and gracious God hath ever used for the guidance of his church, according to their several occasions and necessities.

CHAP. I

Cyrus's proclamation to Israel for building the Lord's temple at Jerusalem 1-11. The chief of the people prepare for their return 5-6. Cyrus restores the vessels of the temple to Sheshbazzar prince of Judah, 7, 8. Their number, 9-11.

1 NOW in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, that the word of the LORD by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,

In the first year of Cyrus king of Persia to wit, of his empire or reign in Babylon, for he had now been king of Persia for many years. Stirred up the spirit of Cyrus, i.e. put into him a mind and will to this work.

2 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The LORD God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth, and he hath charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem which is in Judah.

All the kingdoms of the earth, to wit, in those parts of the world, all that vast empire formerly under the Assyrians and Babylonians. The gift of which he ascribes to the great God, either by virtue of those common notions which were in the minds of the heathens, who though they worshipped idols, yet many of them did acknowledge a true and supreme God, or by that clear and express prophecy of Isaiah concerning him Isa. xlv 13, so long before he was born, which prophecy the Jews had doubtless showed him, which also carried a great evidence with it, especially to him, who was so highly gratified and encouraged by it, or by a special illumination which God vouchsafed to him, as he did to Nebuchadnezzar and Darius, and some others of the heathen princes. He hath charged me, either by his prophets Isaiah formerly or Daniel now, or by an inward suggestion to his mind.

3 Who is there among you of all his people? his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the LORD God of Israel, (he is the God,) which is in Jerusalem.

Of all his people, to wit, of Israel. A material clause by virtue of which they justly refused the help of those whom who pretended to join with them in the building, chap. iv 2-3. His God be with him, let his God help him as I shall do. Which is in Jerusalem or only in Jerusalem is not in the Hebrew. So it notes the place where he allows and requires them to build it.

4 And whosoever remaineth in any place where he sojourneth, let the men of his place help him with silver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beasts, beside the freewill offering for the house of God that is in Jerusalem.

Whosoever remaineth, who, when his brethren were gone up was desirous to go with them, but forced to tarry there for want of necessaries for his journey. I et the men of his place help him. I require my officers to take care that they may be supplied either by the voluntary contribution of the people, or by a moderate tax to be laid either only upon those Jews who were resolved to stay, or upon the Gentiles also which the Persian monarchs, being absolute, had a power to do, and which was the more reasonable, because the king himself submitted to it, and bore a great part of the burden, and because it was for the house of that great God to whom they all owed their present peace and great felicity. With silver and with gold, which upon this occasion I give you leave to transport.

5 ¶ Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the

Levites, with all them whose spirit <sup>a</sup> God had raised, to go up to build the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem

The chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and with them some of other tribes, as appears from 1 Chron ix. 17 but these only are named, because they were most considerable for number and quality. Whose spirit God had raised to go up, to whom God had given that pious disposition, and that fortitude and resolution, which it required to break through their difficulties, which were great and many such as their present penury, the length and hardships, and costliness of the journey, their settlements in comfortable habitations, their dispersion in several and distant places, which hindered the conjunction of their counsels and actions, the multitude of their enemies, the actual possession of their country by others, their great backwardness of many of their own brethren to go with them, and many other discouragements

6 And all they that were about them † strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with precious things, beside all that was willingly offered †

Strengthened their hands, either because they had embraced or at least favoured the Jewish religion, concerning which they were instructed by the Israhelites that had now for a long time dwelt among them, or rather, that they might hereby gratify the king's humour and purchase his favour, for they perceived him to be hearty and forward in the work

7 ¶ Also Cyrus the king brought forth the vessels of the house of the LORD, which Nebuchadnezzar had brought forth out of Jerusalem, and had put them in the house of his gods

Obiect These are said to have been cut in pieces. 2 Kings xxiv. 13 How then are they here returned? Ans. That Hebrew word used 2 Kings xxiv. 13, signifies not so properly to cut in pieces as to cut off, is from the use of the word, Dent xxx. 12. 2 Sam. ix. 12. 2 Kings xviii. 16, Jer. ix. 26. And these vessels which they were taken away from the temple might very well be said to be cut off from it because they had for so long time been so constantly used, it were impossible to unite to it and keep it. In like manner the meat offering and drink offering are said to be cut off from the house of the Lord Jer. ix. 9. And it is very improbable that they should deface and cut in pieces these magnificent vessels, which they could so easily transport whole to Babylon. Although if some of the larger of them had been cut into two or more parts yet the parts of them might be delivered to the Jews who could without great difficulty, restore them to their former unity and form

8 Even those did Cyrus king of Persia bring forth by the hand of Mithradath the treasurer, and numbered them unto Sheshbazzar, the prince of Judah

Named them, i. e. he caused them to be delivered to the Jews by number. Unto Sheshbazzar, i. e. Zorobabel as appears by computing chap. iii. 8, with v. 16 to whom the Persians, or rather the Chaldeans had given this name of Sheshbazzar, as they gave other name to Daniel and his companions Dan. i. 7. The prince of Judah and the captain and governor of these returning Jews, chap. ii. 2. So the sceptre is not yet departed from Judah

9 And this is the number of them thirty chargers of gold a thousand chargers of silver nine and twenty knives,

Large knives used in the killing of the sacrifices, which are here mentioned because the hafts of them were made of or covered with gold or silver

10 Thirty basons of gold, silver basons of a second sort four hundred and ten, and other vessels a thousand

Basons of a second sort, the first or chief were of gold, and these of silver are called the second sort next to them of worth and use. Other vessels a thousand he speaks of vessels of a middle size, for great and small were five thousand four hundred, as it follows here. Or, as some render it, other vessels by thousands they were not distinctly numbered according to their various forms and uses but were promiscuously put together by thousands

11 All the vessels of gold and of silver were five thousand and four hundred All these did Sheshbazzar bring up with them of † the captivity that were brought up from Babylon unto Jerusalem

The number of the people that returned, 1-35, and of the priests, 36-39, of the Levites, 40 of the singers, 41, of the porters 42, of the Nethinims, 43-51, and of Solomon's servants, 55-60 Concerning the priests that could not show their pedigrees, 61-63 The whole number of them and their substance, 64-67 Their oblations, 68-70

NOW <sup>a</sup> these are the children of the province that went up out of the captivity, of those which had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away unto Babylon, and came again unto Jerusalem and Judah, every one unto his city,

The children of the province, i. e. the Israhelites called the children of the province either, 1. Of Babylon, of which province we oft read, as chap. vi. 16, Dan. i. 48, in 1, 12, 30 called the province by way of eminency of which they are called children, because of their birth and habitation in it for a long time it being usual to call the inhabitants of any city or place its children. Or rather, 2. Of Judah called a province chap. v. 8. And he calls it thus emphatically, to mind himself and his brethren of that sad change which their sons had made among them that from an illustrious, independent and formidable kingdom were fallen to be an obscure, servile, and contemptible province first under the Chaldeans, and then under the Persians. Every one unto his city, either unto those cities or towns which belonged to their several ancestors or rather to those which were now allotted to them, and from this time possessed by them. For their former cities were either demolished or possessed by other persons which they were not now in a capacity of disturbing

As for this catalogue, it differs in some names and numbers from that Neh. vii. which might be from divers causes, partly because several names were given to one and the same person and partly because of the many changes which might happen in the same families between the time of the first making of this catalogue by Ezra, and the making of it anew so many years as that catalogue, Neh. vii. was made after the former

3 The children of Parosh, two thousand and hundred seventy and two

The posterity (As that word is for the most part) if not constantly taken in this catalogue that descended either from Parosh, or from that family whereof Parosh was the chief. And so for the rest

4 The children of Shephatiah, three hundred seventy and two

5 The children of Arah, seven hundred and seventy and five

In Neh. vii. 10, they were only six hundred and fifty two. It seems seven hundred and seventy five marched out of Babylon, or gave in their names that they would go, but some of them died, others changed their minds, others were of Sophereth, the children of <sup>b</sup>Peruda, <sup>1 Or 24</sup>

The children of Solomon's servants, either of those strangers and proselytes whom Solomon used in the building of the temple 1 Kings ix 21, to the service of which as some add, he devoted them, as there should be occasion hereafter, or others who had lived in Solomon's family, and after his death called themselves and their families by that name, as esteeming it a great honour to them that they had been servants to so great a prince.

57 The children of Shephatiah, the children of Hattil, the children of Poche-reth of Zebaim, the children of ¶ Ami

59 And these were they which went up from Tel-melah, Tel-haisa, Cherub, ¶ Addan, and Immer but they could not shew their father's house, and their ¶ seed, whether they were of Israel

Tel-melah, Tel-haisa, the names of the places whence they came, and where they had lived in the time of their captivity. Cherub, Addan, and Immer, the names either of the heads of the families living in the places first mentioned, or of other places where the persons here understood had dwelt.

60 The children of Delaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekod, six hundred fifty and two

61 ¶ And of the children of the priests the children of Habuaah, the children of Kor, the children of Barzillai, * which took a wife of the daughters of * Barzillai the Gileadite, and was called after their name

To wit, Barzillai, which name he preferred before that of his own family, accounting it as it seems, a greater honour to be allied to so noble a family than to be a priest of the Lord. But by this ambition he deprived himself of the honour and advantage of the priesthood, as it is here noted, ver 62

62 These sought their register among those that were reckoned by genealogy, but they were not found * therefore ¶ they, as polluted, put from the priesthood

The Jews were generally very exact and careful in their genealogies, partly from their own choice and interest, that they might preserve the distinctions of the several tribes and families, which was necessary both to make out their claims or titles to offices or inheritances, which might belong to them by death or otherwise, as here we see, and to govern themselves thereby in the matter of marriages and some other things wherein the practice of some laws required the knowledge of these things, and partly by the special providence of God, that so it might be certainly known of what race and family the Messiah was born. For as they took care of all their families so doubtless they took a more punctual and singular care about the royal family, upon which all their hopes depended

63 And the ¶ Tishbatha said unto them, that they * should not eat of the most holy things, till there stood up a priest with Urim and with Thummim

The Tishbatha, i.e. the governor, to wit, Zerubbabel, whence Nehemiah also is so called, Neh viii 9, x i. ¶ All there stood up a priest with Urim and with Thummim, that his point which could not be found out by any human skill or industry might be determined by Divine direction. Hereby it appears that the Urim and Thummim were lost in the destruction of the city and temple, though the Jews did themselves with hopes of recovering them in the vision of the Urim and Thummim, see Exod xxxiii 30, Numl xxxii 1, 1 Sam xxiii 9

64 ¶ The whole congregation together was forty and two thousand three hundred and threescore,

The particular names here recited come only 29818, unto whom are added in this total sum 12512, which were of the other tribes beside Judah and Benjamin, or were such as were supposed by themselves and others to be Israelites, but could not prove their pedigree by their genealogies, and therefore could not be so punctually and particularly described as the former

65 Beside their servants and their maids, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven and there were among them two hundred singing men and singing women

For women as well as men were devoted to and employed in this exercise in the temple service, as appears from 1 Chron xxv 5, 6. And the parents of these persons had taken care to instruct and exercise them as far as they could in this art, both for God's service, and for their own benefit when Jerusalem and the temple should be rebuilt, which they knew would be done after Jeremiah's seventy years were expired

66 Their horses were seven hundred thirty and six, their mules, two hundred forty and five

67 Then camels, four hundred thirty and five, their asses, six thousand seven hundred and twenty

68 ¶ And some of the chief of the fathers, when they came to the house of the Lord which is at Jerusalem, offered freely for the house of God to set it up in his place

To the house of the Lord, i.e. to the ruins of the house, or to the place where that house stood

69 They gave after their ability unto the treasure of the work threescore and one thousand drams of gold, and five thousand pound of silver, and one hundred priests' garments

A dram of gold is supposed to be of the weight of the fourth part of a shekel, and of the value of a French crown

70 So the priests, and the Levites, and some of the people, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nethumims, dwelt in their cities, and all Israel in their cities

AND when the seventh month was come, and the children of Israel were in the cities, the people gathered themselves together as one man to Jerusalem

¶ When the seventh month was come, or rather was coming, i.e. drew near, for the altar was set up at this time, ver 3 which yet was employed the first day of this month, ver 6. It is a sacred kind of month, wherein there were divers festivals as appears from Lev xxiii, for which the people had been preparing themselves, and now came to Jerusalem to the celebration of them

2 Then stood up ¶ Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren the priests, and ¶ Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and his brethren, and builded the altar of the God of Israel, to offer burnt offerings thereon, as it is written in the law of Moses the man of God

Jeshua the son of Jozadak the high priest. The son of Shealtiel, i.e. the grandson, for he was the son of Pedaiiah 1 Chron iii 17-19. Builded the altar, which was of more present and urgent necessity than the temple, both to make monument to God for all their sins, and also obtain God's assistance for the building of the temple, and to strengthen their own hearts and hands in that great work, when in they saw they should have many enemies

3 And they set the altar upon his bases, for fear was upon them because of the people of those countries and they offered burnt offerings thereon unto the Lord, even <sup>d</sup> burnt offerings morning and evening

4 They kept also the east of tabernacles, as it is written, and offered the daily burnt offerings by number, according to the custom, as the duty of every day required,

The feast of tabernacles seems to be mentioned synecdochically for all the solemnities of this month whereof this was the most eminent and most lasting. Otherwise it is not probable that they would neglect the day of atonement, which was so severely enjoined, Lev xxiii 27-29, and was so exceeding suitable to their present condition, see on ver 6. The daily burnt offerings, Heb burnt offerings day by day, i.e. every day of that feast they offered as many sacrifices as were prescribed, of which see Numb xxix 13 &c.

5 And afterward offer'd the <sup>h</sup> continual burnt offering, both of the new moons, and of all the set feasts of the LORD that were consecrated, and of every one that willingly offered a freewill offering unto the LORD

The continual burnt offering, the morning and evening sacrifice, of which see on Numb xxviii 6 (unconsecrated) is set apart for the solemn and holy service of God.

6 From the first day of the seventh month began they to offer burnt offerings unto the LORD. But the foundation of the temple of the LORD was not yet laid.

I offer burnt offerings, and the other sacrifices which were to be offered with them upon that day being the first of trumpet Numb xxix I &c burnt offerings are offered for all sacrifices as hath been observed once, and again the dedication of the temple was not yet hard, though it is probable they had done something towards the removing of the rubbish and preparing the way for it

7 They gave money also unto the masons, and to the carpenters, and meat, and drink, and oil, unto them of Zion, and to them of Tyre, to bring cedar trees from Libanon to the sea of Joppa: according to the grant that they had of Cyrus king of Persia.

635 8 ¶ Now in the second year of their coming unto the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and the remnant of their brethren the priests and the Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jerusalem, <sup>m</sup> and appointed the Levites, from twenty years old and upward, to set forward the work of the house of the LORD.

Had seen the first house, which divers of them might very well do because it was destroyed not quite sixty years ago as is manifest from 2 Kings xxv, 2 Chron xxxvi, 1, Ezek xl 1. Went with a loud voice partly because of the pool and small preparations made for this in comparison of what was made for the other temple, partly because this temple was divested and destitute of those things which were the principal glory of the former temple to wit the ark and the Urim and Thummim &c, partly because these foundation stones were far inferior to the former both for quantity and price, 1 Kings vii 9 10, and partly because these foundations were of a far narrower compass than the former, for although the foundations of this house of the Lord strictly so called, were at least of equal largeness with those of the former by comparing 1 Kings vi 2 and 1 Ezr vi 1-3, yet the foundations of the whole building, belonging to the first temple, and adjoining to it or in the courts of it, were far larger than these.

13 So that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping of the people for the people shouted with a loud shout, and the noise was heard afar off

Let us build with you this they spake not uncharily, it appears from their disposition and designs discovered in the following history, but that by this conjunction with them they might pry into their counsels, and thereby get an opportunity to find some matter or pretences of accusation against them. We seek your God, as ye do for etc. they did, though in a mongrel way see 2 Kings xiii 26, the Assyrian and Babylonish records, which together with the empire were now in the hands of the Persian kings, to be searched or read as the king's pleasure was, as the affairs of the empire required.

16 We certify the king that, if this city be builded again, and the walls thereof set up, by this means thou shalt have no portion on this side the river.

17 ¶ Then sent the king an answer unto Rehum the chancellor, and to Shimsai the scribe, and to the rest of their companions that dwell in Samaria, and unto the rest beyond the river, Peace, and at such a time.

18 The letter which ye sent unto us hath been plainly read before me.

19 And ¶ I commanded, and search hath been made, and it is found that this city of old time hath made insurrection against kings, and that rebellion and sedition have been made therein.

20 There have been mighty kings also over Jerusalem, which have ruled over all countries beyond the river, and toll, tribute, and custom, was paid unto them.

21 ¶ Give ye now commandment to cause these men to cease, and that this city be not builded, until another commandment shall be given from me.

22 Take heed now that ye fail not to do this, why should damage grow to the hurt of the kings?

23 ¶ Now when the copy of king Artaxerxes' letter was read before Rehum and Shimsai the scribe, and their companions, they went up in haste to Jerusalem unto the Jews, and made them to cease ¶ by force and power.

24 Then ceased the work of the house of God which is at Jerusalem. So it ceased unto the second year of the reign of Darius king of Persia.

Then ceased the work of the house of God, for they neither could nor might proceed in that work against their king's prohibition, without a special command from the King of heaven, which they had chap. x. 1. 2. Darius king of Persia to wit Darius the son of Hystaspes, successor of Cambyses, not, as some would have it Darius Nothus, the son of Artaxerxes Longimanus, who was not emperor till above one hundred years after Cyrus and consequently from the beginning of the building of the temple to the finishing of it must be about one hundred and thirty years, which is not credible to any one that considers, 1. That the same Zerubbabel did both lay the foundations and finish the work, (chap. iv. 9.) 2. That some of the same persons who saw the finishing of this second house, had seen the glory of the first house. Hag. ii. 3.

CHAP. V.

Zerubbabel, being encouraged by Haggai and Zechariah the prophets, setteth forward the work. 1, 2. Their adversaries oppose them again. 3-5. Their letter to Darius concerning this matter. 6-17.

120 THEN the prophets, Haggai the prophet, and Zechariah the son of Iddo prophesied unto the Jews that were in Judah and Jerusalem in the name of the God of Israel, even unto them.

Zechariah the son of Iddo, i. e. Iddo's grandchild, for he was the son of Berechiah. In the name of the God of Israel, commanding them from God to return to the work of building the temple, with promise of his favour and assistance.

2 Then rose up Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and began to build the house of God which is at Jerusalem, and with them were the prophets of God helping them.

Encouraging the people to work by their presence, i. e. assistance of success.

3 ¶ At the same time came to them

Tatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and their companions, and said thus unto them, Who hath commanded you to build this house, and to make up this wall?

Tatnai and Shethar-boznai, not Rehum and Shamsai, &c. who were either dead or removed from their offices by the new emperor Darius, as is very usual.

4 ¶ Then said we unto them after this manner, What are the names of the men that make this building?

Then said we, (chap. i.) We Tatnai and Shethar-boznai. And so this is an additional and more exact inquiry concerning the names of the builders. And this sense is favoured by comparing ver. 9, 10, where the same questions here severally made, ver. 3, 4, are in like manner distinguished. And so the sacred writer speaks, thus in their person, such variation of persons being frequent in the Hebrew language, as the learned know. Or, 2. We Jews, and so the translation must be a little varied and the words read without an interrogation, thus, Then we told them accordingly (i. e. according to what they asked) what were the names of the men that made this building, i. e. who were the chief undertakers and encouragers of this work, for although the Hebrew participle ma'as, rendered what seems always to be used interrogatively, yet the Chaldee participle ma'as here rendered what, is used otherwise, as in Isa. i. 17.

5 But the eye of then God was upon the elders of the Jews, that they could not cause them to cease, till the matter came to Darius, and then they returned answer by letter concerning this matter.

They could not cause them to cease, because God overruled their hearts and hands, that they did not hinder them by force as they could have done.

6 ¶ The copy of the letter that Tatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and his companions the Apharsachites, which were on this side the river, sent unto Darius the king.

The Apharsachites, a people so called, sent hither as a colony. As for the other people, mentioned chap. iv. 9. they seem to have had a greater power with Rehum and Shimsai than with these new officers who made choice of other companions. Which were on this side the river, whereby they are distinguished from those of their brethren, who yet continued in their native country beyond the river, and were not transplanted hither.

7 They sent a letter unto him, where-in was written thus, Unto Darius the king, all peace.

8 Be it known unto the king, that we went into the province of Judea, to the house of the great God, which is builded with great stones, and timber is laid in the walls, and this work goeth fast on, and prospereth in their hands.

The great God, whom the Jews account the great God of gods, esteeming all others to be but little and false gods.

9 Then asked we those elders, and said unto them thus, 'Who commanded you to build this house, and to make up these walls?

10 We asked their names also, to certify thee, that we might write the names of the men that were the chief of them

11 And thus they returned us answer, saying, We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth, and build the house that was builded these many years ago, which a great king of Israel builded and set up

12 But after that our fathers had provoked the God of heaven unto wrath, he gave them into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, the Chaldean, who destroyed this house, and carried the people away into Babylon

13 But in the first year of Cyrus the king of Babylon the same king Cyrus made a decree to build this house of God

14 And the vessels also of gold and silver of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took out of the temple that was in Jerusalem, and brought them into the temple of Babylon, those did Cyrus the king take out of the temple of Babylon, and they were delivered unto me, whose name was Sheshbazzar, whom he had made governor,

15 And said unto him, Take these vessels go, carry them into the temple that is in Jerusalem, and let the house of God be builded in his place

16 Then came the same Sheshbazzar, and laid the foundation of the house of God which is in Jerusalem, and since that time even until now hath it been in building, and yet it is not finished

Even until now, allowing for some interruptions

17 Now therefore, if it seem good to the king, let there be search made in the king's treasure house, which is there at Babylon, whether it be so, that a decree was made of Cyrus the king to build this house of God at Jerusalem, and let the king send his pleasure to us concerning this matter

CHAP VI

Darius answereth the former letter 1--7, and maketh a new decree, 8--12 By the help of the adversaries, and the directions of the prophets, the temple is finished, 13--15 The feasts of the dedication, 16--18, and of the passover are kept, 19--22

THEN Darius the king made a decree, and search was made in the house of the rolls, where the treasures were laid up in Babylon

Darius made a decree, either, 1 To search the rolls. Or rather, 2 To permit and promote the building of the temple. And so the following words may be rendered, After search was made, &c., the Hebrew particle rau being, if so used, as hath been noted before. In Babylon, either, 1 In the kingdom or empire of Babylon, which he now possessed, or rather, 2 In the city of Babylon, where search was first made, supposing that this edict, which was made presently after Cyrus had taken Babylon, was kept there, but not finding it there, they searched in Achmetha, and found it there

2 And there was found at Achmetha, in the palace that is in the province of the Medes, a roll, and therein was a record thus written

Here the king's answer may seem to begin, and thus following account he sends to them, and after that lays down his commands. Achmetha, the royal city of the Medes and Persians

3 In the first year of Cyrus the king the same Cyrus the king made a decree concerning the house of God at Jerusalem, Let the house be builded, the place where they offered sacrifices, and let the foundations thereof be strongly laid, the height thereof threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof threescore cubits;

He did not command them to make it so large, for he left the ordering of the proportions of the building to their skill and choice, but he restrained them that they should make it no larger, lest they should hereafter make use of it to other purposes against himself, but those proportions differ much from those of Solomon's temple, which was but forty cubits high, only the porch was one hundred and twenty cubits high, and but twenty cubits in breadth. Either therefore Solomon's cubits were sacred cubits, which were larger than the other, and the were but common cubits, or the sixty cubits of height meant only of the porch, which he would not have to be so high and magnificent as that of Solomon's was, lest they should be puffed up with it, and by degrees arrive at their former height and insolence. And the word rendered breadth, may be, and is by some rendered more generally, the extension, or amplitude, or the length of it, it being improbable that the king should give orders about the breadth, and none about the length of it

4 With three rows of great stones, and a row of new timber, and the expences be given out of the king's house

With three rows of great stones, and a row of new timber, as Solomon's temple was built, 1 Kings vi 36, whereof Darius was informed by some of the Jews, who also do say that it might be done in this manner

5 And also let the golden and silver vessels of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took forth out of the temple which is at Jerusalem, and brought unto Babylon, be restored, and brought again unto the temple which is at Jerusalem, every one to his place, and place them in the house of God

Be restored to Sheshbazzar, for this is part of Cyrus's decree, (which is here recited,) and not Darius's, which does not begin till the next verse

6 Now therefore, Tatnai, governor beyond the river, Shethar-boznai, and your companions the Apharsachites, which are beyond the river, be ye far from thence

1 e From hindering or discouraging the work

7 Let the work of this house of God alone, let the governor of the Jews and the elders of the Jews build this house of God in his place

8 Moreover I make a decree, that ye shall do to the elders of these Jews as the building of this house of God, that of the king's goods, even of the tribute beyond the river, forthwith expences be given unto these men, that they be not hindered

I am proceeding in their work for want of money.

9 And that which they have need of, both young bullocks, and rams, and lambs, for the burnt offerings of the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, and oil, according to the appointment of the priests which are at Jerusalem, let it be given them day by day without fail

10 That they may offer sacrifices of sweet savours unto the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the king, and of his sons

11 Also I have made a decree, that whosoever shall alter this word, let timber be pulled down from his house, and being set up, let him be hanged thereon, and let his house be made a dunghill for this

12 And the God that hath caused his name to dwell there, destroy all kings and people, that shall put to their hand to alter and to destroy this house of God which is at Jerusalem. I Darius have made a decree, let it be done with speed

13 ¶ Then Tatnai, governor on this side the river, Shethar boznai, and their companions according to that which Darius the king had sent, so they did speedily

14 And the elders of the Jews builded and they prospered through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet and Zechariah the son of Iddo. And they builded and finished it according to the commandment of the God of Israel, and according to the commandment of Cyrus, and Darius, and Artaxerxes king of Persia

They prospered through the prophesying of Haggai—this is a reasonable intimation that this great and unexpected success was not to be ascribed to chance, nor to the kindness or good humour of Darius, but unto God only, who by his prophets had required and encouraged them to proceed in the work, and by his mighty power directed Darius's heart to such kind and noble purposes and aims. Artaxerxes who is thought to be either Darius's son and successor, or is called also Artaxerxes and Artabanus, who have joined with his father Darius possibly because he lived in the Jews, and promoted their cause with his father, and saw to the execution of his father's decree, and was his father's successor, if not made co-emperor with his father in his lifetime, which was not unusual. Ch 2 Artaxerxes is the same as the son of Darius who was best known by the name of Artaxerxes, who is here joined with Cyrus and Darius because though the temple was finished as to the altar, &c. of the work in Darius's reign, yet it was not more fully completed and adorned by Artaxerxes, as is evident from chap. vi. 20, 27, by whom Nehemiah was sent to Jerusalem with a large commission and full power to take care about the building of the city, and all other things concerning the Jewish nation and religion

15 And this house was finished on the third day of the month Adar, which was in the sixth year of the reign of Darius the king

16 ¶ And the children of Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the rest of the children of the captivity, kept the dedication of this house of God with joy,

17 And offered at the dedication of this house of God an hundred bullocks, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs, and for a sin offering for all Israel, twelve he goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel

18 And they set the priests in their divisions, and the Levites in their courses, for the service of God, which is at Jerusalem, as it is written in the book of Moses

19 And the children of the captivity kept the passover upon the fourteenth day of the first month

20 For the priests and the Levites were purified together, all of them were pure, and killed the passover for all the children of the captivity, and for their brethren the priests, and for themselves

21 And the children of Israel, which were come again out of captivity, and all such as had separated themselves unto them from the filthiness of the heathen of the land, to seek the Lord God of Israel, did eat,

From the filthiness of the heathen, i. e. such as had for their filthy and idolatrous religion of the heathens and were profaned to the Jewish religion, for such were allowed to eat the passover 1 Cor. xii. 48, Numb. ix. 14

22 And kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with joy, for the Lord had made them joyful, and turned the heart of the king of Assyria unto them, to strengthen their hands in the work of the house of God the God of Israel

He turned the heart of the king of Assyria, i. e. of the king of Persia, which was now king of Assyria also, or emperor of that vast and famous Assyrian empire, which was first subdued by the king of Babylon, who therefore is some where called the Assyrian, and for the same reason the Persian monarch is here so called emphatically, to note the great power and goodness of God in turning the hearts of these people, whose predecessors had been the chief persecutors and oppressors of God's people

CHAP VII

Ezra's genealogy 1-5 The priests Levites and Ezra go up to Jerusalem, 6-10 The gracious commission of Artaxerxes to Ezra, 11-26 Ezra blesseth God for his favour to his people, 27, 28

NOW after these things, in the reign of Artaxerxes king of Persia, Ezra the son of Seraiah, the son of Azariah, the son of Hilkiah,

Artaxerxes the same of whom he speaks chap. vi. 14 The son of Seraiah, i. e. his grandson. Here are divers persons omitted for brevity sake, which may be supplied out of 1 Chron. vi. 1-17

2 The son of Shallum, the son of Zadok, the son of Ahitub,

3 The son of Amariah, the son of Azariah, the son of Meraioth,

4 The son of Zerahiah, the son of Uzzi, the son of Bukkiah,

5 The son of Abishua, the son of Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the chief priest

6 This Ezra went up from Babylon, and he was a ready scribe in the law of Moses, which the LORD God of Israel had given, and the king granted him all his request according to the hand of the LORD his God upon him.

Ezra went up from Babylon with the king's consent and commission. I readily assented, I am a learned and expert doctor, for in that sense the word scribe is oft used, as Jer viii 8, Matt vii 29, xvi 10, xiii 2, 13, Mark vii 26, compared with Matt xxi 35, 36. According to the hand of the Lord his God upon him, i.e. by the grace and favour of God so disposing the heart of the king.

7 And there went up some of the children of Israel, and of the priests, and the Levites, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nethinims unto Jerusalem, in the seventh year of Artaxerxes the king.

This is here related in the general, but how he procured this is particularly related here after.

8 And he came to Jerusalem in the fifth month, which was in the seventh year of the king.

9 For upon the first day of the first month began he to go up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month came he to Jerusalem, according to the good hand of his God upon him.

10 For Ezra had prepared his heart to seek the law of the LORD, and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments.

Ezra had prepared his heart or directed &c. i.e. he had his mind and affections upon it, and made it his chief study and business. To seek the law, i.e. to search and find out the true sense and meaning of it, and thence to learn what sins or errors were to be reformed, and what duties were to be performed. And to teach in Israel. The doing of things in this sense is very desirable for the endeavours to understand God's law and will, and that not for curiosity or ostentation, but in order to practice, next conscientiously practising what he did understand, which made his doctrine much more effectual, and that he could desire and liberally to instruct, and led to her that he was in good knowledge to do so.

11 Now this is the copy of the letter that the king Artaxerxes gave unto Ezra the priest, the scribe, even a scribe of the words of the commandments of the LORD, and of his statutes to Israel.

This is the copy of the words of the commandment, the phrase is emphatical, noting that he explained both the sense and the things, for the Jews in the land of their captivity had in a great measure lost both their language and the knowledge of God's commandments, and therefore Ezra was his companions instruct them in both of which seen in Neh vii 8.

12 Artaxerxes, "king of kings" unto Ezra the priest, a scribe of the law of the God of heaven, perfect power, and at such a time.

13 I make a decree, that all they of the people of Israel, and of his priests, and Levites, in my realm, which are banded of their own freewill to go up to Jerusalem, go with thee.

14 Forasmuch as thou art sent of the king, and of his seven counsellors, to enquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, according to the law of thy God which is in thine hand,

His seven counsellors, his chief nobles and officers of state, of whom see also Esth i 10, 11. To inquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, i.e. to make inquiry into all abuses and degenerations from your law, and to redress them. Which is in thine hand, which is now and always in thine hand, being the matter of thy daily study and exercise, which thou now earnest along with thee, the interpretation whereof belongeth unto thee.

15 And to carry the silver and gold, which the king and his counsellors have freely offered unto the God of Israel, whose habitation is in Jerusalem,

16 And all the silver and gold that thou canst find in all the province of Babylon with the freewill offering of the people, and of the priests, offering willingly for the house of thy God which is in Jerusalem.

That thou canst find, i.e. procure, as that word is used, Gen vi 8, xvi 12, Psal lxxviii 3, cxix 162, Prov i 13, ii 5, iii 13. Whatsoever thou canst get of my subjects by way of free gift. The free will offering of the people to wit of Israel.

17 That thou mayest buy speedily with this money bullocks, rams, lambs, with their meats offerings, and then drink offerings, and offer them upon the altar of the house of your God which is in Jerusalem.

18 And whatsoever shall seem good to thee, and to thy brethren, to do with the rest of the silver and the gold, that do after the will of your God.

19 The vessels also that are given thee for the service of the house of thy God, those deliver thou before the God of Jerusalem.

20 And whatsoever more shall be needful for the house of thy God, which thou shalt have occasion to bestow, bestow it out of the king's treasuries.

To the house of thy God, to wit, to the reputation, or adorning or completing it. See the notes on chap vi 11.

21 And I, even I Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily.

22 Into an hundred talents of silver, and into an hundred measures of wheat, and into an hundred baths of wine, and into an hundred baths of oil, and salt without prescribing how much.

Because it was but of mean price, and of very common and necessary use in all their sacrifices, Lev ii 13, Mark ix 19.

23 Whatsoever is commanded by the God of heaven, let it be diligently done for the house of the God of heaven: for why should there be wrath against the realm of the king and his sons?

For the omission of any part of his worship occasioned by my neglect. This danger and duty he declared partly by natural light, and principally by the information of Ezra, chap vii 22, who had the king's ear and heart.

24 Also we certify you, that touching any of the priests and Levites, singers, porters, Nethinims, or ministers of this house of God, it shall not be lawful to impose toll, tribute, or custom, upon them.

25 And thou, Ezra, after the wisdom of thy God, that is in thine hand, act

Shechaniah ver 5. Bugnet 1 e, the males though the males only be expressed here, and in the succeeding verses, yet it is more than probable they carried the women along with them, as they did carry little ones as it is expressed here, ver 21.

4 Of the sons of Pahath-moab, Elihoenai the son of Zechariah, and with him two hundred males.

5 Of the sons of Shechaniah, the son of Jahaziel, and with him three hundred males.

Of the sons of Phazael, either 1 e, only son, or the most eminent of his sons, and therefore so called here.

6 Of the sons also of Adai. I had the son of Jonathai, and with him fifty males.

7 And of the sons of Elam, Jeshaiiah the son of Athaliah, and with him seventy males.

8 And of the sons of Shephatiah, Zebadiah the son of Michael, and with him fourscore males.

9 Of the sons of Joab, Obadiah the son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen males.

10 And of the sons of Shelomith, the son of Josiphiah, and with him an hundred and threescore males.

11 And of the sons of Bobai, Zechariah the son of Bobai, and with him twenty and eight males.

15 ¶ And I gathered them together to the river that runneth to Abiba, and there †abode we in tents three days. And I viewed the people, and the priests, and found there none of the †sons of Levi.

The river that runneth to Abiba or, the river of Abiba as it is called, ver 21, 31. By comparing of these places it seems that Abiba was the name both of the river, and of the town or place by which it ran. Either the way that river which other writers call Adiara which runs to Assyria which thence is called Adiabene, or some other river running into Euphrates. None of the sons of Levi to wit, who were simple Levites and not priests. And therefore the Levites mentioned chap vii 7, by anticipation were not yet come to him.

16 Then sent I for Eliezer, for Ariel, for Sheanuth, and for Elmithan, and for Jarib, and for Ilnathan, and for Nathan, and for Zechariah, and for Moshullam, chief men, also for Jozarib, and for Ilnathan, men of understanding.

Then sent I for Eliezer to come to me and go along with me to Jerusalem. Men of understanding, who seem to have had more knowledge than pious zeal for God and his house and solemn worship, which was confined to Jerusalem.

17 And I sent them with commandment unto Iddo the chief at the place Casiphia, and †I told them what they should say unto Iddo, and to his brethren the Nehumms, at the place Casiphia, that they should bring unto us ministers for the house of our God.

h Heb. I put words in their mouth See Chap 14 v 19

I sent them with commandment, which he might do partly by virtue of that authority which he had over them by his priesthood, and partly by that authority which he either had received or could easily procure from the king to that purpose. Iddo the chief, the head of the rest either by ecclesiastical order or government, which the Persian kings allowed to the Jews, or by some grant or commission from the king. At the place Casiphia, not a place near the Caspian I think, as some guess from the likeness of the names, for that was at too great a distance for his present purpose, but some other place not far from Abiba, where he knew that there was a college or considerable company of Levites together.

18 And by the good hand of our God upon us they †brought us a man of understanding, of the sons of Mahli, the son of Levi, the son of Israel, and Sherebiah, with his sons and his brethren, eighteen.

19 And Hashabiah, and with him Jesharah of the sons of Merari, his brethren and their sons, twenty.

20 Also of the Nethumims, whom David and the princes had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethumims: all of them were expressed by name.

The Gibeonites, who were devoted to this service by Joshua and the princes of his time Josh. ix. 21, and are said to be appointed by David and his princes, because they were confirmed by them in their former office, and more particularly applied to the several crises of the temple, though this be not distinctly related in 1 Chron. xxv. xvi. because his business there was to weigh accounts only of the new constitutions and alterations made by David in those matters.

21 ¶ Then I proclaimed a fast there, at the river of Ahava, that we might afflict ourselves before our God, to seek of him a right way for us, and for our little ones, and for all our substance.

A right way is a safe and prosperous journey, and which a way and course might be best for us.

22 For I was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy in the way, because we had spoken unto the king, saying, The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him: but his power and his wrath is against all them that forsake him.

23 So we fasted and besought our God for this: and he was intreated of us.

He gave us some assistance, though not answer to our request.

24 ¶ Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them,

Or, and Sherebiah &c. who were the Levites mentioned ver. 18 who were appointed to minister with the priests, with the chief of every one of these families and duties. The particle and is a conjunction.

25 And weighed unto them the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God which the king, and his counsellors, and his lords, and all Israel there present had offered.

26 I even weighed unto their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents.

27 Also twenty basins of gold, of a thousand drams, and two vessels of fine copper, precious as gold.

Heb. desirable as gold, not that it was of equal price or worth with it, but for its incomparable excellency in its kind, and for its great rarity for which cause there were only two vessels of that sort.

28 And I said unto them, Ye are holy unto the Lord, the vessels are holy also, and the silver and the gold are a freewill offering unto the Lord God of your fathers.

29 Watch ye, and keep them, until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Israel, at Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the Lord.

30 So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem unto the house of our God.

31 ¶ Then we departed from the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem, and the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of such as lay in wait by the way.

To wit, in the direct way, whereby it may be conjectured, that God directed them to fetch a little compass, and to go a more unobvious and unsuspected way, as they had begged of God, ver. 21.

32 And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days.

33 ¶ Now on the fourth day was the silver and the gold and the vessels weighed in the house of our God by the hand of Meremoth the son of Uriah the priest, and with him was Eleazar the son of Phinehas, and with them was Jozabad the son of Binnui, and Nehemiah the son of Binnui Levites.

34 By number and by weight of every one, and all the weight was written at that time.

35 Also the children of those that had been carried away, which were come out of the captivity, offered burnt offerings unto the God of Israel twelve bullocks for all Israel, namely, and six rams, seventy and seven lambs, twelve he goats, for a sin offering: all this was a burnt offering unto the Lord.

What necessity was there to wit the new altar, whom God had lately made better.

36 ¶ And they delivered the king's communion unto the king's stewards, and to the governors on this side the river, and they furthered the people, and the house of God.

In the adorning, and furnishing of it with these vessels and conveniences, and in promoting God's worship and service therein.

CHAP. IX.

And others hearing of the unlawful marriage of the people with strangers, mourn for it, 1. The prayer of God, and confesseth their sins, and particularly this, 15.

NOW when these things were done, the princes came to me, saying, The people of Israel and the priests, and the Levites, have not separated themselves from the people of the lands, doing according to their abominations, even of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites.

The princes, who feared God, and understood that Ezra was come with large commission from the king, and with this design, to reform all disorders which of this was not the least. From the people of the lands, i.e. from the heathen nations round about them, which God had captivated by commanded them to do, Deut xii 2, 3. Doing according to their abominations to wit, either 1 Marring promises whomsoever they liked as the heathens used to do, or, 2 Imprinting them in their idolatrous or other wicked practices into which they were drawn by their heathenish affluents although they are not charged with any other crime beside the marriage in the following account of it.

18. 1 or they have <sup>18</sup> taken of their daughters for themselves, and for their sons so that the <sup>19</sup> holy seed have mingled themselves with the people of those lands yea the hand of the princes and rulers hath been chief in this trespass.

Thus they had done either 1 In the kind of their captivity, into which these people were carried as well as others, as appears from Lev xxx 9 &c. Or rather 2 Since their return, & may be gathered from ver 8, 9, 10, 11. The princes our rulers, who should have restrained the people from this in by their authority and example, and by doing otherwise made the sin more general and involved themselves and the nation in the guilt of it.

19. 3 And when I heard this thing, <sup>20</sup> I rent my garment and my mantle, and plucked off the hair of my head and of my beard; and I sat down astonished.

My garment and my mantle, both my inner and my upper garment. I plucked off the hair of my head and of my beard, in testimony of my great grief and indignation which was usual among all those eastern and ancient people wherein he did not transgress that by Lev xix 27 Deut xiv 1 because he did not shave off all the hair but only plucked off some hairs. Sat down astonished, partly for grief and shame at the sin, and partly for fear of some great and dreadful judgment which he expected and feared for it.

20. 1 Then were assembled unto me every one that troubled at the words of the God of Israel, because of the transgression of those that had been carried away captive: and I sat astonished until the evening sacrifice.

They were assembled unto me, to join with me both in lamenting the sin and in endeavouring the redress of it. Every one that troubled at the words of the God of Israel, i.e. who trembled in awe of God and of his word and durst not violate his commandments or who feared his due reproofs must use that did so and troubled for fear of God's judgments upon them and upon the whole land for their sake as the following words imply. Compare Lev xii 2, 3. Those that had been carried away to wit into captivity and were lately returned from it and yet were not relieved either by their former affliction or by their deliverance. Until the evening sacrifice, when the people used to assemble together. See Ps cxlii 2, Acts iii 1.

21. 4 And at the evening sacrifice <sup>22</sup> I rose up from my heaviness, and having rent my garment and my mantle I fell upon my knees, and spread out my hand unto the Lord my God,

23. 5 For my sin arose from that in so sinful posture ver 18, and put me into the posture of a petitioner. On thy feet is our mercy and affliction. Having mourned for the sin, I understood he was not satisfied and that God expected the confession and amendment of it, and therefore I fell to pray.

24. 6 And said O my God, I am ashamed and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God for our iniquities are increased over our head and our trespass is grown up unto the heavens.

He includes himself in the number of the transgressors, not only by a rhetorical figure and communion, but partly because he himself was guilty of many sins, and partly because the princes and priests and many of the people having done this, the guilt was now become national.

Increased over our head, like deep waters, in which we are as it were drowned, and ready to perish. Compare Psal xxxviii 4.

7 Since the days of our fathers have <sup>8</sup> we been in a great trespass unto this day and for our iniquities have we, our kings, and our priests, been delivered into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, and to a spoil, and to confusion of face, as it is this day.

We have been in a great trespass unto this day we're not purged from the guilt and filth of our fathers' sins, but we are still feeling the sad effects of their sins in the continuing captivity of a great number of our brethren, and we are still repeating the same sins.

8 And now for a little space grace hath been shewed from the Lord our God, to leave us a remnant to escape, and to give us a nail in his holy place, that our God may lighten our eyes, and give us a little reviving in our bondage.

Now for a little space it is but a little while since God hath delivered and restored us and yet we are already returned to our former sin and folly. Or thus, We have enjoyed this favour but a little while, and now we are sinning it away and shortning our own happiness. To leave us a remnant to escape, that by his favour many of us should escape out of captivity, whom he calls but a remnant because the first great part of the Israelitish nation were yet in captivity. To give us a nail in his holy place, either 1 A just and merited promise of our own nation and religion such being compared to nails or pins as Lev xxii 23. Or rather 2 Some kind of settlement, whereas before we were tossed and removed from place to place as our masters pleased.

It is not proper to terms which are fastened by cords and nail or pin. In his holy place i.e. in this holy land in the land of Judah called Zech xi 12. Or in Jerusalem which is called the holy city Neh vi 1 18. Dauid 21 which is peculiarly mentioned because of the temple which was there which fastened their hearts and gave them some ground of hopes to continue in the land. That our God may lighten our eyes i.e. that he might revive and comfort our hearts. For as darkness is oft put for a state of sorrow and affliction, so light is put for joy and comfort. Give us a little reviving in our bondage, for we are not quite delivered but still wear our fetters upon us, being ever here in subjection to our former lord.

9 For we were bondmen yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but hath extended mercy unto us in the sight of the kings of Persia, to give us a reviving, to set up the house of our God, and to repair the desolations thereof, and to give us a wall in Judah and in Jerusalem.

We were bondmen, i.e. in greater bondage than that in which we now are. Hath extended mercy unto us in the sight of the kings of Persia, i.e. hath given us to find favour in their eyes. To give us a reviving, to recover us from the grave of dreadful calamities, in which we lay like dead men and dry bones, Ezek xxxvii 1 &c. To repair the desolations thereof, to wit of the temple either, 1 To build the house where there was only a heap of the ruins of the old temple. Or rather 2 To frequent and celebrate the worship of God in that place which hath long lain like a desolate and neglected place. For the building of the house was mentioned in the next foregoing words. To give us a wall, Heb a hedge or a fence, either, 1 The wall built about Jerusalem. But it is probable that was not yet built as we shall see by the following history. Besides this fence is intimated to be as much a fence to the rest of Judah as to Jerusalem. Or, 2 The favour and protection of the kings of Persia, whose edicts on their behalf were under God the security against all those enemies wherewith they were compassed. Or 3 The powerful and gracious providence of God, which had brought them together and planted them their own land, and watched over them from time to time.

10 And now, O our God, what shall we say after this? for we have forsaken thy commandments.

What apology can we make for ourselves after thou hast conferred such great and high favours upon us, and we have so grossly abused them?

11 Which thou hast commanded by thy servants the prophets, saying, The land, unto which ye go to possess it, is an unclean land with the filthiness of the people of the lands, with their abominations which have filled it from one end to another with their uncleanness.

In unclean land with the filthiness of the people, this notes the cause of matter of this uncleanness. The land is not unclean in itself, but only polluted by the filthiness of its inhabitants. Of the lands, or of these lands which are round about it. This land is as corrupt as any of the rest of the heathen nations.

12 Now therefore give not your daughters unto their sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, nor seek their peace or their wealth for ever: that ye may be strong, and eat the good of the land, and have it for an inheritance to your children for ever.

Don't seek their peace, but root them out, as I have commanded you to do, which also they have abundantly deserved, both of mine and of your hands. See Deut. vii. 2. That ye may be strong, although you may fancy that this way of making league and marriages with them is the way to enrich and settle you, yet I assure you it will weaken and ruin you, and the contrary course will strengthen you.

13 And after all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass, seeing that thou our God hast punished us less than our iniquities deserved, and hast given us such deliverance as this,

After all our sins and sufferings for our sins, and after all thy favours shewed to us in the mitigation of thy judgment. See deliverance as thou hast shewed us, and in our affliction and in our deliverance, not only to our enemies but also to our lives.

14 Should we again break thy commandments and join in affinity with the people of these abominations? would it not thou be angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be no remnant nor escaping?

Should we again break thy commandments? was this a pit and just requital of all thy kindnesses, or was this thy chief desire in these actions? or wilt thou till the end of our days? There should be no remnant nor escaping, we reasonably expect any thing from thee less than our ruin.

15 O LORD God of Israel, thou art righteous, for we remain yet escaped, as it is this day: behold, we are before thee in our trespasses, for we cannot stand before thee because of this.

Thou art righteous, a just and holy God who dost hate and wilt infallibly punish sin and sinners. Or, thou art righteous as appears from hence, that notwithstanding all our sins thou hast not utterly destroyed us, but hast remained to us. The Hebrew word here rendered righteous is used for merciful, as is well known to all the learned. For we remain yet escaped, or though we remain, yet thou hast not spared us in part, we are not righteous, and therefore wilt certainly punish and destroy us.

according to our deserts, if we do not repent us, and reform this great wickedness. We are before thee in our trespasses, we are here in thy presence, and so are all our sins, we are arraigning ourselves before thy tribunal, acknowledging ourselves to be vile offenders, and that we be just it thou destroy us. We cannot stand before thee to wit, in judgment, as that word is oft used, is Psal. cxxx. 4, compare Psal. i. 5, we must needs fall and perish at thy presence, as the phrase is Psal. ix. 3. Because of this, because of this our great guilt, and the aggravations of it.

CHAP. X.

Shechaniah encourages Ezra to reform the strange marriages. 1-11. All Israel meet to do accordingly. Ezra mourning assembleth the people. 6-8. The people at the exhortation of Ezra repent, and promise amendment. 9-11. Their care to purify it, 15-17. The names of them that married strange wives, 18-11.

NOW when Ezra had prayed, and when he had confessed, weeping and casting himself down before the house of God, there assembled unto him out of Israel a very great congregation of men and women and children for the people wept very sore.

Awakened by the word and example of this holy priest and great potentate. So inexpressible is the good which is done by the good example, and the evil which is done by the bad example of a good person, or of a minister. The time of his great passion of grief and of his many and public expressions thereof in the court before the temple, being in an instant dispersed over all the city, brought a great company together. The people wept very sore being greatly affected with Ezra's prayer, and with the common sin.

2 And Shechaniah the son of Jehiel, one of the sons of Eliam, answered and said unto Ezra. We have transgressed against our God, and have taken strange wives of the people of the land: at now there is hope in Israel concerning this thing.

He saith neither 1. Because he was guilty in this matter. Or rather 2. In the name of the people and their several families, and his own among the rest. For this man's name is not in the following catalogue, but there we have 1. Jechiel, Jechiel and his father's brethren five other sons of Jechiel, and his father's brother Jechiel. It was therefore an evidence of his great courage and good conscience, that he must so freely and fully discharge his duty, whereby he showed that he honoured God more than his nearest and dearest relations. There is hope concerning this thing, in case of our repentance and reformation. Therefore let us not sorrow like persons without hope, nor sit down in despair, but let us fall upon action and amend our errors, and then trust to God's mercy.

3 Now therefore let us make a covenant with our God, to put away all the wives, and such as are born of them, according to the counsel of my lord, and of those that tremble at the commandment of our God, and let it be done according to the law.

To put away all the wives, which though it was a harsh yet was not unjust, if it be considered 1. That marriage made between some prohibited persons is a contract, between a father and his daughter, a brother and a sister, are not only unlawful, but void in law, and ipso facto null, by the positive law of civil and canon. All therefore these marriages were idolatrous, and such marriages, being expressly and severely forbidden by God, might well be dissolved. And it was one of the most heinous laws that the nations which were destroyed by law, should be accounted not only unlawful, but null. 2 That there were many peculiar laws given to the Jews concerning the marriage, and putting away of wives, as hath been observed before in their proper places, and therefore it is not strange if there be something more in this case than is now used with us. 3 Supposing the admonition to be continued, yet they might be excluded from habitation with them, as a just punishment upon them for the wilful breach of a known and positive law of God. And such as are born of them, they may seem harder than the former, but many things may be said. 1. Whatever evil befall either them or their children, they had all reason to accept it as the just and deserved fruit of the transgression. 2. That children may and sometimes do suffer at least temporal evils, for their parents' sin, on any occasion of them is most evident, both by the Scripture instances, and by the laws and usages of nations in some cases. 3. Thus may seem to have been a necessary part of severity, partly as a proper punishment of the parents' sin hereon, and to deter others more effectually from the like practices, partly, to prevent the corruption of their other children by the conversation and society of this ungodly and idolatrous brood, and partly, lest such children being continually present with them, and stealing into their affections, might at last prevail with them to take their apostate wives again. 4. These children were only cast out of the families and commonwealth of Israel, but were not utterly for ever and ruined, but due care was probably taken by authority that they should have some provision made for them, and some care taken about their education in the Jewish religion &c. According to the counsel of my Lord, either, 1. As thou counselest and desirest us to do. Or 2. Let us do it in such manner as thou shalt think fit and agreeable to the law, as it follows, for it requires great caution as being a matter of no small difficulty. And of those that tremble at the commandment of our God, and of other serious and religious persons who may with thee consider and regulate the business. Let it be done according to the law. This is meant either 1. Of the matter of the business, so that be done which the law requires, let them be put away. Or 2. Of the manner of it, which must be according to the rules of God's law.

1 Arise for this matter belongeth unto thee, we also will be with thee, be of good courage, and do it.

This matter belongeth unto thee, because thou hast both skill to manage it, and authority both from God and from the Persian king to do it.

5 Then arose Ezra, and made the chief priests, the Levites, and all Israel, to swear that they should do according to this word. And they swore.

6 ¶ Then Ezra rose up from before the house of God and went into the chamber of Johanan the son of Jashub, and when he came thither, he did eat no bread, nor drink water, for he mourned because of the transgression of them that had been carried away.

Went into the chamber that he with the princes and elders as it follows ver. 8 might consult about the execution of this resolution.

7 And they made proclamation throughout Judah and Jerusalem unto all the children of the captivity that they should gather themselves together unto Jerusalem.

8 And that whosoever would not come within three days according to the counsel of the princes and the elders, all his substance should be forfeited, and himself separated from the congregation of those that had been carried away.

Either by banishment, or rather by excommunication from the church, and people, and house and public worship of God.

9 ¶ Then all the men of Judah and Benjamin gathered themselves together unto Jerusalem within three days. It was the ninth month, and the twentieth day of the month, and all the people sat in the street of the house of God, trembling because of this matter, and for the great rain.

All the men of Judah and Benjamin, not only of the two tribes as appears from the following catalogue, where there are priests and Levites, but all the Israelites, ver. 20, who are thus described partly because the greatest part of them were of these tribes, though others were mixed with them, and partly because they all now dwelt in that land which formerly was appropriated to those tribes. In the street of the house of God, in that street of the city which was next to the temple and within the view of it that so they might be in God's presence where they might be moved to a more faithful and vigorous prosecution of their work. And this place they might choose rather than the court of the people because they thought it might be polluted by the delinquents, who were all to come thither for the great rain which they took for a token of God's displeasure against them.

10 And Ezra, the priest stood up, and said unto them Ye have transgressed, and have taken strange wives, to increase the trespass of Israel.

11 Now therefore make confession unto the Lord God of your fathers, and do his pleasure, and separate yourselves from the people of the land and from the strange wives.

Do his pleasure, you have sinfully perverted yourself, now please God by your obedience to his command.

12 Then all the congregation answered and said with a loud voice, As thou hast said, so must we do.

13 But the people are many, and it is a time of much rain, and we are not able to stand without, neither is this a work of one day or two, for we are many that have transgressed in this thing.

14 Let now our rulers of all the congregation stand and let all them which have taken strange wives in our cities come at appointed times, and with them the elders of every city, and the judges thereof, until the fierce wrath of our God for this matter be turned from us.

Let our rulers of all the congregation stand, let the great council called the Sanhedrim, be settled, and meet to judge and determine of all particular causes. Them which have taken strange wives to wit of these heathen nations such as were not proselyted to the Jewish religion before their marriage or since revolved from it. The elders of every city, and the judges thereof, who are best able to inform the great council of the quality of the persons, and of all matters of fact and circumstances. Until the fierce wrath of our God be turned from us, i. e. until the thing be done, and God's wrath thereby removed.

15 ¶ Only Jonathan the son of Asahel and Jahaziah the son of Tikvah were employed about this matter, and Meshulam and Shabbethai the Levite helped them.

To wit, to take due care that the business should be executed in the manner proposed, that the officers and deputies of every city should come successively in convenient time and order, as these should appoint and to take and keep an exact account of the whole transaction and of the names of the cities and persons whose causes were de-appointed and to give notice to others to come in their turns to prepare the business for the hearing of the judges. As these two were priests, as their coadjutors or helpers were Levites, that so they might inform the persons concerned if any matter of doubt did arise.

16 And the children of the captivity did so. And Ezra the priest, with certain chief of the fathers after the house of their fathers, and all of them by their names, were separated and sat down in the first day of the tenth month to examine the matter.

Here separated, i. e. sequestered themselves from all other business, and gave themselves wholly to this.

17 And they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives by the first day of the first month.

18 ¶ And among the sons of the priests there were found that had taken strange wives, namely, of the sons of Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren: Maaseiah, and Eliezer, and Jariah, and Gedaliah.

19 And they gave their hands that they would put away their wives, and being guilty they offered a ram of the flock for their trespass.

They gave their hands, i. e. they covenanted or swore by giving their hand, which was the usual gesture in those cases, of which see Lev. vi. 2, 1. c. xvi. 18.

20 And of the sons of Immer: Hanani, and Zebadiah.

21 And of the sons of Harim: Maaseiah, and Eliah, and Shemariah, and Jehiel, and Uzziel.

22 And of the sons of Pashur: Jehoel, Maaseiah, Ishmael, Nethumel, Joabab, and Eliah.

23 Also of the Levites: Jozabad, and Shimei, and Kethiah (the same as Kethi) Pethabiah, Judah, and Eliezer.

24 Of the singers also: Eliah, and of the porters: Shallum, and Telem, and Uri.

25 Moreover of Israel: of the sons of Parosh, Ramiah, and Uziah, and Malchiah, and Mamin, and Fleazar, and Malchiah, and Binniah.

Of Israel, i. e. of the people of Israel distinguished from the priests and the Levites hitherto named, who before were called Judah and Benjamin, ver. 9, where see the notes.

26 And of the sons of Elam: Mattaniah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, and Abdi, and Jeremoth, and Eliah.

27 And of the sons of Zattu: Ihoenai, Ihashib, Mattaniah, and Jeremoth, and Zabad, and Aziza.

28 Of the sons also of Bebai: Jehohanan, Hananiah, Zabbai, and Athlai.

29 And of the sons of Bani: Meshullam, Maluch, and Adaiah, Jashub, and Sheal, and Ramoth.

30 And of the sons of Pahath-moab: Adna, and Chelai, Benaiah, Maaseiah, Mattaniah, Bezael, and Binnui, and Manasseh.

31 And of the sons of Harim: Eliezer, Ishijah, Malchiah, Shemariah, Shimon.

32 Benjamin, Malluch, and Shemariah.

33 Of the sons of Hashum: Mattenai, Mattathah, Zabad, Iiphelet, Jeremai, Manasseh, and Shimei.

34 Of the sons of Bani: Maadai, Amram, and Uel.

35 Benaiah, Bedaiah, Chelluh.

36 Yimah, Meremoth, Elashub.

37 Mattaniah, Mattenai, and Jaasau.

38 And Bani, and Binnui, Shimei.

39 And Shelemiah, and Nathan, and Adaiah.

40 ¶ Machnadebai, Shashai, Sharai.

41 Azazel, and Shelemiah, Shemariah.

42 Shallum, Amariah, and Joseph.

43 Of the sons of Nebo: Joel, Mattithiah, Zabad, Zebai, Judai, and Joel Binnui.

44 All these had taken to wife wives, and some of them had wives to whom they had children.

When by he implies that most of their wives were barren, which came to pass by God's special providence, partly to manifest his displeasure against such matches, and partly that the practice of this great and necessary duty might not be hindered with too many difficulties.

THE BOOK OF ## NEHEMIAH

This book seems not to have been written by Ezra because it is written in a quite differing and more plain and easy style, and without that mixture of Chaldean or Syriac words which is in the book of Ezra, but by Nehemiah, chap. i. 1, who writ an account of his own transactions, as Ezra did of his. But whether this be the same Nehemiah who came up with Zerubbabel, Ezra. ii. 2, Neh. vi. 7 may be questioned the same name being oft given to divers persons. And for the name of Nushatha, which is used both Ezra. vi. 63 and Neh. vi. 65, 70, that seems to be the title of his office, and so belongs to any governor, whether it was Zerubbabel, or Nehemiah, or any other.

CHAP. I.

Nehemiah, understanding by Hanani the affliction of the Jews, and the misery of Jerusalem, 1—3, mourneth, fasteth, and prayeth, 4. His prayer for them, 5—10, and for success in his petition to the king, 11.

3 L 2

THE words of Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah. And it came to pass in the month Chisleu, in the twentieth year, as I was in Shushan the palace, The words of Nehemiah, or rather the acts or deeds, as the word oft signifies, of which he here treats. In the month Chisleu, which is the ninth month, containing part of November and part of December. In the twentieth year of Artaxerxes, chap. ii 1. In Shushan, the chief and royal city of Persia, Esth. i. 15.

2 That Hanani, one of my brethren, came, he and certain men of Judah, and I asked them concerning the Jews that had escaped, which were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem.

One of my brethren of my family, or tribe or nation. That had escaped out of the slavery which they endured in strange lands. Which were left of the captivity, the remnant of those numerous captives.

3 And they said unto me, The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are in great affliction and reproach: the wall of Jerusalem also is broken down, and the gates thereof are burned with fire.

In the province i. e. in Judea, which was now made a province under the Persian monarchy. see the notes on Jer. i. v. 8. In great affliction and reproach, despised and distressed by the neighbouring nations. The wall is broken down and the gates thereof are burned i. e. the walls and gates continue in the same woful plight in which Nebuchadnezzar left them. The Jews not being yet in a condition to rebuild them, nor having commission from the kings of Persia to do so, but only to build the temple and their own private houses. And this made their enemies scorn them, who also would have ruined them, but for fear of offending the Persian king.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, when I heard these words, that I sat down and wept, and mourned certain days, and fasted, and prayed before the God of heaven,

5 And said, I beseech thee, O Lord God of heaven, the great and terrible God, that keepeth covenant and mercy for them that love him and observe his commandments.

6 Let thine ear now be attentive, and thine eyes open, that thou mayest hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, day and night, for the children of Israel thy servants, and confess the sins of the children of Israel, which we have sinned against thee: both I and my father's house have sinned.

7 We have dealt very corruptly against thee, and have not kept thy commandments, nor the statutes, nor the judgments, which thou commandedst thy servant Moses.

We have dealt very corruptly, or we have wholly corrupted, to wit ourselves and our ways, and thy worship.

8 Remember, I beseech thee, the word that thou commandedst thy servant Moses, saying, If ye transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the nations.

9 But now return unto me, and keep my commandments and do them, though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of the heaven, yet will I gather them from thence and will bring them unto the place that I have chosen to set my name there.

10 Now these are thy servants and thy people, whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power, and by thy strong hand.

11 O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name: and prosper, I pray thee, thy servant this day, and grant him mercy in the sight of this man. I or I was the king's cupbearer.

In the sight of this man, the king, who though a god by office, is but a man by nature, and therefore his heart is wholly at thy disposal. I was the king's cup-bearer, where by I had opportunity to speak to him, and some favour and freedom with him, which encouraged me to make this prayer, and to hope for some success.

CHAP. II.

Artaxerxes, understanding the cause of Nehemiah's sadness, 1-5, sendeth him with letters to Jerusalem, 6-8. Nehemiah, to the grief of the enemies, cometh to Jerusalem, 9-11, and secretly by night vieweth the ruins of Jerusalem, 12-16. He enjoineth the Jews to build, 17, 18. The enemies deriding charge them with rebellion against the king, 19. Nehemiah's answer, 20.

AND it came to pass in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that wine was before him: and he took up the wine, and gave it unto the king. Now I had not been beforetime in his presence.

In the month Nisan, which was four months after he had heard those sad tidings. The reason of this long silence and delay might be manifold, either because he thought fit that some time should be spent by himself and possibly others of his brethren in seeking God by solemn prayer and fasting, for God's blessing and the good success of this great labour. Or because he could not take so long and dangerous a journey in the depth of winter, or because his business attending upon the king did not come to him till that time. Or because till then he wanted a fit opportunity to move it to the king by reason of the king's indisposition or occasions or multitude of attendants, among whom there probably were divers enemies to the Jews who feared might hinder his design and desire. In the twentieth year of Artaxerxes, Artaxerxes Longimanus, the son of the great Xerxes, who reigned both with his father and after his death alone. Whence the years of his reign are computed two ways, one from the death of Xerxes and the other from his first entrance upon the administration of the kingdom, which was committed to him in the fifth year of Xerxes, when he began the Grecian war, and left his son king, or viceroy in his stead, as the manner of the Persians was. It may seem doubtful and is not much material, which way of computation is here used. Others understand this of Artaxerxes' Minomon.

2 Whenfore the king said unto me, Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? this is nothing else but sorrow of heart. Then I was very sorrowful.

Why is thy countenance sad? his fasting joined with wine and grief had made a sensible change in his very countenance. I was very sore of mind, partly, being daunted by the majesty of the king, and the suddenness and sharpness of his question, partly, fearing lest there was arising some jealous or ill opinion in the king concerning him, partly, because it was an unusual and ungrateful thing to come unto the king of Persia's presence with any badges or tokens of sorrow, both in 2, and principally, from his doubts or fears of disappointment, because his request was great and invidious and odious to the most of the Persian courtiers, and might be represented as dangerous, and might seem improper for a time of feasting and jollity.

3 And said unto the king, Let the king live for ever: why should not my countenance be sad, when the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?

1. Let the king live for ever my sadness comes not from any discontent with my own condition, or any disaffection to the king, for whom my hearty prayers are that he may live for ever, but from another cause. The place of my fathers' sepulchres, which by all nations are esteemed sacred, and inviolable, and honourable. He saith not a word of the temple, or of religion, for he wisely considered that he spake before a heathen king and court, who cared for none of those things.

4 Then the king said unto me, For what dost thou make request? So I prayed to the God of heaven.

I prayed to the God of heaven, to direct my thoughts and words, and to incline the king's heart to grant my request.

5 And I said unto the king, If it please the king, and if thy servant have found favour in thy sight, that thou wouldest send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may build it.

If it please the king my request whatsoever it is, I humbly and wholly submit it to the king's good pleasure, being resolved to acquiesce in it. If thy servant have found favour in thy sight I pretend no merit but am a humble suppliant for thy grace and favour which of having received some tokens, I am thereby emboldened to make this further request.

6 And the king said unto me, (the queen also sitting by him) I or how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? So it pleased the king to send me, and I set him a time.

The queen also sitting by him, which is here noted, partly as an unusual thing, for commonly the kings of Persia dined alone, and their queens seldom dined with them as historians note, and peradventure because the queen expressed some kindness to him and promoted his request with the king. When wilt thou return? this question showed the king's respect and affection to him and that he was not willing to want his attendance longer than was necessary. I set him a time, either that twelve years mentioned chap vi 14, xiii 6, or rather a far shorter time for which cause among others he built the walls with such despatch even in fifty two days chap vi 15, and probably not very long after that returned to the king, by whom he was sent a second time with more ample commission, and for the king's service, and the government of that part of his dominion.

7 Moreover I said unto the king, If it please the king, let letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that they may convey me over till I come into Judah,

That they may safely conduct me through their several territories.

8 And a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which appertaineth to the house, and for the wall of the city, and for the house that I shall enter into. And the king granted me, according to the good hand of my God upon me.

The king's forest, the forest of Ebalah, famous for pleasure, and for plenty of choicest trees. Which appertaineth to the house, to wit of the king's palace, which was adjacent to the house of God. Or of the tower or fence belonging to the house of God to wit for the gates of the courts of the temple, for though the temple was built the courts and other buildings belonging to the temple might yet be unfinished. The house that I shall enter into, wherein with I may build a house in which I may dwell whilst I am there, and which I may dispose of as I see fit.

9 ¶ Then I came to the governors beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. Now the king had sent captains of the army and horsemen with me.

10 When Sanballat the Horonite and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, heard of it, it grieved them exceedingly that there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel.

Sanballat the Horonite, so called, either from his family or from the place of his birth or rule, which is supposed to be Horonaim, an eminent city of Moab, Isa xi 5, Jer xlviii 3. Tobiah the servant, so called probably from his servile original or condition, from which he was advanced to his present power and dignity, which also may be mentioned as one reason why he now carried himself so insolently and perversely towards the Jews, it being usual for persons suddenly raised from a mean to a high estate so to demean themselves.

11 So I came to Jerusalem, and was there three days.

Resting myself after my long journey and acquiring into the state of the city.

12 ¶ And I arose in the night, I and some few men with me, neither told I any man what my God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem, neither was there any beast with me, save the beast that I rode upon.

I arose in the night, concealing both his intentions and actions as far and as long as he could, as knowing that the life of his business lay in secrecy and expedition. Neither was there any beast with me, to prevent noise, and the notice of what I did.

13 And I went out by night by the gate of the valley, even before the dragon wall, and to the dung port, and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire.

I went out by night, the footmen which accompanied him directing and leading him in the way. His design was to go round about the city, to observe the compass and condition of the walls and gates, that he might make sufficient provisions for the work. By the gate of the valley, of which see chap vi 13. Before the dragon wall, a fountain of water so called, either from some figure of a dragon or serpent which was by it; or from some living dragon which abode there when the city was desolate, for dragons delight to be in desolate places and high to springs of water as divers have observed. To the dung port, through which they used to carry the dung out of the city.

14 Then I went on to the gate of the fountain, and to the king's pool, but there was no place for the beast that was under me to pass.

The gate of the fountain is the which led to the fountain, to wit of Siloah or Gihon. The king's pool, that which king Hezekiah had made of which see 2 Chron xxxiii 3. There was no place for the beast to pass, the way being obstructed with heaps of rubbish.

15 Then went I up in the night by the brook, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entered by the gate of the valley, and so returned.

By the brook of Kidron, of which see on 2 Sam xvi 23. And so returned, having gone round about the city.

16 And the rulers knew not whither I went, or what I did, neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers, nor to the rest that did the work.

Or, were to do, or should do whom he intended to employ in the work here following of building the walls.

17 ¶ Then said I unto them, Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem hath waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire, come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more <sup>a</sup> a reproach

18 Then I told them of <sup>b</sup> the hand of my God which was good upon me, as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let us rise up and build. So they <sup>c</sup> strengthened their hands for this good work.

19 But when Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, and Geshem the Arabian, heard it, they laughed us to scorn, and despised us, and said, What is this thing that ye do? <sup>d</sup> will ye rebel against the king?

Geshem the Arabian, either the king's lieutenant in Arabia, as Tobiah was among the Ammonites, and Sanballat among the Moabites, or rather an Arab in by his birth. And it seems probable that both he, and Sanballat and Tobiah were chief men or governors among the Samaritans, or in their army. See chap. vi 1-3. Will ye rebel against the king? do you design to fortify the city against the king?

20 Then answered I them, and said unto them, The God of heaven, he will prosper us, therefore we his servants will arise and build: <sup>e</sup> but ye have no portion, nor right, nor memorial, in Jerusalem.

Ye have no portion nor right you have no with city over us, nor interest in our church, or state or city, but we are aliens from the commonwealth of Israel. We do own and detest that mongrel worship and religion which you have set up. We desire not your favour, or friendship, or help in this matter. And you have nothing to do to inquire into or meddle with our concerns, or to hinder us in our present undertaking. Nor memorial, no traditions or monument, either of your relation to us by birth or religion, or of your kindness to us, or to this place. But we have many memorials of your malice and enmity against us.

CHAP. III.

The names of the several families that builded, their order wherein, and the proportion how much, they builded.

THEN <sup>a</sup> Hushub the high priest rose up with his brethren the priests, <sup>b</sup> and they builded the sheep gate: they sanctified it, and set up the doors of it: <sup>c</sup> even unto the tower of Meah they sanctified it, unto the tower of Hamanah.

Hushub the high priest grandchild of Joshua the first high priest after his return from Babylon. Rose up, began the work. They builded the sheep gate, which was next to the temple, so called, either from the sheep market, or the sheep pool of Bethesda. John vi 2 where the sheep were washed and then brought to the temple to be sacrificed. They sanctified it, or, they prepared or repaired it, but so the word sometimes signifies. But our translation seems best both because that use of the word is most common, and because this is spoken only of this gate, which being built by the priests, and nearest to the temple, and with a special eye to the service of the temple, for which both men and things were most commonly brought in this way, and being also the first part of the building might be in a peculiar manner sanctified by solemn prayer and sacrifice, whereby it was dedicated to God's service, and thus either as it was considered in itself or with respect to the rest of the building, of which this was the beginning, and in a manner the first fruits, and therefore in the sanctification of it the whole lump and building was sanctified. And seeing the whole city is oft called the holy city, it is not strange if the walls and gates of it be also holy and said to be sanctified, and especially this gate. Compare Deut. xx 5. The tower of Meah, it, of a hundred, so called, either because it was a hundred cubits high, or so far distant from the sheep-gate.

2 And next unto him builded <sup>d</sup> the men of Jericho. And next to them builded Zaccur the son of Imri.

The men of Jericho, the posterity of the ancient inhabitants of Jericho. See Ezra ii 34.

3 But the fish gate did the sons of Hassenaah build, who also laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

The fish gate of which mention is made 2 Chron. xxxiii 14, Neh. xiii 39, Zeph. i 10, so called, either from the fish-market which was near it, or because the fish was brought in by it from the sea, Neh. xiii 16, this gate being north-westward from Jerusalem. The locks thereof, and the bars thereof this is either here related by anticipation, the whole work being here mentioned together, though this part was not done till afterwards, chap. vi 1, vi 15; or this was done to some of the gates, but not to all, and therefore this is said to be done more completely and universally afterwards.

4 And next unto them repaired Meremoth the son of Urijah, the son of Koz. And next unto them repaired Meshullam the son of Berechiah, the son of Mesheabeel. And next unto them repaired Zadok the son of Baana.

Repaired to wit, the demolished or decayed wall, there being no gate in this part. And so in the rest which follow.

5 And next unto them the Tekoites repaired, but their nobles put not their necks to the work of their Lord.

Did not submit to it, would not further it, either through pride or sloth and carelessness, or covetousness, or secret compliance with the enemies of the Jews. To the work of their Lord, either 1. Of Nehemiah who was their lord and governor and had given a general command for the carrying on of this work. Or, 2. Of God whom they owned for their Lord whose work this was partly because it had proceeded thus far by God's singular providence and blessing, and partly because it was done for the defence of the city, and people, and temple of God. And therefore they are branded to all posterity for the neglect of so great and pious a work.

6 Moreover the old gate repaired Jehoiada the son of Paschah, and Meshullam the son of Besodeiah, they laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

7 And next unto them repaired Melatiah the Gibeonite, and Jadon the Merothite, the men of Gibcon, and of Mizpah, unto the <sup>a</sup> throne of the governor on this side the river.

Unto the place where the governor of the country on this side the river I uphrates, for and under the Persian kings sometimes had a palace or throne, to which all persons living in the adjacent parts were to resort for judgment.

8 Next unto him repaired Uzziel the son of Harhaiah, of the goldsmiths. Next unto him also repaired Hananiah the son of one of the apothecaries, and they fortified Jerusalem unto the broad wall.

It is not said they repaired, as was said of the rest, but they fortified it, either because this part of the wall was less demolished than the other and therefore they needed not to repair it, but only to make it stronger by some addition; or to note their extraordinary care and diligence, that they would not only repair it, and restore it to its former state, but make it stronger than ever it was, which also might be fit to be done in that part of the city. Others render it they left, as this word commonly signifies, and so the meaning is, They omitted the building of that part of the wall, because it remained standing, thus being at space of four hundred cubits which was pulled down by Jewish king of Israel, and rebuilt by Uzziash, who made it so strong, that the Chaldeans could not pull it down without more trouble than they thought fit to employ about it. It is this chapter gives us an account of what they did in building, not of what they did not, but left as they found it.

9 And next unto them repaired Rephaiah the son of Hur, the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem.

As Rome was anciently divided into several quarters or trabes, so was Jerusalem, and especially this was divided into two parts, whereof one was in the tribe of Benjamin, and another to the temple, the other in the tribe of Judah, and more remote from it, which accordingly had two several rulers. This man and the other, viz 12, but both under the chief governor of the city.

10 And next unto them repaired Jedaiah the son of Harumiaph, even over against his house. And next unto him repaired Hattish the son of Hashabniah.

Over against his house, that part of the wall which was next to him, which his own interest obliged him to do with care.

11 Malchijah the son of Harim, and Hashub the son of Pahath-moab, repaired the fourth piece, and the tower of the furnace.

12 And next unto him repaired Shallum the son of Halohesh, the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem, he and his daughters.

Of the half part of Jerusalem, i. e. of the other half, &c. on ver 9. He and his daughters, who were either heiresses, or rich widows, and caused part to be done at their charges.

13 The valley gate repaired Hanani, and the inhabitants of Zanoah, they built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and a thousand cubits on the wall unto the dung gate.

14 But the dung gate repaired Malchiah the son of Rechab, the ruler of part of Beth-haccerem, he built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

Beth-haccerem, a town or territory, the government whereof was divided between two persons.

15 But the gate of the fountain repaired Shallum the son of Col-hozai, the ruler of part of Mizpah, he built it, and covered it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and the wall of the pool of Siloah by the king's garden, and unto the stairs that go down from the city of David.

The wall of the pool of Siloah, that part of the wall which was directly against that pool.

16 After him repaired Nehemiah the son of Azbuk, the ruler of the half part of Beth-zur, unto the place over against the sepulchres of David, and the pool that was made, and unto the house of the mighty.

Over against the sepulchres of David, i. e. the place which David appointed for his own sepulchres, and the sepulchres of his successors the kings of Israel and Judah. The pool that was made to wit, by Hezekiah 2 Kings xx. 20. whereby it is distinguished from that pool which was natural. The house of the mighty, or, of the valiant, which possibly was solemnly appointed for the receipt of those chief captains that should attend upon the king in their courses, or of some other valiant commanders who should upon occasion resort to Jerusalem.

17 And after him repaired the Levites, Rehum the son of Bani. Next unto him repaired Hashabniah, the ruler of the half part of Keilah, in his part.

18 After him repaired their brethren Davai the son of Henadad, the ruler of the half part of Keilah.

19 And next to him repaired Ezer the son of Jeshua, the ruler of Mizpah, another piece over against the going up to the armoury at the turning of the wall.

To the armoury, either to the house of the forest of Lebanon which was their armoury from Solomon's days, Isa. xlii. 6. or to some other place, which either before or since that time had been used as another and less armoury for common occasions. At the turning of the wall, or, at the corner, or, which is in the corner.

20 After him Baruch the son of Zababai earnestly repaired the other piece, from the turning of the wall unto the door of the house of Hashub the high priest.

Earnestly repaired; did his work with eminent diligence and fervency, which is here noted to his commendation. From the turning of the wall, or, from the corner, i. e. ver 19. Into the door of the house, unto that part of the wall which was over against or next to this door.

21 After him repaired Meremoth the son of Urijah the son of Koz another piece, from the door of the house of Hashub even to the end of the house of Eliashib.

Therefore the door was not in the middle of the house, as now they commonly are, but at one end of it.

22 And after him repaired the priests, the men of the plain.

Either of the plains of Jordan, or of the plain country round about Jerusalem, as it is called, chap. xii. 28. And they are thus called, because they or their parents either were born or now did or formerly had dwelt in those parts, whence they came to Jerusalem, when the service of the temple required it.

23 After him repaired Benjamin and Hashub over against their house. After him repaired Azariah the son of Maaseiah the son of Ananiah by his house.

24 After him repaired Binnui the son of Hebad another piece, from the house of Azariah unto the turning of the wall, even unto the corner.

25 Palal the son of Uzai, over against the turning of the wall, and the tower which lieth out from the king's high house that was by the court of the prison. After him Pedaiah the son of Parosh.

Over against the turning of the wall; in a part of the wall which jutted out as the tower here following did, and therefore was opposite to or over against that turning. And the tower, or, even the tower. Out from the king's high house, either from the royal palace, or from some other smaller house which the king formerly built there, either for pleasure or for defence. By the court of the prison, a place oft mentioned, of which see Jer. xxxii. 2, xxxviii. 6, 11.

26 Moreover the Netathims dwelt in Ophel, unto the place over against the water gate toward the east, and the tower that lieth out.

Dwelt in Ophel, or, who dwelt in Ophel, for this seems to be only a description of the persons whose work, follows. The water gate, so called, because by that gate water to come and to fight against Jerusalem, and to hinder it.

9 Nevertheless we made our prayer unto our God, and set a watch against them day and night, because of them.

10 And Judah said, The strength of the bearers of burdens is decayed, and there is much rubbish, so that we are not able to build the wall.

And Judah said, I.e. the Jews now dwelling in Judah to wit, some of them being partly terrified by their enemies and partly wearied with hard and continual labours. There is much rubbish, more than we are able suddenly to remove. We are not able to build the wall, being forced to spend some time in removing the rubbish, and other works impossible upon us, and therefore we must desist, at least for a season.

11 And our adversaries said, They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease.

We will come secretly, and unexpectedly upon them, so that they shall neither foresee their danger, nor be able to prevent it.

12 And it came to pass, that when the Jews which dwelt by them came, they said unto us ten times, ¶ From all places whence ye shall return unto us they will be upon you.

1 Or That from all places ye shall return ye shall be upon us

Which dwelt by them, or, among them, whereby they came to the knowledge of their counsels. Ten times, i.e. very often. A certain number for an uncertain. They will be upon you i.e. they will invade you every way, by which we can come to you, or you to us, and therefore do you keep watch on every side. But the words may be otherwise rendered thus. On all parts where you shall be quiet, or at least in a secure place for the Hebrew which signifies not only to rest but also to be quiet, or at ease. As Hebrews know, they will be upon us i.e. upon our people and city Jerusalem, where you are. And they will say upon us, that you are to invade them, and to take them and conquer them with them, and that they looked upon themselves as members of the same body and church with them, and took what was designed or done against them as if it were against themselves, and therefore we will in this friendly notice. On the place may be rendered thus. They told this to us ten times from all places coming from all places where they dwell, i.e. in a Hebrew phrase, the second person being put for the third as is usual in the Hebrew language. See Gen. x. 19, 20, xxx. 18, and in the Hebrew text Psal. xxv. 9 and in other languages and authors of which see my Latin Synopsis Gen. x. 19, and that it is so here we have the consent of the LXX and Arabic, and of some modern and accurate interpreters who render it by a verb of the third person about us, whence they came purpose to invade and war us. On thus, They told this to us ten times from all places whence they did return to us which phrase of returning to us i.e. to Jerusalem suits very well with those persons who came up with their brethren from Babylon to Jerusalem, and went thence into several parts of the country to dwell where they thought meet and returned now and at other times, as they had occasion, to their brethren at Jerusalem.

13 ¶ Therefore set I in the lower places behind the wall, and on the higher places, I even set the people after their families with their swords, their spears, and their bows.

In the lower places behind the wall, to stand by and within the walls where they were lowest, and were not raised to their due height, and therefore most liable to the enemy's assault. On the higher places, upon the tops of the walls where they were fortified, and the towers which were built here and there upon the wall, whence they might shoot arrows or stones upon their enemies when they came to the wall.

14 And I looked, and rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, Be not ye afraid of them: remember the Lord, which is great and terrible, and fight for you brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives, and your houses.

15 And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and God had brought their counsel to nought, that we retained all of us to the wall, every one unto his work.

Our enemies being frustrated in their hopes, which were wholly built upon the secrecy and suddenness of their attempt, we knowing this returned to our business.

16 And it came to pass from that time forth, that the half of my servants wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons, and the rulers were behind all the house of Judah.

From that time forth lest our enemies should repeat their enterprises. The half of my servants, of my domestic servants, and of my friends, who should have attended upon my own person. The spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons i.e. all their weapons. They stood in their arms prepared for battle. The rulers were behind all, partly to encourage them in their work, and sometimes to assist with their own hand, and partly to direct and command them in case of an assault. The house of Judah, i.e. the Jews who were upon the wall.

17 They which burdened on the wall and they that bare burdens with those that laboured, every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon.

This is not to be taken properly for they could never have done their work with one hand, and the next verse tells us the sword was not in their hands, but by their sides, but figuratively, thus being a proverbial speech such as is frequent amongst the Jews, as when they say of a man pretending kindness with a design, He carries a sword in one hand, and a stone in the other.

18 For the builders, every one had his sword girded by his side, and so builded. And he that sounded the trumpet was by me.

1 Heb. on

19 All the people together, when and where it was fit and so served.

20 And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the wall, one far from another.

21 In what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us. Our God shall fight for us.

22 So we laboured in the work, and half of them held the spears from the rising of the morning till the stars appeared.

Working very early and very late.

23 Likewise at the same time said I unto the people, Let every one with his servant lodge within Jerusalem, that in the night they may be a guard to us, and labour on the day.

It shall Jerusalem; not in the suburbs or adjoining villages, as probably many of them did, returning thence to their work in the morning.

24 So neither I, nor my brethren, nor my servants, nor the men of the guard, which followed me, none of us put off our clothes, saving that every one put on his officer's washing.

None of us put off our clothes, neither by day, nor by night, as the manner is when we go to bed, they constantly kept themselves in a readiness for fighting. Saving that every one put them off for washing, when they were to wash and cleanse themselves from some natural or moral impurity, which might tell them of their ailments.

CHAPTER V

The people complain of their brethren, by reason of their debts, mortgages and bondage. Nehemiah rebuketh the usurers and causeth them to make a covenant of restitution. 6-13. He forbearth his own allowance and keepeth his tabernacle. 14-17. The quantity of his preparations and his prayer. 18, 19.

AND there was a great cry of the people and of their wives against their brethren the Jews.

To wit the great and rich ones who had oppressed their brethren.

For there were that said, We, our sons, and our daughters, are many: therefore we take up corn for them, that we may eat and live.

We, our sons, and our daughters are many, which is itself a blessing: but to us is turned into a curse. We take up corn for them: we are forced by our and their necessities to take up corn to wit, upon their own unratifiable term: as is here implied, and plainly expressed in the following relation. Others, Let us take up &c., i. e. we do the public work: let provision be made for us and our children out of the public stock. But this is no petition: but a complaint: it will appear.

Some also there were that said, We have mortgaged our lands, vineyards, and houses, that we might buy corn, because of the dearth.

Which naturally happens both from the multitude of the people now in and near Jerusalem: and from their building wall: which wholly took them up and kept them from taking care of their own families and from the expectation and dread of their enemies' invasion: which hindered them from, or, abroad to fetch in provision: and the people round about from bringing it in to them: or from divers other causes.

There were also that said, We have borrowed money for the king's tribute: and that upon our lands and vineyards.

The king's tribute was laid upon them all. See Ezra iv. 13. vii. 24.

Yet now our flesh as the flesh of our brethren: our children as their children: and so, we bring into bondage our sons and our daughters to be servants: and some of our daughters are brought unto bondage already: neither is it in our power to redeem them: for other men have our lands and vineyards.

Our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren: we are of the same nature and nation, and religion with them: though they treat us as if we were beasts or heathens, forgetting both humanity and God's law, Deut. xv. 7. We bring into bondage, we are compelled to sell them for our subsistence. Our sons and our daughters, which was an evidence of their great necessity: because their daughters were more tender, and weak, and unfit for bond service, and more exposed to injuries in their sons. Neither is it in our power to redeem them: which we are allowed to do, Lev. xxi. 7, but have not wherewith to do it.

And I was very angry when I heard their cry and these words.

Then I consulted with myself, and I rebuked the nobles and the rulers, and said unto them, Ye exact usury, every one of his brother. And I set a great assembly against them.

Ye exact usury every one of his brother, which was against the plain and positive law of God, Deut. xxiii. 19, 20, especially in this time of public calamity and dearth. I set a great assembly against them, I called a public congregation both of the rulers and people, the greatest number of were true to this guilt, and therefore were impartial judges of the matter, and represented it to them that the offenders might be convinced, and also in this abuse: if not for fear of God, or love of their brethren: yet at least for the public shame, and the cries of the poor.

And I said unto them, We after our ability have redeemed our brethren the Jews, which were sold unto the heathen, and will ye even sell your brethren? or shall they be sold unto us? Then held they their peace, and found nothing to answer.

We after our ability have redeemed our brethren the Jews, which were sold unto the heathen. I, and my brethren, and predecessors, have used our utmost interest and power, both with the kings of Persia that our brethren might be redeemed from that bondage into which God had sold them for their sins, and with particular persons in Babylon and Persia, and the adjacent parts, whose bond-slaves the Jews were, and who would not part with them without a price which we paid for them. Will ye even sell your brethren? or shall they be sold unto us? do you expect that we should pay you a price for them as we did to the Babylonians, or must we use as much importunity to solicit you for their redemption as we did to their enemies?

Also I said, It is not good that ye do: ought ye not to walk in the fear of our God because of the reproach of the heathen our enemies?

It is not good: it is every bad and wicked thing as this same phrase is used Prov. xvi. 29. xiii. 26, xviii. 5, xiv. 2. A common figure called metonymy when more is understood than is expressed. Because of the reproach of the heathen our enemies: who are round about you and observe all your actions, and will loathe and reproach both you for such dishonourable usage of your orphans, and religion for your sakes, which if you have any love or respect either to God or to yourselves you will prevent.

I likewise, and my brethren, and my servants, might exact of them money and corn: I pray you, let us leave off this usury.

My brethren to wit in office, those who are employed with me in the government of this people. My servants in my name and for my use. Might exact of them money and corn as a just recompence for our pains and care for the public good, to which we wholly devote ourselves even to the neglect of all our private concerns. But I will rigorously exact: but do freely remit my own right, which in those circumstances, it is my duty to do, and therefore you also ought to do so, seeing I lay no burden upon you: but what I am willing to bear a part of upon my own shoulder.

Restore, I pray you, to them, even this day, their lands, their vineyards, their oliveyards, and their houses, also the hundredth part of the money, and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, that ye exact of them.

Also the hundredth part of the money, also require not, which is to be supplied out of the next verse, where it is expressed in their answer to and grant of this desire. The hundredth part, which they required every month for the use of their money or goods, according to the custom then used: and afterwards by the Romans.

Then said they, We will restore them, and will require nothing of them, so will we do as thou sayest. Then I called the priests, and took an oath of them, that they should do according to this promise.

We will restore them, to wit, the lands and houses. Will require nothing of them, for the hundredth part.

1 I tested the priests, chapter 1 As denunciations in that kind; rather as witnesses, that the oath being taken before the priests who acted in God's name and stead the oath might do the more deep and durable impression upon their consciences. See Numbers 19, 1 Kings 18 31 32 I took an oath of them, verse 10 of the priests first mentioned, for it does not appear that any of them were guilty, and it is absurd to think that they only were guilty of this extortion; verse 11 must be, if this them belongs to them only; but if all the persons who were before charged with this extortion, verse 12 whether priests or others, as is evident from the text, and from the nature of the thing.

13 Also I shook my lap, and said, So God shake out every man from his house, and from his labour, that performeth not this promise, even thus be he shaken out, and emptied. And all the congregation said, Amen, and praised the Lord. And the people did according to this promise.

I shook my lap i. e. the lap of extreme parts of my garment which I first folded together and then shook it, and scattered it round. This was a form of swearing then in use. from his labour i. e. from enjoying what he hath got by his labour.

14 Moreover from the time that I was appointed to be their governor in the land of Judah from the twentieth year even unto the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that is, twelve years, I and my brethren have not eaten the bread of the governor.

Twelve years, not that he continued so long together at Jerusalem of which see chapter 6, but that he so long governed Jerusalem by himself when he was present and his absence by a deputy. I and my brethren either my fellow officers or they who in I left in my stead, who as they were to do my work so might have required my rights. The law of the governor i. e. that allowed him which by the law of God and of the king of Persia, the governor might require for the maintenance of their own dignity and office and of the public civil.

15 But the former governors that had been before me were chargeable unto the people, and had taken of them bread and wine, beside forty shekels of silver; yea, even their servants bare rule over the people; but so did not I, because of the fear of God.

The former governors, not Ezra who was not yet born but only a priest sent to teach them, and to rectify church censures; nor Zerubbabel but others between him and Nehemiah, whom he found us to name because he best knew it to disgrace any person but only to reform the abuse. Forty shekels of silver, which they required of the people for every day to defray their other expenses. Their servants bare rule over the people i. e. rule them with rigour and cruelty, which fault of the servants is charged upon their masters the former governors because they did not restrain nor punish them. Because of the fear of God I feared to break God's commands or to neglect his displeasure, by such immoderate and unseasonable oppressions of the people. This he speaks not to commend himself but rather to diminish his praise, and to show that this was no glorious action nor work of supererogation, to be admired rather than imitated but only his duty in that case which for his own sake he durst not decline, and consequently that it was then duty at a new or long service those rights which in other times and conditions they might lawfully require.

16 Yea, also I continued in the work of this wall neither bought we any land; and all my servants were gathered thither unto the work.

In the work of this wall, overseeing directing, and encouraging the workmen which was my whole business, and thus at my own cost. Neither bought we any land of our poor brethren, whose necessities gave me abundant opportunity of enriching myself with good bargains. But I durst not bend my house upon other men's ruins.

17 Moreover there were at my table an hundred and fifty of the Jews and rulers, beside those that came unto us from among the heathen that are about us.

An hundred and fifty of the Jews and rulers; not only Jews of the inferior sort, for whom meaner provisions might suffice, but also their rulers, such as there were in many places, for whom better provision was fit; who resorted to him upon all occasions, either to pour out their complaints, as here they did, or to give him notice of the enemy's designs, or to receive his orders and directions.

18 Now that which was prepared for me daily was one ox and six choin sheep, also fowls were prepared for me, and once in ten days store of all sorts of wine; yet for all this required not I the bread of the governor, because the bondage was heavy upon this people.

But born it out of my own estate, which was very considerable his office in the Persian court being a place of very great profit as well as honour, and that profit no doubt continued to him in this his absence from the king. From this great and daily expense it seems more than probable that Nehemiah did not continue here for twelve years together as some would think or at least that he did not thus all that time but only during the great and present exigencies and distress of the Jews which consisted in good part after the walls were built and the hearts of all the Jews revived, and their enemies dispirited thereby.

19 Think upon me, my God, for good, according to all that I have done for this people.

As I have done this people good for thy sake, so do me good for thine own sake, for thou art pleased and hast promised graciously to reward us according to our works, and to mete to men the same measure which they mete to others.

CHAPTER VI.

Sanballat and Tobiah, sending to Nehemiah to me (them, intend to do him mischief, 1, 2. Nehemiah's answer, 3. They charge him with rebellion, 4, 7. His answer to them, 8. Nehemiah's false prophets to discourage Nehemiah, 9. His reply, 10, 11. The work is finished to the terror of the enemies, 15, 16. Secret correspondence between the nobles of Judah and Tobiah, 17, 18.

NOW it came to pass, when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and Geshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had builded the wall, and that there was no breach left therein, (though at that time I had not set up the doors upon the gates,) I had not set up the doors, not all of them. See on chapter 1.

2 That Sanballat and Geshem sent unto me saying, Come, let us meet together in some one of the villages in the plain of Ono. But they thought to do me mischief.

Let us meet together, to consult about the common service of our master the king of Persia or to make a friendly accommodation. Ono, a city in the tribe of Benjamin, of which see chapter 31 35; 1 Chron 8 12.

3 And I sent messengers unto them, saying, I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down; why should the work cease, whilst I leave it, and come down to you?

I am doing a great work he tells them one, but not the only, nor the principal, reason of his refusal because his coming might cause the work to cease not only by the neglect of it during his absence, but by his death which they by this means might compass, though he thought it not fit to express so much to them.

4 Yet they sent unto me four times after this sort, and I answered them after the same manner.

5 Then sent Sanballat his servant unto me in like manner the fifth time with an open letter in his hand,

Thereby, bringing open defiance to him as before he had used secret practices and intimating that he would do that by main force, which he had intended to do by sudden surprise.

6 Wherein was written, It is reported among the heathen, and the Gashmu saith it, that thou and the Jews think to rebel for which cause thou buildest the wall, that thou mayest be their king, according to these words.

Among the heathen, the neighbouring people whom you proudly and disdainfully call heathens or Gentiles. Gashmu, called Gashmu ver 1, who affirmed it and would prove it according to these words, i.e. according to these reports, that thou mayest justly and verily these rumours. Others according to these things i.e. when these things which thou art now doing shall be finished. But the first sense seems most agreeable to the use of the same words in the next verse.

7 And thou hast also appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, saying There is a king in Judah and now shall it be reported to the king according to these words. Come now therefore and let us take counsel together.

There is a king in Judah we have now a king, of our own nation and we free from the bondage of a foreign yoke. Let us take counsel together that we may impartially examine the matter that either thy innocency may be cleared and all accusations may be prevented, or if thou art guilty the king may be informed.

8 Then I sent unto him, saying, There are no such things done as thou sayest, but thou feignest them out of thine own heart.

9 For they all made us afraid, saying, Their hands shall be weakened from the work, that it be not done. Now therefore O God, strengthen my hands.

They all made us afraid i.e. they endeavored to do so and actually did terrify some persons.

10 Afterward I came unto the house of She-miah the son of Delaiah the son of Mehetabeel, who is shut up and he said, Let us meet together in the house of God within the temple, and let us shut the doors of the temple for they will come to slay thee. Yes in the night will they come to slay thee.

Shemiah's son of Delaiah, probably one of the chief of the priests. 1 Chron. xxiv. 26 Who was shut up in his chamber adjacent to the temple upon pretence of singular devotion, sequestration from the world and special acquaintance and much communion with God in his retirements after the manner of the prophets and without upon pretence of certain knowledge, which he had by the spirit of God and of prophecies concerning their approaching dangers from which they could be safe no where but in the temple which the very heathens owned for a sanctuary where they might not violate. Let us meet together in the house of God within the temple, for the danger is so near, that we cannot safely tarry here so long as to consult what to do in this juncture. His design herein was, partly to discourage and discredit Nehemiah and thereby to strike a dread into all the people and give a general full stop to the work, partly, to prepare the way for the enemies to assault and take the city, whilst Nehemiah was shut up, and unable to give them any opposition, partly to justify their accusation of Nehemiah to the king by his flight upon it and partly that there, by the help of other priests who were conscious of his plot, he might either destroy him or secure his person, till the city by some of his accomplices were betrayed into the enemy's hands.

11 And I said, Should such a man as I flee? and who is there, that, being as I am, would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in.

Should such a man as I flee, I the chief governor, upon whose presence and counsel, and conduct the very life and being of the whole city and nation in a great measure depends, I who have professed such resolution, and courage and confidence in God I who have had such eminent experience of God's gracious and powerful assistance, of his calling me to this employment, and carrying me through it when our danger was greater than now it is. Shall I now dishonour God and religion, and betray the people and city of God by my cowardice? God forbid. This is not the counsel of God, nor of a friend; but a plot of mine enemies as it here follows. Who is there, that, being as I am, would go into the temple to save his life? as if I had an evil conscience or conscience, as if I were a malefactor, who fled thither for refuge, as if I durst not trust God with my preservation except I went into the temple, which it is not lawful for me being no priest, to do.

12 And, lo, I perceived that God had not sent him, but that he pronounced this prophecy against me for Tobiah and Sanballat had hired him.

I perceived, partly, by considering the sinful nature and pernicious consequence of this counsel, partly, by the suggestion of God's spirit whose counsel and help I sought in this matter and partly by the event which discovered that there was no such danger from the approach of the enemy as was pretended.

13 Therefore was he hired, that I should be afraid and do so, and sin, and that they might have matter for an evil report, that they might reproach me.

That I should do so and sin by going into a place hid from me and that in such a time and manner and upon such an occasion which would have been both sinful and shameful according ver 11. That they might reproach me as a coward and conscious of my own guilt that so they might make me contemptible and odious, both to my own people and to the king of Persia.

14 My God, think thou upon Tobiah and Sanballat according to these their works and on the prophetess Noadiah and the rest of the prophets, that would have put me in fear.

The prophetess Noadiah, one that falsely pretended to the spirit of prophecy to deceive and destroy Nehemiah. He prays to God to remember and punish these false prophets because he was not yet in a capacity to do it having such powerful enemies round about him, and so many rich and potent Jews highly discontented for their great loss by his means, chap. 5.

15 ¶ So the wall was finished in the twenty and fifth day of the month Elul, in fifty and two days.

The month Elul, answering part to our August and part to September. In fifty and two days, to be computed either 1 From the time of Sanballat's sending this letter to him or 2 At most judge, from the beginning of the work which though a great thing yet it is not at all incredible considering, 1 That the walls and gates were not wholly pulled down by the Chaldeans for to what purpose should they make that waste of time and labour? 2 That where the walls were thrown down, yet the materials remained which they now used. 3 That in the building of the walls they minded not curiosity but only strength and safety. 4 The great numbers of the builders, and the prodigious distribution of the work among them, and their admirable zeal.

and diligence in the work. 5 If it there want a parallel instance even in heathen authors for both Curtius and Arrian report, that Alexander the Great built the walls of new Alexandria, which contained above seven miles in length within twenty days space. 6 That there was an eminent hand of God in carrying on this work, which their very enemies here acknowledge.

16 And it came to pass, that when all our enemies heard thereof, and all the heathen that were about us saw these things, they were much cast down in their own eyes: for they perceived that this work was wrought of our God.

In their own eyes, i. e. in their opinion, or themselves being judges; for though ordinarily man are very prone to judge partially, and still to flatter themselves with vain hopes and fancies, yet this case was so clear and remarkable that they began to despair. Now they saw that all was lost, that their designs were broken, and that their mischief was now likely to fall upon their own heads. They perceived, by that admirable courage, aid, constancy, and quickness wherewith this work was managed notwithstanding all their difficulties and discouragements. That this work was wrought of our God, that it was the work of that mighty God of Israel whom they had great reason to fear, and whith they took it for an ill omen to them, and a sure promise that God would still watch over that city and people, and crush those who should oppose or disturb them.

27 ¶ Moreover in those days the nobles of Judah sent many letters unto Tobiah, and the letters of Tobiah came unto them.

Corresponding with him against Nehemiah, and against their own city and nation.

18 For there were many in Judah sworn unto him, because he was the son in law of Shechaniah the son of Ariah, and his son Johanan had taken the daughter of Meshullam the son of Berechiah.

So an uncle to him to be true to him in the prosecution of his wicked designs. His son had taken the daughter of Meshullam, this is noted to show the mischief of such an equal and forbidden marriage, and how reasonable and necessary Ezra's action was in the dissolution of the same.

19 Also they reported his good deeds before me, and uttered my words to him. And Tobiah sent letters to put me in fear.

CHAPTER VII.

He committeth the charge of Jerusalem to Hanani and Hananiah. 1, 2. He advices them. 3, 4. He finds out the sin of the unmanly of them that came at first out of Babylon. 5-6. The which number of them, 66. 67. Their substance, 68, 69. Their offerings, 70, 73.

NOW it came to pass, when the wall was built, and I had set up the doors, and the porters and the singers and the Levites were appointed.

1 When I had taken order that the Levites should be summoned from all places to celebrate the dedication of the wall, as it was done, chap. xii. 27.

2 That I gave my brother Hanani and Hananiah the ruler of the palace, charge over Jerusalem for he was a faithful man, and feared God above many.

Hanani, of whom see chap. i. 2. The ruler of the palace of Nehemiah's court, probably so called because he lived in great splendour and as a governor though it was wholly in his own charge. Charge over Jerusalem to preserve its peace and safety, and to take particular care of the shutting the gates of the city. He was a faithful man, to wit, Hananiah last mentioned, for it was necessary to say any thing in commendation of Hanani, who had shown his piety and zeal for God and his country, in taking a tedious journey from Jerusalem to Shechaniah to inform Nehemiah of the sad estate of Jerusalem, and to implore his helping hand to relieve it, chap. i. 4. Faithful man, he chose not magistrates and officers out of any partial or carnal respects to his own kindred or acquaintance or favourites, but from true piety and prudence, such as were fittest for and would be most faithful in their employments. And feared God, this is added as the ground and reason, both why he was faithful, and why Nehemiah put such trust and confidence in him, because he knew that the fear of God would keep him from yielding to those temptations to perfidiousness which he was likely to meet with when Nehemiah was gone, and against which a man destitute of God's fear hath no sufficient fence. Above many, more than most men did, or above the common pitch of piety.

3 And I said unto them, Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened until the sun be hot, and while they stand by, let them shut the doors, and bar them, and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one in his watch, and every one to be over against his house.

4 Until the sun be hot, i. e. till it be clear and broad day, when enemies approaching may be discovered, and the people of the city will be ready for the defence in case of an assault. While they stand by, i. e. the watches appointed to that end, as is manifest from the following words. Every one to be over against his house, i. e. every one in his turn keeping watch with others in that watchman's place which is next to his house.

4 Now the city was large and great, but the people were few therein, and the houses were not builded.

1 Not all nor completely built, but only some light buildings of boards or stones were made for the present use of the necessity of the people.

5 ¶ And my God put into mine heart to gather together the nobles and the rulers, and the people, that they might be reckoned by genealogy. And I found a register of the genealogy of them which came up at the first, and found written therein,

God put into mine heart to this action, which is very prudent, he did not ascribe to himself or his own wit, but to the gift and grace of God directing and inclining him to it. To gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, not only for the parts and end here mentioned, but for divers other worthy purposes and matters of which the following chapters treat. That they might be reckoned by genealogy, so it might appear to what families each person belonged, and where their ancient habitations lay, which for a great number of them were in the city, the replenishing of whom was now his design. Them which came up at the first, to wit, with Zerubbabel, at the fall of the first. But this following catalogue differs in some particulars from that Ezra ii., of which see the note there.

6 These are the children of the province, that went up out of the captivity, of those that had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away, and came again to Jerusalem and to Judah, every one unto his city.

7 Who came with Zerubbabel, Jeshua, Nehemiah, Azariah, Baanah, Naban, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispereth, Bigvai, Nehum, Baanah. The number of the men of the people of Israel was thus.

8 The children of Parosh, two thousand and hundred seventy and two.

9 The children of Shephatiah, three hundred seventy and two.

10 The children of Arah, six hundred fifty and two

11 The children of Pahath-moab, of the children of Jeshua and Joab, two thousand and eight hundred and eighteen

12 The children of Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four

70 ¶ And some of the chief of the fathers gave unto the work. The Tirshatha gave to the treasure a thousand drams of gold, fifty basons, five hundred and thirty priests' garments.

The Tirshatha, i. e. the governor to wit, Nehemiah. So it is no wonder that the number of the moieties and other things here contributed, differ from that in Ezra, because this is another collection that was made in Zerubbabel's time and this in Ezra's.

71 And some of the chief of the fathers gave to the treasure of the work twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand and two hundred pound of silver.

72 And that which the rest of the people gave was twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand pound of silver, and threescore and seven priests' garments.

73 So the priests, and the Levites, and the porters, and the singers, and some of the people, and the Nethinims, and all Israel, dwelt in their cities, and when the seventh month came, the children of Israel were in their cities.

CHAP. VIII.

Ezra brought up the law of Moses and blessed it with the people. Nehemiah and Ezra comfort the people. The people's forwardness to hear and to do instruction. Nehemiah 13. 15. Thus and then set as before the 16. 17. at a day the feast seven day 18.

AND all the people gathered themselves together as one man into the street that was before the water gate, and they spake unto Ezra the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the Lord had commanded to Israel.

The street that was before the water gate which Nehemiah 26.

2 And Ezra the priest brought the law before the congregation both of men and women, and all that could hear with understanding, upon the first day of the seventh month.

In the present time twelve or thirteen years before Nehemiah's Jerusalem and either learned there or went back to Babylon being forced to do so by the king's command and indispensable necessity, and then returned again with Nehemiah. All that could hear with understanding, i. e. and such children as were come to years of understanding.

3 And he read therein before the street that was before the water gate, from the morning until midday, before the men and the women, and those that could understand, and the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law.

4 And Ezra the scribe stood upon a pulpit of wood, which they had made for the purpose, and beside him stood Matthanah, and Shema, and Ananiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiah, and Maaserah, on his right hand, and on his left hand, Pedaiah, and Michael, and Malchiah, and Hashum, and Hashbadana, Zechariah, and Meshullam.

Partly to declare their consent and concurrence with Ezra in what he said and did; and partly that they or some of them might bear a part in the work.

5 And Ezra opened the book in the sight of all the people, (for he was above all the people,) and when he opened it, all the people stood up.

Either in reverence to God's word of which see Numb. xi. 32. Judg. iii. 20, or that they might hear his words the more distinctly, or rather, because they observed that Ezra composed himself to prayer or thanksgiving, which is here generally declared, but doubtless was more particularly and largely expressed in that assembly, as appears by their answering Amen, Amen, to his prayer.

6 And Ezra blessed the Lord, the great God. And all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with lifting up their hands, and they bowed their heads and worshipped the Lord with their faces to the ground.

7 Also Jeshua and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamun, Akkib, Shabbethai, Hodiah, Maaseiah, Keitia, Azariah, Jozabab, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites, caused the people to understand the law, and the people stood in their place.

Caused the people to understand the law, as well the words which being Hebrew now needed to be translated into the Chaldean or Syriac language, which was now and henceforth the common language of the people, who together with them being, had also in great part lost their language, as also the sense and meaning of them, they expounded the mind and will of God in what they read, and applied it to the people's present condition, as they saw fit, as the manner of the prophets usually was. And hence the people were so deeply affected with it. The people stood in their place, i. e. in their several places and stations into which the company seems to have been distributed for convenience of hearing, it not being likely that so vast a congregation could distinctly hear one man's voice. Or, by their stations, i. e. by the several stations of the Levites and persons last named, who seem to have had several scaffolds, by comparing this with chap. ix. 4, upon which they stood, as Ezra did upon his pulpit, ver. 4.

8 So they read in the book in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading.

They read, to wit, Ezra and his companions successively or severally. Gave the sense, i. e. the meaning of the Hebrew words which they expounded in the common language. Caused them to understand the reading, i. e. that which they read, to wit, the Holy Scripture, the action being put for the object, as reason is oft put for the thing seen and hearing for the thing heard, and seen for the thing feared. So they gave them both a translation of the Hebrew words into the Chaldean, and an exposition of the things contained in them, and of the duty incumbent upon the people by virtue of them, the declaration whereof was a great part of the priest's work. Mal. ii. 7.

9 ¶ And Nehemiah, which is the Tirshatha, and Ezra the priest the scribe, and the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people, This day is holy, unto the Lord your God, mourn not,
